Judgment must be final before time limitations apply. Where order of default was entered against one of two defendants but action remained pending and no C.R.C.P. 54(b) certification was obtained, timeliness of motion would be gauged in relation to date of dismissal of action against second defendant. United Bank of Boulder, N.A. v. Buchanan, 836 P.2d 473 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where a motion is not filed within six months after the default was entered, then, under section (b) of this rule, a trial court is correct in denying the motion to vacate the default. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 448, 271 P.2d 418 (1954).

The trial court had no jurisdiction to hear, much less grant, a motion for relief from judgment filed more than six months after entry of judgment. Wesson v. Johnson, 622 P.2d 104 (Colo. App. 1980).

Seventeen years is not a “reasonable time”. Where for a period of more than 17 years one took no action to vacate or otherwise attack the validity of a default judgment, it can hardly be said that under such circumstances 17 years is a “reasonable time”. Haskell v. Gross, 145 Colo. 365, 358 P.2d 1024 (1961).

Petition to vacate such a judgment held filed in apt time. Senne v. Conley, 110 Colo. 270, 133 P.2d 381 (1943).

In cases such as this, a defendant must establish his grounds for relief by clear, strong, and satisfactory proof. Browning v. Potter, 129 Colo. 448, 271 P.2d 418 (1954); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng’r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970).

It is not sufficient to show that the neglect which brought about the default is excusable. Gumaer v. Bell, 51 Colo. 473, 119 P. 681 (1911); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng’r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970).

To vacate a default, a mere showing of excusable neglect is not sufficient. Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Orebaugh v. Daskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

A defendant must show a meritorious defense to the action. Gumaer v. Bell, 51 Colo. 473, 119 P. 681 (1911); Riss v. Air Rental, Inc., 136 Colo. 216, 315 P.2d 820 (1957); Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng’r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970); Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

The judge was acting within his jurisdiction under this rule when he set aside a default judgment on the ground of “excusable neglect” supported by a specific statement of meritorious defense. Weaver Constr. Co. v. District Court, 190 Colo. 227, 545 P.2d 1042 (1976).

A defense to the action “prima facie” meritorious must also appear. Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Orebaugh v. Daskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

It must be stated with such fullness and particularity that the court can see it is substantial, not technical, meritorious, and not frivolous. Burr v. Allard, 133 Colo. 270, 293 P.2d 969 (1956); Orebaugh v. Daskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

Where there were no reasons proffered to the trial court as grounds for relief under section (b) other than youth and indifference, the trial court’s denial of motion to set aside default judgment was not an abuse of discretion. People in Interest of J.M.W., 36 Colo. App. 398, 542 P.2d 392 (1975).

It is not the duty of the trial court to relieve one of the consequences incident to the mistakes of his counsel. Self v. Watt, 128 Colo. 61, 259 P.2d 1074 (1953).

Where it is clear that defendants’ counsel was negligent and that such neglect was the primary cause for their failure, counsel’s neglect is inexcusable, but this neglect should not be imputed to the defendants. Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

Gross negligence on the part of counsel resulting in a default judgment is considered excusable neglect on the part of the client entitling him to have the judgment set aside. Temple v. Miller, 30 Colo. App. 49, 488 P.2d 252 (1971); Dudley v. Keller, 33 Colo. App. 320, 521 P.2d 175 (1974).

Gross negligence on the part of counsel, under certain circumstances, should be considered excusable neglect on the part of a client sufficient to permit the client to set aside a default judgment. Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

Although a court recognizes the gross neglect of counsel, yet enters a default, it unwarrantably punishes defendants whose only dereliction is the misplacing of confidence in their attorney. Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967).

To hold that such reasons are inapplicable because a defendant failed to check the progress of the litigation is to make the client erroneously totally responsible for the attorney's negligent failure to comply with the rules of civil procedure. Temple v. Miller, 30 Colo. App. 49, 488 P.2d 252 (1971).

Where one was, or should have been, aware that his interest in the action was adverse to another, his reliance on such individual does not constitute excusable neglect so as to justify vacating entry of default judgment. Moskowitz v. Michaels Artists & Eng'r Supplies, Inc., 29 Colo. App. 44, 477 P.2d 465 (1970).

Where the record discloses that the defendant himself was guilty of negligence separate and apart from that of his counsel, the alleged negligence of counsel would not be considered as excusable neglect for purpose of setting aside default judgment. Weeks v. Sigala, 32 Colo. App. 121, 509 P.2d 320 (1973).

The entry of a default judgment does not apply to a stipulated judgment. Where parties dealing at arm's length have stipulated for the entry of a judgment, it is not a default judgment in the true sense of the word, but a stipulated judgment; consequently, there is no mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect. Kopel v. Davie, 163 Colo. 57, 428 P.2d 712 (1967).

Where the parties to litigation, dealing at arm's length, stipulate for the entry of a judgment of dismissal, and they do not claim mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, nor are any of the parties to the action seeking to have the order set aside, that judgment is final. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. District Court, 186 Colo. 212, 526 P.2d 661 (1974).

A default judgment may only be the subject of collateral attack when the trial court lacked jurisdiction over the parties or the subject matter. DeBoer v. District Court, 184 Colo. 112, 518 P.2d 942 (1974).

Where a default judgment has been entered and made final, it is not a proper subject of collateral attack particularly by strangers to the original action, although the rule prohibiting such attack applies to parties as well. DeBoer v. District Court, 184 Colo. 112, 518 P.2d 942 (1974).

Criteria to be utilized by court in ruling on a motion to vacate a judgment include whether the neglect that resulted in entry of judgment by default was excusable, whether the moving party has alleged a meritorious defense, and whether relief from the challenged order would be consistent with considerations of equity. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986); Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997); Goodman Assocs., LLC v. WP Mtn. Props., LLC, 222 P.3d 310 (Colo. 2010).

The preferred procedure is to consider all three criteria in a single hearing, as evidence relating to one factor might shed light on another and consideration of all three factors will provide the most complete information for an informed decision. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986); Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997).

Motion to vacate judgment under this rule on basis of excusable neglect and motion to set aside default judgment under C.R.C.P. 55(c) on the basis of failure to prosecute are sufficiently analogous to justify application of the same standards to either motion; thus, the same three criteria which are legal standard are applicable in both motions. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

In determining whether a party has established excusable neglect to obtain relief, the court should not impute gross negligence of an attorney to his client for the purpose of foreclosing the client from relief. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Moving party must establish by factual averments, and not simply by legal conclusions, that claim previously dismissed was indeed meritorious and substantial. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986); Burton v. Colo. Access, 2015 COA 111, 428 P.3d 208, aff'd on other grounds, 2018 CO 11, 428 P.3d 208, cert. denied sub nom. Olivar v. Pub. Serv. Empl. Credit Union, __ U.S. __, 139 S. Ct. 87, 202 L. Ed. 2d 26 (2018).

In determining whether relief would be consistent with equitable considerations, court should take into account promptness of moving party in filing motion, fact of any detrimental reliance by opposing party on order or judgment of dismissal, and any prejudice to opposing party if motion were to be granted, including impairment of party's ability to adduce proof at trial in defense of claim. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Trial court abused its discretion in denying defendant's motion to set aside judgment based on excusable neglect without applying the test established by Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986), cited above. Taylor v. HCA-Healthone LLC, 2018 COA 29, 417 P.3d 943.

The mere existence of some negligence by client does not serve as per se basis to automatically deny relief, where motion was made based upon excusable neglect. Buckmiller v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 727 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1986).

Defendant failed to show excusable neglect where he failed to seek a continuance or communicate with the trial court in any manner while seeking to remove the case to federal court and failed to appear and participate at trial even though he knew the federal court had remanded the case back to state court. Blazer

Rule as basis for jurisdiction. Welborn v. Hartman, 28 Colo. App. 11, 470 P.2d 82 (1970);

Rule 61. Harmless Error

No error in either the admission or the exclusion of evidence and no error or defect in any ruling or order or in anything done or omitted by the court or by any of the parties is ground for granting a new trial or for setting aside a verdict or for vacating, modifying or otherwise disturbing a judgment or order, unless refusal to take such action appears to the court inconsistent with substantial justice. The court at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties.

A substantial right is one which relates to the subject matter and not to a matter of procedure and form. Sowder v. Inhelder, 119 Colo. 196, 201 P.2d 533 (1948); Corbin by Corbin v. City & County of Denver, 735 P.2d 214 (Colo. App. 1987).

Lack of adherence to formalities which do not result in prejudice should not interfere with the determination of the issues on the merits. Swan v. Zwahlen, 131 Colo. 184, 280 P.2d 439 (1955).

Allowing fewer peremptory challenges than authorized, or than available to and exercised by the opposing party, is reviewed in accordance with this rule. Laura A. Newman, LLC v. Roberts, 2016 CO 9, 365 P.3d 972 (overruling Denver City Tramway Co. v. Kennedy, 50 Colo. 418, 117 P. 167 (1911); Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Langden, 532 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1975); and Blades v. DaFoe, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. 1985)).

A new trial will not be granted for error which did not prejudice or harm the party seeking a new trial, or where the trial resulted in substantial justice. Francis v. O'Neal, 127 Colo. 432, 257 P.2d 973 (1953); Tincombe v. Colo. Const. & Supply Corp., 681 P.2d 533 (Colo. App. 1984).

To the extent there was any error in judge's comments that defendant was "playing games" by filing motions for recusal, such error was harmless where defendant filed a subsequent motion for recusal which included the arguments made in the previous recusal motions and the subsequent motion was decided. Moody v. Corsentino, 843 P.2d 1355 (Colo. 1993).

Error in admission of immaterial evidence is not prejudicial where the findings are not based on, nor related to, any of the immaterial matter. Lloyd A. Fry Roofing Co. v. State, 179 Colo. 223, 499 P.2d 1176 (1972).

Violation of rule provisions allowing for a response from the party opposing a motion for summary judgment found to be harmless error under the circumstances. Union Ins. Co. v. Hottenstein, 83 P.3d 1196 (Colo. App. 2003).

It was harmless error for the court to enter summary judgment on an issue which was not raised by the parties when the party against whom judgment is entered has the opportunity to respond to the new issue raised by the trial court. Ferrera v. Nielsen, 799 P.2d 458 (Colo. App. 1990); Davis v. Lira, 817 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where testimony is hearsay, its admission is harmless when the essential and operative facts upon which an award rests are established by competent evidence in the record. San Isabel Elec. Ass'n v. Bramer, 31 Colo. App. 134, 500 P.2d 821 (1972), aff'd, 182 Colo. 15, 510 P.2d 438 (1973).

The admission of part of the deposition of a party in court and able to testify is harmless error where the evidence contained therein is merely cumulative to the evidence already before the court. Its admission neither adds to nor detracts from evidence previously admitted. Therefore, the admission of the deposition is not reversible error. Sentinel Petroleum Corp. v. Bernat, 29 Colo. App. 109, 478 P.2d 688 (1970).

It was harmless error to admit evidence that deposition was taken at Texas state penitentiary, since defendants failed to prove that its admission affected substantial rights. Cheney v. Hailey, 686 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1984).

Where a trial judge drives past the premises in question in a zoning case to gain familiarity with its location and topography so he could better understand references in the record to the property, he does not commit reversible error so long as there is no indication that when the trial judge viewed the property it was not in substantially the same condition as when the ordinance in question was passed nor is there any indication that the trial court was influenced by or based its decision upon any evidence not a part of the record. Trans-Robles Corp. v. City of Cherry Hills Vill., 30 Colo. 511, 497 P.2d 335 (1972), aff'd, 181 Colo. 356, 509 P.2d 797 (1973).

Where the stated reason for a transcript record's use is to show the scope of a previous judgment, which it fails to include, its admission is error, but harmless error. Wasinger v. Miller, 154 Colo. 61, 388 P.2d 250 (1964).

Errors and deficiencies of counsel will be disregarded where not to do so would result in palpable injury. Griffith v. Anderson, 109 Colo. 265, 124 P.2d 599 (1942).

Although a trial court applies the wrong test, the failure to dismiss does not result in reversible error, where had the trial court applied the right rule, the result would have been the same. Am. Nat'l Bank v. First Nat'l Bank, 28 Colo. App. 486, 476 P.2d 304 (1970).

Error held harmless. Where the record is clear that adequate funds were in fact remitted on behalf of the judgment debtor, and at all times subsequent to the inaccurate change refund by the clerk, the judgment debtor was willing and able to pay the interest to the judgment creditor, and payment was obstructed solely by the latter, substantial justice would not be served by penalizing the defendant for the minor mathematical error of the clerk of the trial court, and thus the error is harmless. Osborn Hdwe. Co. v. Colo. Corp., 32 Colo. App. 254, 510 P.2d 461 (1973).

Even if the trial court erred in issuing a protective order precluding discovery by plaintiff, such error was harmless because it would not alter the court's conclusion that summary judgment was proper. Pierce v. St. Vrain Valley Sch. Dist., 944 P.2d 646 (Colo. App. 1997), rev'd on other grounds, 981 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1999).

Failure to include a citation of legal authorities in trial data certificate and late filing of authorities in trial memorandum held to be harmless error. Yoder v. Hooper, 695 P.2d 1182 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 732 P.2d 852 (Colo. 1987).

Presentation of factual requirements for entry of default judgment by means of testimony and other evidence, rather than by affidavit as required by C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-14, held to be harmless error. Dunton v. Whitewater West Recreation, Ltd., 942 P.2d 1348 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Jones v. Gates Serv. Station, Inc., 108 Colo. 201, 115 P.2d 396 (1941); Odell v. Pub. Serv. Co., 158 Colo. 404, 407 P.2d 330 (1965); McQueen v. Robbins, 28 Colo. Rule 62. Stay of Proceedings to Enforce a Judgment

(a) Automatic Stay; Exceptions; Injunctions; Receiverships. Except as stated herein, no execution shall issue upon a judgment nor shall proceedings be taken for its enforcement until the expiration of 14 days after its entry; provided that an interlocutory or final judgment in an action for an injunction or in a receivership action shall not be stayed during the period after its entry and until an appeal is taken or during the pendency of an appeal. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the provisions of section (c) of this Rule govern the suspending, modifying, restoring, or granting of an injunction during the pendency of an appeal.

(b) Discretionary Stay. In its discretion and on such conditions for the security of the adverse party as are proper, the court may stay the execution of, or any proceedings to enforce, a judgment: (1) pending the disposition of a motion for post-trial relief made pursuant to C.R.C.P. 59; (2) pending a motion for relief from a judgment or order made pursuant to C.R.C.P. 60; (3) during the time permitted for filing of a notice of appeal; or (4) during the pendency of a motion for approval of a supersedeas bond.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The 1988 amendment to C.R.C.P. 62(b) is a change to make that section fully consistent with the changes made to C.R.C.P. 59. The post-trial relief features of C.R.C.P. 50 and 52(b) were brought into C.R.C.P. 59. As a result, those Rules (50) and (52) no longer bear on post-trial relief and need not be referenced in C.R.C.P. 62.

(c) Injunction Pending Appeal. When an appeal is taken from an interlocutory or final judgment granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction, the trial court in its discretion may suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of the appeal upon such terms as to bond or otherwise as it considers proper for the security of the rights of the adverse party.

(d) Stay upon Appeal. When an appeal is taken the appellant by giving a supersedeas bond may obtain a stay from the trial court subject to the exceptions contained in section (a) of this Rule. The bond may be given at or after the time of filing the notice of appeal or of procuring the order allowing the appeal, as the case may be. The stay is effective when the supersedeas bond is approved by the court.

(e) Stay in Favor of the State of Colorado or Municipalities Thereof. When an appeal is taken by the State of Colorado, or by any county or municipal corporation of this state, or of any officer or agency thereof acting in official capacity and the operation or enforcement of the judgment is stayed, no bond, obligation, or other security shall be required from the appellant unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(f) [There is no section (f).]

(g) Power of Appellate Court Not Limited. The provisions in this Rule do not limit any power of the appellate courts or of a justice or judge thereof to stay proceedings during the pendency of an appeal or to suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of an appeal or to make any order appropriate to preserve the status quo or the effectiveness of the judgment subsequently to be entered. (See Rule 8, Colorado Appellate Rules.)

(h) Stay of Judgment as to Multiple Claims or Multiple Parties. When a court has ordered a final judgment under the conditions stated in Rule 54 (b), the court may stay enforcement of that judgment until the entering of a subsequent judgment or judgments and may prescribe such conditions as are necessary to secure the benefit thereof to the party in whose favor the judgment is entered.

No power is lodged in any court to stay an order of discharge in a habeas corpus proceeding, as such action would defeat the very purpose of habeas corpus. Geer v. Alaniz, 137 Colo. 432, 326 P.2d 71 (1958).

Generally, court may not impair creditor’s right to enforce judgment. As a general rule, a court may not stay execution and thereby impair or destroy the statutory right of a judgment creditor to enforce collection of its judgment against nonexempt property of the judgment debtor. First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

This rule does not require a judgment creditor to have a valid judgment lien as a prerequisite to execute on a judgment and certificate of levy. Franklin Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Galvan, 2019 COA 107, 457 P.3d 749.

Right to enforce may be statutorily limited. The substantive right of a judgment creditor to enforce collection of the judgment may be statutorily limited, as by § 7-60-128. First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

Effect of stay on certain statutory requirements. The stay of execution provided for in this rule has no effect on the requirement that a transcript of judgment be issued on payment of the fee pursuant to § 13-32-104 (1)(g). Rocky Mt. Ass'n of Credit Mgt. v. District Court, 193 Colo. 344, 565 P.2d 1345 (1977).

Applied in Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975).

II. AUTOMATIC STAY.

Under section (a) of this rule, a judgment order dividing property is automatically stayed and unenforceable for a period of 10 (now 15) days following its entry. Sarno v. Sarno, 28 Colo. App. 598, 478 P.2d 711 (1970).

Section (a) is inapplicable to temporary custody order the mother was found to have violated. Order was not subject to 15-day automatic stay. In re Adams, 778 P.2d 294 (Colo. App. 1989).

A forcible medication administration order is not the type of action contemplated by section (a) and is thus not automatically stayed for 14 days after entry. People ex rel. Strotzman, 293 P.3d 123 (Colo. App. 2011).

III. STAY ON MOTION.

Unless stayed by the court, a judgment may be executed upon before a new trial motion is decided. Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

IV. INJUNCTION.

Effect of section (c) is to protect rights of parties. Section (c) of this rule authorizes the trial court to enter orders which preserve the status quo, or otherwise protect the rights of the parties pending appeal, but does not give the trial court authority to enter an order which alters the rights granted, or created by the original order. Rivera v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 34 Colo. App. 152, 529 P.2d 1347 (1974).

By virtue of this rule, a trial court can, in its discretion, suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction, so long as an appellate court has not granted a supersedeas. Woitchek

v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

Injunctive power of the court has been long recognized. At least since 1887, it has been recognized statutorily that trial courts can more speedily, economically, and satisfactorily consider applications for injunctive relief in actions which are pending in an appellate court. Woitchek v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

An obvious reason for recognizing the court's injunctive power is that trial courts are equipped to conduct the trial process. Woitchek v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

But injunctive proceedings may not be invoked to bring about a forfeiture of a property right. Injunction and forfeiture cannot be equated; they are separate and distinct concepts. Woitchek v. Isenberg, 151 Colo. 544, 379 P.2d 392 (1963).

V. STAY UPON APPEAL.

Annotator's note. Since section (d) of this rule is similar to § 428 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing § 428 have been included in the annotations to this rule.

A trial court retains jurisdiction in order to enforce a judgment it has rendered where defendant does not move for stay of execution or file a supersedeas bond. Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

Where a defendant fails to take these affirmative steps necessary in order to prevent the trial court from making a final disposition of the case in accordance with its findings, no error is committed by a trial court in entering a final decree confirming a title after an appeal has issued. Failure of defendant to stay the execution means that the trial court retains jurisdiction, and its actions subsequent to the issuance of the notice of appeal are fully within its powers. Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

Effect of trial court's failure to rule on motion. In foreclosure action, where motion for stay under section (d) of this rule and for waiver of the supersedeas bond requirement had been filed in the trial court but not determined at time of appeal, and where a request for stay under C.A.R. 8 had not been filed in the court of appeals, title to secured property vested in certificate holder and appeal was moot. Mount Carbon Metro. Dist. v. Lake George Co., 847 P.2d 254 (Colo. App. 1993).

Stay may be issued before or after appeal filed. The trial court may issue a stay either before or after a notice of appeal is filed. Odd Fellows Bldg. & Inv. Co. v. City of Englewood, 667 P.2d 1358 (Colo. 1983).

The filing of a supersedeas bond is a prerequisite for obtaining an order staying execution of judgment pending appeal under section (d) of this rule. Muck v. District Ct., 814 P.2d 869 (Colo. 1991).

The issuance of a writ of supersedeas is the consideration for the giving of a supersedeas bond. Buchhalter v. Solomon, 78 Colo. 227, 241 P. 718 (1925).

There can be no supersedeas where one cannot furnish bond therefor. Riant Amuse-

A supersedeas writ may not be granted on an invalid bond. Buchhalter v. Solomon, 78 Colo. 227, 241 P. 718 (1925).

Trial court erred in entering an order staying all proceedings relative to enforcement of family support order without requiring appellant to file supersedeas bond. Muck v. District Ct., 814 P.2d 869 (Colo. 1991).

Rule 63. Disability of a Judge

If by reason of death, sickness, or other disability, a judge before whom an action has been tried is unable to perform the duties to be performed by the court under these rules after a verdict is returned or findings of fact and conclusions of law are filed, then any other judge sitting in or assigned to the court in which the action was tried may perform those duties; but if such other judge is satisfied that he cannot perform those duties because he did not preside at the trial or for any other reason, he may in his discretion grant a new trial.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Judgment: Rules 54-63", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 581 (1951).

"Disability" construed. Disability includes anything that renders a judge incapable of performing his legal duties. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

Disability, under this rule, includes resignation. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982); Friedman v. Colo. Nat. Bank, 825 P.2d 1033 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 846 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1993).

This rule specifically provides that a successor judge may complete a case providing a verdict is returned or findings of fact and conclusions of law are filed. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971).

This rule does not give a successor judge authority to determine the credibility of witnesses or compare and weigh testimony. Sunshine v. Sunshine, 30 Colo. App. 67, 488 P.2d 1131 (1971); Friedman v. Colo. Nat. Bank, 825 P.2d 1033 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 846 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1993).

Successor judge has discretion to rule on a motion for new trial which challenges the sufficiency of the evidence. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982); Murphy v. Glenn, 964 P.2d 581 (Colo. App. 1998).

A successor judge may consider challenges to rulings of law presented in a motion for a new trial. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

A successor judge may grant a new trial upon a determination that he or she is unable to rule on post-trial matters as a result of not having been at the original trial. Murphy v. Glenn, 964 P.2d 581 (Colo. App. 1998).

Successor judge may pass on original judge's award of attorney fees. Friedman v. Colo. Nat. Bank, 825 P.2d 1033 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd on other grounds, 846 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1993).

Rule inapplicable where findings and conclusions are void. This rule does not apply to a situation where the findings of fact and conclusions of law which have been filed are void. Merchants Mtg. & Trust Corp. v. Jenkins, 659 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

Interpretation of federal cases persuasive. Because F.R.C.P. 63 is identical to this rule, federal cases and authorities interpreting the federal rule are highly persuasive. Faris v. Rothenberg, 648 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1982).

INJUNCTIONS, RECEIVERS, DEPOSITS IN COURT, OFFER OF JUDGMENT

Rule 65. Injunction

(a) Preliminary Injunction.

(1) Notice. No preliminary injunction shall be issued without notice to the adverse party.

(2) Consolidation of Hearing with Trial on Merits. Before or after the commencement of the hearing on an application for a preliminary injunction, the court may order the trial of the action on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the hearing of the application. Even when this consolidation is not ordered, any evidence received upon an application for a preliminary injunction which would be admissible upon a trial on the merits becomes part of the record on the trial and need not be repeated upon the trial, this subsection (a)(2) shall be so construed and applied as to save the parties any rights they may have to trial by jury.

(b) Temporary Restraining Order; Notice; Hearing; Duration. A temporary restraining order may be granted without written or oral notice to the adverse party or his attorney only if: (1) It clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified complaint or by testimony that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the applicant before the adverse party or his attorney can be heard in opposition, and (2) the applicant's attorney certifies to the court in writing or on the record the efforts, if any, which have been made to give the notice and the reasons supporting his claim that notice should not be required. Every temporary restraining order granted without notice shall be endorsed with the date and hour of issuance; shall be filed forthwith in the clerk's office and entered of record; shall define the injury and state why it is irreparable and why the order was granted without notice; and shall expire by its terms within such time after entry not to exceed 14 days, as the court fixes, unless within the time so fixed, the order, for good cause shown, is extended for a like period or unless the party against whom the order is directed consents that it may be extended for a longer period. The reasons for the extension shall be entered of record. In case a temporary restraining order is granted without notice, the motion for a preliminary injunction shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time and take precedence of all matters except older matters of the same character; and when the motion comes on for hearing the party who obtained the temporary restraining order shall proceed with the application for a preliminary injunction and, if he does not do so, the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order. On two (2) business days' notice to the party who obtained the temporary restraining order without notice or on such shorter notice to that party as the court may prescribe, the adverse party may appear and move its dissolution or modification and in that event the court shall proceed to hear and determine such motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice require.

(c) Security. No restraining order or preliminary injunction shall issue except upon the giving of security by the applicant, in such sum as the court deems proper, for the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who is found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained. No such security shall be required of the state or of any county or municipal corporation of this state or of any officer or agency thereof acting in official capacity. If at any time it shall appear to the court that security given under this Rule has become impaired or is insufficient, the court may vacate the restraining order or preliminary injunction unless within such time as the court may fix the security be made sufficient.

(d) Form and Scope of Injunction or Restraining Order. Every order granting an injunction and every restraining order shall set forth the reasons for its issuance; shall be specific in terms; shall describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the complaint or other document, the act or acts sought to be restrained; and is binding only upon the parties to the action, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and upon those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive actual notice of the order by personal service or otherwise.

(e) [There is no section (e).]

(f) Mandatory. If merely restraining the doing of an act or acts will not effectuate the relief to which the moving party is entitled, an injunction may be made mandatory. Such relief may include an injunction restoring to any person any property from which he may have been ousted or deprived of possession by fraud, force, or violence, or from which he may have been kept out of possession by threats or words or actions which have a natural tendency to excite fear or apprehension of danger.

(g) When Relief Granted. Relief under this Rule may also be granted on the motion of any party at any time after an action is commenced and before or in connection with final judgment.

(h) When Inapplicable. This Rule shall not apply to suits for dissolution of marriage, legal separation, maintenance, child support, or custody of minors. In such suits, the court may make prohibitive or mandatory orders, without notice or bond, as may be just.

(i) State Court's Jurisdiction When Suit Commenced in Federal Court; Stay of Proceedings; Notice; Appeal. Whenever a suit praying for an interlocutory injunction shall have been begun in a federal district court to restrain any official or officials of this state from enforcing or administering any statute or administrative order of this state, or to set aside such statute or administrative order, any defendant in such suit or the attorney general of the state may bring a suit to enforce such statute or order in the district court of the state at any time before the hearing on the application for an interlocutory injunction in the suit in the federal court; and the district courts of this state may entertain such suits and the state appellate courts may entertain appeals from judgments therein. When such suit is brought, the district court shall grant a stay of proceedings by any state officer or officers under such statute or order pending the determination of such suit in the courts of this state. Upon the bringing of such suit, the district court shall at once cause a notice thereof together with a copy of the stay order by it granted, to be sent to the federal district court in which the action was originally begun. An appeal may be taken within 14 days after the termination of the suit in the state district court to the appropriate state appellate court and such appeal shall be in every way expedited and set for an early hearing.

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 159 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Equity will not intervene where one has a plain and adequate remedy at law. Am. Investors Life Ins. Co. v. Green Shield Plan, Inc., 145 Colo. 188, 358 P.2d 473 (1960).

Such is the case where everything that a plaintiff asserts is measurable and compensable in money and the evidence shows that defendant is amply able to respond to a money judgment and is subject to the jurisdiction of the Colorado courts. Am. Investors Life Ins. Co. v. Green Shield Plan, Inc., 145 Colo. 188, 358 P.2d 473 (1960).

Where there is an adequate legal remedy which provides for the orderly termination of a nonconforming use, an injunction which is unduly harsh in its application will not be allowed to be used as a substitute for those legal means of phasing out the nonconforming use. Hobbs v. Smith, 177 Colo. 299, 493 P.2d 1352 (1972).

Injunction may not be obtained to restrain commission of a crime. Am. Television & Communications Corp. v. Manning, 651 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1982).

The power to issue injunction should be exercised with great discretion. The writ of injunction is the strong arm of the court and, to render its operation benign and useful, the power to issue it should be exercised with great discretion and when necessity requires it. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co., 44 Colo. 184, 98 P. 16 (1908).

Trial courts have considerable latitude in injunction cases. Brennan v. Monson, 97 Colo. 448, 50 P.2d 534 (1935).

If convinced that a plaintiff should comply with certain conditions in order that equity might be done between the parties, such conditions may be prescribed, and compliance therewith required as a prerequisite to the granting of injunctive relief. Brennan v. Monson, 97 Colo. 448, 50 P.2d 534 (1935).

Prohibition for failure to comply with this rule. When an inferior court exceeds its jurisdiction by issuing injunctive orders without complying with the provisions of this rule, relief in the nature of prohibition does lie to prevent manifest injustice. Stull v. District Court, 135 Colo. 86, 308 P.2d 1006 (1957).

A plaintiff who has sued out a writ of attachment upon personal property before judgment cannot secure an injunction without complying with this rule where there are no special requirements or procedure provided under statute by which an injunction or other relief shall be granted. Stull v. District Court, 135 Colo. 86, 308 P.2d 1006 (1957).

If an injunction is void it can be collaterally attacked. Resler v. North E. Motor Freight, Inc., 154 Colo. 52, 388 P.2d 255 (1964).

A collateral attack on a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction, contained in a motion for a new trial directed to contempt orders issued for disobedience of the restraining order or injunction, is proper only if the orders granting the temporary restraining order or the preliminary injunction are void for some jurisdictional defect. Bd. of Water Works v. Pueblo Water Works Employees Local 1045, 196 Colo. 308, 586 P.2d 18 (1978).

In a proper case where there will not be a double recovery, a court may issue an injunction to open a blocked easement, and, if necessary to grant an injured party complete relief for past interference with his easement, the court may also award monetary damages. Proper v. Greager, 827 P.2d 591 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in Ireland v. Wynkoop, 36 Colo. App. 206, 539 P.2d 1349 (1975); Sanderson v. District Court, 190 Colo. 431, 548 P.2d 921 (1976); Jeffrey v. Colo. State Dept. of Soc. Servs., 198 Colo. 265, 599 P.2d 874 (1979); Jack Kent Cadillac, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 403, 601 P.2d 626 (1979); In re Davis, 44 Colo. App. 355, 618 P.2d 692 (1980); State Pers. Bd. v. District Court, 637 P.2d 333 (Colo. 1981); Pasbrig v. Walton, 651 P.2d 459 (Colo. App. 1982); Gold Messenger, Inc. v. McGuay, 937 P.2d 907 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Wunder, 2016 COA 46, 371 P.3d 785.

II. PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.

The purpose of the preliminary injunction is to preserve the "status quo" or protect rights pending the final determination of a cause. McLean v. Farmers' Highline Canal & Reservoir Co., 44 Colo. 184, 98 P. 16 (1908) (decided under § 167 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Preliminary injunctive relief is an extraordinary remedy designed to protect a plaintiff from sustaining irreparable injury and to preserve the power of the district court to render a meaningful decision following a trial on the merits. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982); Zoning Bd. of Adjustment v. DeVilbiss, 729 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1986).

A preliminary injunction is to maintain the status quo. Combined Communications Corp. v. City & County of Denver, 186 Colo. 443, 528 P.2d 249 (1974).

The granting of a preliminary injunction pursuant to section (a) of this rule is to preserve the status quo or otherwise to grant emergency relief. Macleod v. Miller, 44 Colo. App. 313, 612 P.2d 1158 (1980).

The matter of a preliminary injunction is to prevent further harm where harm is alleged, or otherwise to grant emergency relief, and a hearing on the merits is contemplated at a later date.

Graham v. Hoyl, 157 Colo. 338, 402 P.2d 604 (1965).

A court errs and is precipitous in its action by making an injunction permanent where issues remain to be tried upon which parties are entitled to be heard before any orders could be made final. Graham v. Hoyl, 157 Colo. 338, 402 P.2d 604 (1965).

Grant or denial of preliminary injunction not an adjudication of ultimate rights in controversy. The trial court erred when it determined, on a motion for a preliminary injunction, the title to the property at issue in the underlying transaction. Litinsky v. Querard, 683 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1984).

Different considerations govern issues relating to preliminary injunctions and requests for permanent injunctions, with the standards applicable to permanent injunctions less demanding. Henson v. Hoth, 258 F. Supp. 33 (D. Colo. 1966).

A trial court has broad discretion to formulate the terms of injunctive relief when equity so requires. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989).

Decision within court's discretion. The grant or denial of a preliminary injunction is a decision which lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982); Litinsky v. Querard, 683 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1984); Zuments v. Colo. H.S. Activities Ass'n, 737 P.2d 1113 (Colo. App. 1987); Baseline Farms Two, LLP v. Hennings, 26 P.3d 1209 (Colo. App. 2000).

Threshold requirement that relief necessary to protect rights. Before a trial court may enjoin the enforcement of a criminal statute in a preliminary injunction proceeding, the moving party must establish, as a threshold requirement, a clear showing that injunctive relief is necessary to protect existing legitimate property rights or fundamental constitutional rights. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982).

As a prerequisite to the issuance of a preliminary injunction, there must be a showing of real, immediate, and irreparable injury which will occur pending a final hearing, and that the injunction is necessary to prevent such injury or damage. Am. Investors Life Ins. Co. v. Green Shield Plan, Inc., 145 Colo. 188, 358 P.2d 473 (1960).

The prerequisites to the issuance of a preliminary injunction are: A showing of real, immediate and irreparable injury which will occur pending a final hearing, and that the injunction is necessary to prevent such injury or damage; and a showing of the reasonable probability of success on the merits on the part of the plaintiff. Macleod v. Miller, 44 Colo. App. 313, 612 P.2d 1158 (1980).

In exercising its discretion, the trial court must find that the moving party has demonstrated: (1) A reasonable probability of success on the merits; (2) a danger of real, immediate, and irreparable injury which may be prevented by injunctive relief; (3) that there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law; (4) that the granting of a preliminary injunction will not disserve the public interest; (5) that the balance of equities favors the injunction; and (6) that the injunction will preserve the status quo pending a trial on the merits. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982); Wakabayashi v. Tooley, 648 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1982); Am. Television & Communications Corp. v. Manning, 651 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1982); Iowa Nat. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cent. Mortg. & Inv., 708 P.2d 480 (Colo. App. 1985); Bloom v. NCAA, 93 P.3d 621 (Colo. App. 2004); Gitlitz v. Bellock, 171 P.3d 1274 (Colo. App. 2007).

Each prerequisite must be established by the moving party before a preliminary injunction will issue to prevent the enforcement of a criminal statute. Wakabayashi v. Tooley, 648 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1982).

A loss of a contractual right to manage and control a business may constitute irreparable harm. Monetary damages are an inadequate remedy for such a loss. A contractual right to participate in the management and control of a business has intrinsic value in and of itself that may not be adequately compensated by monetary damages. Gitlitz v. Bellock, 171 P.3d 1274 (Colo. App. 2007).

One of the issues before a court on a preliminary injunction is the reasonable probability of success on the part of the plaintiff. Combined Communications Corp. v. City & County of Denver, 186 Colo. 443, 528 P.2d 249 (1974).

Where a trial court issues a preliminary injunction without making any findings of fact as to the likelihood of plaintiff's success on the merits, the order must be set aside and the matter remanded for a hearing. O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

Decision to issue preliminary injunction is binding upon review. Absent a showing of an abuse of discretion, trial court's decision to issue a preliminary injunction is binding upon review. Macleod v. Miller, 44 Colo. App. 313, 612 P.2d 1158 (1980).

Telephone company is not entitled to preliminary injunction preventing maintenance of rates and allowing higher charges during judicial review of P.U.C. rates. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. P. U. C., 176 Colo. 457, 491 P.2d 582 (1971).

Relief seldom granted to enjoin governmental actions. Because equitable relief in the nature of an injunction constitutes a form of judicial interference with continuing activities, the courts have generally been reluctant to grant such relief where the actions complained of are those of departments of the executive and legislative branches of government, in the exercise of their authority. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982).

Preliminary injunction enjoining enforcement of criminal statute held abuse of discretion. Wakabayashi v. Tooley, 648 P.2d 655 (Colo. 1982).

Preliminary injunction should not be enforced when a period of less than two months remains after enforcement commences until trial on the merits. Combined Communications Corp. v. City & County of Denver, 186 Colo. 443, 528 P.2d 249 (1974).

When order deemed preliminary injunction. Where an order is issued after notice and an evidentiary hearing and for a period beyond 10 days, it is a preliminary injunction. O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

Effect of denial of preliminary injunction on remaining proceedings. The pending appeal of a denial of a motion for preliminary injunction does not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to proceed in a timely and orderly fashion with the declaratory judgment and permanent injunction proceedings. Rathke v. MacFarlane, 648 P.2d 648 (Colo. 1982).

Existence of liquidated damages does not automatically preclude imposition of an injunction. Boulder Medical Center v. Moore, 651 P.2d 464 (Colo. App. 1982).

Conditions of this rule inapplicable to C.R.C.P. 106. While this rule provides that no restraining order or preliminary injunction shall issue except upon giving security by the applicant, that no order or injunction shall issue without notice, except under certain situations, and that an early hearing shall be provided, no such conditions appear in C.R.C.P. 106. PII of Colo., Inc. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 239, 591 P.2d 1316 (1979).

Contempt is proper where preliminary injunction is lawful and is not complied with, even where eventually found to be wrongfully entered. Charles Milne Associates v. Toponce, 770 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1988).

The prerequisites of this rule apply to § 7-74-103 actions for preliminary injunction to prevent or restrain actual or threatened misappropriations of a trade secret. Bishop & Co. v. Cuomo, 799 P.2d 444 (Colo. App. 1990).

Consolidation of trial and preliminary injunction. Parties should normally receive notice of the court's intent to consolidate the trial and the preliminary injunction either before the hearing or when the parties will still have an opportunity to present their cases. Taxpayers were not denied due process and if any error occurred, it was harmless, when the trial court announced it would consolidate the injunction hearing with the trial on the merits after commencement of the preliminary injunction hearing, both parties submitted offers of proof and had a full opportunity to present their cases, and no specific harm was alleged. Leek v. City of Golden, 870 P.2d 580 (Colo. App. 1993).

III. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER.

Law reviews. For article, "In the Matter of Ex Parte Restraining Orders, Injunctions and Writs of Ne Exeat in Divorce Cases", see 9 Dicta 190 (1932). For article, "Expediting Court Procedure", see 10 Dicta 113 (1933). For article on restraining orders and injunctions without notice to defendant in divorce cases, see 20 Dicta 46 (1943).

This rule relates to the issuance of restraining orders without notice to the person to be restrained, and adequate protections are afforded in the matter of a bond and prompt hearing on the question of whether the "ex parte" order should be continued. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

A court has no authority to grant a restraining order to prevent an administrative board from holding hearings as scheduled by it. Such court action is a direct and unjustified judicial interference with a function properly delegated to the executive branch of government. Banking Bd. v. District Court, 177 Colo. 77, 492 P.2d 837 (1972).

A restraining order which fails to comply with this rule is void. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959); Intermountain Rural Elec. Ass'n v. District Court, 160 Colo. 128, 414 P.2d 911 (1966).

Where a restraining order is completely devoid of virtually all of the requirements of this rule, any one of the deficiencies is sufficient to render the order a nullity. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959).

Requirements under sections (b) and (d) of this rule are mandatory and must be complied with before a temporary restraining order issued without notice is valid. Mile High Kennel Club v. Colo. Greyhound Breeders Ass'n, 38 Colo. App. 519, 559 P.2d 1120 (1977).

Hearing required for determination that order wrongfully issued. Absent a hearing on the merits, no determination can be made that a temporary restraining order has been wrongfully issued. Cross v. Bd. of Dirs. of Plains Coop. Tel. Ass'n, 39 Colo. App. 569, 570 P.2d 1307 (1977).

Only after the enjoined party has been vindicated by successfully defending against the suit on the merits can it be held that he was wrongfully restrained and entitled to damages. Cross v. Bd. of Dirs. of Plains Coop. Tel. Ass'n, 39 Colo. App. 569, 570 P.2d 1307 (1977).

Orders held deficient. Orders merely stating that the defendants were engaged in a boycott, and concluding that the plaintiffs would be ir-reparably damaged if the boycott was not restrained, do not specifically define the injury and do not state why the injury is irreparable. Either one of these deficiencies is sufficient to render the orders a nullity. Mile High Kennel Club v. Colo. Greyhound Breeders Ass'n, 38 Colo. App. 519, 559 P.2d 1120 (1977).

In a contempt proceeding, it is proper as a defense to raise the validity of a restraining order. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959).

Upon hearing on a citation for contempt for violation of a temporary restraining order where the issues have not been joined in the action and only the validity of a temporary order has been challenged, it is error for a trial court to rule on the issue of a permanent injunction. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959).

A temporary restraining order issued under this rule is not an appealable order under C.A.R. 1(a). Freshpict Foods, Inc. v. Campos, 30 Colo. App. 354, 492 P.2d 867 (1971); O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

Rationale behind nonappealability of temporary restraining orders is that they are of short duration and terminate with the ruling of the preliminary injunction so that an immediate appeal is not necessary to protect the rights of the parties. O'Connell v. Colo. State Bank, 633 P.2d 511 (Colo. App. 1981).

IV. SECURITY.

Law reviews. For article, "In the Matter of Ex Parte Restraining Orders, Injunctions and Writs of Ne Exeat in Divorce Cases", see 9 Dicta 190 (1932). For article, "Expediting Court Procedure", see 10 Dicta 113 (1933).

Action on bond where injunction suit dismissed at instance of plaintiff. In an action on the bond to secure a temporary injunction, the fact that the injunction, suit is dismissed at the instance of the plaintiff is not to be taken as an admission that an emergency requiring the issuance of an injunction did not exist, if the dismissal is for matters done or arising subsequent to the issuance of the injunction and the original issuance was proper. Hammaker v. Behm, 116 Colo. 523, 182 P.2d 141 (1947).

An injunction was issued without compliance with this rule where trial court determined that it would not require defendants to post any bond or other security and made no mention of potential costs and losses that might be sustained by plaintiff. Apache Village, Inc. v. Coleman Co., 776 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1989).

The amount of security required by this rule is discretionary with the court so long as it bears a reasonable relationship to the potential costs and losses occasioned by a preliminary injunction which is later determined to have been improperly granted. Apache Village,

Inc. v. Coleman Co., 776 P.2d 1154 (Colo. App. 1989).

Injunction, including TRO, not void or invalid for failure to post a bond, unless the court's order provides otherwise and injunction remains in effect until vacated by subsequent order or terminates by own terms. Kaiser v. Market Square Discount Liquors, Inc., 992 P.2d 636 (Colo. App. 1999).

Bond was properly ordered paid to defendant to reimburse the costs of an improvidently issued injunction even when the plaintiff's failure to prevail was based solely on a question of law. Wick v. Pueblo West Metro., 789 P.2d 457 (Colo. App. 1989).

Section (c) of this rule imposes two conditions on an enjoined defendant seeking to recover damages on a bond: First, the injunction must have been "wrongful", and second, the defendant must have suffered damages as a result of the issuance of the injunction. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992); Lazy Dog Ranch v. Telluray Ranch Corp., 948 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1997).

The judicial discretion standard, under which the trial court has discretion in deciding whether to award damages on the bond, is the most consistent with the plain language of section (c) of this rule. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section (c) of this rule requires that an applicant give a bond, but it does not expressly order the court to pay that bond to a prevailing defendant. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Under the good reason rule principle of preference, which limits the judicial discretion standard, a trial court presumes that a prevailing defendant is entitled to damages on the injunction bond, unless there is good reason for not requiring such payment in the particular case. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992); Lazy Dog Ranch v. Telluray Ranch Corp., 948 P.2d 74 (Colo. App. 1997).

When an appellate court reviews a trial court's determination of good reason, the standard of review regarding which factors the trial court has used is akin to review by the standard of simple error used in reviewing decisions of questions of law. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court considered and balanced appropriate factors in determining that good reason existed to deny damages, where it considered the outcome of the underlying suit, the fact that the claims were brought in good faith, the financial status of the parties, and the fact that the action was brought solely in the public interest. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

V. FORM AND SCOPE.

An injunction must be specific to be valid. Resler v. North E. Motor Freight, Inc., 154 Colo. 52, 388 P.2d 255 (1964).

Injunctions may be issued without being reviewed “as to form only” by counsel. Such notice is not required under C.R.C.P. 6 since that rule concerns notice of written motions as to enlargements of time and has no relevance to the issue of injunctions. Shoenberg Farms, Inc. v. People ex rel. Swisher, 166 Colo. 199, 444 P.2d 277 (1968).

An injunction prohibiting conduct must be sufficiently precise to enable the party subject to the equitable decree to conform its conduct to the requirements thereof. Colo. Springs Bd. of Realtors v. State, 780 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1989).

There is no requirement in this rule that an injunction must be included in a written judgment granting injunctive relief, as this rule contains no requirements with respect to judgments; it merely sets forth what must be contained in an injunction which followed the judgment at a later date. Shoenberg Farms, Inc. v. People ex rel. Swisher, 166 Colo. 199, 444 P.2d 277 (1968).

Inconsistencies between this rule and § 25-7-102 resolved in section’s favor. Where the proceeding is a special statutory proceeding under the air pollution control act, any inconsistency between this rule and § 25-7-102 regarding the form and scope of an injunction is resolved in favor of the statutory section. Fry Roofing Co. v. Dept. of Health, 191 Colo. 463, 553 P.2d 800 (1976).

If the statute does not create a special statutory procedure for obtaining a preliminary injunction, the normal requisites of this rule apply. Because neither § 25-8-611 nor § 25-8-612 authorizes injunctions or creates a private cause of action or right to proceed in the public interest, this rule, including the requirement of a showing of real, immediate, and irreparable injury, applies to a suit to seek a preliminary injunction to enforce Colorado’s Water Quality Control Act. Baseline Farms Two, LLP v. Hennings, 26 P.3d 1209 (Colo. App. 2000).

Specific oral pronouncement followed by minute order was sufficient to satisfy rule that injunctions be specific in terms and described in detail. Charles Milne Associates v. Toponce, 770 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1988).

Applied in Carbajal v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 2020 COA 49, 467 P.3d 1262.

VI. MANDATORY DECREE.

This section is a correct statement of the general law, and provides for restoration of property where proper. This section affords a complete answer to the problem of whether property obtained by force and violence, and perhaps by fraud, which prior thereto had been used by plaintiffs in the conduct of a legitimate business, may, in the administration of equitable relief, be restored to plaintiffs. Cuddigan v. San Juan Fed’n of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, 110 Colo. 97, 130 P.2d 923 (1942).

In an action founded on a complaint for injunction and affirmative relief wherein it is alleged that the plaintiffs were ousted by the defendants by force and violence from the possession of property and its possession ever since withheld from them by threats of violence, a decree ordering restitution of the property to the plaintiffs is a final judgment from which an appeal will lie. Sprague v. Locke, 1 Colo. App. 171, 28 P. 142 (1891).

Plaintiff seeking injunctive relief is obligated to obtain a preliminary injunction or temporary restraining order to maintain the status quo pending trial, because, if the defendant completes the act sought to be restrained pending trial, the plaintiff’s action becomes moot and should properly be dismissed. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment v. DeVilbiss, 729 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1986).

Injunction not available under § 30-28-110 (4). Although section (f) provides for the issuance of a mandatory injunction, the strict construction of § 30-28-110 (4) precludes the availability of such relief to a county. Bd. of County Comm’rs v. Pfeifer, 190 Colo. 275, 546 P.2d 946 (1976).

Denial of mandatory injunction held correct. Eugene Cervi & Co. v. Russell, 31 Colo. App. 525, 506 P.2d 748 (1972), aff’d, 184 Colo. 282, 519 P.2d 1189 (1974).

VII. WHEN RELIEF GRANTED.

Section (g) clearly contemplates that an injunction may be provided for in a separate document, rather than in a judgment. Shoenberg Farms, Inc. v. People ex rel. Swisher, 166 Colo. 199, 444 P.2d 277 (1968).

Probate court had authority under section (h) to enter no-contact order between father and children after a full hearing on motions related to parenting time and child support. People ex rel. A.R.D., 43 P.3d 632 (Colo. App. 2001).

VIII. WHEN INAPPLICABLE.

This rule does not apply to suits for divorce. Where, in a divorce action, a temporary restraining order was issued against the husband preventing him from disposing of his property, “pending the further order of the court”, such order is not controlled by the provisions of this rule which specifically provide in section (h) that this rule shall not apply to suits for divorce, alimony, separate maintenance or custody of infants. Gillespie v. District Court, 119 Colo. 242, 202 P.2d 151 (1949).

Rule not applicable to divorce actions except in circumstances of actual emergency. Under this rule, restraining orders should not be issued in divorce actions except in circumstances of actual emergency and where it is clearly established that grounds exist for granting such extraordinary remedy. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

Only under extraordinary circumstances should third persons not involved in the marital difficulties of the parties to a divorce action, who are carrying on legitimate business transactions with one of the parties thereto, be restrained or enjoined from continuing business activities with such persons, even upon notice. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

Discretion rests with trial court to enter a restraining order without notice or bond, as may be just. Simpson v. Simpson, 151 Colo. 88, 376 P.2d 55 (1962).

In the judicial enforcement proceeding under the Pet Animal Care and Facilities Act, the normally applicable irreparable injury and posting of security requirements under the rule do not apply. The usually applicable discretion to postpone the effective date of agency action under the State Administrative Procedure Act, which the court may issue upon a finding of irreparable injury pending judicial review, does not apply to the statute. Kourlis v. District Court, El Paso County, 930 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1997).

Applied in Wolfberg v. Noland, 122 Colo. 338, 222 P.2d 426 (1950); Mann v. Friden, 132 Colo. 273, 287 P.2d 961 (1955).

Rule 65.1.

Repealed and made Reserved effective March 5, 2020.

Rule 66. Receivers

(a) When Appointed. A receiver may be appointed by the court in which the action is pending at any time:

(1) Before judgment, provisionally, on application of either party, when he establishes a prima facie right to the property, or to an interest therein, which is the subject of the action and is in possession of an adverse party and such property, or its rents, issues, and profits are in danger of being lost, removed beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or materially injured or impaired; or

(2) By or after judgment, to dispose of the property according to the judgment, or to preserve it during appellate proceedings; or

(3) In other cases where proper and in accordance with the established principles of equity.

(b) Oath and Bond; Suit on Bond. Before entering upon his duties, the receiver shall be sworn to perform them faithfully, and shall execute, with one or more sureties, an undertaking with the people of the state of Colorado, in such sum as the court shall direct, to the effect that he will faithfully discharge his duties and will pay over and account for all money and property which may come into his hands as the court may direct, and will obey the orders of the court therein. The undertaking, with the sureties, must be approved by the court, or by the clerk thereof when so ordered by the court, and may be sued upon in the name of the people of the state of Colorado, at the instance and for the use of any party injured.

(c) Dismissal of Receivership Action. An action in which a receiver has been appointed shall not be dismissed except by order of the court.

(d) Sole Claim for Relief; Service of Process; Notice.

(1) The appointment of a receiver may be the sole claim for relief in an action. The action shall be commenced by filing a complaint, or by service of a summons and a complaint, as provided in C.R.C.P. 3(a).

(2) If the receivership is requested in connection with a mortgage, trust deed or other lien on real property, the current owner of the property, as shown by the records of the clerk and recorder, and any other person then collecting the rents and profits as a result of that person's lien on the rents or profits, shall be named as defendants.

(3) If a receiver is appointed by the court ex parte, copies of the summons, complaint, and order appointing the receiver shall be served on the defendants without delay, as provided in C.R.C.P. 4 or as directed by the court. The court, in its order for appointment of the receiver, shall direct the receiver to provide written notice of the action to any persons in possession of the property or otherwise affected by the order.

Annotator’s note. Since this rule is similar to § 180 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

A receiver is an officer of the court. Casserleigh v. Malone, 50 Colo. 597, 115 P. 520 (1911); McClain v. Saranac Mach. Co., 94 Colo. 145, 28 P.2d 1009 (1934).

This rule does not authorize a receiver to practice law on behalf of the receivership estate in federal court. This rule makes a receiver accountable to the state court that appointed the receiver. In re Shattuck, 411 B.R. 378 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. 2009).

His possession of property in his official capacity is the possession of the court and not of the party at whose instance he is appointed. McClain v. Saranac Mach. Co., 94 Colo. 145, 28 P.2d 1009 (1934).

One who interferes with receivership property in the custody of the law, without permission of the court in whose custody it is, is guilty of contempt. Clear Creek Power Dev. Co. v. Cutler, 79 Colo. 355, 245 P. 939 (1926).

Receiver has only right and title of owner. A receiver holds the property coming into his hands by the same right and title as the person for whose property he is receiver, subject to liens, priorities, and equities existing at the time of his appointment. Tolland Co. v. First State Bank, 95 Colo. 321, 35 P.2d 867 (1934).

A stranger has right to have receiver institute suit to try title. While the court which appoints a receiver exercises general control over the property that comes into the possession of the receiver as such, this power of control does not deprive a stranger, who claims by paramount title, of the right to have a suit or proceeding instituted by the receiver to try the question of title. Pomeranz v. Nat’l Beet Harvester Co., 82 Colo. 482, 261 P. 861 (1927).

The better practice is for the receiver to bring an independent adverse suit in the tribunal where the defendant has the right to have the controversy decided. Pomeranz v. Nat’l Beet Harvester Co., 82 Colo. 482, 261 P. 861 (1927).

The plaintiffs have established their entitlement to an evidentiary hearing relative to the appointment of a receiver. It need not appear from the movant’s request for appointment that any imminent insolvency result only from fraud. Diaz v. Fernandez, 910 P.2d 96 (Colo. App. 1995).

For the power of receiver to administer assets, see Flint v. Powell, 18 Colo. App. 425, 72 P. 60 (1903).

For the duties as to management of railroad property, see Frank v. Denver & Rio Grande Ry., 23 F. 757 (D. Colo. 1885).

A court cannot appoint a receiver to manage or operate a medical or retail marijuana business unless the receiver has the proper medical or retail marijuana license. Yates v. Hartman, 2018 COA 31, 488 P.3d 348.

Applied in State ex rel. Colo. Dept. of Health v. I.D.I., Inc., 642 P.2d 14 (Colo. App. 1981).

II. WHEN APPOINTED.

This rule does not apply to any case in which an action is not pending. Jones v. Bank of Leadville, 10 Colo. 464, 17 P. 272 (1887).

Action is “pending” under section (a) of this rule after it is commenced under C.R.C.P. 3, by either filing a complaint with the court or by the service of a summons. Johnson v. McCaughan, Carter & Scharrer, 672 P.2d 221 (Colo. App. 1983).

The plain intent of this rule is that there shall be a controversy between two or more adverse parties moved in the court, involving some conflicting and hostile claims to property that is, at least in part, the subject matter of the litigation in the mind of the general assembly it is necessary to this jurisdiction that there should be some party in all these proceedings who is adverse to the defendant and whose right to certain property are to be protected and adjudicated. Jones v. Bank of Leadville, 10 Colo. 464, 17 P. 272 (1887).

Appointment of receiver is discretionary. Whether a receiver will or will not be appointed upon a preliminary hearing is a matter which ordinarily rests in the sound discretion of a trial court. Melville v. Weybrew, 106 Colo. 121, 103 P.2d 7, cert. denied, 311 U.S. 695 (1940); Rigel v. Kaveny, 133 Colo. 556, 298 P.2d 396 (1956); Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

There will be no interference with the exercise of that discretion by an appellate court, save in a clear case of abuse. Melville v. Weybrew, 106 Colo. 121, 103 P.2d 7, cert. denied, 311 U.S. 695 (1940); Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

Court held not to have abused its discretion in making appointment. Riant Amusement Co. v. Bailey, 80 Colo. 65, 249 P. 7 (1926).

Courts have no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver except in a suit pending in which the receiver is desired, unless in cases of persons under disability which is a particular jurisdiction. Jones v. Bank of Leadville, 10 Colo. 464, 17 P. 272 (1887).

A minor may by his guardian or next friend procure the appointment of a receiver for the purpose of collecting the rents and profits of premises deeded. Hutchinson v. McLaughlin, 15 Colo. 492, 25 P. 317, 11 L.R.A. 287 (1890).

Courts of equity have no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver except in a pending action in which the receiver is desired. People ex rel. Daniels v. District Court, 33 Colo. 293, 80 P. 908 (1905).

Allegations of a complaint in a receivership proceeding held sufficient. Riant Amusement Co. v. Bailey, 80 Colo. 65, 249 P. 7 (1926).

Complaint held insufficient where indebtedness not alleged. In a proceeding by petition for the appointment of a receiver for the purpose of an accounting where there is no complaint alleging the indebtedness and no service of process, a court has no jurisdiction to enter a judgment. Paddack v. Staley, 13 Colo. App. 363, 58 P. 363 (1899).

The appointment of a receiver to impound assets of an estate to pay a claim that does not exist is a nullity. Wright v. Halley, 95 Colo. 148, 33 P.2d 966 (1934).

While courts have jurisdiction to appoint receivers for corporations, the power should be exercised with the utmost caution and only where a receiver is imperatively necessary to protect property rights. Eureka Coal Co. v. McGowan, 72 Colo. 402, 212 P. 521 (1922).

A receiver should not be appointed for a corporation in an action by a simple contract creditor to prevent the corporation from fraudulently disposing of its property, and putting beyond its power the ability to respond to a judgment sought to be obtained on an unsecured debt. International Trust Co. v. United Coal Co., 27 Colo. 246, 60 P. 621 (1900).

This rule does not give an equity court authority to appoint a receiver at the suit of an individual stockholder who complains of fraud in the management of the affairs of the corporation. People ex rel. Daniels v. District Court, 33 Colo. 293, 80 P. 908 (1905).

Receiver for corporation may be appointed when no board of directors to manage. Where the principal stockholders of a corporation are engaged in a contest over the control of the property, and the outstanding capital stock is so distributed that no board of directors can be elected to manage the affairs of the company, a receiver is properly appointed. Eureka Coal Co. v. McGowan, 72 Colo. 402, 212 P. 521 (1922).

This rule does not give an equity court authority to dissolve a corporation. People ex rel. Daniels v. District Court, 33 Colo. 293, 80 P. 908 (1905).

The appointment of a receiver for a corporation does not work its dissolution. Steinhauer v. Colmar, 11 Colo. App. 494, 55 P. 291 (1898).

Appointment of a receiver is authorized under appropriate circumstances without a pending request for dissolution of the company. A member of a limited liability company has a personal property interest in the company. Diaz v. Fernandez, 910 P.2d 96 (Colo. App. 1995).

Where equity will sustain a creditor's bill, it will also grant the aid of the ancillary remedies of injunction and receiver. Livingston v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co., 12 Colo. App. 320, 56 P. 351 (1898).

The appointment of a receiver contrary to this rule is only an error, and not a jurisdictional question where it appears that the court had jurisdiction of the subject matter and parties. Riant Amusement Co. v. Bailey, 80 Colo. 65, 249 P. 7 (1926).

Improper appointment cannot be considered in contempt proceedings. In proceedings where a receiver is appointed to take charge of property, the improper appointment of the receiver cannot be considered in contempt proceedings based upon interference with the receivership property. Clear Creek Power & Dev. Co. v. Cutler, 79 Colo. 355, 245 P. 939 (1926).

Where there is no objection made by defendant to the appointment of a receiver, he is deemed to have acquiesced in the court's action. Oman v. Morris, 28 Colo. App. 124, 471 P.2d 430 (1970).

Rule 67. Deposit in Court

(a) By Party. In an action in which any part of the relief sought is a judgment for a sum of money or the disposition of a sum of money or the disposition of any other thing capable of delivery, a party, upon notice to every other party, and by leave of court, may deposit with the court all or any part of such sum or thing, to be held by the clerk of the court subject to withdrawal in whole or in part at any time thereafter upon order of the court.

(b) By Trustee. When it is admitted by the pleadings or examination of a party that he has in his possession or under his control any money or other things capable of delivery which, being the subject of litigation, is held by him as trustee for another party, or which belongs or is due to another party, upon motion, the court may order the same to be deposited in court or delivered to such party, upon such conditions as may be just, subject to the further direction of the court.

ANNOTATION

The Colorado Governmental Immunity Act specifies the amount of plaintiff's maximum recovery from public entities or public employees, and this rule establishes the procedure by which defendant may deposit an undisputed sum into the court registry. Rudnick v. Ferguson, 179 P.3d 26 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court did not err in permitting defendants to tender $150,000 into the court registry and in dismissing the case as moot without requiring defendants to confess judgment, admit their liability, or enter into a settlement with the plaintiffs. Rudnick v. Ferguson, 179 P.3d 26 (Colo. App. 2007).

Trial court has jurisdiction to decide city's motion pursuant to this rule to deposit funds with the court registry after the filing of a notice of appeal because the motion did not challenge the propriety of the judgment itself. The filing of a notice of appeal generally signifies that the trial court is divested of the authority to consider matters of substance, but trial courts retain jurisdiction to act on matters that are not relative to and do not affect the judgment on appeal. Thus, the city's deposit of funds into the court's registry was acceptable. Coors Brewing Co. v. City of Golden, 2013 COA 92, 411 P.3d 767.

A motion to deposit funds with the court registry pursuant to this rule is not a post-trial motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 59. Coors Brewing Co. v. City of Golden, 2013 COA 92, 411 P.3d 767.

This rule permits a trial court to toll the accruing post-judgment interest as of the time the judgment creditor can gain access to the money deposited in the registry of the court. Coors Brewing Co. v. City of Golden, 2013 COA 92, 411 P.3d 767.

Rule 69. Execution and Proceedings Subsequent to Judgment

(a) In General. Except as provided in C.R.C.P. 103 or an order of court directing otherwise, process to enforce a final money judgment shall be by writ of execution.

(b) Proceedings for Costs. Costs finally awarded by order of court may be enforced in the same manner as any final money judgment. Costs awarded by an appellate court may be enforced in the same manner upon application by filing a remittitur or other order of the appellate court with the clerk of the trial court showing the award of costs.

(c) Debtor of Judgment Debtor; Debtor May Pay Sheriff. After issuance of a writ of execution against property, the judgment debtor or any person indebted to the judgment debtor may pay to the sheriff to whom the writ of execution is directed the amount necessary to satisfy the execution. The sheriff's receipt for the amount shall be a discharge for the amount so paid.

(d) Requirement that Judgment Debtor Answer Written Interrogatories. (1) At any time after entry of a final money judgment, the judgment creditor may serve written interrogatories upon the judgment debtor in accordance with C.R.C.P. 45, requiring the judgment debtor to answer the interrogatories. Within 21 days of service of the interrogatories upon the judgment debtor, the judgment debtor shall appear before the clerk of the court in which the judgment was entered to sign the answers to the interrogatories under oath and file them.

(2) If the judgment debtor, after being properly served with written interrogatories as provided by this Rule, fails to answer the served interrogatories, the judgment creditor may file a motion, with return of the previously served written interrogatories attached thereto, and request an order of court requiring the judgment debtor to either answer the previously served written interrogatories within 21 days in accordance with the provisions of (d)(1) of this Rule or appear in court at a specified time to show cause why the judgment debtor shall not be held in contempt of court for failure to comply with the order requiring answers to interrogatories; a copy of the motion, written interrogatories and a certified order of court shall be served upon judgment debtor in accordance with C.R.C.P. 45.

(e) Subpoena for Appearance of Judgment Debtor. (1) At any time after entry of a final money judgment, a judgment creditor may cause a subpoena or subpoena to produce to be served as provided in C.R.C.P. 45 requiring the judgment debtor to appear before the court, master or referee with requested documents at a specified time obtained from the court to answer concerning property. A judgment debtor may be required to attend outside the county where such judgment debtor resides and the court may make reasonable orders for mileage and expenses. The subpoena shall include on its face a conspicuous notice to the judgment debtor that provides: "Failure to Appear Will Result in Issuance of a Warrant for Your Arrest."

(2) If the judgment debtor, after being properly served with a subpoena or subpoena to produce as provided in C.R.C.P. 45, fails to appear, the court upon motion of the judgment creditor shall issue a bench warrant commanding the sheriff of any county in which the judgment debtor may be found, to arrest and bring the judgment debtor forthwith before the court for proceedings under this Rule.

(f) Subpoena for Appearance of Debtor of Judgment Debtor. At any time after entry of a final money judgment, upon proof to the satisfaction of the court, that any person has property of, or is indebted to a judgment debtor in any amount exceeding Five Hundred Dollars not exempt from execution, the court may issue a subpoena or subpoena to produce to such person to appear before the court, master or referee at a specified time and answer concerning the same. Service shall be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 45, and the court may make reasonable orders for mileage and expenses.

(g) Order to Apply Property on Judgment; Contempt. The court, master, or referee may order any party or other person over whom the court has jurisdiction, to apply any property other than real property, not exempt from execution, whether in the possession of such party or other person, or owed the judgment debtor, towards satisfaction of the judgment. Any party or person who disobeys an order made under the provisions of this Rule may be punished for contempt. Nothing in this rule shall be construed to prevent an action in the nature of a creditor's bill.

(h) Witnesses. Witnesses may be subpoenaed to appear and testify in accordance with C.R.C.P. 45.

(i) Depositions. After entry of a final money judgment, the judgment creditor, upon order of court which may be obtained ex parte, may take the deposition of any person including the judgment debtor, in the manner provided in these Rules.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Supplementary Proceedings in Enforcement of Judgments", see 27 Dicta 128 (1950). For article "One Year Review of Civil Procedure", see 35 Dicta 3 (1958).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to § 265 et seq. of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule assumes the existence of valid judgment obtained over one properly made a party to the suit on the debt by service of process. Havens v. Hardesty, 43 Colo. App. 162, 600 P.2d 116 (1979).

This rule does not require a judgment creditor to have a valid judgment lien as a prerequisite to obtaining a writ of execution and certificate of levy or to execute on the judgment. Franklin Credit Mgmt. Corp. v. Galvan, 2019 COA 107, 457 P.3d 749.

This rule deals with supplemental proceedings available to a judgment creditor which enable him to enforce the collection of a judgment. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

Supplemental proceedings are for the purpose of making effectual a judgment rendered in the main or original action. Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

Proceedings also for purpose of discovering what property is available to satisfy such. The purpose of supplementary proceedings in aid of execution is to discover what property the judgment debtor has that is subject to execution and to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment any such property that is in the hands of such debtor or any other person as well as due to the judgment debtor. Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924 (1931).

Original proceeding considered as still pending. Jurisdiction of the defendant having been acquired in the original proceeding, that action is considered as still pending until the judgment rendered thereon is fully discharged. Hexter v. Clifford, 5 Colo. 168 (1879); Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

This rule authorizes the court to act based upon its continuing jurisdiction over the defendant named in the underlying action. Havens v. Hardesty, 43 Colo. App. 162, 600 P.2d 116 (1979).

These proceedings are ancillary and auxiliary to the original action. Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

Further proceedings to enforce a judgment should be presented to the court that entered it. Urbancich v. Mayberry, 124 Colo. 311, 236 P.2d 535 (1951).

A court does not have the authority, under this rule 69 or otherwise, to prevent the sale of property under execution to satisfy a judgment where the property in question is not included within any class of assets exempt from execution under the provisions of any exemption law. Jones v. District Court, 135 Colo. 468, 312 P.2d 503 (1957).

Levy upon property. A sheriff's sale of property to which defendant had no title and satisfaction based thereon were void and defendant's subsequent pledge of stock to secure the same judgment was valid. Ada Mechanical Servs., Inc., v. Goehring, 707 P.2d 1034 (Colo. App. 1985).

Applied in People v. Barbour, 639 P.2d 1065 (Colo. 1982); Lobb v. Hodges, 641 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1982); First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 652 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1982).

II. PROCEEDINGS FOR COSTS.

Where both parties each have against the other a right of execution in the same case, the costs in the supreme court may be offset against those in the court below. Wallace Plumbing Co. v. Dillon, 73 Colo. 10, 213 P. 130 (1922) (decided under § 461 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

III. SUBPOENA FOR APPEARANCE OF JUDGMENT DEBTOR.

Law reviews. For article, "Discoverability of Insurance Limits", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 272 (1963).

Annotator's note. Since section (d) of this rule is similar to §§ 265 and 266 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Section (d) is constitutional. Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

Even if defendant is deprived of his constitutional right against self-incrimination, it does not follow that this rule requiring his presence in court is unconstitutional and void. Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

Section (d) does not purport to grant a judgment creditor such a right to require his debtor to answer questions which might subject the latter to a criminal prosecution. Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

In addition, it must be presumed that every constitutional right of the debtor will be respected and safeguarded. Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

Production of documents not privileged under fifth amendment. Judgment debtor can be required to produce automobile titles and recorded deeds to real estate, determined to be within the public domain, as well as tax returns that he filed, because there is no fifth amendment privilege as to such documents. Griffin v. Western Realty Sales Corp., 665 P.2d 1031 (Colo. App. 1983).

Section (d) is a method of discovery. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

It permits the judgment creditor to require a judgment debtor to appear before the court to answer questions concerning his assets. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

Section (d) takes the place of former bill of discovery. These "supplemental proceedings" are chiefly directed to discovery, and in this respect, they are to be regarded as taking the place of the former bill of discovery. Allen v. Tritch, 5 Colo. 222 (1880).

Service on attorney. Service on an attorney in accordance with the provisions of C.R.C.P. 5(b), does not satisfy the requirements of section (d). Stubblefield v. District Court, 198 Colo. 569, 603 P.2d 559 (1979).

Service of citation to appear under section (d) is proper if it complies with the provisions of C.R.C.P. (4)(e)(1). Stubblefield v. District Court, 198 Colo. 569, 603 P.2d 559 (1979).

Service on registered agent. Personal delivery of interrogatories on foreign corporation's registered agent constitutes effective service. Isis Litig., L.L.C., v. Svensk Filmindustri, 170 P.3d 742 (Colo. App. 2007).

A defendant is clearly guilty of contempt in refusing to be sworn and prematurely refusing to answer question to be propounded. Sweeney v. Cregan, 89 Colo. 94, 299 P. 1058 (1931).

IV. SUBPOENA FOR APPEARANCE OF DEBTOR OF JUDGMENT DEBTOR.

Annotator's note. Since section (e) of this rule is similar to § 268 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Section (e) is a method of discovery. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

It permits the court, upon proper proof, to examine a third person who is believed to hold property of, or owe a debt to the judgment debtor. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

Proceedings to compel the application of money or property in the hands of other parties to the satisfaction of the judgment are proceedings in the original action, and no notice to defendant is necessary. Hexter v. Clifford, 5 Colo. 168 (1879).

Other parties are entitled to their day in court. In supplementary proceedings in aid of execution, a court has no power to order a receiver to take possession of and sell property belonging to other parties without according them their day in court. Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924 (1931).

Notice, affidavit, or other showing of indebtedness waived by insurers. In an action for damages where the parties and insurers stipulate for entry of judgment and for determination by the court of the issue of liability as between the insurers and provide for hearing in accordance with this rule, the trial court has jurisdiction to determine such issue, the stipulation being a waiver of notice, affidavit, or other showing of indebtedness pursuant to this rule. Traders & Gen. Ins. Co. v. Pioneer Mut. Comp. Co., 127 Colo. 516, 258 P.2d 776 (1953).

Where person, not a party to original action, appears pursuant to a subpoena under subdivision (e) and denies that he is obligated to or in possession of any property of a judgment debtor, trial court is precluded from proceeding further in a proceeding under this rule, and creditor's sole remedy is a creditor's bill. Equisearch, Inc. v. Lopez, 722 P.2d 426 (Colo. App. 1986) (decided under former rule); In re Livingston, 999 F. Supp. 1413 (D. Colo. 1998).

V. ORDER TO APPLY PROPERTY ON JUDGMENT; CONTEMPT.

Law reviews. For article, "The Enforcement of Divorce Decrees in Colorado", see 21 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 364 (1949). For comment on Urbancich v. Mayberry, appearing below, see 24 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 259 (1952). For article, "The Nuts and Bolts of Collecting Support", see 19 Colo. Law. 1595 (1990). For article, "In 'Case' You Missed It—2020-21: Real Estate Case Law Highlights", see 51 Colo. Law. 44 (Jan. 2022).

Annotator's note. Since section (f) of this rule is similar to §§ 270 and 271 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Section (f) is an enforcement provision. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

It provides that, if certain prerequisites are met, the trial court may order property applied to the judgment. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

Including property held by court. Where a judgment debtor is "discharged" on a prior occasion from a citation issued pursuant to section (d) of this rule, such fact does not bar a judgment creditor from seeking to obtain, under the provisions of this section (f), known property held by a third person, including the court. Hudson v. Am. Founders Life Ins. Co., 160 Colo. 420, 417 P.2d 772 (1966).

It is not, however, adapted to reach disputed property of a judgment debtor, since no contested title to property can be determined. Allen v. Tritch, 5 Colo. 222 (1880); Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924 (1931).

Where title to real property claimed to belong to a judgment debtor stands in the name of another, a creditor's suit is the proper proceeding to subject the property to the satisfaction of a judgment, and not supplementary proceedings in aid of execution. Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924 (1931).

This rule does not contemplate that real property may be sold under an order of court made in a supplementary proceeding, even when title stands in the name of the judgment debtor. Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924 (1931).

Rather, in such case, the judgment creditor may cause execution to be levied upon the property and it requires no order of court. Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924 (1931).

A district court has discretion to grant or deny a motion for the turnover of property because the permissive term "may" is used in the language of section (g). AA Wholesale Storage, LLC v. Swinyard, 2021 COA 46, 488 P.3d 1213.

The fact that the property sought is a trust fund interposes no obstacle in subjecting it to the satisfaction of a judgment when the fund was created by the debtor himself and the fund sought to be reached has risen from the sale of his own property. Hexter v. Clifford, 5 Colo. 168 (1879).

Contingent fees not yet earned cannot be reached in proceedings supplementary to execution. Walker v. Staley, 89 Colo. 292, 1 P.2d 924 (1931).

Remedy of contempt is specifically authorized to be exercised by the court which pronounced the judgment sought to be collected and not any other court. Urbancich v. Mayberry, 124 Colo. 311, 236 P.2d 535 (1951).

VI. WITNESSES.

Judgment debtor not within purview of C.R.C.P. 45. Although a judgment debtor may testify as a witness in a hearing under this rule, he is not a witness within the purview of C.R.C.P. 45 for the purposes of service of process. Stubblefield v. District Court, 198 Colo. 569, 603 P.2d 559 (1979).

Rule 70. Judgment for Specific Acts; Vesting Title

If a judgment directs a party to execute a conveyance of land or to deliver deeds or other documents or to perform any other specific act and the party fails to comply within the time specified, the court may direct the act to be done at the cost of the disobedient party by some other person appointed by the court and the act when so done has like effect as if done by the party. On application of the party entitled to performance, the clerk shall issue a writ of attachment against the property of the disobedient party to compel obedience to the judgment. The court may also in proper cases adjudge the party in contempt. If real or personal property is within the district, the court in lieu of directing a conveyance thereof may enter a judgment divesting the title of any party and vesting it in others and such judgment has the effect of a conveyance executed in due form of law. When any order or judgment is for the delivery of possession, the party in whose favor it is entered is entitled to a writ of execution or assistance upon application to the clerk.

Law reviews. For note, “Decrees in Rem Under the New Rules”, see 13 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 140 (1941).

This rule does not apply in situation where party holding title to leases is willing to vest title and party held to have lawfully contracted for such leases is unwilling to take them. Schnier v. District Court, 696 P.2d 264 (Colo. 1985).

This rule offers relief only when there is noncompliance with an order issued by the court. The rule can not provide relief if there is no previous order for the action. In re Dauwe, 97 P.3d 369 (Colo. App. 2004).

A Colorado court may invoke its equitable authority under this rule to enforce a judgment for attorney fees awarded under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Duran v. Lamm, 701 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1984).

A trial court has authority under this rule to enter a judgment divesting title of defendant to the subject property and vesting it in the claimants. AA Constr. Co. v. Gould, 28 Colo. App. 161, 470 P.2d 916 (1970).

Failure of the general assembly to act to satisfy a judgment sufficiently expressed its unwillingness to comply with the valid judgment of the trial court justifies invocation of this rule. Duran v. Lamm, 701 P.2d 609 (Colo. App. 1984).

Applied in Circle Sav. & Loan Ass’n v. Norton, 28 Colo. App. 167, 471 P.2d 625 (1970).

Rule 71. Process in Behalf of and Against Persons Not Parties

When an order is made in favor of a person who is not a party to the action, he may enforce obedience to the order by the same process as if he were a party; and, when obedience to an order may be lawfully enforced against a person who is not a party, he is liable to the same process for enforcing obedience to the order as if he were a party.

ANNOTATION

Person who has advanced money on realty may be awarded lien. In an action to quiet title where the plaintiff names as defendants all “persons who claim any interest in the subject matter of this action”, a person who has advanced money in connection with the realty has a sufficient interest to be a party and to be awarded a lien to secure such advance. Hahn v. Pitts, 118 Colo. 173, 193 P.2d 716 (1948).

COURT ADMINISTRATION

Rule 77. Courts and Clerks

(a) Courts Always Open. Courts shall be deemed always open for the purpose of filing any pleading or other proper paper, of issuing and returning process, and of making and directing all interlocutory motions, orders, and rules. Each term shall be deemed open and continuous until the commencement of the next succeeding term.

(b) Proceedings in Court and Chambers. All trials upon the merits shall be conducted in open court and so far as convenient in a regular courtroom. All other acts or proceedings may be done or conducted in open court or by a judge in chambers, without the attendance of the clerk or other court officials and at any place within the state; but no hearing, other than on ex parte, shall be conducted outside the judicial district in which the action is pending without the consent of all parties affected thereby who are not in default.

(c) Clerk's Office and Orders by Clerk. The clerk's office with the clerk or a deputy in attendance shall be open at such hours and on such days as may be provided by law, and by local rule not in conflict with law. All motions and applications in the clerk's office for issuing process, for entering defaults or judgments by default, and for other proceedings which do not require allowance or order of the court are grantable of course by the clerk; but his action may be suspended or altered or rescinded by the court upon cause shown.

(d) Orders in any County. Any ex parte order in any pending action may be entered by the court, or by any judge thereof in any county of the district, irrespective of the county in which said action is pending.

Rule 78. Motion Day

Each court may establish regular times and places, at intervals sufficiently frequent for the prompt dispatch of business, at which motions requiring notice and hearing may be heard and disposed of; but the judge at any time or place and on such notice, if any, as he considers reasonable may make orders for the advancement, conduct, and hearing of actions. To expedite its business, the court may make provision by rule or order for the submission and determination of motions without oral hearing, upon brief written statements of reasons in support and opposition. Trial courts may also provide by local rule for notices to set motions for hearing or for calling upon motions for hearing without prior setting.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Court Administration and General Provisions: Rules 77-85", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 599 (1951).

Rule 79. Records

(a) Register of Actions. The clerk shall keep a record known as the register of actions and shall enter therein those items set forth below. The register of actions may be in any of the following forms or styles:

- (1) A page, sheet, or printed form in a book, case jacket, or separate file.
- (2) A microfilm roll, film jacket, or microfiche card.
- (3) Computer magnetic tape or magnetic disc storage, where the register of actions items appear on the terminal screen, or on a paper print-out of the screen display.

(4) Any other form or style prescribed by supreme court directive. A register of actions shall be prepared for each case or matter filed. The file number of each case or matter shall be noted on every page, film, or computer record whereon the first and all subsequent entries of actions are made. All papers filed with the clerk, all process issued and return made thereon, all costs, appearances, orders, verdicts, and judgments shall be noted chronologically in the register of actions. These notations shall be brief but shall show the nature of each paper filed or writ issued and the substance of each order or judgment of the court and of the returns showing execution of process. The notation of an order, or of the entry of judgment, shall show the date the order or judgment was ordered in open court, in chambers, or under the provisions of Rule 55 regarding default. When trial by jury has been demanded or ordered, the clerk shall enter the word jury on the page, film, or computer record assigned to that case.

(b) Copies of Civil Judgments and Orders. (Repealed effective September 4, 1974.)

(c) Indices; Calendars. The clerk shall keep suitable indices of all records as directed by the court. The clerk shall also keep, as directed by the court, calendars of all hearings and all cases ready for trial, which shall distinguish trials to a jury from trials to the court. Indices and calendars may be in any of the following forms or styles:

- (1) A page or sheet in a book or separate file.
- (2) A mechanical or hand-operated index machine or card file.
- (3) Computer magnetic tape or magnetic disc storage, where the information appears on the terminal screen, or on a print-out of the screen display.
- (4) Microfilm copies of 1, 2, and 3 above.
- (5) Any other form or style prescribed by supreme court directive.

(d) Judgment Record. The clerk shall keep a judgment record in which a notation shall be made of every money judgment. The judgment record may be in any of the following forms or styles:

- (1) A page, sheet, or printed form in a book, case jacket, or separate file.
- (2) Computer magnetic tape or magnetic disc storage, where the judgment and subsequent transactions appear on the terminal screen, or on a paper print-out of the screen display.
- (3) A microfilm copy of 1 and 2 above.
- (4) Any other form or style prescribed by supreme court directive.

(e) Retention and Disposition of Records. The clerk shall retain and dispose of all court records, including those created under Rule 79(b) prior to its repeal, in accordance with instructions provided in the manual entitled, Colorado Judicial Department, Records Management.

Although trial judge had power and obligation to assure that records and reporter's notes in dissolution of marriage action were preserved by the clerk for an extended period of time and to enter any order with respect to those records and notes, the trial court was not required to enter an order obligating itself to preserve such records. In re Smith, 757 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1988).

The rules provide that a motion for a new trial must be filed not later than 10 days following the notation of judgment in the trial court's register of actions (or judgment docket). In re Gardella, 190 Colo. 402, 547 P.2d 928 (1976).

Relation back of judgment unconstitutional. Trial court's action in relating back matters decided on May 28 to the May 15 entry on the judgment docket had the effect of extinguishing the petitioner's right to appeal from the determinations made on May 28. Under these circumstances, the 10-day period of C.R.C.P. 59 expired before the remaining issues in the case had even been determined by the trial court. This result contravenes the right of appeal granted by the Colorado constitution. In re Gardella, 190 Colo. 402, 547 P.2d 928 (1976).

Admissibility of register in action upon bond of clerk. In an action upon the official bond of a clerk of the district court for fees collected and not paid over, where it appears that he made entries of fees collected by him in his register of actions such register is admissible in evidence and the entries therein are prima facie evidence against the clerk and also against the sureties on his bond. Cooper v. People ex rel. Bd. of Comm'rs, 28 Colo. 87, 63 P. 314 (1900) (decided under § 416 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

For purposes of timely filing of a motion for new trial under C.R.C.P. 59 a judgment is "entered" only upon notation in the judgment docket pursuant to C.R.C.P. 58(a)(3) and section (d) of this rule. City and County of Denver v. Just, 175 Colo. 260, 487 P.2d 367 (1971).

Entry of judgment effective on notation in register. Both C.R.C.P. 58(a)(3) and section (a)(4) of this rule clearly state that entry of a judgment is effective upon notation in the register of actions. Hebron v. District Court, 192 Colo. 346, 558 P.2d 997 (1977).

Then judgment becomes final, though not recorded in judgment record. Hebron v. District Court, 192 Colo. 346, 558 P.2d 997 (1977).

Applied in Dill v. County Court, 37 Colo. App. 75, 541 P.2d 1272 (1975); Poor v. District Court, 190 Colo. 433, 549 P.2d 756 (1976); Moore & Co. v. Williams, 657 P.2d 984 (Colo. App. 1982); Moore & Co. v. Williams, 672 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1983).

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Rule 81. Applicability in General

(a) Special Statutory Proceedings. These rules do not govern procedure and practice in any special statutory proceeding insofar as they are inconsistent or in conflict with the procedure and practice provided by the applicable statute. Where the applicable statute provides for procedure under a former Code of Civil Procedure, such procedure shall be in accordance with these rules.

(b) Dissolution of Marriage and Legal Separation. These rules shall not govern procedure and practice in actions in dissolution of marriage and legal separation insofar as they may be inconsistent or in conflict with the procedure and practice provided by the applicable statutes.

(c) Appeals from County to District Court. These rules do not supersede the provisions of the statutes of this state now or hereafter in effect relating to appeals from final judgments and decrees of the county court to the district court.

II. SPECIAL STATUTORY PROCEEDINGS.

Law reviews. For article, “Again — How Many Times?”, see 21 Dicta 62 (1944).

There is a recognized distinction between “proceedings” and “special proceedings”. Hewitt v. Landis, 75 Colo. 277, 225 P. 842 (1924); Sitler v. Brians, 126 Colo. 370, 251 P.2d 319 (1952) (decided under former C.R.C.P. 111).

This rule expressly provides that, where a matter is specifically covered by statute, the rules of civil procedure are inapplicable. Theobald v. District Court, 148 Colo. 466, 366 P.2d 563 (1961).

The rules of civil procedure do not apply where there is a special statutory proceeding which sets forth remedies. Brown v. Hansen, 177 Colo. 39, 493 P.2d 1086 (1972).

The rules of civil procedure do not govern the procedure and practice in any special statutory proceeding so far as they are inconsistent or in conflict therewith. Wright v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 258, 365 P.2d 691 (1961); City of Westminster v. District Court, 167 Colo. 263, 447 P.2d 537 (1968); Durbin v. Bonanza Corp., 716 P.2d 1124 (Colo. App. 1986).

If a statute creates a special statutory procedure relating to a type of action then the rules of civil procedure by express exception do not apply. Dallas v. Fitzsimmons, 137 Colo. 196, 323 P.2d 274 (1958).

Mere amendment of pleadings cannot accomplish ends which are inconsistent with statutory procedures. Trustees of Mtg. Trust of Am. v. District Court, 621 P.2d 310 (Colo. 1980).

Thus, the rules of civil procedure are not applicable to “habeas corpus”, which is special statutory proceeding, insofar as they are inconsistent with the applicable statute pertaining to the special statutory proceeding. Hithe v. Nelson, 172 Colo. 179, 471 P.2d 596 (1970).

Likewise, water adjudication proceedings are “special statutory proceedings” as contemplated under this rule. Colo. River Water Conservation Dist. v. Rocky Mt. Power Co., 174 Colo. 309, 486 P.2d 438 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 996, 92 S. Ct. 1245, 31 L. Ed. 2d 465 (1972); S.E. Colo. Water Cons. v. Ft. Lyon Canal Co., 720 P.2d 133 (Colo. 1986).

The proceedings prescribed by § 37-92-302 for adjudication of water rights are special proceedings, and their scope is governed by statute. State, Dept. of Natural Res. v. Southwestern Colo. Water Conservation Dist., 671 P.2d 1294 (Colo. 1983); Meyring Livestock Co. v. Wamsley Cattle Co., 687 P.2d 955 (Colo. 1984).

Annexation review is a special statutory proceeding. City of Westminster v. District Court, 167 Colo. 263, 447 P.2d 537 (1968).

Likewise, proceedings under marketing act. If the procedure and practice set forth in the marketing act under § 35-28-119 are in any particulars inconsistent or in conflict with the rules of civil procedure, the statute, and not the rules, would govern. People ex rel. Orcutt v. District Court, 164 Colo. 385, 435 P.2d 374 (1967).

Rehearing by the public utilities commission is a special statutory proceeding. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm’n, 698 P.2d 255 (Colo. 1985).

Statutory procedures detailing methods for district court review of public utilities commission decisions are special statutory proceedings and govern over conflicting rules of civil procedure. Silver Eagle Servs. v. P.U.C., 768 P.2d 208 (Colo. 1989).

Release proceedings are special statutory proceedings. In view of the detailed procedure prescribed by § 16-8-115 the release proceedings are special statutory proceedings governed by this rule. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Historically, the supreme court has considered mental health proceedings to be special statutory proceedings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Under this rule the procedure in release hearings under § 16-8-115 is so inconsistent and in conflict with the rules of civil procedure as to make civil discovery rules inapplicable to release hearings. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Based on §§ 16-8-115 through 16-8-117 and on the special nonadversary nature of a release inquiry, the participants in release proceedings do not have the broad right of discovery as provided in the rules of civil procedure. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 225, 557 P.2d 414 (1976).

Proceedings under § 16-5-209 are special statutory proceedings not exempt from application of the rules of civil procedure because said section lacks adequate, exclusive, full, and complete procedures. Moody v. Larsen, 802 P.2d 1169 (Colo. App. 1990).

Provisions of the Torrens Title Registration Act govern service of process in case brought under the Torrens Act. Rael v. Taylor, 876 P.2d 1210 (Colo. 1994).

Applied in Boxberger v. State Hwy. Comm’n, 126 Colo. 526, 251 P.2d 920 (1952); Stull v. District Court, 135 Colo. 86, 308 P.2d 1006 (1957).

III. DIVORCE AND SEPARATE MAINTENANCE.

Law reviews. For article, “What Divorce Statutes Are Now in Effect in Colorado?”, see 21 Dicta 68 (1944). For article, “Comments on the Rules of Civil Procedure”, see 22 Dicta 154 (1945).

The rules of procedure do not govern procedure and practice in actions in divorce or separate maintenance where they may conflict with the procedure and practice provided by the applicable statutes. Moats v. Moats, 168 Colo. 120, 450 P.2d 64 (1969).

Where the divorce statutes are silent as to any method of procedure the rules govern. Myers v. Myers, 110 Colo. 412, 135 P.2d 235 (1943); Holman v. Holman, 114 Colo. 437, 165 P.2d 1015 (1946).

The rules of civil procedure apply to a divorce action, unless a contrary rule appears in the divorce statutes. Bacher v. District Court, 186 Colo. 314, 527 P.2d 56 (1974).

Applied in People ex rel. Stanko v. Routt County Court, 110 Colo. 428, 135 P.2d 232 (1943); Ingels v. Ingels, 29 Colo. App. 585, 487 P.2d 812 (1971).

IV. APPEALS.

Applied in Niles v. Shinkle, 119 Colo. 458, 204 P.2d 1077 (1949).

Rule 85. Title

Repealed December 5, 1996, effective January 1, 1997.

Rule 86. Pending Water Adjudications Under 1943 Act

In any water adjudication under the provisions of article 9 of chapter 148, C.R.S. 1963, as amended, pending on August 12, 1971, in which any applicant files any statement of claim asking that his date of priority antedate any earlier decrees or adjudications, in order not to be forever barred the owners of affected rights must object and protest within the times and in the manner provided by the Water Right Determination and Administration Act of 1969; and the judge shall direct the clerk to publish once in a newspaper or newspapers of general circulation in the water division as set forth in said Act of 1969, within which the water district is incorporated, to provide, and which shall be, notice to all water users within the division. The language of such notice shall be substantially as follows:

“There has been filed in this proceeding a claim or claims which may affect in priority any water right claimed or heretofore adjudicated within this division and owners of affected rights must appear to object and protest as provided in the Water Right Determination and Administration Act of 1969, or be forever barred.”

Editor’s note: Article 9 of chapter 148, C.R.S. 1963, was repealed concurrent with the enactment of the “Water Right Determination and Administration Act of 1969” (see L. 69, p. 1223, § 20), which act is now numbered as article 92 of title 37 (see C.R.C.P. 87).

Rule 87. Application of Following Water Rules

Rules 88 through 91 shall govern proceedings under article 92 of title 37, C.R.S. 1973.

Rule 88. Judgments and Decrees

(a) Record and Indices. The water clerk shall prepare and maintain books of all judgments and decrees in the sequence of their entry by the court, or shall keep microfilm or magnetic tape copies of the same. The water clerk shall prepare and maintain suitable indices of the judgments and decrees.

(b) Entry and Finality of Judgment. Immediately following the issuance of a judgment and decree the water clerk shall make an entry of record concerning the same, and the judgment and decree shall then be deemed final.

(c) Notice. A copy of such judgment and decree or notice thereof shall be given promptly to applicants and to any protestors and objectors, or their attorneys.

Rule 89. Notice When Priority Antedating an Adjudication Is Sought

Whenever a claimant makes application for the determination of a water right or a conditional water right and claims that his date of priority will antedate any earlier adjudication or claims a priority date earlier than the effective date of one or more priorities awarded by a previous decree or decrees within the water division in which the application is filed (except when provision for such antedation or earlier priority is made by statute), in order not to be forever barred, the owners of affected rights must object and protest within the times and in the manner provided by statute, and the water clerk shall include in the resume required by statute a specific notification in boldface type substantially as follows:

“The water right claimed by this application may affect in priority any water right claimed or heretofore adjudicated within this division and owners of affected rights must appear to object and protest within the time provided by statute, or be forever barred.”

COMMENT

Following the announcement on March 24, 1971, of United States v. District Court in and for the County of Eagle, 401 U.S. 520, 91 S. Ct. 998, 28 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1971), and United States v. District Court in and for Water Division Number 5, 401 U.S. 527, 91 S. Ct. 1003, 28 L. Ed. 2d 284 (1971). The Colorado Supreme Court appointed a water advisory committee for study and recommendations as to the necessity and possible content of rules of court as a result of the two United States Supreme Court opinions. An attempt was made to have the membership of this committee representative of the different interests that might be affected by proceedings conducted in the light of these opinions and United States v. District Court, 169 Colo. 555, 458 P.2d 760 (1969), which was affirmed by the first mentioned United States Supreme Court opinion. After conferences and study the committee established tentative guidelines and recommended that a 5-man briefing and drafting committee be appointed for performance under the guidelines. Accordingly, a briefing and drafting committee was appointed, consisting of the following attorneys: Kenneth Balcomb, Glenwood Springs, Colorado; Charles J. Beise, Denver, Colorado; Kenneth L. Broadhurst, Denver, Colorado; Gene Alan Erl, Washington, D.C.; and Donald H. Hamburg, Denver, Colorado, with Mr. Beise acting as chairman. Early in the work of the briefing and drafting committee, Messrs. Beise and Balcomb prepared a memorandum which is set forth later herein.

After the briefing and drafting committee completed its work, it submitted proposed rules to the entire water advisory committee which, after some revision, unanimously approved them and recommended their adoption by the Colorado Supreme Court. The seven water judges of the state (Fred Calhoun, Donald A. Carpenter, Richard E. Conour, C. H. Darrow, William S. Eakes, William L. Gobin and Don Lorenz) then studied and conferred with respect to the proposed rules. After some revision, the water judges recommended their adoption. Accordingly, the proposed rules were adopted substantially as recommended on August 12, 1971, as Rules 86 through 91, C.R.C.P.

While the Colorado Supreme Court does not comment nor pass upon the contents of the memorandum prepared by Messrs. Beise and Balcomb, it believes that the bench and bar will find value in it and, therefore, sets it forth in its entirety:

By and large the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure are to apply in conformity with section 37-92-304(3), C.R.S. 1973, unless varied by the proposed rules.

Experience gained from the use of forms presently furnished indicated an insufficiency of information therein, requiring in many cases, statements of opposition and protests when, with additional information, the same would be unnecessary.

Recommendations regarding the duties of the water clerk in the treatment of files, decrees, and judgments are made for the sake of simplicity, uniformity, and permanency.

The proposed rule relating to publication of a claim of right on the part of any claimant to antedate in priority previous orders, decrees, and judgments of courts establishing priorities gave the committee the greatest trouble, but the committee is satisfied that the requirements of due process are met by the proposed rule.

Due process relates to the right to be heard, and this right is subject to reasonable limitations.

The type or kind of notice to be given to and the method of service thereof on other parties possibly affected by water adjudication proceedings has varied in Colorado as changes in water law have occurred. In the original statutes of 1879 and 1881, personal service in addition to publication and posting was required where possible, with mailing of notice where not possible.

In 1905 special supplementary adjudication proceedings became possible. Original adjudication proceedings in a water district still required the 1879-1881 service treatment,¹ but after 1905 the supplementary proceedings required only such notice as was required by the court. As a matter of practice this was generally confined to publication and posting. Countless decrees were entered in such special proceedings. All priorities so established and fixed are recognized in the present system of administration.

The 1943 law abolished special proceedings, and substituted general supplementary proceedings. It required by way of notice publication plus the mailing of the notice to those persons who had not theretofore adjudicated their claims according to the records of the state engineer and to all users who within the preceding calendar year had diverted water according to a list furnished by the water commissioner or division engineer.

The incompleteness and insufficiency of these lists as a means of reaching claimants of water rights is well recognized. Factually, it is impossible to reach all claimants by any means other than publication.

The salient feature of the previous statutory notice provisions to be noted here is that the requisite statutory publication, posting and mailing was confined to the district boundaries, and did not extend to the division of which the district was a part, even though the priority or priorities awarded related to and affected rights in the entire division.

In 1887 the legislature required the division engineers to treat priorities awarded in the districts on a division-wide basis. The claim was made in O'Neil v. Northern Colorado Irrigation District, 56 Colo. 545, 139 P. 536 (1914), that if retrospective effect was given this statute allowing curtailment of plaintiffs' priority awarded subsequent to 1887 in favor of defendants' priority entered before 1887 without notice to the plaintiff but in another water district within the division, it resulted in a taking of plaintiffs' property without due process of law. The challenge was made more than four years after entry of defendants' decree. The Court held the four year statute effectively barred the suit irrespective of the 1887 statute. This result was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States in an opinion by Mr. Justice Holmes, 242 U.S. 20, 37 S. Ct. 7, 61 L. Ed. 123 (1916).

We are not unmindful of the service of process requirement of due process in other types of litigation (condemnation) and have considered other cases very kindly furnished by interested members of and advisors to the committee as a whole. Neither are we unmindful of Rule 4 of our Rules of Civil Procedure which by the statute and the rule here under consideration would have no application to notice requirements in water courts. We believe O'Neil followed by Eagle County² and Darrow³ control.

Mr. Justice Holmes in O'Neil held that due process requirements were met when a party, though not entitled to be heard in the first instance, was allowed by statute a reasonable time thereafter to be heard. This was predicated on the fact that a decree regarding water priorities was a public fact. The fact that rights might be lost by inaction on the part of a claimant was likewise considered immaterial by Mr. Justice Holmes because the rule of limitation applied to him was likewise consistently applied by Colorado Courts to all similar situations. Plaintiff in O'Neil could not have been misled by contradictory rulings regarding applications of the rule.

Eagle County, of course, holds that the McCarren Amendment allows joinder the United States in adjudication proceedings under the 1943 Act. Darrow goes even farther and says such joinder can effectively be made under other but dissimilar state adjudicatory procedures. The key is the presence of a state statute providing the procedure for adjudication. The procedural steps themselves are a matter of state concern and need only be equally and fairly applied.⁴

The Supreme Court of Colorado in its review in Eagle County held the trial court had the power to require the giving of whatever additional notice of the claim of right to antedate previous decrees it deemed necessary.

The 1969 Act gives notice by requiring publication of the resume in one or more newspapers within the division as will give general circulation to water claimants in each county in the division. We do not believe this requires publication in every county which has a newspaper, but rather requires publication in a newspaper of general circulation in such county even if published elsewhere in the division. Thus publication in but one newspaper in the division might be found by the water court to be sufficient general circulation to meet due process requirements. Under this 1969 Act a well owner seeking his actual date of priority without prejudice because of his failure to participate in earlier adjudications antedates prior decrees. The only notice required is publication. Personal service is not required. The proposed rule is consistent with this procedure.

The additional statutory requirement of mailing to those requesting a copy of the resume relates not to the jurisdiction of the court or due process, but is for informational purposes only.

The final and important safeguard regarding notice is met when the statute requires the referee to direct mailing to those he deems affected by a particular claim.

On the surface O'Neil dealt with a statute of limitations, and in Eagle County and Darrow the problem of notice was not directly involved. But in O'Neil the only notice which could have possibly reached the adjacent district, other than the important notice the statute itself gave, was the publication. The same is true in Eagle County. In Darrow, however, as the rule herein under consideration will require, the notice was given division wide, and this was more effective as notice in the area affected than any previous statutory notice requirements.

We thus conclude that publication once in a newspaper or newspapers of general circulation within the division as required by statute and the proposed rule meets the requirements of due process, because:

1. Three years is a reasonable time for anyone to establish the error, if any, in the decree and judgment.⁵

2. In this day and age of rapid communication and transit, many newspapers are in general circulation throughout the state and not just a division.

3. The system has been effectively in force and in operation for nearly two years with relation to well owners and is the accepted state method of giving notice.

Rule 90. Dispositions of Water Court Applications

(a) The water clerk shall receive and file all applications and number them upon payment of filing fees. The water clerk shall not accept for filing any application that is not accompanied by the required filing fee. Each application filed within each division shall be consecutively numbered, preceded by the year and the letters CW (e.g. 2009CW100) to identify such applications as concerning water matters. The applicant for a finding of reasonable diligence relating to a conditional water right and/or to make a conditional water right absolute shall include in the application a listing of the original and any other prior case numbers pertaining to the conditional water right included in the application; thereafter, the assigned case number for the application shall appear on any document, pleading, or other item in the case. Referee rulings and water court judgments and decrees shall include all relevant prior case numbers.

(b) The water clerk shall include in the resume all applications filed during the preceding month that substantially contain the information required by Rule 3 of the Uniform Local Rules for All State Water Court Divisions and the standard forms approved by the water judges under C.R.S. § 37-92-302(2)(a), which together provide the information sufficient for publication to the public and potential parties. The water clerk, in consultation with the referee pursuant to Rule 6 of the Uniform Local Rules For All State

⁴ Ft. Lyon Canal Co. v. Arkansas Sugar Beet & Irrigated Land Co., 39 Colo. 332, 34 P. 278 (1907). At page 344 thereof the court said:

All persons are bound to take notice of a public law. The irrigation statutes are public, and apply to all persons taking water from the same source. The waters of the state belong to the public, and, as we said, in substance, in the original opinion, the state in its sovereign capacity had the right to provide a reasonable method whereby such rights might be adjudicated and settled, and to require claimants of such rights to present them in a prescribed manner, within a prescribed time, and unless the law in this respect was obeyed, that all claims not thus presented should be barred. That is what the statutes on the subject of the use of water for irrigation have provided. All persons are bound to take notice of these provisions.

⁵ This limitation was increased from two to three years by the 1970 amendment, section 37-92-304(10), C.R.S. 1973.

Water Court Divisions, shall promptly refer to the water judge for consideration and disposition any application that does not substantially contain the information required by Rule 3 of the Uniform Local Rules For All State Water Court Divisions and the standard forms approved by the water judges under C.R.S. § 37-92-302(2)(a). Any such application shall not be published in the resume pending disposition by the water judge. The water clerk shall promptly inform the applicant that the application has been referred to the water judge and provide the applicant with a list of the required information that was not contained in the application.

(c) In determining whether or not to order publication of the application in the resume pursuant to C.R.S. § 37-92-302(3)(a), the water judge shall promptly review the application and shall employ an inquiry notice standard in conducting the review. Upon a finding that the application does not provide sufficient inquiry notice contemplated by Rule 3 of the Uniform Local Rules for All State Water Court Divisions and the standard forms approved by the water judges under C.R.S. § 37-92-302(2)(a) to justify publication, the water judge shall set a date pursuant to C.R.C.P. 41(b)(2) and C.R.C.P. 121, Section 1-10, by which date the application will be dismissed unless, prior to that date, a sufficient application is filed. The application will retain its original filing date unless and until the application is dismissed.

(d) For purposes of relation back of the filing date of a subsequent applicant's application for a water right or conditional water right pursuant to C.R.S. § 37-92-306.1, the subsequent application shall be filed within sixty days of the date the prior application is published in the resume.

(e) Upon request, the water clerk shall provide a prospective applicant or opposer with one copy of the form for the relevant application or statement of opposition. The standard forms for applications and statements of opposition may also be found in the "Water Courts" section of the Colorado Judicial Branch web page.

Editor's note: Amendments to this section, adopted February 19, 2009, are applicable to applications filed on or after July 1, 2009, but any portions thereof that can be adapted for use by the water judge or referee without prejudice to the parties may be utilized in existing cases.

CHANGE OF JUDGE; PLACE OF TRIAL

Rule 97. Change of Judge

A judge shall be disqualified in an action in which he is interested or prejudiced, or has been of counsel for any party, or is or has been a material witness, or is so related or connected with any party or his attorney as to render it improper for him to sit on the trial, appeal, or other proceeding therein. A judge may disqualify himself on his own motion for any of said reasons, or any party may move for such disqualification and a motion by a party for disqualification shall be supported by affidavit. Upon the filing by a party of such a motion all other proceedings in the case shall be suspended until a ruling is made thereon. Upon disqualifying himself, a judge shall notify forthwith the chief judge of the district who shall assign another judge in the district to hear the action. If no other judge in the district is available or qualified, the chief judge shall notify forthwith the court administrator who shall obtain from the Chief Justice the assignment of a replacement judge.

Cross references: For disqualification of a judge, see Canon 2, rule 2:11, of the Code of Judicial Conduct (Appendix to Chapter 24); for change of judge in criminal cases, see Crim. P. 21.

Annotator’s note. Since this rule is similar to § 32 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Purpose of rule. The intent of the rule under which a judge should disqualify himself from a case if he has served as counsel for either of the parties is to insure a fair and impartial hearing of the issue involved. Bd. of County Comm’rs v. Blanning, 29 Colo. App. 61, 479 P.2d 404 (1970).

Purpose of disqualification rule is to prevent judge with a “bent of mind” from presiding over action. Goebel v. Benton, 830 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1992).

Trial judge’s duty to preside. In the absence of a valid reason for disqualification relating to the subject matter of the litigation, the trial judge has the duty of presiding over the case. Blades v. DaFoe, 666 P.2d 1126 (Colo. App. 1983), rev’d on other grounds, 704 P.2d 317 (Colo. 1985).

Upon reasonable inference of a “bent of mind” that will prevent judge from dealing fairly with party seeking recusal, it is incumbent on trial judge to recuse himself. Wright v. District Court, 731 P.2d 661 (Colo. 1987).

The requirements for disqualification of a judge are that he be interested or prejudiced, or related to counsel for any party, or has been counsel for or related to any party, as required by this rule. Fehr v. Hadden, 134 Colo. 102, 300 P.2d 533 (1956).

Recusal not required when a party in a case pending before a judge was a client of the judge’s former law firm where the judge was not involved in the client’s matters while at the firm and the pending case is unrelated to the matters in which the law firm represented the client. Adams County Hous. Auth. v. Panzlau, 2022 COA 148, 527 P.3d 440.

Generally, a judge’s ruling on a legal issue cannot form the basis for recusal. Brewster v. Dist. Court, 811 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991); People ex rel. S.G., 91 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2004); Bocian v. Owners Ins. Co., 2020 COA 98, 482 P.3d 502.

Also, a judge's opinion formed against a party from evidence before the court in a judicial proceeding, even as to the guilt or innocence of a defendant, is generally not a basis for disqualification. People ex rel. S.G., 91 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2004).

What a judge learns in his or her judicial capacity usually cannot form the basis for disqualification. People ex rel. S.G., 91 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2004).

Disqualifying interest must relate to subject matter of suit. The interest of a judge upon which he may disqualify himself must necessarily relate to the subject matter of the litigation, or be of a pecuniary interest in the outcome of the litigation, and not as it might relate to a determination of the facts and legal questions presented. Primarily, it is the duty of a judge to sit in a case in the absence of a showing that he is disqualified. Kubat v. Kubat, 124 Colo. 491, 238 P.2d 897 (1951); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Blanning, 29 Colo. App. 61, 479 P.2d 404 (1970).

Rule does not apply to ordinary transfer for convenience. This rule, providing for designation by the chief justice of a justice to try a cause wherein the trial judge is disqualified, has no application to the ordinary transfer of causes for convenience from one division to another in a district court having more than one judge. Smaldone v. People, 102 Colo. 500, 81 P.2d 385 (1938) (decided under former Supreme Court Rule 14C).

There should be a supporting affidavit to the motion to disqualify, in compliance with the rules. Kubat v. Kubat, 124 Colo. 491, 238 P.2d 897 (1951).

In all cases necessary material or pertinent facts should be set out. In case of the prejudice of the judge, his attention would be called to some forgotten or unknown circumstance. Justice requires that the judge should not be charged with prejudice while left in surprise at a cause he may not imagine, or may believe exists only in the imagination of the applicant, and without the necessary knowledge upon which to act in the exercise of that discretion to allow or deny the charge. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880).

The law contemplates that, upon application for change of venue, facts shall be stated sufficient to inform the judge of the nature of the causes for the change, and their alleged foundation. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880).

The facts are not to be set out beyond what is necessary where they involve the judicial acts or character of the judge. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880).

Only question on motion is sufficiency of facts alleged. The motion and supporting affidavit speak for themselves and the only question involved is whether the facts alleged are sufficient to compel the judge to disqualify himself. Kovacheff v. Langhart, 147 Colo. 339, 363 P.2d 702 (1961).

Supporting affidavits insufficient to warrant recusal where the allegations, even if accepted as true, did not state actual facts and statements evidencing impartiality or bias. In re Goellner, 770 P.2d 1387 (Colo. App. 1989).

Motion and supporting affidavits are insufficient to require disqualification if only allege opinions or conclusions and are unsubstantiated by facts supporting reasonable inference of actual or apparent bias or prejudice. Goebel v. Benton, 830 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1992); In re Elmer, 936 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1997).

Reasonable question as to impartiality requires disqualification. Where one might reasonably question the trial judge's impartiality, it is improper for him to preside over the trial. Wood Bros. Homes v. City of Fort Collins, 670 P.2d 9 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial judge must accept affidavits filed with motion to disqualify as true, even though judge believes that the statements contained in the affidavits are false or the meaning attributed to them by the party seeking recusal is erroneous. Wright v. District Court, 731 P.2d 661 (Colo. 1987).

Disqualification is within trial court's discretion. Whether to disqualify in a civil case is a matter within the discretion of the trial court, and its ruling will not be disturbed on appeal except for an abuse of discretion. In re Mann, 655 P.2d 814 (Colo. 1982); Hollemon v. Murray, 666 P.2d 1107 (Colo. App. 1982); Goebel v. Benton, 830 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1992).

Whether to disqualify himself in a civil case is a question within the discretion of the trial judge, and the judge's ruling on that issue will not be disturbed on appeal absent a showing of an abuse of that discretion. Colo. State Bd. of Agric. v. First Nat'l Bank, 671 P.2d 1331 (Colo. App. 1983).

Trial court's denial of motion for recusal constitutes an abuse of discretion and is reversible error when there was, at least, an appearance of bias or prejudice due to the existence of a professional relationship between the trial judge and an expert witness for defendants. Hammons v. Birket, 759 P.2d 783 (Colo. App. 1988).

It is judge's duty to pass only upon legal sufficiency of facts alleged in affidavit and when motion and supporting affidavits allege facts which demonstrate that judge had a "bent of mind", refusal of judge to disqualify himself constitutes abuse of discretion. Goebel v. Benton, 830 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1992).

Appearance of impropriety, not actual prejudice, is sufficient to warrant recusal. Where recusal is sought based upon the relationship of the judge to another person, it is the closeness of the relationship and its bearing on the underlying case that determines whether disqualification is necessary. People ex rel. A.G., 264 P.3d 615 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 262 P.3d 646 (Colo. 2011).

This rule does not require a hearing on a motion for change of judge on the grounds of prejudice. Brouwer v. District Court, 169 Colo. 303, 455 P.2d 207 (1969).

The parties do not require an opportunity to introduce evidence in support of a motion to have the trial judge disqualified. Kovacheff v. Langhart, 147 Colo. 339, 363 P.2d 702 (1961).

Nor does it require notice. There is no abuse of discretion in calling the motion to disqualify the trial judge up for hearing without notice where the parties to the action, and their attorneys, were present in response to the trial setting, and trial could not proceed until the motion was disposed of. The motion was directed against the judge, was self-explanatory, and notice to the parties could not have afforded the court any better opportunity to rule upon it. Brackett v. Cleveland, 147 Colo. 328, 363 P.2d 1050 (1961).

This rule does not fix the time when a motion should be filed. Aaberg v. District Court, 136 Colo. 525, 319 P.2d 491 (1957).

A motion to disqualify a trial judge should be filed promptly when grounds therefor are known and prior to taking any other steps in the case. Aaberg v. District Court, 136 Colo. 525, 319 P.2d 491 (1957); Dominic Leone Constr. Co. v. District Court, 150 Colo. 47, 370 P.2d 759 (1962).

Where defendant waited two years before filing a motion for recusal based on the judge's comments, motion was untimely. Estate of Binford v. Gibson, 839 P.2d 508 (Colo. App. 1992).

Where plaintiff waited until one year of legal proceedings had occurred before seeking recusal on grounds of comments made in an earlier case, motion was untimely. Holland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 883 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1994).

Petitioner did not waive right to file a motion to disqualify judge when petitioner waited two months after the grounds for disqualification were known to file his motion. Johnson v. District Court, 574 P.2d 952 (Colo. 1984).

Party waived the judicial recusal argument when he knew of the alleged grounds for disqualification for years but did not seek to disqualify the probate judge until the sixth year of the litigation. Black v. Black, 2020 COA 64M, 482 P.3d 460.

Court may deny motion to recuse if it is untimely. People ex rel. A.G., 264 P.3d 615 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 262 P.3d 646 (Colo. 2011).

Without an assertion of actual prejudice, counsel's failure to timely move for disqualification cannot be the basis of a valid claim for ineffective assistance of counsel. A party must show actual prejudice on the part of the judge, in that the result of the proceeding would have been different. People ex rel. A.G., 262 P.3d 646 (Colo. 2011).

Mother's allegation of prejudice was based upon the appearance of impropriety created by the judge's clerk's relationship to a material witness for the government. The mere allegation of prejudice is insufficient to satisfy the element of prejudice necessary to show that counsel's errors deprived the party of a fair trial. People ex rel. A.G., 262 P.3d 646 (Colo. 2011).

Appearance for purpose other than to question authority waives objection. Where a party seeks to disqualify a judge for bias and prejudice, and at the same time asks for affirmative relief by motion for a change of venue, appearance before such judge for any other purpose than to question his authority to act, waives the right to object to his authority. Aaberg v. District Court, 136 Colo. 525, 319 P.2d 491 (1957).

Failure to comply with rule bars objections to judge on review. Where a party has failed to comply with this rule, the reviewing court will not entertain objections to a trial judge sitting in judgment of the acts of its own public administrator, which are not properly preserved in the proceeding below. Jones v. Estate of Lambourn, 159 Colo. 246, 411 P.2d 11 (1966).

Filing of motion to disqualify a trial judge suspends all other proceedings in the case until ruling is made thereon. Dominic Leone Constr. Co. v. District Court, 150 Colo. 47, 370 P.2d 759 (1962); Brouwer v. District Court, 169 Colo. 303, 455 P.2d 207 (1969).

A motion to disqualify the judge has the effect, as a matter of law, of suspending any further proceedings until the judge rules on the motion to disqualify. City of Trinidad v. District Court, 196 Colo. 106, 581 P.2d 304 (1978).

But suspension of proceedings is not required when a party files a successive recusal motion that rests on the same factual allegations as the party's prior unsuccessful motion to recuse. Adams County Hous. Auth. v. Panzlau, 2022 COA 148, ___ P.3d __.

Judge is obligated to review motion. Because a motion to disqualify a judge has been made, judge is obligated to review the motion and decide its sufficiency, and judge does not have the authority to determine any other substantive matter pending before the court, including a motion for change of venue. Johnson v. District Court, 674 P.2d 952 (Colo. 1984).

Writ of mandamus proper for failure to rule on disqualification motion. The trial judge must initially rule on the disqualification motion, and if he fails to rule, a writ in the nature of mandamus is a proper remedy. City of Trinidad v. District Court, 196 Colo. 106, 581 P.2d 304 (1978).

Motion does not deprive court of jurisdiction. Where the trial court ruled upon a motion for change of judge, it did not lose jurisdiction to proceed. Brouwer v. District Court, 169 Colo. 303, 455 P.2d 207 (1969).

Procedural requirements for judge to disqualify himself. The power of a judge to disqualify himself may be exercised even though the proper procedural steps leading to disqualification have not been pursued by any party to the litigation. Beckord v. District Court, 698 P.2d 1323 (Colo. 1985).

Where the plaintiff failed to object to the appointment of a judge within the appropriate time period, the objection will be deemed waived and the plaintiff will be estopped to object. In re Fifield, 776 P.2d 1167 (Colo. App. 1989).

Adjudicating board abused its discretion by concluding that complainant waived his right to raise the issue of disqualification on the basis of implied waiver by conduct when unequivocal evidence of the intent to waive his right was absent. Venard v. Dept. of Corr., 72 P.3d 446 (Colo. App. 2003).

Mere friendship of a judge with an officer of a corporate party does not warrant disqualification unless the nature of the friendship creates an appearance of impropriety. Pierce v. United Bank of Denver, 780 P.2d 6 (Colo. App. 1989).

Once judge disqualifies himself from a case, he is without jurisdiction to rule on motions filed by the parties which involve an exercise of judicial discretion. Beckord v. District Court, 698 P.2d 1323 (Colo. 1985).

Judge should not appoint his own successor. When a judge is charged with bias and prejudice and sustains a motion so charging, or steps aside without ruling on the motion, proper procedure requires that he not select his successor or assign the case to another judge, but that he proceed in accordance with this rule. Aaberg v. District Court, 136 Colo. 525, 319 P.2d 491 (1957).

Proceeding with hearing without objection waives objection. Proceeding with a preliminary injunction hearing without objection, after being informed by the court that defense counsel had been appointed to a district commission for the evaluation of the performance of judges pursuant to § 13-5.5-104, is a waiver of the right to object. Bishop & Co. v. Cuomo, 799 P.2d 444 (Colo. App. 1990).

Purpose of disqualification requirement is to prevent a party from being forced to litigate a matter before a judge with a "bent of mind." Gobel v. Benton, 830 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1992).

Applied in In re Johnson, 40 Colo. App. 250, 576 P.2d 188 (1977); Marks v. District Court, 643 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1982).

II. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Filing of complaint with qualifications commission insufficient. To allow a litigant to file a letter critical of a trial judge or to inform the judge of the filing of a complaint with the judicial qualifications commission and later assert the judge's knowledge of the complaint as a basis for disqualification would encourage impermissible judge-shopping. In re Mann, 655 P.2d 814 (Colo. 1982).

Assistance of judge in preparation of arbitrator's findings not prejudicial. The participation of the trial judge in the preparation of the arbitrator's findings after reference of case did not disqualify him from rendering judgment, where it did not appear that such participation had been to the extent of creating prejudice in examining and determining issues of law which might be involved. Zelinger v. Mellwin Constr. Co., 123 Colo. 149, 225 P.2d 844 (1950).

Continuing jurisdiction over attack of decree is not sufficient ground. In a proceeding to attack an adoption decree before the same judge who granted the decree, the suggestion in a motion to disqualify the judge that he will undoubtedly be called as a witness is not ground for disqualification, since, in a matter of adoption proceedings, the judge who entered the adoption decree had a continuing jurisdiction and was the proper one to review or consider that judgment or decree when it was attacked. Kubat v. Kubat, 124 Colo. 491, 238 P.2d 897 (1951).

The initiation of an ex parte communication by a judge with a party in a dependency hearing regarding the adequacy of her attorney's representation was improper, but judge would not be disqualified where disqualification motion and affidavits failed to allege facts from which it might be inferred that the ex parte communication demonstrated a bias against the party or her attorney. S.S. v. Wakefield, 764 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1988).

Where the trial judge owned controlling shares of stock in a bank in which the plaintiff maintained substantial deposits, his pecuniary interest in the outcome of the litigation was such that he should have disqualified himself. Zoline v. Telluride Lodge Ass'n, 732 P.2d 635 (Colo. 1987).

Purchase of water from corporate defendant is not disqualifying interest. A motion to disqualify a trial judge on the ground of prejudice because the defendants in the case are socially and politically influential and because the judge is a water user of the corporate defendant, presents no sound basis for disqualification, where the company is a mutual nonprofit corporation and where no pecuniary advantage could possibly accrue to the trial court by his action. Fehr v. Hadden, 134 Colo. 102, 300 P.2d 533 (1956).

Previous service of judge as county attorney unrelated to action. No showing has been made that in his duty as county attorney 17 years prior to the institution of this action, the trial judge was in any manner concerned with the question of title to this property, or that the defendant's right to a fair and impartial hearing was in any manner affected by the refusal of the trial judge to disqualify himself. The trial judge was correct in refusing to disqualify himself. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Blanning, 29 Colo. App. 61, 479 P.2d 404 (1970).

Similarly, where judge appointed as attorney to represent inductees in quiet title action. In the absence of more positive representation than is usually performed by an attorney appointed to represent persons in or about to be inducted into military service in a quiet title action, it is questionable whether the mere appointment of an attorney and his subsequent approval of a quiet title decree disqualifies him later as judge to determine whether the decree is "res judicata" in another proceeding in which some of the parties are the same. Martinez v. Casey, 178 Colo. 62, 495 P.2d 216 (1972).

Partiality or appearance of bias or prejudice. Judge should have disqualified himself when affidavits filed reported actual events and statements which, if true, evidence partiality or the appearance of bias or prejudice against the petitioner on the part of the judge. Johnson v. District Court, 674 P.2d 952 (Colo. 1984).

Judge should have disqualified herself when she allowed marked personal feelings toward the contempt defendant to affect her judgment in the proceedings and after she referred the case to the district attorney for potential criminal prosecution. In re Estate of Elliott, 993 P.2d 474 (Colo. 2000).

Judge's Catholic faith insufficient to support a reasonable inference that he was biased and should recuse himself from case under this rule. A judge's particular religious affiliation, even though the same as that of the father in dissolution of marriage case and of the special advocate, did not create sufficient appearance of bias or bent of mind to require recusal. In re McSoud, 131 P.3d 1208 (Colo. App. 2006).

Appearance of impropriety was created by administrative adjudicator's position as a direct adversary of complainant's counsel in a similar, previous personnel matter. Thus, it was an abuse of discretion for board to allow administrative adjudicator to sit in on case. Venard v. Dept. of Corr., 72 P.3d 446 (Colo. App. 2003).

No appearance of impropriety was found and trial court's decision not to grant relief from summary judgment was proper. Giralt v. Vail Village Inn Assocs., 759 P.2d 801 (Colo. App. 1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1042, 109 S. Ct. 868, 102 L. Ed. 2d 991 (1989).

Affidavit insufficient. Litinsky v. Querard, 683 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1984).

Refusal of judge to disqualify himself was error. Geer v. Hall, 138 Colo. 384, 333 P.2d 1040 (1959).

For actions of judge effectively disqualifying himself from case, see Beckord v. District Court, 698 P.2d 1323 (Colo. 1985).

Refusal of judge to disqualify himself was error where judge's ex parte communication with party significantly involved in provision of health care services to mentally ill, an issue of critical significance to judge's ultimate ruling on adequacy of state's remedial plan. Goebel v. Benton, 830 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1992).

The fact that the defendant had brought a civil action against the judge complaining of judicial conduct and defendant's conclusory statements that the judge was biased were insufficient to show that recusal was required. Moody v. Corsentino, 843 P.2d 1355 (Colo. 1993).

Legal rulings against a party on issues appropriately before the judge are not grounds for recusal, nor does the judge's direction to the clerk not to accept fax filings from the party support a reasonable inference of bias. Holland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 883 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1994).

Imposition of discovery sanctions did not indicate bias where issues were appropriately before the judge and findings were based on the motions filed and the arguments of counsel. M Life Ins. Co. v. Sapers & Wallack Ins. Agency, Inc., 40 P.3d 3 (Colo. App. 2001).

Trial court judge erred by determining the relationship between his court clerk and the witness did not warrant judge's recusal. Where court clerk's daughter, as caseworker, was material witness in the case, absent waiver, judge abused his discretion by not recusing from the case. Judge's relationship with clerk and her relationship to witness created the appearance of impropriety. People ex rel. A.G., 264 P.3d 615 (Colo. App. 2010), rev'd on other grounds, 262 P.3d 646 (Colo. 2011).

Hostility between the court and counsel warrants disqualification of a judge only when the judge so manifests an attitude of hostility or ill will toward an attorney that the judge's impartiality in the case can reasonably be questioned. Bocian v. Owners Ins. Co., 2020 COA 98, 482 P.3d 502.

Judge's discussion of ethical issues that did not contain express accusations of unethical conduct or malpractice and that occurred when ethical issues were implicated did not create an appearance of impropriety. Bocian v. Owners Ins. Co., 2020 COA 98, 482 P.3d 502.

Campaign contribution to judge's electoral opponent does not necessarily create an appearance of impropriety. Instead, the relative size of the contribution, total amount spent in the election, and the effect of the contribution should all be considered in determining whether the contribution created an appearance of im-

Rule 98. Place of Trial

(a) Venue for Real Property, Franchises, and Utilities. All actions affecting real property, franchises, or utilities shall be tried in the county in which the subject of the action, or a substantial part thereof, is situated.

(b) Venue for Recovery of Penalty, etc. Actions upon the following claims shall be tried in the county where the claim, or some part thereof, arose:

(1) For the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture imposed by statute, except that when it is imposed for an offense committed on a lake, river, or other stream of water, situated in two or more counties, the action may be brought in any county bordering on such lake, river, or stream and opposite the place where the offense was committed;

(2) Against a public officer or person specially appointed to execute his duties, for an act done by him in virtue of his office, or against a person who by his command, or in his aid, does anything touching the duties of such officer, or for a failure to perform any act or duty which he is by law required to perform.

(c) Venue for Tort, Contract, and Other Actions. (1) Except as provided in sections (a), (b), and (c)(2) through (6) of this Rule, an action shall be tried in the county in which the defendants, or any of them, may reside at the commencement of the action, or in the county where the plaintiff resides when service is made on the defendant in such county; or if the defendant is a nonresident of this state, the same may be tried in any county in which the defendant may be found in this state, or in the county designated in the complaint, and if any defendant is about to depart from the state, such action may be tried in any county where plaintiff resides, or where defendant may be found and service had.

(2) Except as provided in subsection (3) of this section, an action on book account or for goods sold and delivered may also be tried in the county where the plaintiff resides or where the goods were sold; an action upon contract may also be tried in the county where the same was to be performed.

(3) (A) For the purposes of this Rule, a consumer contract is any sale, lease, or loan in which (i) the buyer, lessee, or debtor is a person other than an organization; (ii) the goods are purchased or leased, the services are obtained, or the debt is incurred, primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose; and (iii) the initial amount due under the contract, the total amount initially payable under the lease, or the initial principal does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars.

(B) An action on a consumer contract shall be tried (i) in the county in which the contract was signed or entered into by any defendant; or (ii) in the county in which any defendant resided at the time the contract was entered into; or (iii) in the county in which any defendant resides at the time the action is commenced. If the defendant is a nonresident of this state, the same may be tried in any county in which the defendant may be found in this state, or in the county designated in the complaint, and if any defendant is about to depart from the state, such action may be tried in any county where plaintiff resides, or where defendant may be found and service had.

(C) In any action on a consumer contract if the plaintiff fails to state facts in the complaint or by affidavit showing that the action has been commenced in the proper county as described in this Rule, or if it appears from the stated facts that venue is improper, the court may, upon its own motion or upon motion of any party, dismiss any such action without prejudice; however, if appropriate facts appear in the record, the court shall transfer the action to an appropriate county. Any provision or authorization in any consumer contract purporting to waive any rights under subsection (3) of section (c) of this Rule is void.

(D) Any debt collector covered by the provisions of the Federal "Fair Debt Collection Practices Act" shall comply with the provisions of said Act set forth in 15 U.S.C. 1692(i) concerning legal actions by debt collectors, notwithstanding any provision of this Rule.

(4) An action upon a contract for services may also be tried in the county in which the services were to be performed.

(5) An action for tort may also be tried in the county where the tort was committed.

(6) An action in interpleader may also be tried in any county where a claimant resides.

(d) Venue for Injunction to Stay Proceedings. When any injunction shall be granted to stay a suit or judgment, the proceeding shall be had in the county where the judgment was obtained or the suit is pending.

(e) Motion to Change Venue; When Presented; Waiver; Effect of Filing. (1) Except for actions under section (c)(3), (f)(2), or (g) of this Rule, a motion to change venue shall be filed within the time permitted for the filing of motions under the defenses numbered (1) to (4) of section (b) of Rule 12, and if any such motion, or any other motion permitted by Rule 12, is filed within said time, simultaneously therewith. Unless so filed, the right to have venue changed is waived. A motion under sections (c)(3), (f)(2), or (g) of this Rule, shall be filed prior to the time a case is set for trial, or the right to have venue changed on said grounds is waived, unless the court, in its discretion, upon motion filed or of its own motion, finds that a change of venue should be ordered.

(2) If a motion to change venue is filed within the time permitted by section (a) of Rule 12 for the filing of a motion under the defenses numbered (1) to (4) of section (b) of Rule 12, the filing of such motion by a party under the provisions of subsection (1) of this section (e) alters his time to file his responsive pleading as follows: If the motion is overruled the responsive pleading shall be filed within 14 days thereafter unless a different time is fixed by the court, and if it is allowed the responsive pleading shall be filed within 14 days after the action has been docketed in the court to which the action is removed unless that court fixes a different time.

(3) Except as otherwise provided in an order allowing a motion to change venue, earlier ex parte and other orders affecting an action, or the parties thereto, shall remain in effect, subject to change or modification by order of the court to which the action is removed.

(f) Causes of Change. The court may, on good cause shown, change the place of trial in the following cases: (1) When the county designated in the complaint is not the proper county; (2) When the convenience of witnesses and the ends of justice would be promoted by the change.

(g) Change from County. If either party fears that he will not receive a fair trial in the county in which the action is pending, because the adverse party has an undue influence over the minds of the inhabitants thereof, or that they are prejudiced against him so that he cannot expect a fair trial, he may file a motion supported by an affidavit for a change of venue. The opposite party may file a counter motion and affidavit. If the motion is sustained the venue shall be changed.

(h) Transfers Where Concurrent Jurisdiction. All actions or proceedings in which district and county courts have concurrent jurisdiction, may, by stipulation of the parties and order of the court, be transferred by either court to such other court of the same county. Upon transfer, the court to which such cause is removed shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction as if originally commenced therein.

(i) Place Changed if All Parties Agree. When all parties assent, or when all parties who have entered their appearance assent and the remaining nonappearing parties are in default, the place of trial of an action in a district court may be changed to any other county in the district. The judgment entered therein, if any, shall be transmitted to the clerk of the district court of the original county for filing and recording in his office.

(j) Parties Must Agree on Change. Where there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants, the place of trial shall not be changed unless the motion is made by or with the consent of all the plaintiffs or defendants, as the case may be.

(k) Only One Change; No Waiver. In case the place of trial is changed the party securing the same shall not be permitted to apply for another change upon the same ground. A party does not waive his right to change of judge or place of trial if his objection thereto is made in apt time.

This rule determines place of trial or venue in courts of record of general jurisdiction. Slinkard v. Jordan, 131 Colo. 144, 279 P.2d 1054 (1955).

Statute fixing place where an action must be brought does not control place of trial. People ex rel. Bear Creek Dev. Corp. v. District Court, 78 Colo. 526, 242 P. 997 (1925) (decided under § 25 et seq. of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Bringing an action and trying it are two different matters. People ex rel. Bear Creek Dev. Corp. v. District Court, 78 Colo. 526, 242 P. 997 (1925); Caldwell v. District Court, 128 Colo. 498, 266 P.2d 771 (1953).

Where a statutory remedy provides for a jury trial and there are no change of venue provisions provided for in that statute, then the procedure to obtain a change of venue is governed by this rule of civil procedure. Brisbin v. Schauer, 176 Colo. 550, 492 P.2d 835 (1971).

The substance, not the form, of the action must control in ascertaining the proper venue. Jameson v. District Court, 115 Colo. 298, 172 P.2d 449 (1946).

In ascertaining the venue of an injunctive proceeding, the court should probe for the primary purpose of the suit. City & County of Denver v. Glendale Water & San. Dist., 152 Colo. 39, 380 P.2d 553 (1963).

Dismissal on basis of forum non conveniens limited. The power of a Colorado court to dismiss an action on the basis of forum non conveniens is severely limited. State Dept. of Hwys. v. District Court, 635 P.2d 889 (Colo. 1981).

Change of venue absent affidavit or hearing is abuse of discretion. The court abused its discretion when it ordered a change of venue in the absence of a supporting affidavit or an evidentiary hearing. Ranger Ins. Co. v. District Court, 647 P.2d 1229 (Colo. 1982).

Improper venue not a jurisdictional defect which can be raised for the first time on appeal. Where trial court made an express finding of proper venue and defendant did not contest venue at trial, appellate court refused to reverse on grounds of improper venue. Sisneros v. First Nat. Bank of Denver, 689 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1984).

Denying such change of venue because remedy is sought pursuant to “habeas corpus” is incorrect. A trial court incorrectly bases its denial of a motion for change of venue on the belief that a change of venue is not available because the remedy sought arises pursuant to a writ of “habeas corpus”. Brisbin v. Schauer, 176 Colo. 550, 492 P.2d 835 (1971).

This rule governs venue in habeas corpus proceedings. Evans v. District Court, 194 Colo. 299, 572 P.2d 811 (1977).

This rule does not apply to workers' compensation division-sponsored independent medical examination proceedings. Kennedy v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 100 P.3d 949 (Colo. App. 2004).

Venue subservient to jurisdiction, so trial court not deprived of subject matter jurisdiction by purported transfer to a foreign nation of an action involving property located in that nation. Sanctuary House, Inc. v. Krause, 177 P.3d 1256 (Colo. 2008).

Applied in In re Femmer, 39 Colo. App. 277, 568 P.2d 81 (1977); Gonzales v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1981); In re U.M. v. District Court, 631 P.2d 165 (Colo. 1981); First Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 653 P.2d 1123 (Colo. 1982); Hollemon v. Murray, 666 P.2d 1107 (Colo. App. 1982).

II. VENUE FOR PROPERTY, FRANCHISES, AND UTILITIES.

Annotator's note. Since section (a) of this rule is similar to § 26 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The substance of the action, not the form, controls in determining the question of venue under section (a). Colo. Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 189 Colo. 522, 542 P.2d 853 (1975); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1981).

This section deals with a specified class of cases. Welborn v. Bucci, 95 Colo. 478, 37 P.2d 399 (1934).

Form of relief not determinative. Although the complaint prayed for a variety of relief, both legal and equitable, where the substance of the action directly affected the ownership of a ranch and sought to have declared the respective rights and interests of the petitioners and respondent in the ranch, the action should be tried where the ranch is located. Colo. Nat'l Bank v. District Court, 189 Colo. 522, 542 P.2d 853 (1975).

Action in personam is not an action dealing with property within the contemplation of section (a) of this rule. Denver Bd. of Water Comm'rs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 187 Colo. 113, 528 P.2d 1305 (1974); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1981).

Its provisions are subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial as elsewhere provided. Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896).

It has reference exclusively to actions in rem, where specific property is to be directly affected. Kirby v. Union Pac. Ry., 51 Colo. 509, 119 P. 1042, 1913B Ann. Cas. 461 (1911).

This provision is applicable to county courts as well as to district courts. Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891).

This provision is not restricted to real property. Jameson v. District Court, 115 Colo. 298, 172 P.2d 449 (1946).

It concerns actions affecting specific property and does not control in an action in which there is no issue as to title, lien, injury, quality, or possession, but which is concerned only with recovery of the purchase price. Craft v. Stumpf, 115 Colo. 181, 170 P.2d 779 (1946).

Language of this section is mandatory. Insofar as the designation of the venue is concerned, the language used in this section is mandatory. Pearse v. Bordeleau, 3 Colo. App. 351, 33 P. 140 (1893).

The word "affect", as used in this rule, is as broad a term as "to determine a right or interest in". Jameson v. District Court, 115 Colo. 298, 172 P.2d 449 (1946).

An action does not "affect" a utility under this section when the defendants are being sued, not as a utility, but in their proprietary or quasi-private capacities as parties to a contract; as such, petitioners are not entitled to relief under this section. City of Cripple Creek v. Johns, 177 Colo. 443, 494 P.2d 823 (1972).

This section deals with the situation where the lawsuit directly affects the construction or operation of the utility itself. City of Cripple Creek v. Johns, 177 Colo. 443, 494 P.2d 823 (1972).

Rule eliminates issue of where greater portion of property is found. Since an action may be brought in the county where a substantial portion of the property is located, the difficult question of where the greater portion of franchise is located is eliminated. People ex rel. City & County of Denver v. District Court, 80 Colo. 538, 253 P. 24 (1927).

Section applies to municipal corporations. The fact that defendant irrigation district happens to be a quasi-municipal or municipal corporation cannot abrogate the provision of this section as to venue. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 3 Colo. App. 137, 32 P. 346 (1893); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 2 Colo. App. 412, 31 P. 183 (1892); North Sterling Irrigation Dist. v. Dickman, 66 Colo. 8, 178 P. 559 (1919).

Section 36-1-128, concerning venue for suits by the state board of land commissioners, does not conflict with this rule requiring all actions affecting property to be tried in the county in which the subject of the action or a substantial part thereof is situated. Dallas v. Fitzsimmons, 137 Colo. 196, 323 P.2d 274 (1958).

Section controls an action against an irrigation district. An action for an injury to lands by seepage from the ditch of an irrigation district is properly brought in the county in which the lands are situated. North Sterling Irrigation Dist. v. Dickman, 66 Colo. 8, 178 P. 559 (1919).

A sanitation district is a municipal utility, and being such, it should be sued in the county in which it was located. City & County of Denver v. Glendale Water & San. Dist., 152 Colo. 39, 380 P.2d 553 (1963).

Section contrives an action to cancel real estate mortgage. An action to cancel a real estate mortgage indemnifying a surety against loss on a contractor's bond, under this provision, was triable in the county where the property was situated, although the responsibility of the contractor was a question to be determined in another county. Allen v. Sterling, 76 Colo. 122, 230 P. 113 (1924).

An action to terminate lease and recover possession of real estate, upon the ground that covenants of the lease have been violated, is an action "affecting" real estate and is properly brought in the county in which the said real estate is located. Gordon Inv. Co. v. Jones, 123 Colo. 253, 227 P.2d 336 (1951).

Claim to quiet title to property. The proper venue for the claim to quiet the title to the property was laid in the county where it is located. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Bond, 156 Colo. 433, 399 P.2d 793 (1965).

Actions to determine county boundaries. The venue of an action to determine county boundaries is controlled by this section. People ex rel. Bd. of Comm'rs v. District Court, 66 Colo. 40, 179 P. 875 (1919).

Action on land use regulation not within scope of section (a). Where the relief sought is directed to the validity of county land use regulations and there is no issue as to title, lien, injury, quality or possession, property is not affected within the meaning of section (a). Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1981).

In case when requested relief is directed to the validity and operative effect of H.B. 1041 land use regulations passed by county, there is no issue as to the title, lien, injury, quality, or possession of the property, franchises, or utilities within the meaning of section (a). Controlling venue issue turns on the residence of the governmental body that adopted the challenged land use regulations. Here, Pueblo county board passed the amended regulations in its official capacity, and the regulations address facilities planned to be located in Pueblo county and impacts that may occur there. That the city's planning for project features and water delivery in El Paso county may ultimately be impacted by such regulation does not mandate venue in El Paso county district court. Substance of city's complaint addresses the validity and enforceability of the Pueblo county board's adoption of the challenged H.B. 1041 regulation. Thus, venue is proper only in the Pueblo county district court under section (b)(2). City of Colo. Springs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 147 P.3d 1 (Colo. 2006).

Likewise actions concerning water rights. An action to quiet title to a water right is triable in the county in which the water right is situated. People ex rel. City & County of Denver v. District Court, 80 Colo. 538, 253 P. 24 (1927).

A water right can be said to be "situated" under this section only at the point of diversion or at the place of use. Field v. Kincaid, 67 Colo. 20, 184 P. 832 (1919).

Actions for injury due to flooding. In view of this provision, an action for damages resulting from flooding plaintiff's land is triable in the county in which the subject of the action is situated. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Sill, 104 Colo. 215, 89 P.2d 1012 (1939).

An action to rescind a contract to sell timber is in substance an action to determine title to the timber, and thus must be tried in the county in which the timber or a substantial part of it is located. Jameson v. District Court, 115 Colo. 298, 172 P.2d 449 (1946).

Transitory, in personam actions are not subject to this section. This section does not apply to an action to restrain interference with the business of a railway company by unlawfully dealing in its nontransferable tickets. Such an action is a transitory action in personam. Kirby v. Union Pac. Ry., 51 Colo. 509, 119 P. 1042 (1911).

Railroad tickets do not have the characteristics of property as that term is used in this subdivision. At most a railroad ticket is mere evidence of a contract, a mere token to show that the person properly in possession of it has paid his fare. Kirby v. Union Pac. Ry., 51 Colo. 509, 119 P. 1042 (1911).

This section does not apply to an action on an oral contract for leasing sheep. This section dealing with specified classes of cases does not apply to an action on an oral contract for the leasing of sheep. Welborn v. Buccini, 95 Colo. 478, 37 P.2d 399 (1934).

Section not applicable to foreclosure proceedings. There is no requirement that foreclosure proceedings be filed in the county where the property affected is located. Hastings v. Security Thrift & Mtg. Co., 145 Colo. 36, 357 P.2d 919 (1960).

An action to recover the reasonable value of furniture, fixtures, and equipment of a restaurant and liquor sales business sold to defendant was not an action affecting property within section (a) of this rule. Craft v. Stumpf, 115 Colo. 181, 170 P.2d 779 (1946).

A dissolution of marriage action is not an action "affecting real property, franchises, or utilities" within the meaning of section (a). Brownell v. District Court ex rel. County of Larimer, 670 P.2d 762 (Colo. 1983).

Where defendants made no showing that ownership of land was disputed and did not seek any remedies pertaining directly to the property, the action was not an action "affecting real property". Sanctuary House, Inc. v. Krause, 177 P.3d 1256 (Colo. 2008).

III. VENUE FOR RECOVERY OF PENALTY.

Annotator's note. Since section (b) of this rule is similar to § 28 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This section deals with a specified class of cases. Welborn v. Bucci, 95 Colo. 478, 37 P.2d 399 (1934).

Its provisions are subject to the power of the court to change the place of trial as elsewhere provided. Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896).

Consent of all defendants is not required for a motion to change venue under section (b)(2). 7 Utes v. District Court, 702 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1985).

An action to recover a penalty, whether it be one ex contractu or ex delicto, comes under the provisions of this section. Woodworth v. Henderson, 28 Colo. 381, 65 P. 25 (1901).

Claims for injunctive relief against public officers arise, within the meaning of section (b) of this rule, in the county in which the public body has its official residence and from which any action by the board pursuant to the injunction must emanate. Denver Bd. of Water Comm'rs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 187 Colo. 113, 528 P.2d 1305 (1974).

The mere fact that public officers were named defendants, does not constitute an action against public officers within the meaning of section (b)(2). 7 Utes v. District Court, 702 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1985).

Section (b)(2) controls venue for all actions against public officers for acts done or the failure to perform acts in public office. Executive Dir. v. District Ct. for Boulder County, 923 P.2d 885 (Colo. 1996).

The language of section (b)(2) indicates that it is the official act, or failure to act, by the public officer that gives rise to the cause of action and establishes venue. Executive Dir. v. District Ct. for Boulder County, 923 P.2d 885 (Colo. 1996).

An action to set aside an order of a public official is sufficiently similar to an action for injunctive relief against public officers to be governed by the same venue rules. Farmers Cafe v. State Dept. of Rev., 752 P.2d 1064 (Colo. App. 1988).

"Some part" of plaintiffs' 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim against public officers in Fremont county did not arise in Boulder county by virtue of plaintiffs' phone call from Boulder county, where the basis of plaintiffs' claim was that such public officers deprived plaintiffs by refusing visitation of prisoners at the department of corrections facility in Fremont county, not the visitation arrangement itself. It was the DOC's refusal in Fremont county to allow visitation that gave rise to the plaintiffs' claim and establishes venue in this case. Executive Dir. v. District Ct. for Boulder County, 923 P.2d 885 (Colo. 1996).

Section 18-4-405 establishes a statutory penalty requiring the case to be tried in the county where the claim arose. Ehrlich Feedlot, Inc. v. Oldenburg, 140 P.3d 265 (Colo. App. 2006).

An action to recover damages for personal injury is not an action to recover a penalty.

An action to recover damages for personal injuries is not to recover a penalty simply because punitive damages were asked and awarded. Such an action is to recover compensatory damages; exemplary damages are only an incident, not the basis, of the cause of action. Robbins v. McAlister, 91 Colo. 505, 16 P.2d 431 (1932).

In case involving determination of proper venue for lawsuit concerning validity of H.B. 1041 land use regulations passed by county, venue is proper under section (b)(2) where the actions of the governing board giving rise to the dispute took place. Regardless of the potential impact outside the county, a claim involving the validity and effectiveness of regulations passed by a governing board must be heard in the county where the board acted to pass those regulations. Controlling venue issue turns on the residence of the governmental body that adopted the challenged land use regulations. Here, substance of city's complaint is directed at the official actions of the Pueblo county board, and the primary purpose of the lawsuit is to determine the validity of those actions as they apply to the city's water supply and storage project. Because issue here is the validity and enforceability of land use regulations adopted by Pueblo county board, venue is proper in Pueblo county where challenged official actions occurred. City of Colo. Springs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 147 P.3d 1 (Colo. 2006).

IV. VENUE FOR TORT, CONTRACT, AND OTHER ACTIONS.

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of this rule is similar to § 29 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Purpose of section. The general assembly by these provisions intended to limit the right to bring actions in any court having competent jurisdiction and imposed a limitation as to the forum in which the action should be commenced. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902).

The first sentence of this section is construed as a general rule, which is modified in particular instances by the succeeding sentences. Brewer v. Gordon, 27 Colo. 111, 59 P. 404 (1899).

General rule. The general rule is that personal actions, such as actions for breach of warranty, shall be tried in the county in which the defendants, or any of them, reside at the time of the commencement of the action, or in the county where plaintiff resides when service is made on the defendant in such county, unless the case is brought within some of the exceptions of this section. Lamar Alfalfa Milling Co. v. Bishop, 80 Colo. 369, 250 P. 689 (1926).

Section (c) applies only if sections (a) and (b) are not controlling. Denver Bd. of Water Comm'rs v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 187 Colo. 113, 528 P.2d 1305 (1974).

Section (c)(1) does not apply to motions made under subsection (b)(2). 7 Utes v. District Court, 702 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1985).

Section provides more than one proper county. The counties designated in the first sentence of this section are proper counties for the trial of all cases except those enumerated in the two preceding sections; but where the action is for goods sold and delivered, or upon a contract, or upon a note or bill of exchange, or for a tort, the county where the goods were sold, or the contract was to be performed, or the bill of exchange was made payable, or the tort was committed, is also a proper county for trial. Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896).

Where trial may be lawfully had in either of two counties under this section, the selection rests with the plaintiff. Welborn v. Bucci, 95 Colo. 478, 37 P.2d 399 (1934).

Nonresidence of defendant is no objection to court's jurisdiction. Nonresidence of the defendant within the territorial jurisdiction of the court is no objection to the jurisdiction of the court of the cause, if actual jurisdiction of the person of such defendant is obtained by service of process within the territorial jurisdiction of such courts. Weiner v. Rumble, 11 Colo. 607, 19 P. 760 (1888).

Nonresident may be sued in county designated by complaint. In a suit for breach of contract, where the defendant is a nonresident, the proper county in which to institute the action is that "designated in the complaint". Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Scott, 89 Colo. 99, 299 P. 1051 (1931).

Where the defendant is a nonresident of Colorado, the action may be tried in the county designated in the complaint. International Serv.

Ins. Co. v. Ross, 169 Colo. 451, 457 P.2d 917 (1969).

Once the district court determined that a change of venue was warranted under subsection (c), it has no jurisdiction over the cause of action except to order the change of venue. Millet v. District Court of El Paso County, 951 P.2d 476 (Colo. 1998).

Applied in City & County of Denver v. Glendale Water & San. Dist., 152 Colo. 39, 380 P.2d 553 (1963).

B. Actions on Contracts.

General rule. Actions on contracts are triable in the county in which the defendants or any of them reside at the commencement of the action, or in the county where the plaintiff resides, when service is had on the defendants in such county, or in the county where the contract is to be performed. Coulter v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 18 Colo. App. 444, 72 P. 602 (1903).

Contract action relating to real property. A contract action, seeking only damages and not claiming title to any property, is properly brought in Colorado even though the real property involved is located in Kansas. Centennial Petroleum, Inc. v. Carter, 529 F. Supp. 563 (D. Colo. 1982).

Action may be tried in county where contract is to be performed. One of the exceptions to the general rule of place of trial is that actions on contracts may be tried in the county in which the contract is to be performed, where by its terms it is to be performed at a particular place. Lamar Alfalfa Milling Co. v. Bishop, 80 Colo. 369, 250 P. 689 (1926).

This exception applies only where the contract is, by express terms, to be performed at a certain place. People ex rel. Bd. of Dirs. of Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. District Court, 66 Colo. 330, 182 P. 7 (1919); People ex rel. Tripp v. Fremont County Court, 72 Colo. 395, 211 P. 102 (1922).

The words in this section, "the county in which the contract was to be performed", refer to contracts which by their terms are to be performed at a particular place. Lamar Alfalfa Milling Co. v. Bishop, 80 Colo. 369, 250 P. 689 (1926); Kimberlin v. Rutliff, 93 Colo. 99, 23 P.2d 583 (1933).

Where a contract is silent as to place of performance the provision relative to the right of trial in the county where the contract is to be performed is not applicable. People ex rel. Burton v. District Court, 74 Colo. 121, 218 P. 1047 (1923); Kimberlin v. Rutliff, 93 Colo. 99, 23 P.2d 583 (1933).

Where there is no place of performance expressed in a contract, no change of venue can be granted on that ground. Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925).

Contract did not specify place of performance. The fact that a contract of guaranty was executed and dated in the county where suit was brought upon it does not make it a contract to be performed in that county so as to deprive the defendants of the right to remove the cause for trial to the county of their residence. Smith v. Post Printing & Publishing Co., 17 Colo. App. 238, 68 P. 119 (1902).

An indemnity bond given to a sheriff to indemnify him against damage for seizing personal property under a writ of attachment, which contains no provision making it payable in any particular county, is not a contract to be performed in the county wherein the attachment is levied within the meaning of this section providing that actions upon contracts may be tried in the county in which the contract was to be performed. Brewer v. Gordon, 27 Colo. 111, 59 P. 404 (1899).

Where place of performance of contract was changed by assignment of promissory note to California company, and payer was directed to mail its payments to San Diego rather than to Denver as originally stated in the note, venue was not proper in Denver. Trial court should have transferred case to Boulder county, where defendants resided. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Parker, 824 P.2d 102 (Colo. App. 1991).

The place where a cause of action for a breach of contract arises is generally — almost universally — the place where the contract is to be performed. Grimes Co. v. Nelson, 94 Colo. 487, 31 P.2d 488 (1934).

In determining the place of trial of an action for breach of warranty the question is, where were defendants required to perform the things they were to do under the contract. What plaintiff was to do, is not in the case. Lamar Alfalfa Milling Co. v. Bishop, 80 Colo. 369, 250 P. 689 (1926).

Action may be brought in county of defendant's residence. Personal actions on contracts which are silent as to place of performance, are triable in the county of defendant's residence. Kimberlin v. Rutliff, 93 Colo. 99, 23 P.2d 583 (1933).

In an action on contract, no place of performance being expressly specified, the action should be tried in the county where defendant resides unless the case is brought within some of the exceptions of the rule. People ex rel. Burton v. District Court, 74 Colo. 121, 218 P. 1047 (1923).

Where the terms of the contract were not sufficient to indicate an intent to perform in the county of the plaintiff's residence the defendant was entitled to change of venue to its place of residence. Maxwell-Chamberlain Motor Co. v. Piatt, 65 Colo. 140, 173 P. 867 (1918).

An action upon a contract against a school district must be tried in the county of that district, unless the case is within one of the exceptions provided for in this section. People ex rel. Bd. of Dirs. of Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. District Court, 66 Colo. 330, 182 P. 7 (1919).

An action for breach of contract, which is silent as to the place of performance, must be regarded as a personal one and triable in the county of defendant's residence. Cliff v. Gleason, 142 Colo. 500, 351 P.2d 394 (1960).

Where it was sufficiently shown that the county in which the action was brought was the county in which the contract was to be performed, and was therefore the proper county for trial, the motion for change was correctly denied. Coulter v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 18 Colo. App. 444, 72 P. 602 (1903).

Generally, unless service is made in the county of plaintiff's residence, trial shall be in the county of defendant's residence. Regardless of residence and place of service, actions upon contract may be tried in the county in which the contract is to be performed. Grimes Co. v. Nelson, 94 Colo. 487, 31 P.2d 488 (1934); E. F. Gobatti Eng'r & Mach. Corp. v. Oliver Well Works, Inc., 111 Colo. 193, 139 P.2d 269 (1943).

Where, under the terms of an agency contract, plaintiff was required to and did confine his business activities within the limits of a specified county, his action was properly instituted in such county, and there was no error in the refusal of the court to change the venue to another county wherein the principal maintained its offices and where it was served with summons. Navy Gas & Supply Co. v. Schoech, 105 Colo. 374, 98 P.2d 860 (1940).

This rule permits actions on contract to be tried in the county where the contract is to be performed. Cliff v. Gleason, 142 Colo. 500, 351 P.2d 394 (1960).

Where a contract is entered into, and payment of the fee is to be made in Denver, the action is properly tried in Denver. Bamford v. Cope, 31 Colo. App. 161, 499 P.2d 639 (1972).

Under this section an action upon contract may be instituted and prosecuted in the county where the contract was to be performed. Even though defendant resides in another county he is not entitled to a change of venue. Gould v. Mathes, 55 Colo. 384, 135 P. 780 (1913).

This section does not make the trial mandatory in the county where the contract is to be performed. City of Cripple Creek v. Johns, 177 Colo. 443, 494 P.2d 823 (1972).

Rather, it merely makes such venue permissive by providing that the action may also be tried in the county in which the contract is to be performed at the election of the plaintiff. City of Cripple Creek v. Johns, 177 Colo. 443, 494 P.2d 823 (1972).

An action for breach of contract in which there are several defendants is properly brought in the county where one such defendant resides. City of Cripple Creek v. Johns, 177 Colo. 443, 494 P.2d 823 (1972).

Debt presumed payable where creditor resides. In an action on contract for the payment of money advanced by a bank, no other place of payment being stipulated, the debt is presumed to be payable at the bank, and the action was properly brought in the county of the creditor's residence under this section. People ex rel. Columbine Mercantile Co. v. District Court, 70 Colo. 540, 203 P. 268 (1921); Chutkow v. Wagman Realty & Ins. Co., 80 Colo. 11, 248 P. 1014 (1926).

Where the contract is silent as to the place of payment, the debtor is obliged to seek the creditor in the county of residence and his usual place of business or abode and make payment there. Unless an insurance policy contains a provision definitely fixing the place of payment elsewhere, the county of plaintiff's residence is a proper place for the trial of an action to collect thereon. Progressive Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mihoover, 87 Colo. 64, 284 P. 1025 (1930).

A breach of the contract does not abrogate this section as to the place of trial of an action thereon, nor spell anything as to what the contract says as to place of performance. Lamar Alfalfa Milling Co. v. Bishop, 80 Colo. 369, 250 P. 689 (1926).

Signers of bond must be sued in county of their residence where bond is silent as to place of payment. The signers of a bond must be sued in the county of their residence, or where some of them reside, unless the bond itself specifically provides that the place of performance is elsewhere. Brewer v. Gordon, 27 Colo. 111, 59 P. 404 (1899).

C. Tort Actions.

The general rule is that personal actions may be tried in either the county in which the defendant resides, or any of them reside, or in the county where the plaintiff resides when service is made on the defendants in such county. Denver Air Ctr. v. District Court, 839 P.2d 1182 (Colo. 1992); Magill v. Ford Motor Co., 2016 CO 57, 379 P.3d 1033.

Venue requirements must be satisfied for all defendants where the defendants did not act in concert or engage in the same tortious act. Spencer v. Sytsma, 67 P.3d 1 (Colo. 2003).

A limited liability company (LLC)'s residence for venue purposes is determined by the residence of the LLC, not the residences of its members. Nelson v. Encompass PAHS Rehab. Hosp., 2023 CO 1, 522 P.3d 707; McMichael v. Encompass PAHS Rehab. Hosp., 2023 CO 2, 522 P.3d 713.

Rule authorizes prosecution of action in county in which defendant has its principle place of business and in which it was served with process. Combined Com. Corp. v. Pub. Serv. Co., 865 P.2d 893 (Colo. App. 1993).

Merely having a registered agent in a county does not mean the company resides there. So the action must be brought in the county where the plaintiff or defendant resides. Magill v. Ford Motor Co., 2016 CO 57, 379 P.3d 1033.

Section provides equally proper counties. In an action for a tort, the county where the defendant resides, and the county where the plaintiff resides and the defendant is served, and the county where the tort was committed, are equally proper counties for trial; and if the action is commenced in any one of those counties, the place of trial cannot be changed on the ground that the county designated is not the proper county. Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896); Carlson v. Rensink, 65 Colo. 11, 173 P. 542 (1918).

Plaintiff must bring case within exception for place of tort to prevent change to defendant's residence. In an action for tort brought against a defendant in another county where the summons was served in the county in which defendant lived, it was incumbent upon plaintiff in resisting a motion for a change of venue to bring the case within the exception to this section that actions for torts can be brought in the county in which the tort was committed. Byram v. Piggot, 38 Colo. 70, 89 P. 809 (1906).

Where an action was brought in Logan county by a resident of that county against a resident of Weld county to recover damages for a tort committed in Morgan county, with service of summons in Logan county, a motion for change of place of trial from Logan county to Weld county was properly denied. Robbins v. McAlister, 91 Colo. 505, 16 P.2d 431 (1932).

Exemplary damages have no bearing upon question of venue. Where a plaintiff asks for both compensatory and exemplary damages in a tort action, exemplary damages is only an incident, not the basis, of the cause of action, and has no bearing upon the question of venue. Robbins v. McAlister, 91 Colo. 505, 16 P.2d 431 (1932).

Action for breach of warranty. In an action for the breach of the warranty where fraudulent misrepresentations inducing purchase were alleged and plaintiffs resided in Lincoln county, the action was properly brought in Lincoln county, both because that was the county where the contract was to be performed, and because of the character of the action as one of tort; and defendant was not entitled as of right to change the venue to the county of its residence. Denver Horse Importing Co. v. Schafer, 58 Colo. 376, 147 P. 367 (1915).

Action for conversion of machinery. In an action by a lessee of a mine against his lessors for damages for an alleged conversion of machinery and appliances, where the complaint charged the wrongful conversion by defendant of personal property belonging to plaintiff, the cause is properly brought in the county where defendants or any of them reside. Updegraff v. Lesem, 15 Colo. App. 297, 62 P. 342 (1900).

Action by receivers. The court's power of control in receivership proceedings does not deprive a stranger who claims by paramount title, of the right to have the suit or proceedings instituted by the receiver to try the question of title, determined as are other actions under the rules of civil procedure, in the appropriate court of the county where the defendant resides, and where process is served upon him, where the tort was committed in the county of the defendant's residence. Pomeranz v. Nat'l Beet Harvester Co., 82 Colo. 482, 261 P. 861 (1927).

D. Other Actions.

The word "goods", as used in section (c) of this rule, should not be restricted to merchandise sold in course of trade. The word should be given the broad meaning ordinarily ascribed to it and be held to include furniture and equipment. Craft v. Stumpf, 115 Colo. 181, 170 P.2d 779 (1946).

Action of guaranty distinguished from action for goods sold and delivered. An action by a publishing company against a party who contracted for a route for the circulation and sale of its paper and against other parties who guaranteed the contract of the circulator is an action upon the guaranty contract, and not an action for goods sold and delivered, and the provision authorizing an action for goods sold and delivered to be brought in the county where the plaintiff resides or where the goods were sold does not apply. Smith v. Post Printing & Publishing Co., 17 Colo. App. 238, 68 P. 119 (1902).

Action on partnership account may be brought in county where plaintiff resides. This section expressly authorizes an action by one partner against his copartner for the balance found due upon a settlement of the partnership affairs to be brought in the county where the plaintiff resides. Bean v. Gregg, 7 Colo. 499, 4 P. 903 (1884).

Actions on notes are triable in county where made payable. This section expressly provides that all cases, unless otherwise provided, shall be tried in the county of defendant's residence, unless service of summons is made upon defendant in the county where plaintiff resides, with an exception, among others, that actions upon notes or bills of exchange may be tried in the county where the same are made payable. Ashton v. Garretson, 37 Colo. 90, 85 P. 831 (1906).

This section applies to actions for divorce. The provisions of this section that in certain circumstances civil actions shall be tried in the county of the defendant's residence applies to actions for divorce. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902).

This rule governs venue in dissolution of marriage proceedings. Brownell v. District Court ex rel. County of Larimer, 670 P.2d 762 (Colo. 1983).

On the question of venue in divorce actions, this section is controlling, notwithstanding statutory provisions concerning divorce actions and kindred matters. People ex rel. Stanko v. Routt County Court, 110 Colo. 428, 135 P.2d 232 (1943).

Petitioner and respondent in dissolution of marriage proceeding are equivalent of plaintiff and defendant. For the purpose of the venue requirements in this rule, the petitioner and respondent in a dissolution of marriage proceeding are the equivalent of a plaintiff and defendant, respectively. Brownell v. District Court ex rel. County of Larimer, 670 P.2d 762 (Colo. 1983).

The divorce act must be read in connection with this and following sections. In view of the fact that the divorce act provides the rules of civil procedure shall apply, except as expressly modified by its own provisions, the mandate of the act with respect to where actions for divorce shall be brought must be read in connection with this and the following section. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902).

Residence of corporation is place where principal office is to be kept. The residence of a corporation is the place where, by the certificate of incorporation, its principal office is to be kept. Woods Gold Mining Co. v. Royston, 46 Colo. 191, 103 P. 291 (1909).

Thus, an action begun in the Mesa county of plaintiff's residence against a corporation resident of another county, summons in which is served in a third county, where the corporation carries on business, must, on proper application, be removed to the county in which the defendant has its residence. The fact that the corporation filed its certificate of incorporation in the county of its business, and failed to file one in the county where its office was to be kept, is immaterial. Woods Gold Mining Co. v. Royston, 46 Colo. 191, 103 P. 291 (1909).

A creditor of a corporation cannot take advantage of its failure to file the certificate of incorporation in the county where its principal office is to be kept, in order to prosecute an action against it in another county. Woods Gold Mining Co. v. Royston, 46 Colo. 191, 103 P. 291 (1909).

Action against foreign corporation. A corporation organized under the laws of New York was conducting business in Colorado, maintaining its principal office in the city of Denver. In an action instituted in another county, the process in which was served in Denver, it applied for a change of venue to the county of Denver, on the ground that its residence was in that county. Under this section the motion was properly denied, as the corporation was a resident of New York and a nonresident of Colorado within the meaning of this section. New York Life Ins. Co. v. Pike, 51 Colo. 238, 117 P. 899 (1911).

Undesignated action. An action for damnification brought by a mortgagor against an assuming grantee who failed to pay the mortgage debt, thus forcing the mortgagor to pay, is one of the undesignated actions under section (c), and a motion for change of venue to the county of defendant's residence was properly granted. Cave v. Belisle, 117 Colo. 180, 184 P.2d 869 (1947).

V. VENUE FOR INJUNCTION TO STAY PROCEEDINGS.

Annotator's note. Since section (d) of this rule is similar to § 162 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant case construction of that section has been included in the annotations to this rule.

This section does not specify where action must be brought. This section, even giving to it the most strict and limited construction permissible, simply specifies, like the provision upon places of trial, the county in which the action may or shall be tried, subject to change of the place of trial, and not where it must or shall be brought. If commenced in another county, it is not a jurisdictional or fatal defect. Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 P. 824 (1898).

Proceedings after complaint and order tried in county of judgment. By the terms of this section, the proceedings to enjoin must be had in the county where the judgment was rendered. The proceedings referred to could be only those subsequent to the mere commencement of the suit by the filing of a complaint and to the issuance of a temporary restraining order. Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 P. 824 (1898).

Privilege of conducting proceedings where judgment rendered may be waived. The district court has jurisdiction to entertain an application for writ of injunction to restrain the enforcement of an invalid judgment rendered in another county, and in the absence of an application for change of venue seasonably made the parties waive their privilege to have the proceedings conducted in the county where the judgment was rendered. Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 P. 824 (1898).

VI. MOTION TO CHANGE VENUE.

Annotator's note. Since section (e) of this rule is similar to § 25 et seq. of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Doctrine of forum non conveniens has only limited application in Colorado courts, and except in most unusual circumstances the choice of a Colorado forum by a resident plaintiff will not be disturbed. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. v. Lohn, 192 Colo. 200, 557 P.2d 373 (1976).

The doctrine of forum non conveniens has little place in Colorado courts. Kelce v. Touche Ross & Co., 192 Colo. 202, 557 P.2d 374 (1976).

Venue motions to be filed together. Section (e)(1), of this rule, when read together C.R.C.P. 12, requires that all venue motions, except those based on sections (c)(3), (f)(2), and (g) of this rule, must be filed together. Bd. of Land Comm'rs v. District Court, 191 Colo. 185, 551 P.2d 700 (1976).

Where both parties to a dissolution case reside in a county outside of the judicial district where the case is filed, a directive or rule of court could properly authorize that court on its own motion to change venue, unless for good cause shown by the parties, or either of them, venue should be retained by the court in which the case is filed. Walsmith v. Lilly, 194 Colo. 270, 571 P.2d 1107 (1977).

Right to change venue waived by failure to make motion to change at proper time. Kirby v. Union Pac. Ry., 51 Colo. 509, 119 P. 1042 (1911).

The right of a defendant to a change of a place of trial upon the ground of residence is a personal privilege which may be waived by not applying in apt time. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902); Burton v. Graham, 36 Colo. 199, 84 P. 978 (1906).

If, after a change of venue is granted, the resisting party elects to proceed to trial without further objection, he thereby waives any error in granting the change of venue. Smith v. Huber, 666 P.2d 1122 (Colo. App. 1983).

Change of venue not restricted by time of filing or consent of all parties. A discretionary change of venue under section (f)(2) is not restricted by the time of filing or by the necessity for the consent of all parties to the request. Tillery v. District Court, 692 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1984).

Where enlargement of time not obtained. By failing to file motions for change of venue within 20 days after service of the summons and complaint as required by this rule, then, by not having obtained enlargement of the time from the court, the right to file over objection is lost. Town of Grand Lake v. District Court, 180 Colo. 272, 504 P.2d 666 (1972).

VII. CAUSES OF CHANGE.

A. In General.

Annotator's note. Since setion (f) of this rule is similar to § 31 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

The duty of changing the place of trial is not devolved upon the court of its own motion. Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891).

Presumption is that suit is brought in proper county. It will be presumed that the county in which the suit was brought is the proper county for trial unless there should be a disclosure of something to the contrary; and the court commences the consideration of an application for a change of venue with the assumption of the existence of the necessary conditions requiring the retention of the case in that county, except insofar as the contrary may appear from the application. Adamson v. Bergen, 15 Colo. App. 396, 62 P. 629 (1900).

The change of venue is required to be made only "on good cause shown". These words plainly imply that a party considering himself aggrieved by the bringing of the action in a wrong county, or considering himself likely to be prejudiced by the trial thereof in the county where the action is pending, must apply to the court and show good cause therefor, in order to have the place of trial changed. Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891).

Inconvenience and expense not sufficient to change forum. Inconvenience and expense are inherent in all litigation and are insufficient to oust a resident plaintiff from his chosen forum. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. v. Lohn, 192 Colo. 200, 557 P.2d 373 (1976); Kelce v. Touche Ross & Co., 192 Colo. 202, 557 P.2d 374 (1976).

Burden of proof on motion to change venue is on party seeking change, but the party opposing must balance the showing made by the moving party. Cliff v. Gleason, 142 Colo. 500, 351 P.2d 394 (1960); Sampson v. District Court, 197 Colo. 158, 590 P.2d 958 (1979).

The burden of proof on a motion for change of venue is upon the party seeking the change. Ranger Ins. Co. v. District Court, 647 P.2d 1229 (Colo. 1982).

The substance, not the form, of the action must control in determining a motion for change of venue. Caldwell v. District Court, 128 Colo. 498, 266 P.2d 771 (1953); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1981).

Right to change of venue depends on conditions existing at the time of demand, and must be determined by conditions at the time the party claiming the right first appears in the action. Cliff v. Gleason, 142 Colo. 500, 351 P.2d 394 (1960).

Absent most unusual circumstances, choice of forum of resident plaintiff will not be disturbed. Kelce v. Touche Ross & Co., 192 Colo. 202, 557 P.2d 374 (1976).

Venue of joined claim should not be changed. Where the venue of one claim for relief is properly laid in the county in which it is brought, a court should not, except under extraordinary circumstances, change the venue of another claim properly joined with the first claim. Twin Lakes Reservoir & Canal Co. v. Bond, 156 Colo. 433, 399 P.2d 793 (1965).

Statute on place where trial must be brought is consistent with right of change. There is nothing in the statutory provisions concerning eminent domain proceedings inconsistent with the right of change of venue. The action must be brought in the county of the plaintiff municipality, but bringing an action and trying it are two different things. The statute as to place of trial means what it says, and its provisions are not jurisdictional. An action may be brought in a county where, if objection were made, it could not be tried. People ex rel. Bear Creek Dev. Corp. v. District Court, 78 Colo. 526, 242 P. 997 (1925).

The right to have the place of trial changed because the action is brought in an improper county is not jurisdictional. Kirby v. Union Pac. Ry., 51 Colo. 509, 119 P. 1042 (1911); Slinkard v. Jordan, 131 Colo. 144, 279 P.2d 1054 (1955).

Bringing an action in improper county is not a jurisdictional or fatal defect. If it were so regarded, a plea in abatement or to the jurisdiction of the court would be the proper remedy. Instead of this, this section expressly provides for a change of the place of trial. Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891).

The jurisdiction of courts of record is coextensive with the state, and where an action is brought in a county other than that in which it should be tried, the defendant's only remedy, if he objects to the venue, lies in an application to remove the case to the proper county. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896).

If an action for injunction under section (d) of this rule is commenced in another county from where it may be tried, it is not a jurisdictional or fatal defect. Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 P. 824 (1898).

The fact that an action is brought in a county other than the one in which the real property is situate does not affect the jurisdiction of the court to hear and determine the case unless the defendant moved to change the place of trial. Burton v. Graham, 36 Colo. 199, 84 P. 978 (1906).

The right is a mere personal privilege. Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891); Smith v. People, 2 Colo. App. 99, 29 P. 924 (1892); Pearse v. Bordeleau, 3 Colo. App. 351, 33 P. 140 (1893); Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 P. 824 (1898); Burton v. Graham, 36 Colo. 199, 84 P. 978 (1906); Kirby v. Union Pac. Ry., 51 Colo. 509, 119 P. 1042 (1911); Slinkard v. Jordan, 131 Colo. 144, 279 P.2d 1054 (1955).

The provision in section (c) that an action on a promissory note may be tried in the county where the same is made payable does not give a defendant sued elsewhere an absolute right to a change of venue, but, at best, only a privilege that may be waived. Reed v. First Nat'l Bank, 23 Colo. 380, 48 P. 507 (1897).

The right may be waived. Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891); Smith v. People, 2 Colo. App. 99, 29 P. 924 (1892); Reed v. First Nat'l Bank, 23 Colo. 380, 48 P. 507 (1897); Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 P. 824 (1898); People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902); Burton v. Graham, 36 Colo. 199, 84 P. 978 (1906); Kirby v. Union Pac. Ry., 51 Colo. 509, 119 P. 1042 (1911); Slinkard v. Jordan, 131 Colo. 144, 279 P.2d 1054 (1955).

Privilege waived by failure to appear. Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891).

Waiver through failure to apply for a change of venue to proper county. Forbes v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 23 Colo. 344, 47 P. 388 (1896).

The defendant entered a general appearance, indicating no intention whatever to exercise his right to have the place of trial changed, taking no steps to bring that matter to the attention of the court until 80 days thereafter, indicating submission of the case in all its phases to the court in which the action was brought. Hence, the defendant waived his right to a change of the place of trial. Burton v. Graham, 36 Colo. 199, 84 P. 978 (1906).

If the right to a change of venue is waived, it is not error for the trial court to refuse to change the place of trial. Burton v. Graham, 36 Colo. 199, 84 P. 978 (1906).

Right is not waived by answer and trial. Where a motion for change of venue filed by a defendant is denied, he may thereafter file an answer and proceed to trial without waiving the question of error based upon the denial of said motion, or the right, if any, to a change of venue. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. District Court, 126 Colo. 340, 249 P.2d 146 (1952).

Erroneous denial of motion may require reversal of judgment. The party who resists a motion for change of venue, to which his opponent is clearly entitled as a matter of right, does so at his peril. If the motion erroneously is denied and the moving party suffers adverse judgment, a reversal of the judgment with direction to change the venue would certainly follow. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. District Court, 126 Colo. 340, 249 P.2d 146 (1952); Denver & Rio Grande W. R. R. v. District Court, 141 Colo. 208, 347 P.2d 495 (1959).

Error in granting change of venue may be waived. Where plaintiffs, without objection, went to trial, they invested the court with full jurisdiction to proceed therein, waived the error in granting the change of venue, and cannot now be heard to urge that objection. Raymond v. Harrison, 27 Colo. App. 484, 150 P. 727 (1915).

Where a judge in vacation of his own motion ordered a cause transferred to the district court of another county, and the court to which the transfer was made had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and when the cause was called for trial the plaintiff appeared and consented to proceed with the trial, he waived objection to the order of the court transferring the case. Cheney v. Crandell, 28 Colo. 383, 65 P. 56 (1901).

A district court is without jurisdiction to transfer a cause involving a receivership while the case is pending in the supreme court. George Sparling Coal Co. v. Colo. Pulp & Paper Co., 88 Colo. 523, 299 P. 41 (1931).

Applied in Britto v. District Court, 176 Colo. 197, 489 P.2d 1304 (1971).

B. Sufficiency of Pleading.

A change of venue is not required under this section where no compelling reason has been shown to interfere with the discretion of the trial judge. City of Cripple Creek v. Johns, 177 Colo. 443, 494 P.2d 823 (1972).

Affidavits in support of motions for change of venue should state facts. Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925).

Application should negate every favorable hypothesis. An application to change the trial of a cause from one county to another should negate every hypothesis in favor of the county in which the action was commenced. Adamson v. Bergen, 15 Colo. App. 396, 62 P. 629 (1900).

Motion must negate allegation that contract was to be performed where action was brought. Where a complaint alleges that the contract upon which recovery is sought was to be performed in the county in which the action is brought, a motion to change the place of trial on the ground that defendant resides in another county and was served with summons there, and which fails to negate the allegation of the complaint that the contract was to be performed in the county where the action is brought is insufficient and is properly denied. Peabody v. Oleson, 15 Colo. App. 346, 62 P. 234 (1900); E. F. Gobatti Eng'r & Machinery Corp. v. Oliver

In an action for the price of apples alleged to have been sold and delivered in the county in which the action was brought, an application for change of place of trial on the ground of the residence of defendant in another county, which fails to negate the allegation that the apples were sold and delivered in the county in which suit was brought was insufficient and was properly denied. Adamson v. Bergen, 15 Colo. App. 396, 62 P. 629 (1900).

Where plaintiff met the defendant's affidavit in support of a motion to change venue to county of defendant's residence with an affidavit alleging that the note was by its terms payable in the county where the action was brought, which is a proper county under section (c), and these statements were not controverted, the application to change the place of trial to the county of defendant's residence was properly denied. Coulter v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 18 Colo. App. 444, 72 P. 602 (1903).

Or that all defendants reside in county where action is brought. In an action against two defendants, an application to change the venue to another county on the ground that one of the defendants resides in the county to which the change is sought is insufficient unless it also negates the residence of the other defendant in the county in which the action is brought. Adamson v. Bergen, 15 Colo. App. 396, 62 P. 629 (1900).

To sustain a motion for change of place of trial for actions brought under section (c) of this rule, it must appear that no defendants reside where the suit is brought, where the motion is made on the ground that some of the defendants reside in another county. People ex rel. Tripp v. Fremont County Court, 72 Colo. 395, 211 P. 102 (1922).

It need not negate all exceptions in section (c). Upon motion to change the place of trial of a cause on the ground that defendant resides and was served with summons in the county to which the change was sought, it is not necessary that the application should negate all the exceptions provided in section (c) whereby such change is not required, if the complaint affirmatively shows that the cause does not come within any of the exceptions. Smith v. Post Printing & Publishing Co., 17 Colo. App. 238, 68 P. 119 (1902).

Application consistent with assumed jurisdiction fails. Application for change will be denied if the supposition of the jurisdiction of the court in which an action is brought is consistent with the statements made in the application. People ex rel. Columbine Mercantile Co. v. District Court, 70 Colo. 540, 203 P. 268 (1921).

In an action against two defendants, an application to change the place of trial which alleged that one of the defendants resided in the county to which the change was sought, and that the other defendant was not within the state, was insufficient, as an allegation that one of the defendants was not within the state at the time the application was made did not negate the fact of his residence in the county in which the action was brought, but was entirely consistent with such residence. Adamson v. Bergen, 15 Colo. App. 396, 62 P. 629 (1900).

There was no error in denying a motion for change of venue on the ground that all proper defendants were nonresidents of the county, where from the allegations of the complaint it appeared that the one defendant who resided in the county where the action was commenced was alleged to be a party to the contract and was therefore a proper party to the suit. Newland v. Frost, 83 Colo. 207, 263 P. 715 (1928).

C. When County Is Improper.

Right to change place of trial is controlled by this section. The right to change the place of trial of an action against a county is controlled by this section, which necessarily requires the change of the place of trial to the county designated as the place of trial by statute. Forbes v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 23 Colo. 344, 47 P. 388 (1896).

Venue in improper county will be changed on motion. Where the action is not brought in the proper county, the venue will be changed to the county where the cause is triable on application of the defendant. Coulter v. Bank of Clear Creek County, 18 Colo. App. 444, 72 P. 602 (1903).

When an action is brought in a county other than that in which it should be tried, the defendant may avail himself of his right to change the venue to the proper county. Ashton v. Garretson, 37 Colo. 90, 85 P. 831 (1906).

Upon sufficient application, the duty to change venue is mandatory. While the action may be brought in any county, at the election of the plaintiff, upon sufficient application by the defendant, made within the proper time, to change the place of trial of the cause on the ground that the county designated in the complaint is not the proper county, the duty of making the change becomes mandatory upon the court. Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896).

Upon a proper showing that an action has been brought in a county other than that in which it should be tried, the duty of the court to grant the change is mandatory. Ashton v. Garretson, 37 Colo. 90, 85 P. 831 (1906).

The right of a defendant to a change of place of trial upon the ground of residence is one which, when the showing is in compliance with the rules, the court to which it is addressed must grant without discretion, unless it has been waived. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902).

Where it is clear from the face of the pleading that the substance of an action is that of an action affecting not only a substantial part of the property which finally became the subject of the action, but all of the property, and that that property was located in a certain county, it is mandatory upon the trial court to grant the motion for change of venue as provided in this rule. Caldwell v. District Court, 128 Colo. 498, 266 P.2d 771 (1953).

A proper application for a change of venue from an improper county, timely made, leaves the trial court no alternative but to grant such application. City & County of Denver v. Glendale Water & San. Dist., 152 Colo. 39, 380 P.2d 553 (1963); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1981).

The court's jurisdiction is divested except for the purpose of making the order of removal to the proper county. Denver & New Orleans Constr. Co. v. Stout, 8 Colo. 61, 5 P. 627 (1884); Fletcher v. Stowell, 17 Colo. 94, 28 P. 326 (1891); Pearse v. Bordeleau, 3 Colo. App. 351, 33 P. 140 (1893); Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896); Brewer v. Gordon, 27 Colo. 111, 59 P. 404 (1899); Ashton v. Garretson, 37 Colo. 90, 85 P. 831 (1906); Woods Gold Mining Co. v. Royston, 46 Colo. 191, 103 P. 291 (1909); People ex rel. Columbine Mercantile Co. v. District Court, 70 Colo. 540, 203 P. 268 (1921); Lamar Alfalfa Milling Co. v. Bishop, 80 Colo. 369, 250 P. 689 (1926); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1981).

When a party requests a change of venue upon a ground which entitles it to the change as a matter of right, the trial court loses all jurisdiction except to order the change. Ranger Ins. Co. v. District Court, 647 P.2d 1229 (Colo. 1982).

If an action involving real estate is brought in the wrong county, the court cannot retain jurisdiction after motion in apt time by the defendant to change the place of trial to the county in which it ought to have been commenced. Smith v. People, 2 Colo. App. 99, 29 P. 924 (1892).

Where an application for a change of place of trial is made by a defendant based upon a ground which entitles him to the change as a matter of right, the court is ousted of jurisdiction to proceed further with the cause other than to enter the order of removal. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902).

When an application, sufficient in form, uncontradicted, and supported by allegations in the plaintiff's complaint itself, is made for a change of place of trial, the court has jurisdiction of the cause only for purpose of removal to the proper county. Cliff v. Gleason, 142 Colo. 500, 351 P.2d 394 (1960).

The court's retention of the case after motion for change constitutes reversible error. Byram v. Piggot, 38 Colo. 70, 89 P. 809 (1906).

All subsequent proceedings therein are void. Brewer v. Gordon, 27 Colo. 111, 59 P. 404 (1899); Woodworth v. Henderson, 28 Colo. 381, 65 P. 25 (1901); Cliff v. Gleason, 142 Colo. 500, 351 P.2d 394 (1960).

Further proceedings in a trial court after an erroneous denial of a proper motion for change of venue are a nullity and void. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1017 (Colo. 1981).

The county court having lost jurisdiction of the cause by reason of a proper application for a change of place of trial, the authority of the district court, when the cause came to it by appeal, extended no further upon the resubmission of the motion than to order a change of venue to the proper county. Failing to do that, all of its acts in entertaining and determining motions and rendering final judgment are absolutely void. Pearse v. Bordeleau, 3 Colo. App. 351, 33 P. 140 (1893).

Prohibition lies to prevent court from proceeding further. Where a defendant in a divorce suit made application for a change of place of trial to the county of his residence under circumstances which entitled him to the change as a matter of right, and the application was denied, the supreme court will issue a writ of prohibition to prevent the court denying the change from proceeding further in the cause and directing that all proceedings had in excess of jurisdiction be quashed and that an order be entered removing the cause to the proper county, notwithstanding the fact that the erroneous action of the court in denying the change of venue was reviewable on appeal or writ of error. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902).

In an action in one county by a firm of architects against a school district of a second county for services rendered in the building of a school house, the contract not specifying the place of performance or payment, a motion for a change of venue having been denied by the district court, prohibition was granted. People ex rel. Bd. of Dirs. of Sch. Dist. No. 1 v. District Court, 66 Colo. 330, 182 P. 7 (1919).

In an action on contract where no place of performance is specified, it appearing that defendant was entitled to have the case tried in the county of his residence, prohibition is allowed against trial in another county. People ex rel. Burton v. District Court, 74 Colo. 121, 218 P. 1047 (1923).

Where the venue is proper in either of two counties, then a change of venue cannot properly be granted from either unless some other provision requiring the change arises. City of Cripple Creek v. Johns, 177 Colo. 443, 494 P.2d 823 (1972).

Where an action on an accident insurance policy might be commenced under section (c) either in the county of the defendant's residence, when service is had there, or in the county where the contract was to be performed, either county was the proper one, and from neither can a change of venue be properly granted. Progressive Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mihoover, 87 Colo. 64, 284 P. 1025 (1930).

In an action for a tort, the county where the defendant resides, and the county where the plaintiff resides and the defendant is served, and the county where the tort was committed, are equally proper counties for trial; and if the action is commenced in any one of those counties, the place of trial cannot be changed on the ground that the county designated is not the proper county. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896); Carlson v. Rensink, 65 Colo. 11, 173 P. 542 (1918).

The provision in section (c) that suit may be brought on a contract where it is to be performed does not give the defendant, if served with summons elsewhere, an absolute right to a change of venue to the county in which it is to be performed; for, notwithstanding this provision, an action on such contract may be tried in the county in which the defendant resides at the commencement of the action, or in the county where the plaintiff resides when service is made on the defendant in such county. Bales v. Cannon, 42 Colo. 275, 94 P. 21 (1908).

Although proper for the plaintiff to bring the action in the county of defendant's residence, he was not obliged to do so. He had a right to bring it in the county where the contract was to be performed under section (c) of this rule, and having done so, there was no error in denying the motion for a change of venue. Gould v. Mathes, 55 Colo. 384, 135 P. 780 (1913).

Under section (c) of this rule, in an action for the price of goods sold, it is the privilege of the plaintiff to designate the county of his residence as the place of trial. An application for a change of venue, in such case, solely upon the ground that such county is not the proper county, should be denied. Raymond v. Harrison, 27 Colo. App. 484, 150 P. 727 (1915).

Where the plaintiffs claimed under a decree adjudicating water rights first entered in one county, and the defendants under a decree entered in a second county, the subject matter of the action was situated in both counties, both counties were proper for venue under section (a) of this rule, and the defendant's petition for change of the place of trial was properly denied. Field v. Kincaid, 67 Colo. 20, 184 P. 832 (1919).

Refusal to order change was error. Where an action involving the title to real estate was brought in a different county from the one in which the land was located, it was reversible error to refuse to change the place of trial to the county where the land was located, upon motion seasonably made by defendant. Campbell v. Equitable Sec. Co., 12 Colo. App. 544, 56 P. 88 (1899).

When a defendant files a motion for a change of venue on the grounds that neither the plaintiff nor the Colorado defendants reside in the county in which the action was filed and that the tort underlying the action did not occur there, it was error not to grant the defendant's motion. Denver Air Center v. District Court, 839 P.2d 1182 (Colo. 1992).

Proper to refuse change of venue. In an action by a lessee of a mine against his lessors for damage for an alleged conversion of machinery and appliances placed by the lessee for the purpose of working the mine, where the complaint charged the wrongful conversion by defendants of personal property belonging to plaintiff, the venue will not be changed to the county in which the mine is located on the ground that it involved an interest in real estate, since if it should be determined that the subject matter of the action is real estate, no recovery could be had under the complaint. Updegraff v. Lesem, 15 Colo. App. 297, 62 P. 342 (1900).

D. When Convenience and Justice Are Promoted.

Section (f)(2) is directed to a change of venue which contemplates that venue is properly placed in the court in which the motion is filed. Brownell v. District Court ex rel. County of Larimer, 670 P.2d 762 (Colo. 1983).

Change for convenience or justice is discretionary. A motion to change the place of trial, on grounds of convenience or justice, is addressed to the sound discretion of the court. De Wein v. Osborn, 12 Colo. 407, 21 P. 189 (1888); Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896); Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925); Lamar Alfalfa Milling Co. v. Bishop, 80 Colo. 369, 250 P. 689 (1926).

A motion to change venue based on the convenience of the parties lies in the sound discretion of the trial court. Bd. of Land Comm'rs v. District Court, 191 Colo. 185, 551 P.2d 700 (1976).

A motion for change of venue on the ground of convenience of witnesses is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, whose decision will be accepted as final on review unless an abuse of discretion is apparent. Evans v. District Court, 194 Colo. 299, 572 P.2d 811 (1977); Sampson v. District Court, 197 Colo. 158, 590 P.2d 958 (1979); In re Agner, 659 P.2d 53 (Colo. App. 1982); Weston v. Mincomp Corp., 698 P.2d 274 (Colo. App. 1985).

An application for a change of venue in a will contest, for the convenience of witnesses, is within the discretion of the trial court. Miller v. Weston, 25 Colo. App. 231, 138 P. 424 (1914), aff'd, 67 Colo. 534, 189 P. 610 (1920).

A motion for change of venue for the convenience of the witnesses in a divorce proceeding is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court. Bacher v. District Court, 186 Colo. 314, 527 P.2d 56 (1974).

Burden of proof on motion to change venue for convenience. While the movant, under section (f), must show, through affidavit or evidence, the identity of the witnesses, the nature, materiality and admissibility of their testimony, and how the witnesses would be better accommodated by the requested change in venue, the party opposing the change must at least balance the showing made by the moving party; otherwise, the motion should be granted. State Dept. of Highways, v. District Court, 635 P.2d 889 (Colo. 1981).

The decision of the court on the question will be accepted upon review as final. De Wein v. Osborn, 12 Colo. 407, 21 P. 189 (1888); Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896); Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925); Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Scott, 89 Colo. 99, 299 P. 1051 (1931); Keohane v. Wilkerson, 859 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd, 882 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1994).

Unless an abuse of discretion is apparent. De Wein v. Osborn, 12 Colo. 407, 21 P. 189 (1888); Denver & R. G. R. v. Cahill, 8 Colo. App. 158, 45 P. 285 (1896); Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925); Great Am. Ins. Co. v. Scott, 89 Colo. 99, 299 P. 1051 (1931); Keohane v. Wilkerson, 859 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd, 882 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1994). The determination of the trial court will not be disturbed if no abuse of the discretion appears. Miller v. Weston, 25 Colo. App. 231, 138 P. 424 (1914), aff'd, 67 Colo. 534, 189 P. 610 (1920).

It is unlike the cases where the ground alleged is one of absolute right. Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925).

The filing of this motion does not deprive the court of jurisdiction except to order the change. Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925).

Section (f)(2) requires showing of identity, testimony, and accommodation. When a motion for a change of venue is made under section (f)(2), the movant must show, through affidavit or evidence, the identity of the witnesses, the nature, materiality and admissibility of their testimony, and how the witnesses would be better accommodated by the requested change in venue. Sampson v. District Court, 197 Colo. 158, 590 P.2d 958 (1979); Tillery v. District Court, 692 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1984).

The court must of necessity rely largely on the good faith of the affidavits or other evidence of what the testimony at the trial will be. Enyart v. Orr, 78 Colo. 6, 238 P. 29 (1925).

Application properly denied. There was no abuse of discretion or error in denying the application for a change of venue demanded upon the ground of the convenience of witnesses where it appeared from the affidavits filed that the expense and inconvenience to plaintiff occasioned by the change and consequent delay would have been great, and where it appeared also that no sufficient excuse was given for not interposing the motion at an earlier moment. Bean v. Gregg, 7 Colo. 499, 4 P. 903 (1884).

The allegation that the convenience of witnesses, and the ends of justice, would be subserved by the change of venue was not supported where the defendant in his affidavit named 11 witnesses who were stated to be able to prove that the plaintiff fairly lost the race and wager on which he put up the money in the complaint mentioned, which matter was not and could not become an issue in the case, and evidence of it, if offered, would not have been admissible. Corson v. Neatheny, 9 Colo. 212, 11 P. 82 (1886).

Retention of court file by original court. In a case in which the change of venue is discretionary with the original court, the original court should retain the court file for ten days to allow for reconsideration of the order changing venue, before forwarding the file to the receiving court. After ten days, the original court loses jurisdiction to reconsider its order changing venue. Therefore, a motion for the original court to reconsider or vacate its initial discretionary order must be filed during the ten days before the original court forwards the case file to the receiving court. Tillery v. District Court, 692 P.2d 1079 (Colo. 1984).

The existence of prejudice justifying a change of venue is a question of fact within the discretion of the trial court. The movant bears the burden of establishing such prejudice by affidavit or evidence. Keohane v. Wilkerson, 859 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd, 882 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1994).

Although all parties did not stipulate to the change of venue, the facts stipulated to by a majority of the defendants provided sufficient good cause for change. Moreover, defendants did not allege prejudice to their substantial rights, so procedural flaws, if any, would constitute harmless error. Keohane v. Wilkerson, 859 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1993), aff'd, 882 P.2d 1293 (Colo. 1994).

VIII. CHANGE FROM COUNTY.

Annotator's note. Since section (g) of this rule, is similar to §§ 31 through 33 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Where a jury trial is granted, the right to a fair and impartial jury is a constitutional right which can never be abrogated. Brisbin v. Schauer, 176 Colo. 550, 492 P.2d 835 (1971).

If a community is prejudiced against a citizen, or if other circumstances are likely to deny him a fair and impartial jury trial, then a change of venue must be granted. Brisbin v. Schauer, 176 Colo. 550, 492 P.2d 835 (1971).

The burden of establishing that undue prejudice in the community exists is on the party seeking the change. Powell v. City of Ouray, 32 Colo. App. 44, 507 P.2d 1101 (1973).

Whether community prejudice against a party exists is a question of fact that may be developed at "voir dire". Powell v. City of Ouray, 32 Colo. App. 44, 507 P.2d 1101 (1973).

Feeling of inhabitants immaterial where trial is by court. The fact that the issues between defendants and the landowners are of such magnitude that strong local feeling and bitter prejudices will be engendered is of no consequence, the cause being a chancery cause, triable to the court. If the trial judge should imbibe any of the local feeling, a change of venue could be granted, or the judge of another district called in. People ex rel. Walpert v. Rogers, 12 Colo. 278, 20 P. 702 (1888).

Petition should set out facts. In a petition for change of venue, in respect to the prejudice of inhabitants of the county, sufficient facts, beyond the bare allegation of prejudice, should be set out by the petitioner, from which the court may be able to judge of the probable truth or falsity of the averments. De Walt v. Hartzell, 7 Colo. 601, 4 P. 1201 (1884).

Denial of motion was not abuse of discretion. Where an application for a change of venue on the ground of prejudice of the inhabitants of the county was supported by the affidavits of the applicant and six residents of the county, and counter affidavits were filed by 10 citizens of the county who stated that they had never heard of the controversy between the parties and denied that the inhabitants of the county were prejudiced, it was not an abuse of discretion of the trial court to deny the application. Doll v. Stewart, 30 Colo. 320, 70 P. 326 (1902).

Denial of motion for change of venue on the ground of prejudice of the inhabitants was not prejudicial error. Western Wood Prods. v. Tittle, 79 Colo. 473, 246 P. 791 (1926).

This rule presupposes that the action is pending in the county where venue for trial is properly laid. Evans v. District Court, 194 Colo. 299, 572 P.2d 811 (1977).

It is for the trial court to consider the facts and grant or deny the motion for change of venue. Powell v. City of Ouray, 32 Colo. App. 44, 507 P.2d 1101 (1973).

Where a motion for change of venue is not supported by an affidavit as required, it is properly denied as not complying with this rule. Powell v. City of Ouray, 32 Colo. App. 44, 507 P.2d 1101 (1973).

Section is mandatory only when party brings case within provisions. This section providing for a change of venue where the inhabitants of the county wherein the action is pending are prejudiced against the applicant is only mandatory upon the court where the party applying has brought himself within its provisions. Roberts v. People, 9 Colo. 458, 13 P. 630 (1886).

This is true although no counter affidavits are filed. Daugherty v. People, 78 Colo. 43, 239 P. 14 (1925).

Motion directed to discretion of court. The granting or refusing a motion for change of venue on the ground of prejudice of the inhabitants is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Doll v. Stewart, 30 Colo. 320, 70 P. 326 (1902); Fitzhugh v. Nicholas, 20 Colo. App. 234, 77 P. 1092 (1904); Nordloh v. Packard, 45 Colo. 515, 101 P. 787 (1909).

Ruling is reviewable for manifest abuse of discretion. Unless there is a manifest abuse of such discretionary power, the action of the trial court in refusing such application is not reviewable. Power v. People, 17 Colo. 178, 28 P. 1121 (1892); Michael v. Mills, 22 Colo. 439, 45 P. 429 (1896); Doll v. Stewart, 30 Colo. 320, 70 P. 326 (1902); Powell v. City of Ouray, 32 Colo. App. 44, 507 P.2d 1101 (1973).

Matters not per se contemptuous may be set forth in a petition for a change of venue without subjecting the petitioner to punishment for contempt. Mullin v. People, 15 Colo. 437, 24 P. 880 (1890).

IX. TRANSFERS WHERE CONCURRENT JURISDICTION.

Where a cause of which the district court would have had original jurisdiction is brought to it by appeal from the county court, and the parties proceed to trial without objection predicated upon the absence of jurisdiction in the county court, all defects in the jurisdiction of the county court are waived. Brown's Estate v. Stair, 25 Colo. App. 140, 136 P. 1003 (1913).

Transferor court can still accept notices and filings. Since after the change of venue order in the case of filing of an answer or of a notice to dismiss the power of the court to act is not invoked, the clerk of the transferor court can accept notices and filings. Alexander v. Morrison-Knudsen Co., 166 Colo. 118, 444 P.2d 397 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1063, 89 S. Ct. 715, 21 L. Ed. 2d 706 (1969).

X. PLACE CHANGED IF ALL PARTIES AGREE.

A subsequent intervenor must abide with a change of venue agreed upon by original parties to an action. North Kiowa-Bijou Mgt. Dist. v. Ground Water Comm'n, 180 Colo. 314, 505 P.2d 377 (1973).

Location of default hearing proper. An action filed in the county having proper venue, where the defendant was in default, could be heard in an adjoining county for the convenience of the court and of counsel under the provisions of section (i), and the default judgment entered subsequent to this hearing was neither irregular, erroneous, nor void. Orebaugh v. Diskocil, 145 Colo. 484, 359 P.2d 671 (1961).

XI. PARTIES MUST AGREE ON CHANGE.

Consent is not a mere acquiescence; it is not a vacant or neutral attitude, it is affirmative in its nature. Kirchhof v. Sheets, 118 Colo. 244, 194 P.2d 320 (1948).

Statement that venue is immaterial does not constitute consent to change. A motion for change of venue is properly overruled when made by one defendant, when another defendant states that venue is immaterial, since this statement does not constitute consent to the codefendant's motion. Kirchhof v. Sheets, 118 Colo. 244, 194 P.2d 320 (1948).

Action by two of five defendants in filing answers to the complaint clearly demonstrated their acquiescence in the choice of venue by petitioner and such action foreclosed any favorable consideration of the request by the remaining defendants for a change of venue. Howard v. District Court, 678 P.2d 1020 (Colo. 1984).

XII. ONLY ONE CHANGE; NO WAIVER.

This section has no application in an action for divorce. People ex rel. Stanko v. Routt County Court, 110 Colo. 428, 135 P.2d 232 (1943).

Change based on error of court does not violate section. There was no violation of section (k) of this rule, which allows only one change of venue on a particular ground, where further change of venue was ordered based on error of court. Liber v. Flor, 160 Colo. 7, 415 P.2d 332 (1966).

What is considered "apt time" must be determined by the circumstances of each particular case in which the question arises. It would be impossible to formulate a rule which would serve as a guide in all cases. People ex rel. Lackey v. District Court, 30 Colo. 123, 69 P. 597 (1902); Burton v. Graham, 36 Colo. 199, 84 P. 978 (1906).

Application for the change of the venue was not in apt time. Miller v. Weston, 25 Colo. App. 231, 138 P. 424 (1914), aff'd, 67 Colo. 534, 189 P. 610 (1920).

CHAPTER 12

ELECTIONS

Rule 100. Contested Elections

(a) Statement of Contest; Where Filed. Any qualified elector wishing to contest the election of any person to the office of presidential elector, supreme court justice, court of appeals judge, district, or county judge, shall within 35 days after the canvass of the secretary of state, in case of a presidential elector, supreme court justice, court of appeals judge, or district judge, file in the office of the secretary of state a written statement of his intention to contest; and where the contest is for the office of county judge, such statement shall be filed in the office of the county clerk of the proper county within 35 days after the canvass by the county board of canvassers, which statement shall set forth: (1) The name of the contestor; (2) the name of the contestee; (3) the office; (4) the time of the election; (5) the particular cause of contest. The statement shall be verified by the affidavit of the contesting party.

(b) Trial. The contestor, or some one in behalf of the person for whose benefit the contest is made, shall, within 35 days after the filing of the statement of contest, file a complaint in the office of the clerk of the supreme court, if the contest relates to a presidential elector or supreme court justice, or in the office of the clerk of the court of appeals, if the contest relates to a court of appeals judge, or in the office of the clerk of the district court in the proper county, if the contest relates to a district or county judge. Upon the filing of such complaint the clerk shall issue summons. When the case is at issue, the court shall hear and determine the same in a summary manner, without the intervention of a jury.

Source: Entire rule amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b).

Editor's note: Judges of courts of record, except Denver county judges, are appointed to office pursuant to section 20 of article VI and are elected pursuant to section 25 of article VI of the state constitution.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since section (b) of this rule supplanted rule 87 of the former Supreme Court Rules, cases construing that rule have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Election contests, for whatever office, necessarily are and must be summary. Gunson v. Baldauf, 88 Colo. 436, 297 P. 516 (1931).

The method of procedure to be followed depends upon the office sought to be contested. Gunson v. Baldauf, 88 Colo. 436, 297 P. 516 (1931).

The sufficiency of a complaint may be questioned by motion. Gunson v. Baldauf, 88 Colo. 436, 297 P. 516 (1931).

The incorporation of the notice of contest in contestor's petition, without further allegation of facts, does not constitute a statement of the grounds of contest as required by this rule and by logical pleading. Sparks v. Eldred, 78 Colo. 55, 239 P. 730 (1925).

SEIZURE OF PERSON OR PROPERTY

Rule 101. Arrest and Exemplary Damages

Repealed May 29, 1986, effective January 1, 1987.

Rule 102. Attachments

(a) Before Judgment. Any party, at the time of filing a claim, in an action on contract, express or implied, or in an action to recover damages for tort committed against the person or property of a resident of this state, or at any time after the filing but before judgment, may have nonexempt property of the party against whom the claim is asserted (hereinafter defendant), attached by an ex parte order of court in the manner and on the grounds prescribed in this Rule, unless the defendant shall give good and sufficient security as required by section (f) of this Rule. No ex parte attachments before judgment shall be permitted other than those specified in this Rule.

(b) Affidavit. No writ of attachment shall issue unless the party asserting the claim (hereinafter plaintiff), his agent or attorney, or some credible person for him shall file in the court in which the action is brought an affidavit setting forth that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff, or that the defendant is liable in damages to the plaintiff for a tort committed against the person or property of a resident of this state, stating the nature and amount of such indebtedness or claim for damages and setting forth facts showing one or more of the causes of attachment of section (c) of this Rule.

(c) Causes. No writ of attachment shall issue unless it be shown by affidavit or testimony in specific factual detail, within the personal knowledge of an affiant or witness, that there is a reasonable probability that any of the following causes exist:

(1) The defendant is a foreign corporation without a certificate of authority to do business in this state.

(2) The defendant has for more than four months been absent from the state, or the whereabouts of the defendant are unknown, or the defendant is a nonresident of this state, and all reasonable efforts to obtain in personam jurisdiction over the defendant have failed. Plaintiff must show what efforts have been made to obtain jurisdiction over the defendant.

(3) The defendant conceals himself or stands in defiance of an officer, so that process of law cannot be served upon him.

(4) The defendant is presently about to remove his property or effects, or a material part thereof, from this state with intent to defraud, delay, or hinder one or more of his creditors, or to render process of execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(5) The defendant has fraudulently conveyed, transferred, or assigned his property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of his creditors, or to render process of execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(6) The defendant has fraudulently concealed, removed, or disposed of his property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of his creditors, or to render process of execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(7) The defendant is presently about to fraudulently convey, transfer, or assign his property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of his creditors, or to render process of execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(8) The defendant is presently about to fraudulently conceal, remove, or dispose of his property or effects, or a material part thereof, so as to hinder or delay one or more of his creditors, or to render process of execution unavailing if judgment is obtained.

(9) The defendant has departed or is presently about to depart from this state, with the intention of having his property or effects, or a material part thereof, removed from the state.

(d) Plaintiff to Give Bond. Before the issuance of a writ of attachment the plaintiff shall furnish a bond that complies with the requirements of C.R.C.P. 121, § 1-23, in an amount set by the court in its discretion, not exceeding double the amount claimed, to the effect that if the defendant recover judgment, or if the court shall finally decide that the plaintiff was not entitled to an attachment, the plaintiff will pay all costs that may be awarded to the defendant, and all damages defendant may sustain by reason of the wrongful suing out of the attachment. The defendant may require the sureties to satisfy the court that each, for himself, is worth the amount for which he has become surety over and above his just debts and liabilities, in property located in this state and not by law exempt from execution.

(e) Court Issues Writ of Attachment. After the affidavit and bond are filed as aforesaid and testimony had as the court may require, the court may issue a writ of attachment, directed to the sheriff of a specified county, commanding him to attach the lands, tenements, goods, chattels, rights, credits, moneys, and effects of said defendant, of every kind, or so much thereof as will be sufficient to satisfy the claim sworn to, regardless of whose hands or possession in which the same may be found.

(f) Contents of Writ and Notice. The writ shall direct the sheriff to serve a copy of the writ on the defendant if found in the county, and to attach and keep safely all the property of the defendant within the county, not exempt from execution, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, the amount of which shall be stated in conformity with the affidavit. The writ shall also inform the defendant of his right to traverse and to have a hearing to contest the attachment. If the defendant's property is or may be located in more than one county, additional or alias writs may be issued contemporaneously. If the defendant deposit the amount of money claimed by the plaintiff or give and furnish security by an undertaking, approved by the sheriff, of a corporate surety company or of at least two sureties in an amount sufficient to satisfy such claim, the sheriff shall take such money or undertaking in lieu of the property. Alias writs may issue at any time to the sheriffs of different counties.

(g) Service; How Made. The writ of attachment shall be served in like manner and under the same conditions as are provided in these rules for the service of process. Service shall be deemed completed upon the expiration of the same period as is provided for service of process.

(h) Execution of Writ. The sheriff to whom the writ is directed and delivered shall execute the same without delay as follows:

(1) Real property standing upon the records of the county in the name of the defendant shall be attached by filing a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached, with the recorder of the county.

(2) Real property, or any interest therein belonging to the defendant, and held by any person, or standing upon the records of the county in the name of any other person but belonging to the defendant, shall be attached by leaving with such person or his agent, if either be found in the county, a copy of the writ and a notice that such real property (giving a description thereof), and any interest therein belonging to the defendant, are attached pursuant to such writ, and filing a copy of such writ and notice with the recorder of the county.

(3) Personal property shall be attached by taking it into custody.

(i) Return of Writ. The sheriff shall return the writ of attachment within 21 days after its receipt, with a certificate of his proceedings endorsed thereon, or attached thereto, making a full inventory of the property attached as a part of his return upon the writ.

(j) Execution of Writ on Sunday or Legal Holiday. If an affidavit or testimony is received stating that it is necessary to execute the writ of attachment on Sunday or on a legal holiday, to secure property sufficient to satisfy the judgment to be obtained, and if the court is so satisfied, the court shall endorse on the writ an order to the officer directing the writ to be executed on such day.

(k) No Final Judgment Until 35 Days After Levy.

(1) Creditors. No final judgment shall be rendered in a cause wherein an attachment writ has been issued and a levy made thereunder, until the expiration of 35 days after such levy has been made; and any creditor of the defendant making and filing within said

35-day period an affidavit and undertaking, as hereinbefore required of the plaintiff, together with his complaint setting forth his claim against the defendant, shall be made a party plaintiff and have like remedies against the defendant to secure his claim, as the law gives to the original plaintiff.

(2) Judgment Creditors. Any other creditor whose claim has been reduced to judgment in this state may upon motion filed within said 35 days be made a party and have like remedies against the attached property. Such judgment creditor shall not be required to make or file an affidavit, undertaking or complaint, or have summons issue, provided, that any such judgment creditor may be required to prove to the satisfaction of the court that his judgment is bona fide and not in fraud of the rights of other creditors.

(l) Dismissal by One Creditor Does Not Affect Others. After any additional creditor has been made a party to the action, as hereinbefore provided, a dismissal by the first or any subsequent attaching creditor of his cause of action, or proceedings in attachment, shall not operate as a dismissal of the attachment proceedings as to any other attaching creditor; but the remaining creditors may proceed to final judgment therein the same as though no such dismissal had been made.

(m) Final Judgment Prorated; When Creditors Preferred. The final judgment in said action shall be a several judgment, wherein each creditor named as plaintiff shall have and recover of the defendant the amount of his claim or demand, as found by the court to be due, together with his costs; and the money realized from the attachment proceedings, after paying all costs taxed in the attachment action, shall be paid to the participating creditors in proportion to the amounts of their several judgments; and any surplus moneys, if any, shall be paid to the defendant by order of the court, upon proof thereof. Provided, when the property is attached while the defendant is removing the same or after the same has been removed from the county, and the same is overtaken and returned, or while same is secreted by the defendant, or put out of his hands, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, the court may allow the creditor or creditors through whose diligence the same shall have been secured a priority over other attachments or judgment creditors.

(n) Traverse of Affidavit. (1) The defendant may, at any time before trial, by affidavit, traverse and put in issue the matters alleged in the affidavit, testimony, or other evidence upon which the attachment is based and if the plaintiff shall establish the reasonable probability that any one of the causes alleged in the affidavit exists, said attachment shall be sustained, otherwise the same shall be dissolved. A hearing on the defendant's traverse shall be held within 7 days from the filing of the traverse and upon no less than two business days' notice to the plaintiff. If the debt for which the action is brought is not due and for that reason the attachment is not sustained, the action shall be dismissed; but if the debt is due, but the attachment nevertheless is not sustained, the action may proceed to judgment after the attachment is dissolved, as in other actions where no attachment is issued.

(2) A plaintiff who fails to prevail at the hearing provided by this section is liable to the defendant for any damages sustained as a result of the issuance of process, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees. A claim for damages under this subsection may be brought as part of the existing action, and the defendant shall be permitted to amend his answer and any counterclaim for this purpose.

(o) Amendment of Affidavit. If at the hearing of issues formed by the traverse it shall appear that the evidence introduced does not prove the cause or causes alleged in the affidavits, but the evidence does tend to prove another cause of attachment in existence at the time of the issuance of the writ, then on motion the affidavits may be amended to conform to proof the same as pleadings are allowed to be amended in cases of variance.

(p) Intervention; Damages. Any third person claiming any of the property attached, or any lien thereon or interest therein, may intervene under the provisions of Rule 24, and in case of a judgment in his favor may also recover such damages as he may have suffered by reason of the attachment of the property.

(q) Perishable Property May Be Sold. Where property taken by writ of execution or attachment, or seized under order of court, is in danger of serious and immediate decay or waste, or likely to depreciate rapidly in value pending the determination of the issues, or, where the keeping of it will be attended with great expense, any party to the action may apply to the court, upon due notice, for a sale thereof, and, thereupon the court may, in its discretion, order the property sold in the manner provided for in said order and the proceeds of said sale shall, thereupon, be deposited with the clerk to abide the further order of the court.

(r) Application of Proceeds; Satisfaction of Judgment. If judgment is recovered by the plaintiff or any intervenor, on order of court, all funds previously deposited with the clerk, or in the hands of the sheriff, shall be first applied thereto. If any balance remain due, execution shall issue and be delivered to the sheriff who shall sell so much of the attached property as may be sufficient to satisfy the judgment. Sales shall be conducted as in cases of sales on execution. If there is a personal judgment and after such sale the same is not satisfied in full, the sheriff shall thereupon collect the balance as upon an execution in other cases.

(s) Balance Due; Surplus. Whenever the judgment shall have been paid, the sheriff, upon demand, shall deliver over to the defendant the attached property remaining in his hands, and any proceeds of the property attached unapplied on the judgment.

(t) Procedure When Judgment is for Defendant. If the defendant recover judgment against the plaintiff, any undertaking received in the action, all the proceeds of sales, all money collected by the sheriff, and all the property attached remaining in the sheriff's hands shall be delivered to the defendant, the writ of attachment shall be discharged, and the property released therefrom.

(u) Defendant May Release Property; Bond. The defendant may at any time before judgment have released to him any money in the hands of the clerk or any property in the hands of the sheriff, by virtue of any writ of attachment, by executing the undertaking provided in section (v) of this Rule. All the proceeds of sales, all money collected by the sheriff, and all the property attached remaining in the sheriff's hands shall thereupon be released from the attachment and delivered to the defendant upon the delivery and approval of the undertaking.

(v) Conditions of Bond; Liability of Sheriff. Before releasing the attached property to the defendant, the sheriff shall require and approve an undertaking executed by the defendant to the plaintiff either of a corporate surety company or with at least two sureties in such sum as may be fixed by the sheriff in not less than the value of the property, to the effect that in case the plaintiff recover judgment in the action, and the attachment is not dissolved, defendant will, on demand, redeliver such attached property so released to the proper officer, to be applied to the payment of the judgment, and that in default thereof the defendant and sureties will pay to the plaintiff the full value of the property so released. If a sheriff shall release any property held by him under any writ of attachment without taking a sufficient bond, he and his sureties shall be liable to the plaintiff for the damages sustained thereby.

(w) Application to Discharge Attachment. The defendant may also, at any time before trial, move that the attachment be discharged, on the ground that the writ was improperly issued, for any reason appearing upon the face of the papers and proceedings in the action. If on such application it shall satisfactorily appear that the writ of attachment was improperly issued, it shall be discharged.

(x) New Bond; When Ordered; Failure to Furnish. If at any time where an attachment has been issued it shall appear to the court that the undertaking is insufficient, the court shall order another undertaking, and if the plaintiff fails to comply with such order within 21 days after the same shall be made, all or any writs of attachment issued therein shall be quashed. The additional undertaking shall be executed in the same manner as the original, and the sureties therein shall be jointly and severally liable with those in the original undertaking.

(y) New Trial; Appeal and Writs of Certiorari. Motions for new trial may be made in the same time and manner, and shall be allowed in attachment proceedings, as in other actions. Appeals from the county court to the district court and writs of certiorari may be taken and prosecuted from any final judgment or order in such proceedings as in other civil cases. Any order by which an attachment is released or sustained is a final judgment.

Constitutionality. Attachment procedure specified in this rule comports with the requirements of the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. Bernhardt v. Commodity Option Co., 187 Colo. 89, 528 P.2d 919 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1004, 95 S. Ct. 2406, 44 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1975).

1975 modified rule not retroactive. In view of the substantial modifications made to this rule by its repeal and reenactment and in view of the fact that the supreme court has not indicated otherwise, the new rule has no retroactive effect. Inwood Indus., Inc. v. Priestley, 37 Colo. App. 78, 545 P.2d 732 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 543, 560 P.2d 822 (1976).

But the supreme court neither approved nor disapproved of this holding and, therefore, the holding of the court of appeals has no precedential effect. Inwood Indus., Inc. v. Priestley, 191 Colo. 543, 560 P.2d 822 (1976).

Remedy of attachment was unknown at common law and existed only by reason of statute or rules of procedure enacted pursuant to statutory authority. Rocky Mt. Oil Co. v. Central Nat'l Bank, 29 Colo. 129, 67 P. 153 (1901);

Worcester v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 172 Colo. 352, 473 P.2d 711 (1970).

It is in derogation of the common law and must be strictly followed. Any failure to conform to prescribed procedures, all being necessary and mandatory, is fatal and the writ is of no validity. Weiss v. Ahrens, 24 Colo. App. 531, 135 P. 987 (1913); Jayne v. Peck, 155 Colo. 513, 395 P.2d 603 (1964); Rencher v. District Court, 160 Colo. 523, 418 P.2d 289 (1966).

It is a special remedy at law, except in some states where it is authorized in chancery. Dygart v. Clem, 26 Colo. App. 286, 143 P. 823 (1914).

This rule controls as there is no statute empowering attachment in Colorado. Crist v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 230 F. Supp. 136 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 343 F.2d 902 (10th Cir. 1965).

Foreign corporation was found to be a "resident" of this state for purposes of section (a) where it was authorized to, and did, conduct business in this state and had three offices here. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. v. Kornegay, 2012 COA 140, 292 P.3d 1111.

"Residence", as distinguished from "citizenship", "domicile", and "legal residence" of a corporation, discussed in Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. v. Kornegay, 2012 COA 140, 292 P.3d 1111.

Insurer's obligation to defend and indemnify a nonresident insured defendant is non-exempt property subject to attachment for the purposes of establishing quasi in rem jurisdiction. Baker v. Young, 798 P.2d 889 (Colo. 1990).

Personal liability cannot be imposed upon defendant's insured through a quasi in rem action against the insurance policy. Synan v. Haya, 15 P.3d 1117 (Colo. App. 2000).

Plaintiff did not sustain his burden of proof that defendant intended to hinder him from collecting on a judgment, when defendant demonstrated he had sufficient funds to pay a judgment excluding proceeds from the pending sale. Haney v. Castle Meadows, Inc., 816 F. Supp. 655 (D. Colo. 1993).

II. AFFIDAVIT.

The 1975 revised rule requires that the affidavit set forth specific facts supporting the grounds of attachment. Inwood Indus., Inc. v. Priestley, 37 Colo. App. 78, 545 P.2d 732 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 543, 560 P.2d 822 (1976).

A sufficient affidavit is a jurisdictional requirement and a court has no authority to issue a writ of attachment without it. Mentzer v. Ellison, 7 Colo. App. 315, 43 P. 464 (1896); Axelson v. Columbine Laundry Co., 81 Colo. 254, 254 P. 990 (1927); Markle v. Dearmin, 117 Colo. 45, 184 P.2d 495 (1947).

The affidavit must state the grounds for attachment positively. Colo. Vanadium Corp. v. Western Colo. Power Co., 73 Colo. 24, 213 P. 122 (1923).

An affidavit for attachment which alleges that the defendant is indebted for "goods, wares, and merchandise sold by the plaintiff to the defendant", states the nature of the action sufficiently. Plummer v. Struby-Estabrooke Mercantile Co., 23 Colo. 190, 47 P. 294 (1896).

But an affidavit stating that "the debt is for farm products, house rent, household furniture", and other necessities for the debtor and his family does not state grounds for attachment under this rule. Markle v. Dearmin, 117 Colo. 45, 184 P.2d 495 (1947).

This requirement is not satisfied by allegations on information and belief merely. Colo. Vanadium Corp. v. Western Colo. Power Co., 73 Colo. 24, 213 P. 122 (1924).

An affidavit which fails to state definitely the nature of the demand is defective. Leppel v. Beck, 2 Colo. App. 390, 31 P. 185 (1892).

But not so defective as to render the proceeding absolutely void because of section (q) (now section (o)) of this rule permitting amendment. Leppel v. Beck, 2 Colo. App. 390, 31 P. 185 (1892).

Affidavit must contain an allegation of indebtedness and also one or more grounds of attachment. It is indispensable that the affidavit for attachment contain an allegation of indebtedness from the defendant, and also some one or more of the grounds upon which the statute authorizes an attachment. If either allegation is absent from the affidavit, there is no power to issue the writ. Axelson v. Columbine Laundry Co., 81 Colo. 254, 254 P. 990 (1927); Gibson v. Gagnon, 82 Colo. 108, 257 P. 348 (1927).

It cannot be attacked by a third person in a collateral proceeding. Where the affidavit is not attacked by the defendant in the attachment proceedings, nor does the record disclose that he contemplated interposing any defense whatever to the proceedings, the affidavit cannot be attacked by a third party in a collateral proceeding but must be raised between the parties to the suit. Leppel v. Beck, 2 Colo. App. 390, 31 P. 185 (1892).

Nor can it be attacked for the first time in an appellate court. Rice v. Hauptman, 2 Colo. App. 565, 31 P. 862 (1892).

The burden is upon plaintiff to prove by a preponderance of the evidence the allegations in the affidavit. First Nat'l Bank v. Poor, 94 Colo. 314, 29 P.2d 713 (1934).

The affidavit stands as a pleading, not alone in cases commenced originally by attachment, but where sued out in aid of an action the affidavit answers to the complaint in that proceeding, and hence is so far a pleading that it is properly brought up by the record without being included in the statement required by the code. Goss v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 4 Colo. 468 (1878).

A material allegation in an allegation must be taken to be true unless denied. Wehle v. Kerbs, 6 Colo. 167 (1882).

III. CAUSES.

A. In General.

The words, "in an action", used in this section are not used to denote an action pending, but rather as introductory to the words describing the kind of action, to wit, "an action on contract, express or implied", in which the plaintiff may have the property of the defendant attached. So the words, "at the time of issuing the summons", in this section, meant precisely what they said as to the time when the writ of attachment might issue. When we consider that the chief utility of an attachment consists in the writ being served in time to prevent a delinquent debtor from placing his property beyond the reach of the creditor, it would be unfortunate, indeed, if the writ could not issue until the debtor should have notice of the proceedings by the service of the summons. Schuster v. Rader, 13 Colo. 329, 22 P. 505 (1889).

Whether one seeks restitution or damages does not change the underlying basis for his action, whether contract or tort. Crist v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 230 F. Supp. 136 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 343 F.2d 902 (10th Cir. 1965).

This rule refers only to those contracts existing within the intention of the parties making them. Crist v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 230 F. Supp. 136 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 343 F.2d 902 (10th Cir. 1965).

The phrase "implied contract" within the meaning of this rule is not inclusive of contracts implied in law. Crist v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 230 F. Supp. 136 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 343 F.2d 902 (10th Cir. 1965).

When the cause of attachment is that the action is for the price of value of an article or thing sold and delivered, which, according to the contract of sale, was to be paid for on delivery, there must be a concurrence of three facts in addition to that of indebtedness: (1) The thing must have been delivered, (2) there must have been no credit given, and (3) the contract to pay on delivery must be unconditional. If there has been a credit of ever so short a time beyond the delivery, or if the payment depends upon any condition whatever, as a demand, the contract does not come within the operation of the statute. Miller v. Godfrey & Co., 1 Colo. App. 177, 27 P. 1016 (1891).

An attaching creditor does not occupy the status of a bona fide purchaser for value, and attachment can only operate upon the right and title of a debtor existing at the time of the levy. Nisbet v. Federal Title & Trust Co., 229 F. 644 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 241 U.S. 669, 36 S. Ct. 553, 60 L. Ed. 1229 (1916).

Private right of action arising under section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 cannot be characterized as one "on contract". Crist v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 230 F. Supp. 136 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 343 F.2d 902 (10th Cir. 1965).

B. Grounds.

Grounds for attachment changed. The grounds for attachment under the former rule, namely, that defendant refused to pay the value of goods upon delivery, has been eliminated from the revised rule. Inwood Indus., Inc. v. Priestley, 37 Colo. App. 78, 545 P.2d 732 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 543, 560 P.2d 822 (1976).

Action by resident defendant will not sustain attachment before judgment. Crist v. United Underwriters, Ltd., 230 F. Supp. 136 (D. Colo. 1964), aff'd, 343 F.2d 902 (10th Cir. 1965).

Temporary absence from state. A finding of the trial court that a defendant in an attachment suit was a resident of the state so as to defeat an attachment based on the ground of nonresidence is supported by evidence which shows that defendant had been a resident of the state for a number of years, that he had gone out of the state and was absent from the state when the attachment was sued out, and where defendant and his wife testified that he had only temporarily left the state to accept a three-months job of work, leaving his household goods in the state. Newlon-Hart Grocer Co. v. Peet, 18 Colo. App. 147, 70 P. 446 (1902).

Intent may be proved by circumstances as well as by direct evidence. First Nat'l Bank v. Poor, 94 Colo. 314, 29 P.2d 713 (1934).

The question of intent is for the jury to determine. First Nat'l Bank v. Poor, 94 Colo. 314, 29 P.2d 713 (1934).

Where intent is doubtful, it is proper to receive testimony of person making the conveyance. Where the fraudulent intent is not a conclusive legal presumption from the facts, the party who made the conveyance is a competent witness as to what his purpose actually was. If, from the evidence, the intent is doubtful, as he is the only person who could know with certainty, what, in fact, it was, it is proper to interrogate him in relation to it, and a refusal to permit him to answer the question would be error. Curran v. Rothschild, 14 Colo. App. 497, 60 P. 1111 (1900).

Testimony not proper where the intent appears upon the face of the transaction. Where the intent of the party appears upon the face of the transaction, or where the undisputed facts are irreconcilable with a lawful purpose, his testimony as to what his motives really were would be without effect and should not be received. Curran v. Rothschild, 14 Colo. App. 497, 60 P. 1111 (1900).

Fraudulent intent should not be equated with secretive actions for purposes of section (c). Chaffin, Inc. v. Wallain, 689 P.2d 684 (Colo. App. 1984).

The giving of a mortgage was not sufficient of itself to prove an intent on the part of the defendants to hinder or delay the plaintiff in the collection of its debt. Such intent must be apparent from all the facts and circumstances in evidence before an attachment can be sustained on the ground alleged. If a mortgage is given with such intent, the property of the mortgagor is subject to attachment, even though the mortgagor had no purpose eventually to defeat the creditor in the collection of his demand, and even though the debt secured by the mortgage is a valid and subsisting liability. First Nat'l Bank v. Poor, 94 Colo. 314, 29 P.2d 713 (1934).

Where the transaction results in the hindering or delaying of creditors, it is for the court to say whether it was fraudulent or not. When a party has intentionally executed an assignment or conveyance of his property, which must hinder or defraud his creditors of their just demands, the question whether the conveyance is fraudulent or not necessarily becomes a question of law, and not of fact. Curran v. Rothschild, 14 Colo. App. 497, 60 P. 1111 (1900).

It is not necessary to show that transfer was made with a dishonest motive. To justify an attachment on the ground that the debtor has transferred his property so as to hinder or delay his creditors, it is not necessary to show that the transfer was made with a dishonest motive or with a purpose to cheat creditors and deprive them of the power ever to realize on their claims. If a debtor assigns or transfers his property for the purpose of hindering or delaying his creditors in the collection of their claims, his act is fraudulent within the meaning of the law and will justify an attachment although he may intend that eventually the proceeds of the property shall be applied to the payment of their claims, and honestly believes that by preventing them from sacrificing his property they will ultimately realize more money. Curran v. Rothschild, 14 Colo. App. 497, 60 P. 1111 (1900); Kalberer v. Wilmore, 65 Colo. 411, 177 P. 147 (1918).

An honest transfer of property by a husband to his wife in satisfaction of a prior obligation cannot be made on the basis of a proceeding in attachment. City of Loveland v. Kearney, 14 Colo. App. 463, 60 P. 584 (1900).

Attachment lies for goods or money embezzled or stolen, or obtained by other species of frauds. Harden Farms, Inc. v. Amato, 160 F. Supp. 401 (D. Colo. 1958).

The wrongful conversion of funds by an officer constitutes fraudulently contracting an obligation which will sustain an attachment. Harden Farms, Inc. v. Amato, 160 F. Supp. 401 (D. Colo. 1958).

Misappropriation by an agent of a principal's money in a fraudulent way results in a breach of duty subjecting the agent to an action either ex delicto or assumpsit. In such a case the party injured may elect to sue upon the implied contract and waive the action ex delicto. Harden Farms, Inc. v. Amato, 160 F. Supp. 401 (D. Colo. 1958).

IV. THE WRIT.

A. In General.

The 1975 revised rule would invalidate the writ obtained by plaintiff because it was issued by the clerk of the district court and not by the court itself, and because the writ failed to advise defendant of his right to traverse. Inwood Indus., Inc. v. Priestley, 37 Colo. App. 78, 545 P.2d 732 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 543, 560 P.2d 822 (1976).

A failure to pursue the requirements of the rule is almost universally held fatal to a levy. Graham v. Reno, 5 Colo. App. 330, 38 P. 835 (1894).

Where lien is preserved and continued in force. Where a writ of attachment was levied on real estate of a debtor and judgment entered without service of either the attachment writ or summons, but afterwards, on discovering the error, the judgment was set aside and a new judgment entered, after personal service of an alias summons and of a copy of the attachment writ, the lien acquired at the commencement of the action by the levy of the writ was preserved and continued in force. Raynolds v. Ray, 12 Colo. 108, 20 P. 4 (1888).

Defendants who obtained a favorable verdict in a tort case but did not assert a counterclaim may not use a writ under section (a) to attach the property of plaintiffs to recover their statutory costs. Section (a) authorizes a court to issue a writ of attachment only for the party bringing the claim, which would be a plaintiff or a defendant who has asserted a counterclaim. Hiner v. Johnson, 2012 COA 164, 310 P.3d 226.

Trial court properly discharged defendants' writ of attachment as it was improperly issued because: (1) Although section (a) uses the term "any party", it qualifies the term by limiting it to the party filing a claim "in an action on contract . . . or an action to recover damages for tort"; (2) defendants failed to assert a counterclaim; and, (3) without a basis for the court to issue a writ of attachment, the writ of attachment was improperly issued; therefore, the trial court properly discharged the writ under section (w). Hiner v. Johnson, 2012 COA 164, 310 P.3d 226.

Plaintiffs not entitled to damages, attorney fees, and costs under the rule because sections (d) and (n)(2) do not authorize courts to make such awards to plaintiffs unless defendants have asserted a counterclaim. Section (d) only provides the basis for a defendant to recover costs and damages if the defendant recovers judgment or the court determines that the plaintiff was not entitled to the writ of attachment. Section (n)(2) only provides a basis for a defendant to recover damages if the plaintiff does not prevail at the hearing on a traverse of an affidavit accompanying a writ of attachment. Neither section of the rule includes a reciprocal statement that plaintiffs, in cases in which defendants do not assert a counterclaim, are entitled to damages. Hiner v. Johnson, 2012 COA 164, 310 P.3d 226.

B. Service.

Where possible personal service must be made before the court acquires jurisdiction. The mere levy of an attachment does not give the court jurisdiction to determine the question of indebtedness and condemn the attached property to pay the same. Where a defendant resides in this state, and there is no question but that he can be personally served, the service is complete when a copy of the writ is served upon him, and the property levied upon. Then, and not until then, does the court acquire jurisdiction to finally hear and determine the same. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

Where there was no personal service on the defendant, the mere levy of an attachment did not give the court jurisdiction to determine the question of indebtedness and condemn the attached property to pay the same. Great W. Mining Co. v. Woodmas of Alston Mining Co., 12 Colo. 46, 20 P. 771 (1888).

Service by publication is permissible under section (g), which incorporates applicable rules for service of process. Hancock v. Boulder County Pub. Trustee, 920 P.2d 854 (Colo. App. 1995).

Jurisdiction of persons acquired by service of process or by appearance and of the property by attachment. If, when property is attached, there is no service of summons upon the defendant and no appearance by him to the action, the proceeding is purely in rem. The jurisdiction of the court is confined to the property attached, and, if the attachment fails, there is nothing for the court to adjudicate. It can render no judgment of any kind. If the defendant is served with summons, or appears to the action, the proceeding is both in personam and in rem. The court has jurisdiction of the person by virtue of service of its process, or of appearance; and of the property by virtue of the attachment. But the court acquired no jurisdiction of the property merely by virtue of its jurisdiction of the person. Mentzer v. Ellison, 7 Colo. App. 315, 43 P. 464 (1896).

Service of writ is required to enable the debtor to deposit the money sued for and prevent the lien. The service of the attachment writ is required for the purpose of enabling the debtor to deposit the money sued for, and thus prevent the lien from taking effect; or, if the lien already exists, thus to secure its dissolution; and also to enable him, in case he shall see fit so to do, to traverse and put in issue the matters stated in the affidavit of attachment. In a majority of cases, the levy of the writ will either precede or be made simultaneously with the service thereof. In some cases, the officer may serve the writ before he makes the levy, and in such cases the section provides that, if the amount of the claim be deposited, the levy shall not be made. Raynolds v. Ray, 12 Colo. 108, 20 P. 4 (1888).

The lien does not become effective until the writ is properly served and completely served. By filing a copy of the writ of attachment, together with a description of the property to be attached, with the recorder of the county, a valid levy is made, and a valid lien upon the property is thereby created. By the levy under a writ of attachment before the service thereof, the plaintiff acquires a provisional lien upon the property levied on; but, before a valid judgment can be rendered by which the attachment lien is preserved and made effective, there must be proper service of the summons and the writ of attachment. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

In the absence of a general appearance by defendant, an attachment lien does not become valid and effective and enforceable until the attachment writ is properly and completely served. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

Proper service includes delivery of a copy of the writ to defendant and filing a copy with the recorder; and no judgment establishing the lien, or ordering a sale of the property, is valid without such service, or without a general appearance, if that does away with the necessity for service. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

Mere filing of certificate is ineffective as to subsequent purchasers. Under this section a writ of attachment is not effectually levied upon lands unless a copy of the writ, with a description of the lands taken, is filed with a recorder in the county. The mere filing of a certificate of the levy is without effect as to subsequent purchasers. Weiss v. Ahrens, 24 Colo. App. 531, 135 P. 987 (1913).

Where defendant dies before copy of writ delivered to him. In an action against a resident defendant where an attachment had been levied upon real estate by filing a copy of the writ together with a description of the property with the recorder, but the defendant died before a copy of the writ was delivered to him, the attachment lien could not be perfected by service upon the executrix of the deceased defendant, nor by her general appearance in the action. Thompson v. White, 25 Colo. 226, 54 P. 718 (1898).

A writ directed to the sheriff of a county cannot be executed by the sheriff of any other county, and cannot be executed by the sheriff to whom it is issued outside of his own county. McArthur v. Boynton, 19 Colo. App. 234, 74 P. 540 (1903).

Use of a private process server, instead of the sheriff, to serve a writ on a defendant incarcerated in another state complied with the requirements of this rule. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. v. Kornegay, 2012 COA 140, 292 P.3d 1111.

Dismissal of the action error. Where a motion of a defendant raises only the question of the sufficiency of service in an attachment proceeding, dismissal of the action is error, since failure to obtain proper service does not warrant dismissal of a cause of action. Aero Spray, Inc. v. Ace Flying Serv., Inc., 139 Colo. 249, 338 P.2d 275 (1959).

C. Execution.

Execution of this writ serves as a lien on specified property throughout the duration of the litigation, thus securing for the plaintiff the practicality of benefiting from any judgment he might be awarded. Bernhardt v. Commodity Option Co., 187 Colo. 89, 528 P.2d 919 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1004, 95 S. Ct. 2406, 44 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1975).

A valid levy of a writ of attachment may be made on real estate and a valid lien acquired by indorsing thereon a description of the property attached and filing a copy of such writ, so indorsed, in the recorder's office of the county wherein the real estate is situated. The levy of the writ creates a provisional lien; but, before a valid judgment can be rendered which will preserve and make the lien effective, there must be service of the writ and summons on the defendant. Raynolds v. Ray, 12 Colo. 108, 20 P. 4 (1888).

Personal property capable of manual delivery can be attached only by being taken into custody by the officer. An attempted levy of an attachment upon personal property, capable of manual delivery, where the property was left in the custody of the defendant, and was not separated from defendant's other property, was not such levy as would give the attaching creditor or the officer any right in the property. Gottlieb v. Barton, 13 Colo. App. 147, 57 P. 754 (1899); Nichols v. Chittenden, 14 Colo. App. 49, 59 P. 954 (1899).

Taking physical custody of tax lien certificates was not necessary where county treasurers of counties in which property was located were served with writs of garnishment in aid of attachment. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. v. Kornegay, 2012 COA 140, 292 P.3d 1111.

This rule, C.R.C.P. 103, and § 4-8-112 may be harmonized so that stock certificates may be reached by a creditor either by actual physical seizure, by a writ of attachment, if actually seized, or by serving the person who possesses the certificate with a writ of garnishment. Moreland v. Alpert, 124 P.3d 896 (Colo. App. 2005).

Where failure to sue out writ is excusable. Where defendant and his wife both were non-residents, absconders, and he was a fugitive from justice, and neither had an agent in Colorado on whom service or execution of the writ of attachment could be made, had a writ of attachment been sued out by the creditor, it was impossible to execute it as required by this section because all the required steps essential to a valid levy must be taken or no valid seizure can be made. Failure, therefore, of plaintiff to sue out a writ of attachment was excusable. No seizure or levy upon the property by or under an attachment was possible in this state, and the only remedy, if any, left to the creditor was that invoked by him, a creditor's suit, by which, in this state, as generally, an equitable lien may be procured, or an equitable levy made. Shuck v. Quackenbush, 75 Colo. 592, 227 P. 1041 (1924).

When sheriff's duties are terminated. This section provides that real estate "shall be attached by filing a copy of the writ, together with a description of the property attached with the recorder of the county". The sheriff's duties are terminated when those acts are performed and he can exercise no further agency or control. The lien created by the attachment, whatever may be its character, is in the attaching creditor, and he only can release or discharge it. Barton v. Continental Oil Co., 5 Colo. App. 341, 38 P. 432 (1894).

Wherever the wrongful levy of a writ is the gravamen of a suit, the burden must of necessity be with the plaintiff to show that in fact a levy was made, unless it concerns personalty, and there be some circumstances of dispossession or disturbance of the owner's rights which will sustain a suit. Graham v. Reno, 5 Colo. App. 330, 38 P. 835 (1894).

An attack by a third person upon a void levy is not an attack upon the judgment. Where an insufficient and void levy of an attachment upon lands is made and the plaintiff in the action recovers judgment, and one not a party to that action institutes a suit in equity to set aside, as a cloud upon his title, such void and insufficient levy, the latter action is not an attack upon the judgment in the former. Weiss v. Ahrens, 24 Colo. App. 531, 135 P. 987 (1913).

Seizure of property of nonresident as a condition precedent to jurisdiction is a judicial requirement. The rule requiring the seizure of property within the state belonging to a nonresident defendant, as a condition precedent to the exercise of jurisdiction, is a judicial, and not a statutory requirement. Van Wagenen v. Carpenter, 27 Colo. 444, 61 P. 698 (1900).

Jurisdiction is aided by the same presumptions as in cases of personal service. The jurisdiction of a court of general jurisdiction in attachment proceedings is general, and its actions therein are aided by the same presumptions as in cases of personal service, and where jurisdiction is obtained in a case by attachment of the property of a nonresident, a judgment rendered therein and the property sold under a special execution, a sheriff's deed thereunder is sufficient to establish ownership in the purchaser. Van Wagenen v. Carpenter, 27 Colo. 444, 61 P. 698 (1900).

Upon a collateral attack, it will be conclusively presumed that everything necessary to be done was done, unless the contrary appears from the record. Van Wagenen v. Carpenter, 27 Colo. 444, 61 P. 698 (1900).

The return of the officer upon a writ of attachment is the record of the levy, and is the legal evidence of the fact that the levy was made. It cannot be proved by parol evidence. Gottlieb v. Barton, 13 Colo. App. 147, 57 P. 754 (1889).

Sheriff is not entitled to costs for making out the inventory. The making of an inventory of attached property is not a matter necessarily involving the expenditure of money out of pocket, and the sheriff is not entitled to costs therefor in addition to the statutory fees prescribed by statute for serving and otherwise executing attachment writs. Cramer v. Oppenstein, 16 Colo. 495, 27 P. 713 (1891).

V. NO FINAL JUDGMENT UNTIL 30 DAYS AFTER LEVY.

Purpose of provision. The plain purpose of this section is to permit creditors to prorrate the proceeds of attached property, not to permit them to establish rights in a strange and unusual way. The provision simply makes it possible for all creditors to put themselves in a position of equality, in respect to the satisfaction, out of the property attached, of claims properly asserted and regularly adjudicated; and it is a matter of administrative policy and convenience that all creditors intervening are, upon application, named as plaintiffs in one general proceeding for the purpose of determining and adjudicating their respective rights. Trinidad Nat'l Bank v. Jamieson House Furnishing Co., 60 Colo. 356, 153 P. 441 (1915).

The "like remedies" secured to an intervening attachment creditor by this subdivision are no more or less than such means as were available to the original plaintiff to establish and secure his claim, that is to say, upon the filing of affidavit, undertaking and complaint, with application to be made a party plaintiff in the original proceeding, the intervening creditor merely places his claim, in point of time of action, and for the purpose of proration, upon an equal basis with that of the original plaintiff, and should enforce his rights by the same legal modes as were available to the one first to act, but it certainly was not intended thereby to put an intervening creditor in a better position than he who first attached, and the section grants no privilege which obviates taking the steps ordinarily requisite to jurisdiction in order to recover a valid judgment upon a claim properly established. Trinidad Nat'l Bank v. Jamieson House Furnishing Co., 60 Colo. 356, 153 P. 441 (1915).

Creditors making themselves co-plaintiffs cannot assert any right superior to that of their co-plaintiff. Where in an attachment suit other creditors come in and make themselves co-plaintiffs with the original plaintiff in the attachment suit for the purpose of pro rata distribution of the attached fund as provided in this subdivision, such creditors thereby preclude themselves from asserting any right in the case superior to that of their co-plaintiff. Rouse v. Wallace, 10 Colo. App. 93, 50 P. 366 (1897).

Where petition comes too late. Petition for intervention comes too late where, before it was presented, judgment had been entered, execution issued, and levy and sale had thereunder. Hartner v. Davis, 100 Colo. 464, 68 P.2d 456 (1937).

VI. TRAVERSE OF AFFIDAVIT.

The denial of grounds for attachment should be clear and specific. The plaintiffs set forth in the affidavits in aid of the writs of attachment the nature of the indebtedness, part of which was based on services rendered by the plaintiffs. A denial that the debt was owed was sufficient to put in issue the question whether services had been rendered for which payment was due at the time the services were rendered.

Barbary v. Benz, 169 Colo. 408, 457 P.2d 389 (1969).

A "verified traverse" by the defendant's attorney, without an accompanying affidavit by a person with knowledge of the facts and containing merely a general denial that the defendant was about to transfer property fraudulently, is not sufficient. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. v. Kornegay, 2012 COA 140, 292 P.3d 1111.

The separate traversing affidavit is not a pleading so as to permit a traverse, by an officer of a corporation, upon information and belief. An officer or an attorney of a corporation, who undertakes to traverse an affidavit in attachment, is presumed to know what his corporation did and must make his affidavit positively. Colo. Vanadium Corp. v. Western Colo. Power Co., 73 Colo. 24, 213 P. 122 (1923).

When the grounds of an attachment have been traversed and there is no evidence to sustain any one of them, the attachment should be dissolved. Mount Lincoln Coal Co. v. Lane, 23 Colo. 121, 46 P. 632 (1896).

A traverse of an affidavit which does not deny the allegations as of the time stated in the affidavit is not good. Where traverse is in present tense in saying that the grounds of attachment are false but does not relate to the time in the past when the attachment was made, this section is not complied with. Colo. Vanadium Corp. v. Western Colo. Power Co., 73 Colo. 24, 213 P. 122 (1897).

The traverse affidavit must speak and deny as of the date on which the affidavits in support of attachment are filed in order to specifically put in issue the causes for attachment set forth in the affidavits. Barbary v. Benz, 169 Colo. 408, 457 P.2d 389 (1969).

In the absence of a traverse, the court is not required to investigate the truth of the affidavit. This section does not require an investigation of the truth of the allegations of the affidavit, or that the court shall make any finding or order concerning either the attachment or the property attached. These matters are merely incidental to the action and, there being no issue as to them, the court does not appear to have any duty appertaining thereto to perform. Brown v. Tucker, 7 Colo. 30, 1 P. 221 (1883).

Waiver of order dissolving attachment. Where defendant, having obtained an order dissolving an attachment, afterwards stipulated that the issues in the main cause, as well as those framed upon the traverse of the affidavit in attachment should be tried at the same time, he thereby waived the order dissolving the attachment, and all rights thereunder. Reyer v. Blaisdell, 26 Colo. App. 387, 143 P. 385 (1914).

If the prescribed procedure for release of attached property is not invoked, the levy remains in force. Collins v. Burns, 16 Colo. 7, 26 P. 145 (1891).

Lien becomes absolute if the ground for it is not successfully traversed. Under this rule an attachment plaintiff is in reality, and for many purposes, an incumbrancer. It is quite true the lien which he acquires is contingent rather than inchoate, and dependent not only upon a compliance with the rule which provides for its issue, but also upon the subsequent recovery of a judgment and proof of a cause of action on which he had a right to sue when he commenced his action. In this sense, it is contingent; in another, it is absolute, or becomes absolute, if the ground for it is not successfully traversed and the plaintiff ultimately succeeds. Day v. Madden, 9 Colo. App. 464, 48 P. 1053 (1897).

Where the statements of the affidavit are regularly traversed by the defendant without the court's attention being called to its supposed defects, and the issues are found against him upon the trial; or, if the amount of actual damage proved by the plaintiff be less than the amount averred in the affidavit, the judgment will not be reversed on such grounds. De Stafford v. Gartley, 15 Colo. 32, 24 P. 580 (1890).

VII. INTERVENTION.

This rule is not intended to put an intervening creditor in a better position than he who first attached, and the rule grants no privilege which obviates taking the steps ordinarily requisite to jurisdiction in order to recover a valid judgment upon a claim properly established. Consolidated Fin. Corp. v. Thorp, 168 Colo. 144, 450 P.2d 320 (1969).

Jurisdiction does not depend upon the record of the permission to intervene. Permission is presumed where nothing to the contrary appears and the court has assumed jurisdiction. Grove v. Foutch, 6 Colo. App. 357, 40 P. 852 (1895).

VIII. DEFENDANT MAY RELEASE PROPERTY; BOND.

Trial court may set the amount of a bond at zero, effectively waiving the bond requirement, if the court determines that the plaintiff can respond in damages if necessary. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. v. Kornegay, 2012 COA 140, 292 P.3d 1111.

Judgment against the attaching creditor releases the property, restores proceeds, if any, and dissolves the writ. Vigil v. Pacheco, 95 Colo. 405, 36 P.2d 766 (1934).

This rule authorizes parties whose property has been attached to obtain a bond releasing the property attached, but assuring the creditor if judgment is obtained, that the property will be returned to the sheriff for final action. Phoenix Assurance Co. v. Hughes, 367 F.2d 526 (10th Cir. 1966).

Bond releases property from officers' custody but does not dissolve the attachment lien. Chittenden v. Nichols, 31 Colo. 202, 72 P. 53 (1903).

Enforceable undertaking. An undertaking given by the defendant with sureties for the purpose of releasing money in the hands of a garnishee is enforceable where, by reason of its execution, the money was in fact paid over by the garnishee to the defendant. Schradskey v. Dunklee, 9 Colo. App. 394, 48 P. 666 (1897).

Where person is estopped from controverting validity of undertaking. When a person signs an incomplete undertaking and delivers the same to another for a particular purpose and with ostensible authority to fill in any needed matter to make it effective, and it is accepted in its completed form by the obligee, he is estopped from controverting its validity to the prejudice of the obligee. Palacios v. Brasher, 18 Colo. 593, 34 P. 251 (1893).

Property in the hands of the sheriff. The sheriff has no authority to accept an undertaking for the release of money garnisheed, nor to execute a release for money in the hands of a garnishee, such property not being "in the hands of the sheriff". Nevertheless, where parties, through the instrumentality of an undertaking executed by them, procure money from the garnishee, they having thus received the benefit of the undertaking, cannot be heard to deny its binding obligation upon themselves upon the happening of the contingencies therein provided for. Abbot v. Williams, 15 Colo. 512, 25 P. 450 (1890).

Lien not affected by redelivery bond. When property has been lawfully levied upon under proper process, and taken into possession by a sheriff, the lien thereby created is not affected by any subsequent levy or surrender of possession under a redelivery bond, but whatever becomes of the property after such levy, it is subject at all times to the lien created by the first levy. Curry v. Equitable Sur. Co., 27 Colo. App. 175, 148 P. 914 (1915).

This does not apply to money in the hands of a garnishee. Phoenix Assurance Co. v. Hughes, 367 F.2d 526 (10th Cir. 1966).

Neither officer nor plaintiff can refuse to accept property on account of damage. Where attached property has been released on a redelivery bond and the identical property is returned to the sheriff, it is the right of the bondsmen to have the property sold and the proceeds applied on the judgment and neither the officer nor the plaintiff can refuse to accept the return of the property on account of damage or diminution in value, nor is the plaintiff estopped by such acceptance to sue upon the bond for damage to the property resulting from use by the defendant after it has been released to him under the bond. Creswell v. Woodside, 15 Colo. App. 468, 63 P. 330 (1900).

Defective complaint. In a suit against the sureties on a redelivery bond given by defendant to plaintiff in an attachment suit to release the property attached, a complaint which fails to allege that demand was made on the defendant in the attachment suit for the return of the property released is fatally defective. It is not sufficient to allege that demand was made on the sureties in the bond. Murray v. Ginsberg, 10 Colo. App. 63, 48 P. 968 (1897).

Return of property in damaged condition constitutes a breach of the bond. Where property, released from an attachment under a forthcoming bond, is damaged from use by the defendant after the execution of the bond, its return to the officer in such damaged condition is not a return of substantially the same property and constitutes a breach of the bond. Creswell v. Woodside, 15 Colo. App. 468, 63 P. 330 (1900).

Measure of damages in such a case. In an action by an attachment plaintiff upon a redelivery bond where the property had been returned to the officer in a damaged condition resulting from use by the attachment defendant, the measure of plaintiff's damage was the diminution in value of the goods between the date of their release and the date of their return to the attaching officer, not to exceed the unpaid residue of the judgment. Creswell v. Woodside, 15 Colo. App. 468, 63 P. 330 (1900).

Where attached property has been released on a redelivery bond and after judgment sustaining the attachment the property is returned to the officer and the property is regularly and fairly sold as provided by statute and the proceeds applied on the judgment, as between the parties, the selling price is conclusive of the value thereof, and in an action by an attachment plaintiff upon a redelivery bond for damage to the property from use by the defendant after the execution of the bond, an instruction that undertakes to charge plaintiff with the value of the property returned regardless of the amount it brought at the sale is erroneous, and the fact that the plaintiff was the purchaser at the sale is of no significance. Creswell v. Woodside, 15 Colo. App. 408, 63 P. 330 (1900).

Bond not required to be executed under seal. A bond to release attached property is not required to be executed under seal, and if so executed the liability of the obligors is in no manner affected thereby. To authorize an agent to sign his principal's name to such bond, it is not necessary that such authority be under seal, and parol evidence is sufficient to establish such authority, or to establish a ratification of an unauthorized signing. Lynch v. Smyth, 25 Colo. 103, 54 P. 634 (1898).

Where attachment improperly issued. Looking to the affidavit and complaint, where there is no express or implied contract between the appellant and appellee, it follows that the attachment was improperly issued and should have been discharged under the motion. Goss v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 4 Colo. 468 (1878).

IX. NEW TRIAL; APPEAL.

An order in attachment proceedings dissolving the writ and releasing the property is a final judgment. Kopff v. Judd, 134 Colo. 330, 304 P.2d 623 (1956); Wilson v. Kirkbride, 899 P.2d 323 (Colo. App. 1995).

Time for filing notice of appeal began to run upon the denial of plaintiffs' rule 59 motion. Wilson v. Kirkbride, 899 P.2d 323 (Colo. App. 1995).

When a final judgment is entered, party adversely affected who wishes to appeal must file a motion for new trial as prescribed under C.R.C.P. 59(f) just as in the review of any other final judgment. Kopff v. Judd, 134 Colo. 330, 304 P.2d 623 (1956).

Procedure. Steps necessary to effectively prosecute error to the usual judgment in civil actions also are essential to validate an appeal to a final judgment in attachment proceedings. Kopff v. Judd, 134 Colo. 330, 304 P.2d 623 (1956).

Where final judgment sustaining writ of attachment was not questioned in a prior proceeding on error, in which the judgment on the merits was reversed, and thus became a final judgment binding upon the parties, reversal did not reopen the question of the validity of the attachment proceedings. Burt Chevrolet, Inc. v. Barth, 144 Colo. 180, 355 P.2d 538 (1960).

Rule 103. Garnishment

This rule sets forth the exclusive process for garnishment. There shall be five (5) types of writs: (1) Writ of Continuing Garnishment, (2) Writ of Garnishment with Notice of Exemption and Pending Levy, (3) Writ of Garnishment for Support, (4) Writ of Garnishment — Judgment Debtor Other Than Natural Person, and (5) Writ of Garnishment in Aid of Writ of Attachment.

SECTION 1

WRIT OF CONTINUING GARNISHMENT
(ON EARNINGS OF A NATURAL PERSON)(a) Definitions.

(1) “Continuing garnishment” means the exclusive procedure for withholding the earnings of a judgment debtor for successive pay periods for payment of a judgment debt other than a judgment for support as provided in subsection (c) of this rule.

(2) “Earnings” shall be defined in section 13-54.5-101 (2), C.R.S., as applicable.

(b) Form of Writ of Continuing Garnishment and Related Forms. A writ of continuing garnishment shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 26, C.R.C.P. It shall also include at least one (1) “Calculation of Amount of Exempt Earnings” form to be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 27, C.R.C.P. Objection to the calculation of exempt earnings shall be in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 28, C.R.C.P.

(c) When Writ of Continuing Garnishment Issues. After entry of judgment when a writ of execution can issue, a writ of continuing garnishment against earnings shall be issued by the clerk of the court upon request of the judgment creditor. Under a writ of continuing garnishment, a judgment creditor may garnish earnings except to the extent such earnings are exempt under law. Issuance of a writ of execution shall not be required.

(d) Service of Writ of Continuing Garnishment. A judgment creditor shall serve two (2) copies of the writ of continuing garnishment, together with a blank copy of C.R.C.P. Form 28, “Objection to the Calculation of the Amount of Exempt Earnings” (Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 28, C.R.C.P.), upon the garnishee, one copy of which the garnishee shall deliver to the judgment debtor as provided in subsection (h)(1) of this rule. Service of the writ shall be in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4, and the person who serves the writ shall note the date and time of such service on the return service. In any civil action, a judgment creditor shall serve no more than one writ of continuing garnishment upon any one garnishee for the same judgment debtor during the Effective Garnishment Period. This restriction shall not preclude the issuance of a subsequent writ within the Effective Garnishment Period.

(e) Jurisdiction. Service of a writ of continuing garnishment upon the garnishee shall give the court jurisdiction over the garnishee and any earnings of the judgment debtor within the control of the garnishee.

(f) Effective Garnishment Period.

(1) A writ of continuing garnishment shall be a lien and continuing levy against the nonexempt earnings of the judgment debtor until such time as earnings are no longer due, the underlying judgment is vacated, modified or satisfied in full, the writ is dismissed, or for 91 days (13 weeks) following service of the writ, if the judgment was entered prior to August 8, 2001, and 182 days (26 weeks) following service of the writ if the judgment was entered on or after August 8, 2001, except when such writ is suspended pursuant to subsection (j) of this rule.

(2) When a writ of continuing garnishment is served upon a garnishee during the Effective Garnishment Period of a prior writ, it shall be effective for the Effective Garnishment Period following the Effective Garnishment Period of any prior writ.

(3) If a writ of garnishment for support pursuant to C.R.S. 14-14-105 is served during the effective period of a writ of continuing garnishment, the Effective Garnishment Period shall be tolled and all priorities preserved until the termination of the writ of garnishment for support.

(g) Exemptions. A garnishee shall not be required to deduct, set up or plead any exemption for or on behalf of a judgment debtor excepting as set forth in the Exemption Chart contained in the writ.

(h) Delivery of Copy to Judgment Debtor.

(1) The garnishee shall deliver a copy of the writ of continuing garnishment, together with the calculation of the amount of exempt earnings that is based on the judgment debtor’s last paycheck prior to delivery of the writ of continuing garnishment to the judgment debtor and the blank copy of C.R.C.P. Form 28, “Objection to the Calculation of the Amount of Exempt Earnings or For Reduction of Withholding Pursuant to Section 13-54-104(2)(a)(I)(D)” (Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 28, C.R.C.P.), to the judgment debtor not later than 7 days after the garnishee is served with the writ of continuing garnishment.

(2) For all pay periods affected by the writ, the garnishee shall deliver a copy of the calculation of the amount of exempt earnings and the “Judgment Debtor’s Objection to the Calculation of Amount of Exempt Earnings” to the judgment debtor at the time the judgment debtor receives earnings for that pay period.

(i) Objection to Calculation of Amount of Exempt Earnings. A judgment debtor may object to the calculation of exempt earnings or object and request an exemption of earnings pursuant to section 13-54-104(2)(a)(I)(D), C.R.S. A judgment debtor’s objection to calculation of exempt earnings or objection and request for an exemption of earnings pursuant to section 13-54-104(2)(a)(I)(D), C.R.S., shall be in accordance with Section 6 of this rule.

(j) Suspension. A writ of continuing garnishment may be suspended for a specified period of time by the judgment creditor upon agreement with the judgment debtor, which agreement shall be in writing and filed by the judgment creditor with the clerk of the court in which judgment was entered and a copy shall be delivered by the judgment creditor to the garnishee. No suspension shall extend the running of the Effective Garnishment Period nor affect priorities.

(k) Answer and Tender of Payment by Garnishee.

(1) The garnishee shall file the answer to the writ of garnishment with the clerk of the court and send a copy to the judgment creditor not later than 7 days after the garnishee is served with the writ of continuing garnishment pursuant to section 13-54.5-105(5), C.R.S. However, if the judgment creditor is represented by an attorney, or is a collection agency licensed pursuant to section 12-14-101, et seq., C.R.S., the garnishee shall send such response to the attorney or licensed collection agency.

(2) In the event the answer required by Section 1(k)(1) of this rule is filed and served pursuant to section 13-54.5-105(5)(b), C.R.S., the garnishee shall begin garnishment of the disposable earnings of the judgment debtor on the first payday of the judgment debtor that occurs at least 21 days after the garnishee was served with the writ of continuing garnishment or the first payday after the expiration date of any prior effective writ of continuing garnishment that is at least 21 days after the garnishee was served with the writ of continuing garnishment.

(3) At such hearing, if the judgment giving rise to such claim has been satisfied against property or earnings of the judgment debtor, the court shall hear and summarily try and determine whether the amount of the judgment debtor's earnings paid to the judgment creditor was correctly calculated and whether the judgment debtor's property sold as upon execution was exempt. If the court finds earnings to have been miscalculated or if property is found to be exempt, the court shall enter judgment in favor of the judgment debtor for the amount of the over-garnished earnings or such exempt property or the value thereof which judgment shall be satisfied by payment to the clerk of the court or the return of exempt property to the judgment debtor within three (3) business days.

The failure to timely file a traverse shall be deemed an acceptance of the answer as true.

(b) Procedure.

(1) Within the time provided, the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment, or intervenor in attachment, shall state, in verified form, the grounds of traverse and shall mail a copy of the same to the garnishee in accordance with C.R.C.P. 5.

(2) Upon application of the judgment creditor, plaintiff in attachment, or intervenor in attachment, the traverse shall be set for hearing before the court at which hearing the statements in the traverse shall be deemed admitted or denied.

(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

Every garnishee shall be allowed to claim as a set-off and retain or deduct all demands or claims on the part of the garnishee against any party to the garnishment proceedings, which the garnishee might have claimed if not summoned as a garnishee, whether such are payable or not at the time of service of any form or writ provided for by this rule.

SECTION 11

GARNISHEE NOT REQUIRED TO DEFEND CLAIMS OF THIRD PERSONS
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

(a) Garnishee with Notice. A garnishee with notice of the claim of a third person in any property of any description of a judgment debtor or defendant in attachment which is the subject of any answer made by the garnishee in response to any form of writ provided for by this rule shall not be required to defend on account of such claim, but shall state in such answer that the garnishee is informed of such claim of a third person.

(b) Court to Issue Summons. When such an answer has been filed, the clerk of the court, upon application, shall issue a summons requiring such third person to appear within the time specified in C.R.C.P. 12 to answer, set up, and assert a claim or be barred thereafter.

(c) Delivery of Property by Garnishee.

(1) If the answer states that the garnishee is informed of the claim of a third person, the garnishee may at any time pay to the clerk of the court any garnished amount payable at the time of the service of any writ provided for by this rule, or deliver to the sheriff any property the garnishee is required to hold pursuant to any form of writ provided for in this rule.

(2) Upon service of the summons upon such third person pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4, the garnishee shall thereupon be released and discharged of any liability to any person on account of such indebtedness to the extent of any amount paid to the clerk of the court or any property delivered to the sheriff.

SECTION 12

RELEASE AND DISCHARGE OF GARNISHEE
(ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

(a) Effect of Judgment. A judgment against a garnishee shall release and discharge such garnishee from all claims or demands of the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment to the extent of all sums paid or property delivered by the garnishee pursuant to such judgment.

(b) Effect of Payment. Payment by a garnishee of any sums required to be remitted by such garnishee pursuant to Sections 1(k)(2) or 3(g)(2) of this rule shall release and discharge such garnishee from all claims or demands of the judgment debtor to the extent of all such sums paid.

(c) Release by Judgment Creditor or Plaintiff in Attachment. A judgment creditor or plaintiff in attachment may issue a written release of any writ provided by this rule. Such release shall state the effective date of the release and shall be promptly filed with the clerk of the court.

GARNISHMENT OF PUBLIC BODY (ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENT)

Any writ provided for in this rule wherein a public body is designated as the garnishee, shall be served upon the officer of such body whose duty it is to issue warrants, checks or money to the judgment debtor or defendant in attachment, or, such officer as the public body may have designated to accept service. Such officer need not include in any answer to such writ, as money owing, the amount of any warrant or check drawn and signed prior to the time of service of such writ.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, “Seizure of Person or Property: Rules 101-104”, see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 603 (1951). For article, “One Year Review of Civil Procedure and Appeals”, see 39 Dicta 133 (1962).

Garnishment is a deprivation of defendant’s property, or right to the use of his property. Bernhardt v. Commodity Option Co., 187 Colo. 89, 528 P.2d 919 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1004, 95 S. Ct. 2406, 44 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1975).

The whole object of garnishment is to reach effects or credits in the garnishee’s hands, and to subject them to the payment of such judgment as the plaintiff may recover against the defendant. It results necessarily that there can be no judgment against the garnishee until judgment against the defendant shall have been recovered. McPhee v. Gomer, 6 Colo. App. 461, 41 P. 836 (1895).

Garnishment is strictly a statutory remedy. Troy Laundry & Mach. Co. v. City & County of Denver, 11 Colo. App. 368, 53 P. 256 (1898); Black v. Plumb, 94 Colo. 318, 29 P.2d 708 (1934).

The remedy of garnishment was unknown at common law and exists only by reason of statute or rules of procedure enacted pursuant to statutory authority. Worcester v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 172 Colo. 352, 473 P.2d 711 (1970).

Garnishment proceedings cannot be sustained if they go beyond statute. State v. Elkins, 84 Colo. 409, 270 P. 875 (1928).

Garnishment proceedings fall under the equity arm of a court, the purpose being to summarily reach ordinarily nonleviable evidences of debt, to prevent the loss or dissipation of such assets, to determine the ownership of such funds, and to provide for the equitable distribution thereof, such being triable by the court and not by a jury. Worcester v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 172 Colo. 352, 473 P.2d 711 (1970); Great Neck Plaza, L.P. v. Le Peep Restaurants, LLC, 37 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2001).

There was no denial of due process when garnishor sought to pierce the corporate veil against garnishee. By filing a traverse against the garnishee’s denial that it held any assets of the judgment debtor, garnishor placed in issue the factual matter of whether the garnishee should be held liable on the judgment debt, and the garnishor would be required to prove liability by a preponderance of the evidence as in any other trial. Sedgwick Props. Dev. Corp. v. Hinds, 2019 COA 102, 456 P.3d 64.

Writ of garnishment must be specific as to debtor. Berns, Clancy & Associates v. Bank of Boulder, 717 P.2d 1022 (Colo. App. 1986).

When garnishment proceeding considered “determined”. A garnishment proceeding may not be considered “determined” until decisions regarding the rights of parties to the action can be made, and nothing but ministerial functions remain to be done. Nolan v. District Court, 195 Colo. 6, 575 P.2d 9 (1978); In re Seay, 97 Bankr. 41 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989).

Until the time for filing an exemption under § 13-54-106 expires, the garnishment proceedings are not determined. Nolan v. District Court, 195 Colo. 6, 575 P.2d 9 (1978); In re Seay, 97 Bankr. 41 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989).

This rule has no provision for release of cash. This rule relates to garnishment and has no provision similar to C.R.C.P. 102 for release of cash in the hands of a garnishee. Phoenix Assurance Co. v. Hughes, 367 F.2d 526 (10th Cir. 1966).

Attorneys’ fees not permitted in garnishment. Neither this rule nor any other section or rule permits award of attorneys’ fees for the garnishee in a garnishment. Commercial Claims, Ltd. v. First Nat’l Bank, 649 P.2d 736 (Colo. App. 1982).

This rule creates an exception to the American rule in garnishment actions; hence, the trial court was authorized to make an award of attorney fees. Hoang v. Monterra Homes (Powderhorn) LLC, 129 P.3d 1028 (Colo. App. 2005), rev’d on other grounds sub nom. Hoang v. Assurance Co. of Am., 149 P.3d 798 (Colo. 2007).

This rule is not applicable to spendthrift provisions of a will. Brasser v. Hutchison, 37 Colo. App. 528, 549 P.2d 801 (1976).

Funds under the control of a trustee subject to spendthrift provisions cannot be garnished. Brasser v. Hutchison, 37 Colo. App. 528, 549 P.2d 801 (1976).

The intent of congress that social security benefits be exempt from seizure is not undercut or in any way compromised by this rule. Ortiz v. Valdez, 971 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1998).

Amendment of answer. Although this section is silent as to whether answers filed to a writ of garnishment may be amended, the guiding principle is that where the adverse party has not changed his position based on the original answer, the court, in its discretion should freely grant amendments. Brown v. Schumann, 40 Colo. App. 336, 575 P.2d 443 (1978).

Where the inability to amend would entirely foreclose the requesting party’s case, and where the opposing party could show no prejudice to his case from the proposed amendment (other than the “prejudice” of having the garnishment determined on its merits), and where no prejudice to the court itself was evident from the record, the trial court abuses its discretion in ignoring the garnishee’s amended answer. Brown v. Schumann, 40 Colo. App. 336, 575 P.2d 443 (1978).

Pending appellate review does not convert a judgment to a contingent liability or to a debt owing in the future. Shawn v. 1776 Corp., 787 P.2d 183 (Colo. App. 1989).

Stay of further garnishment proceedings until garnished judgments were no longer subject to stays of execution is the proper procedure and fully protects the interests of both garnishee and garnishor. Shawn v. 1776 Corp., 787 P.2d 183 (Colo. App. 1989).

A liability is not contingent merely because the garnishee disputes whether it breached its contract with the debtor. Walk-In Med. Centers, Inc. v. Breuer Capital Corp., 778 F. Supp. 1116 (D. Colo. 1991).

Unless a notice of garnishment properly runs with an accurate and sufficiently specific description against the individual to whom the garnishee may be indebted, a garnishee is totally unaffected by the notice served upon him. Anderson Boneless Beef v. Sunshine Health Care Center, Inc., 852 P.2d 1340 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in Stone v. Chapels for Meditation, Inc., 33 Colo. App. 346, 519 P.2d 1233 (1974).

II. PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO ALL FORMS OF GARNISHMENTS.

A. When Writ Issues.

Annotator’s note. Since section (b) of this rule was similar to § 129 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Before the turn of the century it was impossible to seize a debt owed by a nonresident garnishee to a principal defendant where the court had no jurisdiction over the situs of the debt. Garrett v. Garrett, 30 Colo. App. 167, 490 P.2d 313 (1971).

Under the present rule for garnishment, a court has jurisdiction for garnishment of a debt upon obtaining jurisdiction over the garnishee. Garrett v. Garrett, 30 Colo. App. 167, 490 P.2d 313 (1971).

Writ of garnishment can only be issued after issuance of a writ of attachment. Bernhardt v. Commodity Option Co., 187 Colo. 89, 528 P.2d 919 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1004, 95 S. Ct. 2406, 44 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1975).

However, a proceeding by garnishment, though an independent suit, is auxiliary to the main suit. McPhee v. Gomer, 6 Colo. App. 461, 41 P. 836 (1895).

A judgment is hypothetical when taken in advance of a judgment in the main suit, as it is dependent upon a judgment subsequently obtained. McPhee v. Gomer, 6 Colo. App. 461, 41 P. 836 (1895).

The issuance of a post-judgment writ of garnishment without a writ of execution is one alternative authorized by C.R.C.P. 69(a). Warner/Elektra/Atlantic Corp. v. B & R Record & Tape Merchandisers, Inc., 40 Colo. App. 179, 570 P.2d 1320 (1977).

When the creditor and debtor have already participated in a complete hearing on the merits of the debt, as is the case with post-judgment garnishment, there is no due process advantage to be gained by forcing the garnishor to file an additional writ. Warner/Elektra/Atlantic Corp. v. B & R Record & Tape Merchandisers, Inc., 40 Colo. App. 179, 570 P.2d 1320 (1977).

When the principal judgment has been obtained, the validity of the judgment against the garnishee depends upon the validity of the judgment against the defendant. McPhee v. Gomer, 6 Colo. App. 461, 41 P. 836 (1895).

Without jurisdiction of the defendant and a judgment against him, a judgment against the garnishee is void, and its payment will not protect the garnishee. McPhee v. Gomer, 6 Colo. App. 461, 41 P. 836 (1895).

Garnishment is proper only after a valid judgment has been entered. W. Med. Prop. Corp. v. Denver Opportunity, Inc., 482 F. Supp. 1205 (D. Colo. 1980).

If the debtor could bring an immediate action to recover the debt from the garnishee, then the debt is due and payable within the meaning of the rule. Martinez v. Dixon, 710 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1985); Flanders Elec. v. Davall Controls & Eng., 831 P.2d 492 (Colo. App. 1992).

In the absence of statute, if the assessment or demand has not been previously made in accordance with law, the garnishee is not liable. Universal Fire Ins. Co. v. Tabor, 16 Colo. 531, 27 P. 890 (1891).

Garnishee cannot be placed in a worse position than if defendant enforced his own claim. In the absence of fraud between defendant and a garnishee, the latter cannot be placed, through garnishment proceedings, in a worse position than if defendant’s claim were enforced by defendant himself. Universal Fire Ins. Co. v. Tabor, 16 Colo. 531, 27 P. 890 (1891).

Writ of garnishment impounds all moneys held by garnishee and owing to the judgment debtor as of the date the writ is served. Graybar Elec. Co. v. Watkins Elec. Co., 626 P.2d 1157 (Colo. App. 1980), rev’d on other grounds, 662 P.2d 1064 (Colo. 1983).

The trial court obtains jurisdiction over all the monies held by garnishee which are owing to the judgment debtor on the date of the service of the writ of garnishment. Martinez v. Dixon, 710 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1985).

A sheriff is not required to make diligent search for other property of defendant before writ may issue. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. v. Lednum, 82 Colo. 472, 260 P. 1017 (1927).

An indebtedness only can be made the subject of garnishment, and, in order that a liability may be an indebtedness within the meaning of the law, it must arise out of contract. Lewis v. City & County of Denver, 9 Colo. App. 328, 48 P. 317 (1897).

Garnishment applies only to contracts and not to tort actions. The controlling characteristic of the remedy by garnishment is that the liability of the garnishee must originate in, and be dependent on, contract. A right of action for a tort is not, therefore, the subject of garnishment in most jurisdictions. A claim in tort, not reduced to judgment, is not a debt within the meaning of the statutes in reference to garnishment. And the rule is the same where as between the tortfeasor and the person to whom the wrong was done the latter might at his option either hold the tortfeasor to his liability in tort, or, waiving the tort, treat him as his debtor, since the creditor of the wronged person is not at liberty to exercise this option in his place and so evade the general rule as to garnishment of claims in tort by substituting therefor a liquidated claim "quasi ex contractu". Black v. Plumb, 94 Colo. 318, 29 P.2d 708 (1934).

A court should dismiss the action when it appears beyond question that the action sounds in tort. Donald Co. v. Dubinsky, 74 Colo. 128, 219 P. 209 (1923); Black v. Plumb, 94 Colo. 318, 29 P.2d 708 (1934).

A tort claim cannot be adjudicated in a garnishment procedure, for to do so compels the garnishee to enter into combat with an adversary other than its own and do battle with one who had never had any contract relation with him. Steen v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 157 Colo. 99, 401 P.2d 254 (1965).

Since there is nothing in an insurance policy, either expressly or impliedly, making a garnisher privy in contract with an insured, a stranger to the insurance policy involved, as a garnisher, can have no claim against the company, as garnishee, unless and until such transpires. Steen v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 157 Colo. 99, 401 P.2d 254 (1965).

Where one, for a valuable consideration, has assumed the obligation of another, he may be held liable as garnishee, and it is not necessary that the garnishee hold tangible real or personal property of the debtor, for the assumption of the debts of another when in proper form is a right, credit, or chose in action required to be reported in garnishment proceedings. Field Family Constr. Co. v. Ryan, 145 Colo. 598, 360 P.2d 110 (1961).

A widow's allowance is subject to garnishment. Isbell-Kent-Oakes Dry Goods Co. v. Larimer County Bank & Trust Co., 75 Colo. 451, 226 P. 293 (1924).

A plaintiff in garnishment does not stand in the position of a purchaser in good faith and for value, but is in no better position than a purchaser or assignee with notice. Collins v. Thuringer, 92 Colo. 433, 21 P.2d 709 (1933).

A garnishment proceeding cannot displace prior valid and bona fide existing right and claims against the debt or property involved. Collins v. Thuringer, 92 Colo. 433, 21 P.2d 709 (1933).

For example, an attorney's lien is prior and superior to any right acquired by a plaintiff in such proceedings. Collins v. Thuringer, 92 Colo. 433, 21 P.2d 709 (1933).

Garnishment under executions is properly subordinated to garnishment under writs of attachment theretofore served on the same creditor, although the latter are, as a precautionary measure, again served on the same date as that issued under the writ of execution. Larimer County Bank & Trust Co. v. Colo. Rubber Co., 79 Colo. 4, 243 P. 622 (1926).

A creditor accepting provisions of assignment cannot reach funds of sale through garnishment. If a creditor accepts, and acts under, the provisions of an assignment for the benefit of creditors, he may not thereafter repudiate his acceptance and claim property in the hands of the trustee for the satisfaction of his debt or reach funds derived from the sale thereof by proceedings in garnishment. McMullin v. Keogh-Doyle Meat Co., 96 Colo. 298, 42 P.2d 463 (1935).

Contingent liabilities are not garnishable. Flanders Elec. v. Davall Controls & Eng., 831 P.2d 492 (Colo. App. 1992).

B. Service of Writ.

Annotator's note. Since section (c) of the prior version of this rule was similar to § 130 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Creditor must proceed in state where employment services rendered. The state in which services were rendered and in which the employer and employee reside is the situs of a chose and action for wages, and a creditor of the employee, who would reach the fund by garnishment, must proceed in that state. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Maggard, 6 Colo. App. 85, 39 P. 985 (1895).

The fact that the employer is a railroad company operating a line through different states does not change this rule. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. Maggard, 6 Colo. App. 85, 39 P. 985 (1895).

Where an order for a widow's allowance and service of garnishment summons affecting the same are made on the same day, they are presumptively at the same time. Isbell-Kent-Oakes Dry Goods Co. v. Larimer County Bank & Trust Co., 75 Colo. 451, 226 P. 293 (1924).

Content of summons not prescribed. This section contains no provision that the court set forth any particular matters in the summons. Security State Bank v. Weingardt, 42 Colo. App. 219, 597 P.2d 1045 (1979).

Writ of garnishment served upon garnishee is insufficient if it fails to provide due process notice that a judgment could be entered against the garnishee based solely upon amount of judgment previously entered if garnishee fails to respond. Don J. Best Trust v. Cherry Creek Nat. Bank, 792 P.2d 303 (Colo. App. 1990).

A writ of garnishment pursuant to this rule and C.R.C.P. 403 provides a judgment creditor with an efficient mechanism for garnishing property to satisfy a proper judgment, provides the judgment debtor with an expedited procedure to protect his or her exempt property, and affords the judgment debtor significantly more process than is required by the United States and Colorado Constitutions. Ortiz v. Valdez, 971 P.2d 1076 (Colo. App. 1998).

C. Jurisdiction.

Garnishment cannot be extended by construction to cases which are not within both its letter and spirit, although it is true that the garnishment statutes of Colorado specifically require that they shall be liberally construed so as to promote their objects. This applies, however, only to the enforcement of the remedy after jurisdiction has attached; it does not permit courts to enlarge or extend by implication the scope of the statutes, so as to bring within their jurisdiction any cases except those to which the statutes manifestly and clearly apply. As to this, the rule of strict construction prevails, the statutes being in derogation of the common law. Troy Laundry & Mach. Co. v. City & County of Denver, 11 Colo. App. 368, 53 P. 256 (1898); Black v. Plumb, 94 Colo. 318, 29 P.2d 708 (1934).

Where a garnishee is doing business within Colorado, service of a writ of garnishment upon it at its place of business properly brings it within the jurisdiction of the court in a garnishment proceeding. Garrett v. Garrett, 30 Colo. App. 167, 490 P.2d 313 (1971).

Where it is claimed that the court does not have jurisdiction, but there was a judgment and execution in the main cause, regularly obtained, a return of the writ of garnishment, showing due service, gives the court jurisdiction over the garnishee. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. v. Lednum, 82 Colo. 472, 260 P. 1017 (1927) (decided under § 135 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

A garnishment can reach only such property as belongs to the debtor. Denver Joint Stock Land Bank v. Moore, 93 Colo. 151, 25 P.2d 180 (1933); People ex rel. J.W., 174 P.3d 315 (Colo. App. 2007).

This rule shows an intent that every sort of interest of the debtor might be garnished. Bank of Grand Junction v. Bank of Vernal, 81 Colo. 483, 256 P. 660 (1927).

The assertion by a garnishee of a jurisdictional defense to a judgment for which he is sought to be held is not a collateral but a direct attack upon the judgment. Tabor v. Bank of Leadville, 35 Colo. 1, 83 P. 1060 (1905).

Dormancy of judgment in foreign state does not defeat rights of creditor under this rule. Ryan v. Duffield, 899 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1995).

Rather than reviving a judgment lien obtained in a foreign state and subsequently recorded in Colorado, garnishments created new and separate liens against the estate of the judgment debtor. Further, the garnishments were not an effort by the judgment creditor to maintain an action in Colorado that could not be maintained in the foreign state, but instead were ancillary to the judgment previously obtained. Ryan v. Duffield, 899 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1995).

D. Objection of Judgment Debtor — Exemptions.

Law reviews. For note, "A Discussion of Garnishment and Its Exemptions", see 27 Dicta 453 (1950).

Absence of a creditor-debtor relationship between judgment debtor and garnishee and the existence of an agreement between such parties which specifically negated garnishee's assumption of any of judgment debtor's liability precluded judgment creditors' proceeding against garnishee. Coin Serv. Investors, Inc. v. Grooms, 743 P.2d 42 (Colo. App. 1987).

Garnishee is entitled to an evidentiary hearing concerning the validity of the garnished debt in order to afford due process to the garnishee. Maddalone v. C.D.C., Inc., 765 P.2d 1047 (Colo. App. 1988).

Failure to comply with a court order does not supercede requirement to set a hearing. The court may not sanction a party for his or her failure to comply with a court order by refusing to set a hearing on an objection or claim of exemption. The setting of a hearing is mandatory, not discretionary. Borrayo v. Lefever, 159 P.3d 657 (Colo. App. 2006).

Husband in post-dissolution garnishment proceeding received a proper hearing under subsection 6(c)(4) where trial court conducted a timely and thorough hearing at which it heard argument and received evidence in the form of exhibits from the interested parties and at which the husband's counsel neither requested the opportunity to call witnesses nor objected to the proceeding. In re Gedgaudas, 978 P.2d 677 (Colo. App. 1999).

E. Answer.

A garnishee's answer is made with reference to the facts existing at the time of the service of a writ of garnishment. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

If, at that time, the garnishee owes the defendant a debt, or has personal property of the defendant in his possession or under his control, he must so answer and abide the judgment of a court. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

If, at that time, he is not indebted to the defendant, or has not in his possession or under his control, any property of the defendant, he is entitled to a discharge. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

Garnishee is not answerable for effects of the defendant coming into his hands, or indebtedness accruing from him to the defendant, after the garnishment. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

It is only where the answer of a garnishee shows that he is indebted to the defendant, has personal property in his possession or under his control belonging to the defendant, or where his answer denying indebtedness to the defendant or possession of his property is successfully controverted that a judgment against him is lawful. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

In order to charge him upon his answer, it must contain a clear admission of a debt due to, or the possession of attachable property of the defendant. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

Where his answer is a substantial denial of indebtedness, or possession of attachable property belonging to the defendant, he is entitled to a judgment of discharge, unless the force of the denial is overcome by other statements in the answer or unless the answer is shown to be untrue. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

A delivery by the garnishee to the sheriff can be ordered only where the answer admits possession in the garnishee of property belonging to the defendant or where, upon a trial of issue joined upon the answer, such possession is

"Supplemental answer" held no answer at all where time to answer exhausted. Bragdon v. Bradt, 16 Colo. App. 65, 64 P. 248 (1901).

Note properly turned over to sheriff. Where a note in the hands of a garnishee is held pending the result of litigation on final determination of which the note inures to the benefit of the judgment creditor, it is properly turned over to the sheriff with the order that he make disposition of it in the manner required by law. Union Deposit Co. v. Driscoll, 95 Colo. 140, 33 P.2d 251 (1934).

A contingent liability is not garnishable. When a garnishee alleges a contingent liability in his answer to the writ of garnishment, the proper procedure is to allow the garnishor to traverse the garnishee's answer, followed by a trial on the issues framed. Haselden Langley Constructors, Inc. v. Graybar Elec. Co., 662 P.2d 1064 (Colo. 1983).

Payment to creditor's attorneys is payment to creditor. Where money is deposited in court by the garnishee in garnishment proceedings, payment of the fund to attorneys for the garnisheeing creditor is payment to the creditor, and an order to repay part of the fund is proper. Hahnwald v. Schlapfer, 82 Colo. 313, 260 P. 105 (1927).

Default for failure of garnishee "to answer or pay" only applies if garnishee fails to answer or pay any nonexempt earnings. People ex rel. J.W., 174 P.3d 315 (Colo. App. 2007).

F. Traverse of Answer.

Annotator's note. Since sections (m) and (n) of the prior version of this rule were similar to §§ 144 and 145 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Previously, an order denying a motion to discharge a garnishee for failure of plaintiff to traverse answer of garnishee within required period was not appealable as a "final judgment, decree or order" where no final judgment was entered and garnishee specifically saved right to further challenge court's jurisdiction and nothing in record indicated that court had passed on garnishee's answer. Steel v. Revieille, 102 Colo. 271, 78 P.2d 980 (1938).

Still garnishee cannot take advantage of his own delay. A garnishee, by its own delay having made it impossible for the plaintiff to file the traverse within the time allowed by this section, is in no position to complain, since he cannot take advantage of a situation brought about by his own neglect. Stollins v. Shideler, 91 Colo. 40, 11 P.2d 562 (1932).

A traverse stating only conclusions of law and not facts is insufficient. Day v. Bank of Del Norte, 76 Colo. 223, 230 P. 785 (1924).

The answer of the garnishee and the traverse of the plaintiffs are the only pleadings provided by this rule, and make up the issues in garnishment proceedings. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp. v. Mitchell, 120 Colo. 531, 211 P.2d 551 (1949).

Any new matter pleaded in the traverse is deemed to be denied or avoided. General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp. v. Mitchell, 120 Colo. 531, 211 P.2d 551 (1949).

Where the garnishee has no opportunity to plead to a reply without further pleading, he can avail himself of any defense he might have to the new matter set up in the affidavit. Jones v. Langhorne, 19 Colo. 206, 34 P. 997 (1893).

A partner may set up nonjoinder of copartner as a defense. Where a partner is sued individually for a firm debt he is usually required to plead the nonjoinder of his copartners in order that he may avail himself of this defense, but this general rule has no application to garnishment proceedings under this rule. Jones v. Langhorne, 19 Colo. 206, 34 P. 997 (1893).

Subsection 8(b)(5) provides authority pursuant to § 13-16-122 (1)(h) to make an award of attorney fees making § 13-17-101 et seq. inapplicable. United Bank v. State Treasurer, 797 P.2d 851 (Colo. App. 1990).

An award of attorney fees under this rule is at the trial court's discretion. United Guar. Residential Ins. Co. v. Dimmick, 916 P.2d 638 (Colo. App. 1996).

An award of attorney fees, costs, and expenses under section 8(b)(5) is limited to those fees, costs, and expenses incurred to prepare and file the traverse and prosecute the traverse proceeding. L & R Exploration Venture v. CCG, LLC, 2015 COA 49, 351 P.3d 569.

G. Intervention.

Annotator's note. Since section 9 of this rule is similar to § 146 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This section 9 is not mandatory, and thus, one asserting rights to property which is the subject of garnishment proceedings is free to ignore those garnishment proceedings and file an independent action to enforce those rights. El Paso County Bank v. Charles R. Milisen & Co., 622 P.2d 594 (Colo. App. 1980).

In garnishment proceedings, intervention is governed by this rule which provides that a party shall proceed in accordance with C.R.C.P. 24. Capitol Indus. Bank v. Strain, 166 Colo. 55, 442 P.2d 187 (1968).

Allegations of the petition in intervention held sufficient to make out a prima facie case for intervening assignee. Denver Joint Stock Land Bank v. Moore, 93 Colo. 151, 25 P.2d 180 (1933).

With denial of right of intervention constituting reversible error. Where, in a garnishment proceeding, a third party files a petition in intervention claiming the property involved, he is entitled to have his claim tried and determined, and a denial of that right constitutes reversible error. Burnett v. Jeffers, 88 Colo. 613, 299 P. 18 (1931).

Where in due time. Where the intervention is before the judgment against the garnishee and it cannot be said that the garnishment proceedings have then been determined, the intervention, therefore, is in due time. Hahnwald v. Schlaffer, 82 Colo. 313, 260 P. 105 (1927).

It is error for a trial court to quash a garnishment where the writ of garnishment is issued in accordance with this rule and the answer and return of the garnishee are made within the time prescribed by rule when the regularity of the garnishment proceeding is not attacked and a motion to quash is based wholly upon a claimed right to intervene; but the intervenor tacitly recognizes the validity of the proceedings by having filed its motion to intervene therein. Capitol Indus. Bank v. Strain, 166 Colo. 55, 442 P.2d 187 (1968).

An intervention by definition involves third parties, and such strangers to the original garnishment proceeding, by asserting ownership of the disputed property, necessarily put their ownership status, and all related questions, at issue. Great Neck Plaza, L.P. v. Le Peep Restaurants, 37 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2001).

Applied in Susman v. Exchange Nat'l Bank, 117 Colo. 12, 183 P.2d 571 (1947).

H. Set-off.

Law reviews. For article, "Setoff and Security Interests In Deposit Accounts", see 17 Colo. Law. 2108 (1988).

Annotator's note. Since section (p) of the prior version of this rule was similar to § 147 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

By this section a garnishee is allowed to retain or deduct out of the property or credits of the defendant in his hands all demands against the defendant of which he could have availed himself had he not been summoned as garnishee. Tabor v. Bank of Leadville, 35 Colo. 1, 83 P. 1060 (1905).

Garnishee may plead as a defense or set-off whatever he might have pleaded were the suit directly against him by his own creditor.

Sauer v. Town of Nevadaville, 14 Colo. 54, 23 P. 87 (1890); Tabor v. Bank of Leadville, 35 Colo. 1, 83 P. 1060 (1905).

Garnishee is not to be placed in a worse position. Under no circumstances shall a garnishee, by the operation of the proceedings against him, be placed in any worse condition than he would be if the defendant's claim against him were enforced by the defendant himself. Tabor v. Bank of Leadville, 35 Colo. 1, 83 P. 1060 (1905); Day v. Bank of Del Norte, 76 Colo. 223, 230 P. 785 (1924).

Bank receiver was entitled to set-off compensation due him. Where an attempt is made in a garnishment proceeding to make a bank receiver liable for a judgment against the bank, such receiver is entitled to plead as a defense or set-off the compensation due him by the bank even though his appointment as such was void. Tabor v. Bank of Leadville, 35 Colo. 1, 83 P. 1060 (1905).

A garnisheed bank may apply the amount on deposit to the credit of a debtor to the payment of his note to it although not due. Day v. Bank of Del Norte, 76 Colo. 223, 230 P. 785 (1924).

Agreement after service of writ would be void. An agreement by a garnishee to apply upon or deduct from credits of the defendant in his possession, a loan made by him to the defendant after service of the writ would be void and could not be enforced by any party thereto. Day v. Bank of Del Norte, 76 Colo. 223, 230 P. 785 (1924).

Garnishee bank is entitled to claim set-off against debtor's account for moneys owed to bank even though moneys were not due at time of service of writ of garnishment. Colo. Nat. Bank - Arvada v. Greaney, 720 P.2d 611 (Colo. App. 1986).

Landlord's lien. A lease may create a valid landlord's lien, enforceable under section 8 of this rule as a set-off. Beneficial Fin. Co. v. Bach, 665 P.2d 1034 (Colo. App. 1983).

The rights and liabilities of a garnishee are to be determined as of the date of the garnishment and not upon a state of facts that existed theretofore or thereafter. Day v. Bank of Del Norte, 76 Colo. 223, 230 P. 785 (1924).

It is unreasonable to require a garnishee to claim a set-off immediately upon service of the writ of garnishment; the more reasonable approach allows a garnishee the same time period to claim set-off as allowed to file its answers to the garnishment interrogatories. Colo. Nat. Bank - Arvada v. Greaney, 720 P.2d 611 (Colo. App. 1986); Flanders Elec. v. Davall Controls & Eng., 831 P.2d 492 (Colo. App. 1992).

It is the responsibility of the trial court to determine the amounts and reasonableness of set-offs, and, absent an abuse of discretion, its decision will not be overturned. Flanders

Elec. v. Davall Controls & Eng., 831 P.2d 492 (Colo. App. 1992).

Law firm had statutory charging lien on settlement proceeds. State's lien for child support did not have priority over charging lien. State was entitled to net settlement proceeds after deduction of attorney fees. A garnishment can only reach property that belongs to the debtor. People ex rel. J.W., 174 P.3d 315 (Colo. App. 2007).

I. Claims of Third Persons.

Annotator's note. Since section (i) and (j) of the prior version of this rule were similar to §§ 138 and 141 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing these sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This section puts burden on claimant not only to assert an interest in the property but also to establish the extent of his interest. Security State Bank v. Weingardt, 42 Colo. App. 219, 597 P.2d 1045 (1979).

When a garnishee in his answer states that a third party claims property in his possession belonging to the debtor, it is the duty of the court to issue a citation or summons to said party requiring him to appear and set up his claim. Burnett v. Jeffers, 88 Colo. 613, 299 P. 18 (1931).

However, this rule refers to answers in good faith, so if a garnishee knows the truth he must tell it and if he tells a falsehood, at least if he tells it for a fraudulent purpose, he must pay damages. International State Bank v. Trinidad Bean & Elevator Co., 79 Colo. 286, 245 P. 489 (1926).

Payment to one other than judgment debtor held improper. Where garnishee-defendant, after answering writ of garnishment, discovers that a contract between it and judgment debtor requires that payments be made jointly to debtor and another, the garnishee-defendant then pays the latter part of the sum which it admitted in its answer was due and owing the judgment debtor, and he files an amended answer to that effect, such payment is improper without a release of garnishment or order of court. Welbourne Dev. Co. v. Affiliated Clearance Corp., 28 Colo. App. 313, 472 P.2d 684 (1970).

It is not essential that notice of an assignment be given in advance to a garnishee, although in the absence of knowledge or notice the latter would be protected against double payment. Denver Joint Stock Land Bank v. Moore, 93 Colo. 151, 25 P.2d 180 (1933).

If, during the pendency of garnishment proceedings, it is established that an assignment of the subject-matter antedating the garnishment was actually executed, the absence of previous notice to the garnishee would be immaterial, and a judgment creditor would not be entitled to notice as such. Denver Joint Stock Land Bank v. Moore, 93 Colo. 151, 25 P.2d 180 (1933).

A creditor is entitled to a fund owing defendant by his employer as against the claims of another creditor of which he had no notice where the claims of which said other creditor are not based on a contract sufficient to bind the fund. This being determined, then the only further action within the jurisdiction of the trial court is, on application, to order a judgment against the employer in favor of the defendant for the use of the plaintiff pursuant to the terms of this section. Meyer v. Delta Market, 98 Colo. 421, 57 P.2d 3 (1936).

Once a third-party claimant has conceded that the disputed property may be garnished by a creditor, the claimant is thereafter estopped from claiming the proceeds of the garnishment unless there is an agreement otherwise. Securities Investor Protection Corp. v. Goldberg, 893 F.2d 1139 (10th Cir. 1990).

Applied in Susman v. Exchange Nat'l Bank, 117 Colo. 12, 183 P.2d 571 (1947).

J. Release and Discharge.

A judgment in the principal proceeding is presumptively valid while lodged in an appellate court for review. Zurich Ins. Co. v. Bonebrake, 137 Colo. 37, 320 P.2d 975 (1958).

Such judgment when not superseded by virtue of a failure to furnish the required bond leaves a judgment creditor in the position to take usual steps to enforce collection of his judgment, precisely as if supersedeas has not been granted. Zurich Ins. Co. v. Bonebrake, 137 Colo. 37, 320 P.2d 975 (1958).

The reversal of a judgment upon which a garnishment is based leaves nothing to sustain the judgment against the garnishee. Zurich Ins. Co. v. Bonebrake, 137 Colo. 37, 320 P.2d 975 (1958).

If the original judgment is reversed, a judgment in garnishment is deprived of a basis and falls with it. Zurich Ins. Co. v. Bonebrake, 137 Colo. 37, 320 P.2d 975 (1958).

The existence of a valid judgment is a jurisdictional prerequisite to garnishment relief. Zurich Ins. Co. v. Bonebrake, 137 Colo. 37, 320 P.2d 975 (1958).

Where the judgment in the main case has been reversed, then, if it is made the basis of a garnishment, it must follow that a judgment in the garnishment proceeding cannot stand alone and must be reversed. Zurich Ins. Co. v. Bonebrake, 137 Colo. 37, 320 P.2d 975 (1958).

Since garnishee's liability is not established, Where the case which found garnishee's liability is reversed and remanded for new trial, the garnishee's liability is not established, and garnishment should be vacated. Mitchell v. Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co., 179 Colo. 372, 502 P.2d 79 (1972).

Applied in E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co. v. Lednum, 82 Colo. 472, 260 P. 1017 (1927).

K. Disbursement of Funds.

Court approval not required. Subsection 2(h) requires the clerk to disburse funds to the judgment creditor without further application or order. The fact that the judgment debtor had applied for a stay had no effect on the clerk's authority to release the garnished funds. Ryan v. Duffield, 899 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1995).

III. SPECIFIC FORMS OF GARNISHMENT.

Law reviews. For article, "The Nuts and Bolts of Collecting Support", see 19 Colo. Law. 1595 (1990).

Past-due child support payments in themselves constitute debt. Colo. State Bank v. Utt, 622 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1980).

Amount defendant admittedly owed for past-due child support may be garnished by bank which held judgment against former wife. Colo. State Bank v. Utt, 622 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1980).

Foreclosure sale excess proceeds may be garnished. TCF Equip. Fin. v. Pub. Trustee, 2013 COA 8, 297 P.3d 1048.

Law firm had statutory charging lien on settlement proceeds. State's lien for child support did not have priority over charging lien. State was entitled to net settlement proceeds after deduction of attorney fees. A garnishment can only reach property that belongs to the debtor. People ex rel. J.W., 174 P.3d 315 (Colo. App. 2007).

C.R.C.P. 102, this rule, and § 4-8-112 may be harmonized so that stock certificates may be reached by a creditor either by actual physical seizure, by a writ of attachment, if actually seized, or by serving the person who possesses the certificate with a writ of garnishment. Moreland v. Alpert, 124 P.3d 896 (Colo. App. 2005).

Rule 104. Replevin

(a) Personal Property. The plaintiff in an action to recover the possession of personal property may, at the time of the commencement of the action, or at any time before trial, claim the delivery of such property to him as provided in this Rule.

(b) Causes, Affidavit. Where a delivery is claimed, the plaintiff, his agent or attorney, or some credible person for him, shall, by verified complaint or by complaint and affidavit under penalty of perjury show to the court as follows:

(1) That the plaintiff is the owner of the property claimed or is entitled to possession thereof and the source of such title or right; and if plaintiff's interest in such property is based upon a written instrument, a copy thereof shall be attached;

(2) That the property is being detained by the defendant against the plaintiff's claim of right to possession; the means by which the defendant came into possession thereof, and the specific facts constituting detention against the right of the plaintiff to possession;

(3) A particular description of the property, a statement of its actual value, and a statement to his best knowledge, information and belief concerning the location of the property and of the residence and business address, if any, of the defendant;

(4) That the property has not been taken for a tax assessment or fine pursuant to a statute; or seized under an execution against the property of the plaintiff; or if so seized, that it is by statute exempt from seizure.

(c) Show Cause Order; Hearing within 14 Days. The court shall without delay, examine the complaint and affidavit, and if it is satisfied that they meet the requirements of section (b), it shall issue an order directed to the defendant to show cause why the property should not be taken from the defendant and delivered to the plaintiff. Such order shall fix the date and time for the hearing thereof. The hearing date shall be not more than 14 days from the date of the issuance of the order and the order must have been served at least 7 days prior to the hearing date. The plaintiff may request a hearing date beyond 14 days, which request shall constitute a waiver of the right to a hearing not more than 14 days from the date of issuance of the order. Such order shall inform the defendant that he may file affidavits on his behalf with the court and may appear and present testimony in his behalf at the time of such hearing, or that he may, at or prior to such hearing, file with the court a written undertaking to stay the delivery of the property, in accordance with the provisions of section (j) of this rule, and that, if he fails to appear at the hearing on the order to show cause or to file an undertaking, plaintiff may apply to the court for an order requiring the sheriff to take immediate possession of the property described in the complaint and deliver same to the plaintiff. The summons and complaint, if not previously served, and the order shall be served on the defendant and the order shall fix the manner in which service shall be made, which shall be by service in accordance with the provisions of Rule 4, C.R.C.P., or in such manner as the court may determine to be reasonably calculated to afford notice thereof to the defendant under the circumstances appearing from the complaint and affidavit.

(d) Order for Possession Prior to Hearing. Subject to the provisions of section 5-5-104, C.R.S. 1973, and upon examination of the complaint and affidavit and such other evidence or testimony as the court may thereupon require, an order of possession may be issued prior to hearing, if probable cause appears that any of the following exist:

(1) The defendant gained possession of the property by theft.

(2) The property consists of one or more negotiable instruments or credit cards.

(3) By reason of specific, competent evidence shown, by testimony with the personal knowledge of an affiant or witness, the property is perishable, and will perish before any noticed hearing can be had, or that the defendant may destroy, dismantle, remove parts from, or in any way substantially change the character of the property, or the defendant may conceal or remove the property from the jurisdiction of the court to sell the property to an innocent purchaser.

(4) That the defendant has by contract voluntarily and intelligently and knowingly waived his right to a hearing prior to losing possession of the property by means of a court order.

Where an order of possession has been issued prior to hearing under the provisions of this section, the defendant or other persons from whom possession of said property has been taken, may apply to the court for an order shortening time for hearing on the order to show cause, and the court may, upon such application, shorten the time for hearing, and direct that the matter shall be heard on not less than forty-eight hours' notice to the plaintiff.

(e) Bond. An order of possession shall not issue pursuant to section (d) of this rule until plaintiff has filed with the court in an amount set by the court in its discretion not to exceed double the value of the property a written undertaking executed by plaintiff and such surety as the court may require for the return of the property to the defendant, if return thereof be ordered, and for the payment to the defendant of any sum that may from any cause be recovered against the plaintiff.

(f) Temporary Order to Preserve Property. Under the circumstances described in section (b) of this Rule, or in lieu of the immediate issuance of an order of possession under any circumstances described in section (d) of this Rule, the court may, in addition to the issuance of the order to show cause, issue such temporary orders, directed to the defendant, prohibiting or requiring such acts with respect to the property as may appear to be necessary for the preservation of the rights of the parties and the status of the property.

(g) Order for Possession after Hearing; Bond; Directed to Sheriff. Upon the hearing on the order to show cause, which hearing shall be held as a matter of course by the court, the court shall consider the showing made by the parties appearing, and shall make a preliminary determination of which party, with reasonable probability, is entitled to possession, use, and disposition of the property pending final adjudication of the claims of the parties. If the court determines that the action is one in which a pre-judgment order of possession should issue, it shall direct the issuance of such order and may require a bond in such amount and with such surety as the court may determine to protect the rights of the parties. Failure of the defendant to be present or represented at the hearing on the order to show cause shall not constitute a default in the main action. The order of possession shall be directed to the sheriff within whose jurisdiction the property is located.

(h) Contents of Possession Order. The order of possession shall describe the specific property to be seized, and shall specify the location or locations where there is probable cause to believe the property or some part thereof will be found. It shall direct the sheriff to seize the same as it is found, and to retain it in his custody. There shall be attached to such order a copy of the written undertaking filed by the plaintiff, and such order shall inform the defendant that he has the right to except to the sureties or to the amount of the bond upon the undertaking or to file a written undertaking for the redelivery of such property as provided in section (j).

Upon probable cause shown by further affidavit or declaration by the plaintiff or someone in his behalf, filed with the court, an order of possession may be endorsed by the court, without further notice, to direct the sheriff to search for the property at another specified location or locations and to seize the same if found.

The sheriff shall forthwith take the property if it be in the possession of the defendant or his agent, and retain it in his custody; except that when the personal property is then occupied as a dwelling [such as but not limited to a mobile home], the sheriff shall take constructive possession of the property and shall remove its occupants and take the property into his actual custody at the expiration of 10 days after the issuance of the order of possession, or at such earlier time as the property shall have been vacated.

(i) Sheriff May Break Building; When. If the property or any part thereof is in a building or enclosure, the sheriff shall demand its delivery, announcing his identity, purpose, and the authority under which he acts. If it is not voluntarily delivered, he shall cause the building or enclosure to be broken open in such manner as he reasonably believes will cause the least damage to the building or enclosure, and take the property into his possession. He may call upon the power of the county to aid and protect him, but if he reasonably believes that entry and seizure of the property will involve a substantial risk of death or serious bodily harm to any person, he shall refrain from seizing the property, and shall forthwith make a return before the court from which the order issued, setting forth the reasons for his belief that such risk exists. The court may make such orders and decrees as may be appropriate.

The sheriff shall, without delay, serve upon the defendant a copy of the order of possession and written undertaking by delivering the same to him personally, if he can be found or to his agent from whose possession the property is taken; or, if neither can be found, by leaving them at the usual place of abode of either with some person of suitable age and discretion; or if neither has any known place of abode, by mailing them to the last known address of either.

(j) When Returned to Defendant; Bond. At any time prior to the hearing on the order to show cause, or before the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, the defendant may require the return thereof upon filing with the court a written undertaking, in an amount set by the court in its discretion not to exceed double the value of the property and executed by the defendant and such surety as the court may direct for the delivery of the property to the plaintiff, if such delivery be ordered, and for the payment to the plaintiff of such sum as may for any cause be recovered against the defendant. At the time of filing such undertaking, the defendant shall serve upon the plaintiff or his attorney, in the manner provided by Rule 5, C.R.C.P., a notice of filing of such undertaking, to which a copy of such undertaking shall be attached, and shall cause proof of service thereof to be filed with the court. If such undertaking be filed prior to hearing on the order to show cause, proceedings thereunder shall terminate, unless exception is taken to the amount of the bond or the sufficiency of the surety. If, at the time of filing of such undertaking, the property shall be in the custody of the sheriff, such property shall be redelivered to the defendant 7 days after service of notice of filing such undertaking upon the plaintiff or his attorney.

(k) Exception to Sureties. Either party may, within two business days after service of an undertaking or notice of filing and undertaking under the provisions of this Rule, give written notice to the court and the other party that he excepts to the sufficiency of the surety or the amount of the bond. If he fails to do so, he is deemed to have waived all objections to them. When a party excepts the court shall hold a hearing to determine the sufficiency of the bond or surety. If the property be in the custody of the sheriff, he shall retain custody thereof until the hearing is completed or waived. If the excepting party prevails at the hearing, the sheriff shall proceed as if no such undertaking had been filed. If the excepting party does not prevail at the hearing, or the exception is waived, he shall deliver the property to the party filing such undertaking.

(l) Duty of Sheriff in Holding Goods. When the sheriff has taken property as provided in this Rule, he shall keep it in a secure place and deliver it to the party entitled thereto, upon receiving his fees for taking and his necessary expenses for keeping the same, after expiration of the time for filing of an undertaking for redelivery and for exception to the sufficiency of the bond, unless the court shall by order stay such delivery.

(m) Claim by Third Person. If the property taken is claimed by any other person than the defendant or plaintiff, such person may intervene under the provisions of Rule 24, C.R.C.P., and in the event of a judgment in his favor, he may also recover such damages as he may have suffered by reason of any wrongful detention of the property.

(n) Return; Papers by Sheriff. The sheriff shall return the order of possession and undertakings and affidavits with his proceedings thereon, to the court in which the action is pending, within 21 days after taking the property mentioned therein.

(o) Precedence on Docket. In all proceedings brought to recover the possession of personal property, all courts, in which such actions are pending, shall, upon request of any party thereto, give such actions precedence over all other civil actions, except actions to which special precedence is otherwise given by law, in the matter of the setting of the same for hearing or trial, and in hearing or trial thereof, to the end that all such actions shall be quickly heard and determined.

(p) Judgment. In an action to recover the possession of personal property, judgment for the plaintiff may be for the possession or the value thereof in case a delivery cannot be had, and damages for the detention. If the property has been delivered to the plaintiff, and the defendant claims a return thereof, judgment for the defendant may be for a return of the property, or the value thereof in case a return cannot be had, and damages for taking and withholding the same. The provisions of Rule 13, C.R.C.P., shall apply to replevin actions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Seizure of Person or Property: Rules 101-104", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 603 (1951).

Annotator's note. Since this rule is similar to §§ 85 through 96 and § 247 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

At common law replevin lay where there was an unlawful taking, and detinue where there was an unlawful detention. Denver Onyx & Marble Mfg. Co. v. Reynolds, 72 F. 464 (8th Cir. 1896).

This rule superseded the common-law action. The remedy provided by this rule supersedes the common-law action of replevin, whether in the cepit or in the detinet, and all the ancient learning relating to these distinctions became obsolete upon the adoption of the rule. Denver Onyx & Marble Mfg. Co. v. Reynolds, 72 F. 464 (8th Cir. 1896).

Purpose of prejudgment hearing. This rule clearly contemplates that the conflicting legal and equitable claims of the parties will be fully adjudicated in a trial on the merits. The prejudgment hearing serves the far narrower purpose of ensuring that a replevin defendant's constitutionally guaranteed property rights will not be jeopardized by unduly summary claim and delivery proceedings. Jack Kent Cadillac, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 403, 601 P.2d 626 (1979); Metro Nat. Bank v. District Court, 676 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1984).

Although a district court sits as a court of general jurisdiction in an action to replevy personal property, its powers are more limited where, in a prejudgment hearing on an order to show cause, the only issue to be decided is "which party, with reasonable probability, is entitled to possession, use, and disposition of the property pending final adjudication of the claims of the parties". Jack Kent Cadillac, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 403, 601 P.2d 626 (1979).

Order to show cause required for jurisdiction of possessory rights in property. A court conducting a hearing under this rule lacks jurisdiction unilaterally to affect possessory rights in any property not brought within its purview by a duly issued order to show cause. Jack Kent Cadillac, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 403, 601 P.2d 626 (1979).

The only issue to be determined in an action in replevin is ownership and right of possession. Amarillo Auto Auction, Inc. v. Hutchinson, 135 Colo. 320, 310 P.2d 715 (1957).

To maintain action, plaintiff's right to the possession of the property must be exclusive. Hoeffer v. Agee, 9 Colo. App. 189, 47 P. 973 (1897).

The vendee of an automobile under a conditional sales contract executed and valid in another state who has feloniously been deprived of possession of said automobile may recover the same from an innocent Colorado purchaser for value. Avis Rent-A-Car Sys. v. Woelfel, 155 Colo. 207, 393 P.2d 551 (1964).

Replevin for an undivided interest in property cannot be maintained. Hoeffer v. Agee, 9 Colo. App. 189, 47 P. 973 (1897).

Defendant must have actual or constructive possession. Appellant sought to recover from appellee-defendant the physical possession of a stock certificate upon allegation that he had purchased such shares from appellee, that such certificate had been delivered to him, that appellee had later surreptitiously regained possession and had continued to withhold possession of the stock notwithstanding demand. The undisputed evidence indicated that appellee had neither actual nor constructive possession of the subject stock certificate at the time the action was commenced, a prerequisite in an action in the nature of replevin. Brennan v. Sellers, 357 F.2d 150 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 828, 87 S. Ct. 61, 17 L. Ed. 2d 64, reh'g denied, 385 U.S. 984, 87 S. Ct. 531, 17 L. Ed. 2d 445 (1966).

Plaintiff may recover damages for taking of property or judgment for its value. Under this rule the action for the recovery of personal property lies, by one entitled to the possession, against one wrongfully holding the possession, whether the possession was acquired in good or bad faith. In the action, the plaintiff may, if he maintained his suit, recover damages for the taking or detention of the property, and, if the property cannot be returned, judgment for its value. Denver Onyx & Marble Mfg. Co. v. Reynolds, 72 F. 464 (8th Cir. 1896); Roblek v. Horst, 147 Colo. 55, 362 P.2d 869 (1961).

Adjustment of equities not authorized by jurisdiction over property and parties. Jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter does not authorize the trial court to enter whatever remedial orders it deems necessary to adjust the equities between the parties. Jack Kent Cadillac, Inc. v. District Court, 198 Colo. 403, 601 P.2d 626 (1979).

Since court had jurisdiction over the subject matter and over the person in a replevin action, and the person did not avail himself of opportunity to contest replevin action in that court but instead filed alternative actions in other courts and such other courts refused to disturb the replevin order, such person waived his right to contest the validity of the order in the replevin action in a subsequent action. Flickinger v. Ninth District Prod. Credit, 824 P.2d 19 (Colo. App. 1991).

Restrictions of Governmental Immunity Act apply to replevin action for car seized by police. Denver v. Desert Truck Sales, Inc., 837 P.2d 759 (Colo. 1992).

II. PLEADING: COMPLAINT AND AFFIDAVIT.

Commencement of action. No writ of replevin may be issued under this rule until an action in claim and delivery is commenced by the filing of a complaint which alleges the right of the plaintiff to the possession of personal property, and claims the delivery thereof. Gentry v. United States, 101 F. 51 (8th Cir. 1900).

Facts alleged in counterclaim and demand for return of all certificates held by plaintiff bank constitute a claim for replevin. Together with a "verified complaint for replevin" incorporating the answer, counterclaim, cross-claim, and third-party complaint, and sworn to by the defendant, the requirements of section (e) of this rule are met. Metro Nat. Bank v. District Court, 676 P.2d 19 (Colo. 1984).

The complaint must allege ownership. In an action to recover possession of personal property, the complaint must allege ownership, either general or special, otherwise the complaint will be bad on demurrer. Baker v. Cordwell, 6 Colo. 199 (1882); Reavis v. Stockel, 120 Colo. 82, 208 P.2d 94 (1949).

Plaintiff has the burden of affirmatively establishing his own title and right of immediate possession to the property in question. Bill Dreiling Motor Co. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins., 28 Colo. App. 318, 472 P.2d 153 (1970).

Complaint may be amended to conform to proof concerning ownership of property. In an action in replevin, in the disclosed circumstances, it is held that there was no abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court in permitting the plaintiff to amend its complaint to conform to the proof concerning ownership of certain of the property involved. Thomas v. First Nat'l Bank, 97 Colo. 474, 51 P.2d 589 (1935).

Defective affidavit. If affidavit is defective, the appellant is not in a condition to avail himself of any defects. Conly v. Friedman, 6 Colo. App. 160, 40 P. 348 (1895).

Allegations of value are binding on plaintiff. In a replevin action, allegations of the value of the property in the affidavit and sworn complaint are binding on plaintiffs. Startzell v. Bowers, 88 Colo. 135, 292 P. 601 (1930).

Where the seizure was wrongful, demand prior to the commencement of suit is unnecessary. Bartels v. Arms, 3 Colo. 72 (1876); Smith v. Jensen, 13 Colo. 213, 22 P. 434 (1889); Farncomb v. Stern, 18 Colo. 279, 32 P. 612 (1893).

Demand is only required when it is necessary to terminate the defendants' right of possession or to confer that right on the plaintiff. Lamping v. Keenan, 9 Colo. 390, 12 P. 434 (1884).

The only reason why demand is necessary in any case, is to give the defendant an opportunity to surrender without being put to costs; and while this is eminently proper, the object of the rule is fully accomplished, and the plaintiff sufficiently punished for his neglect by judgment against him for costs, without being compelled to surrender his goods. Denver Live Stock Comm'n Co. v. Parks, 41 Colo. 164, 91 P. 1110 (1907).

No proof of demand is necessary where the defendant claims ownership and right of possession. Hennessey v. Barnett, 12 Colo. App. 254, 55 P. 197 (1898); Denver Live Stock Comm'n Co. v. Parks, 41 Colo. 164, 91 P. 1110 (1907); Scott v. Bohe, 81 Colo. 454, 256 P. 315 (1927).

Nor where it is clear that it would have been unavailing. Scott v. Bohe, 81 Colo. 454, 256 P. 315 (1927).

A demand made after the beginning of the action but prior to the execution of the writ is sufficient. Denver Live Stock Comm'n Co. v. Parks, 41 Colo. 164, 91 P. 1110 (1907).

In replevin, fraud need not be specially pleaded. Sopris v. Truax, 1 Colo. 89 (1868).

Upon a general denial a defendant may show absolute title in himself or a third party but not a special property. Mason Tire Sales Co. v. Mason Tire & Rubber Co., 73 Colo. 42, 213 P. 117 (1923).

A party from whom personal property has been taken pursuant to a replevin order is entitled, upon voluntary dismissal of the action by the opposing party, to return of the property or its value unless the opposing party can establish its right to retain possession of the property. The burden of establishing the right to the property should remain on the party who initially obtained the replevin order. Where no trial is held, a plaintiff should not be permitted simply to retain the property without making a showing to establish its right to possession and without affording the defendant an opportunity to demonstrate that the property was wrongfully taken. Prefer v. PharmNetRx, LLC, 18 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2000).

III. BOND.

A defendant in a replevin action can recover from the surety, on the latter's bond, damages he has incurred as a result of the seizing of the property in his possession, without the requirement of showing an original judgment in his favor for the return of the property or in the alternative for damages in the event return is not possible. Denver Truck Exch., Inc. v. Globe Indem. Co., 162 Colo. 398, 426 P.2d 772 (1967).

The property must be returned in like good order and condition as when replevied. Trindle v. Register Printing & Publ'g Co., 58 Colo. 81, 143 P. 282 (1914).

A verdict for the plaintiff fixing the total value of the goods, not valuing any item separately, is conclusive upon the defendant, and his surety in the redelivery bond. Trindle v. Register Printing & Publ'g Co., 58 Colo. 81, 143 P. 282 (1914).

Bond covers only claims of possession and loss thereof. The language in section (e), "any sum that may from any cause be recovered", viewed in context, does not apply to claims unrelated to possession or the loss of the property at issue. White v. Jackson, 41 Colo. App. 433, 586 P.2d 243 (1978).

A defendant in a replevin action under this rule is entitled to recover from the surety whatever damages he has incurred as a result of the seizing of property in his possession; however, where he has lost his lien and the owner becomes entitled to possession, he suffers no damages as a result of the replevin. White v. Jackson, 41 Colo. App. 433, 586 P.2d 243 (1978).

IV. JUDGMENT.

Judgment to be for return of entire property when in the hands of the other party. Horn v. Citizens Sav. & Com. Bank, 8 Colo. App. 535, 46 P. 838 (1896); Jones v. Messenger, 40 Colo. 37, 90 P. 64 (1907); Duffy v. Wilson, 44 Colo. 340, 98 P. 826 (1908).

If possession cannot be had, judgment is for full value of property. Tucker v. Parks, 7 Colo. 62, 1 P. 427 (1883); Horn v. Citizens Sav. & Com. Bank, 8 Colo. App. 535, 46 P. 838 (1896); Jones v. Messenger, 40 Colo. 37, 90 P. 64 (1907); Duffy v. Wilson, 44 Colo. 340, 98 P. 826 (1908).

It is unimportant that the thing to be recovered cannot be identified. It is suggested that replevin will not lie for the sheep, because they cannot be identified. That is unimportant under this rule. If replevin will not lie, trover will, and under this rule, action for possession, with the alternative recovery of the property or the value thereof in such a case as this, is equivalent practically to the two together. The plaintiff states the ultimate facts and has such judgment as they justify. If the chattels cannot be delivered, their value must be paid, and the judgments in that respect are right. To hold otherwise would be to revert to the common-law forms of action now happily abolished. Clay, Robinson & Co. v. Martinez, 74 Colo. 10, 218 P. 903 (1923).

Defendant cannot complain of a judgment for the return of the property only. A judgment for the plaintiff, in an action of replevin should be in the alternative for the possession of the property, or the value thereof in case a delivery cannot be had; but, since this is for the protection of the plaintiff, the defendant cannot complain of a judgment for the return of the property only. Copeland v. Kilpatrick, 38 Colo. 208, 88 P. 472 (1906).

A judgment must be for the possession of the entire property to be operative. Jones v. Messenger, 40 Colo. 37, 90 P. 64 (1907); Duffy v. Wilson, 44 Colo. 340, 98 P. 826 (1908).

Value of property is basis for judgment. Only on evidence as to the value of property taken in replevin is there basis for judgment. Viles v. Jackson, 105 Colo. 68, 94 P.2d 1085 (1939).

Rule is satisfied by a finding of the total aggregate value of all the chattels wrongfully withheld. Stevenson v. Lord, 15 Colo. 131, 25 P. 313 (1890); Copeland v. Kilpatrick, 38 Colo. 208, 88 P. 472 (1906).

There is no need that the judgment should declare the separate value of each item of the recovery. Copeland v. Kilpatrick, 38 Colo. 208, 88 P. 472 (1906); Duffy v. Wilson, 44 Colo. 340, 98 P. 826 (1908).

A judgment in the alternative is not required where it would be useless. Where the goods in question have been consumed by defendant and therefore cannot possibly be delivered, it is proper to accept a finding of guilty, assessing the value. To require an alternative judgment would be a useless formality. Barnard v. Corlett, 62 Colo. 226, 161 P. 156 (1916); Denver Truck Exch., Inc. v. Globe Indem. Co., 162 Colo. 398, 426 P.2d 772 (1967).

Proof of facts under allegations determines relief. In a proper case the court may award a money judgment, without its being in the alternative, even though technically it was designated an action in replevin. Melnick v. Bowman, 102 Colo. 384, 79 P.2d 368 (1938).

Return and damages must be claimed in the answer. To authorize a judgment in a replevin suit, for the return of the property to the defendant or for its value, or for damage for its detention, the return and the damages must be claimed in the answer. And where the answer did not claim a return of the property or damage for its detention a judgment for its return and for damages for its detention was unwarranted and must be regarded as void. Gallup v. Wortmann, 11 Colo. App. 308, 53 P. 247 (1898).

Measure of damages. When neither fraud, malice, or wilful wrong in the taking or detention of the goods is alleged, the measure of damages is the value of the goods at the time of the taking or illegal detention. Barnard v. Corlett, 62 Colo. 226, 161 P. 156 (1916).

Damages for unlawful taking and detention. A party to a replevin action who is ultimately adjudged to have the right to possession is also entitled to damages for the unlawful taking and detention of the chattel. Roblek v. Horst, 147 Colo. 55, 362 P.2d 869 (1961).

Damages cannot be defeated by mere misnomer or bad form. While defendant's demands (other than for return of the property) are denominated "further answer", "cross complaint", and "separate and further cause of action", all are in fact for damages for wrongful taking and detention, recoverable under this section. They are not to be defeated by mere misnomer or bad form. Ellison v. Young, 71 Colo. 385, 206 P. 802 (1922).

Part of judgment awarding damages for indebtedness and attorney fees held void. In an action in replevin to secure possession of mortgaged property because of default in payment of the secured indebtedness, a judgment, insofar as it awards the property to plaintiff and for costs, may be valid, but void as to that part purporting to award damages for the indebtedness and for attorney fees. French v. Commercial Credit Co., 99 Colo. 447, 64 P.2d 127 (1936).

Judgment must be limited to ascertainment of whether there was any indebtedness. In an action in replevin by the holder of a chattel mortgage to obtain possession of the mortgaged property because the debtor was in default in payment of the secured note, the court has no jurisdiction to try the issue of indebtedness except to the point of ascertaining whether there was any indebtedness at all, and its judgment must be so limited. French v. Commercial Credit Co., 99 Colo. 447, 64 P.2d 127 (1936).

The amount of the judgment recovered by defendant is conclusive in a subsequent suit upon the replevin bond. Cantril v. Babcock, 11 Colo. 143, 17 P. 296 (1887); Denver Truck Exch., Inc. v. Globe Indem. Co., 162 Colo. 398, 426 P.2d 772 (1967).

Unauthorized use by bailee gives bailor the right of immediate possession. A use of the chattel of the bailee in a manner unauthorized by the contract of bailment gives the bailor the right of immediate possession, and he may maintain trover or replevin. Clay, Robinson & Co. v. Martinez, 74 Colo. 10, 218 P. 903 (1923).

REAL ESTATE

Rule 105. Actions Concerning Real Estate

(a) Complete Adjudication of Rights. An action may be brought for the purpose of obtaining a complete adjudication of the rights of all parties thereto, with respect to any real property and for damages, if any, for the withholding of possession. The court in its decree shall grant full and adequate relief so as to completely determine the controversy and enforce the rights of the parties. The court may at any time after the entry of the decree make such additional orders as may be required in aid of such decree.

(b) Record Interest; Actual Possession Requires Occupant Be Party. No person claiming any interest under or through a person named as a defendant need be made a party unless his interest is shown of record in the office of the recorder of the county where the real property is situated, and the decree shall be as conclusive against him as if he had been made a party; provided, however, if such action be for the recovery of actual possession of the property, the party in actual possession shall be made a party.

(c) Disclaimer Saves Costs. If any defendant in such action disclaims in his answer any interest in the property or allows judgment to be taken against him without answer, the plaintiff shall not recover costs against him, unless the court shall otherwise direct, provided that this section shall not apply to a defendant primarily liable on any indebtedness sought to be foreclosed or established as a lien.

(d) Execution of Quitclaim Deed Saves Costs. If a party, 21 days or more before bringing an action for obtaining an adjudication of the rights of another person with respect to any real property, shall request of such person the execution of a quitclaim deed to such property and shall also tender to such person $20.00 to cover the expense of the execution and delivery of a deed and if such person shall refuse or neglect to execute and deliver such deed, the filing by such person of a disclaimer shall not avoid the imposition upon such person of the costs in the action afterwards brought.

(e) Set-off for Improvements. Where a party or those under whom he claims, holding under color of title adversely to the claims of another party, shall in good faith have made permanent improvements upon real property (other than mining property) the value of such improvements shall be allowed as a set-off or as a counterclaim in favor of such party, in the event that judgment is entered against such party for possession or for damages for withholding of possession.

(f) Lis Pendens.

(1) Filing and Notice. A notice of lis pendens may be recorded as provided by statute.

(2) Determination of Effect on Real Property. Any interested person may petition the court in the action identified in the notice of lis pendens for a determination that a judgment on the issues raised by the pleadings in the pending action will not affect all, or a designated part, of the real property described in the notice of lis pendens, or a specifically described interest therein. After a hearing on such petition, the court shall make findings of fact and enter an order setting forth the description of the property as contained in the recorded notice of lis pendens and the description of the portion thereof or the interest therein, if any, the title to which will not be affected by judgment on the issues then pending in the action. Such order shall be a final judgment as to the matters set forth therein and if the order includes the determination required by Rule 54(b) as to its finality apart from remaining issues, it shall be appealable only as a separate judgment of that date.

(3) Disclaimer. Nothing in this Rule 105(f) shall be construed so as to preclude any party litigant from disclaiming an interest in all or any part of the real property affected by such notice of lis pendens, by filing with the court an instrument so indicating, containing a reference to the notice of lis pendens by its recording data sufficient to locate it in the records of the clerk and recorder. The filing of such instrument with the court then having jurisdiction shall bar any further claims of said party to such real property in said action.

(4) Repealed, effective April 1, 1993.

(g) Description of Real Property. In any proceeding for the recovery of real property or an interest therein, such property shall be designated by legal description.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The previous provisions of Rule 105(f)(1) and (4) have been superseded by the passage of House Bill 92-1038, now C.R.S. § 38-35-110 (1992). The statute sets out the circumstances under which a lis pendens may be recorded, states the legal effect of the recording as a matter of substantive law, and provides for the release of the effect of a lis pendens in certain circumstances. The statute clarifies certain issues that had arisen in interpreting the former rule. Subsections (2) and (3) have been retained, as they provide procedures for the removal of the effect of a lis pendens during the course of litigation, an area of concern which is not addressed by the statute, and which is strictly procedural in nature.

Purpose of this rule is to provide for a complete adjudication of the rights of all parties so that the controversy may be ended. Maitland v. Bd. of County Comm’rs, 701 P.2d 617 (Colo. App. 1984).

It is clear from the language of this rule that a C.R.C.P. 105 proceeding should completely adjudicate the rights of all parties to the action claiming interests in the property. Even if a counterclaim is not pled, or an issue is not raised in the pleadings but is apparent from the evidence, the court should reach the issue to give full relief. Keith v. Kinney, 961 P.2d 516 (Colo. App. 1997).

This rule does not change the substantive law, which is firmly established in all actions regarding possession of real property. Fastenau

v. Engel, 129 Colo. 440, 270 P.2d 1019 (1954); Martini v. Smith, 42 P.3d 629 (Colo. 2002).

This rule was not intended to permit courts to quiet title in defaulting defendants. Osborne v. Holford, 40 Colo. App. 365, 575 P.2d 866 (1978).

Substance and not form determines the nature of an action relating to real estate, since the adoption of section (a). Vogt v. Hansen, 123 Colo. 105, 225 P.2d 1040 (1950).

Whether or not an action was one for possession of land depends on the fact of possession, and not on the form of the action. Vogt v. Hansen, 123 Colo. 105, 225 P.2d 1040 (1950).

Plaintiffs must rely on the strength of their own title in suits to quiet title, and not on the weakness or supposed weakness of their adversaries. Fastenau v. Engel, 129 Colo. 440, 270 P.2d 1019 (1954); Morrissey v. Achziger, 147 Colo. 510, 364 P.2d 187 (1961); Sch. Dist. No. Six v. Russell, 156 Colo. 75, 396 P.2d 929 (1964).

A plaintiff, in an action to quiet title to lands, must rely on the strength of his own title thereto; and when it affirmatively appears that such plaintiff's rights have terminated, he is in no position to question the legality of the title claimed by others. Sch. Dist. No. Six v. Russell, 156 Colo. 75, 396 P.2d 929 (1964).

Plaintiff in an action to quiet title must show title in himself. Buell v. Redding Miller, Inc., 163 Colo. 286, 430 P.2d 471 (1967).

No necessity for either party to show possession. In an action brought for the purpose of obtaining a complete adjudication of the rights of all parties thereto with respect to real property it is not necessary for the plaintiff to allege and prove that he had possession of the real estate in question. Possession of the property in controversy in either party is wholly immaterial under this rule. Siler v. Inv. Sec. Co., 125 Colo. 438, 244 P.2d 877 (1952).

In actions brought under this rule, possession is not essential to maintain or defend such an action. An adjudication of the rights of the parties, whether of ownership or possession, may be made by the court. Lamberson v. Thomas, 146 Colo. 539, 362 P.2d 180 (1961).

Plaintiff does not have to prove possession of the property involved in order to prevail. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Banning, 29 Colo. App. 61, 479 P.2d 404 (1970).

When party in possession must be joined. Section (b) of this rule requires that a party in possession must be joined if the plaintiff seeks to recover actual possession of the subject property. Ginsberg v. Stanley Aviation Corp., 193 Colo. 454, 568 P.2d 35 (1977).

If the subject property is a public road that has been used as such, a disclaimer filed under the provisions of this rule by the county in control of the road cannot operate to vacate the road. Rather, the county must follow the mandates of the vacation statute. Martini v. Smith, 42 P.3d 629 (Colo. 2002).

A plaintiff not in possession must show superior title. Under this rule a plaintiff who is not in possession of real estate cannot challenge the title of a defendant in possession thereof without establishing in himself a title superior to that under which defendant occupies the land. Likewise, a defendant in an action to quiet title may effectually resist a decree against himself by showing simply that the plaintiff is without title, since if the plaintiff has no title he cannot complain that someone else, also without title, asserts an interest in the land. Fastenau v. Engel, 129 Colo. 440, 270 P.2d 1019 (1954).

In a case where defendant is in possession, plaintiff must rely on the strength of his own title, not upon the weakness of defendant's title in order to recover. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Banning, 29 Colo. App. 61, 479 P.2d 404 (1970).

Rights of parties considered in filing of complaint. In an action to quiet title the pertinent date fixing the rights of the parties is the date upon which the complaint is filed. No muniment of title acquired thereafter is admissible in evidence and a plaintiff cannot bolster a claim to title by acquisition of title papers subsequent to the institution of an action, unless, by supplemental pleadings, issues are framed based upon the subsequently acquired instrument. Fastenau v. Engel, 129 Colo. 440, 270 P.2d 1019 (1954).

Ejectment cannot be supported by a title acquired after action commenced nor can a defective title be aided by conveyances made pending suit. Fastenau v. Engel, 129 Colo. 440, 270 P.2d 1019 (1954).

Burden of proof. Monetary reparation cannot be based upon mere speculation, but on the other hand such need not be proven with mathematical certainty. It is sufficient if the plaintiff establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that he has in fact suffered damage or that his rights have been infringed and that his evidence in this regard provides a reasonable basis for a computation of the damage so sustained. Difficulty in proof of damages does not in and of itself destroy the right of recovery. Riggs v. McMurtry, 157 Colo. 33, 400 P.2d 916 (1965).

Plaintiff's burden of proof was to establish title to the property in question by the presentation of competent evidence. The evidence presented by plaintiff was primarily in the form of a stipulated set of facts establishing the chain of title. Under these circumstances, the trial court correctly concluded that plaintiff had established a prima facie case establishing his right to ownership of the property in question. Plaintiff was entitled to relief under this section, unless defendant could come forward with evidence to rebut plaintiff's title to the property.

Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Blanning, 29 Colo. App. 61, 479 P.2d 404 (1970).

Courts will not invoke equitable defenses to destroy legal rights where statutes of limitations are applicable. Jacobs v. Perry, 135 Colo. 550, 313 P.2d 1008 (1957).

The defense of laches is not available in a quiet title action. Jacobs v. Perry, 135 Colo. 550, 313 P.2d 1008 (1957).

Where defendant acquired a defective treasurer's deed in 1956 to the property in question, but never made use of, nor improved the property in any manner during the intervening period of time, nor expended any sums of money on it, delay, if any, has not worked to defendant's detriment in any manner, and hence defendant is not in a position to complain of delay in the bringing of this action. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Blanning, 29 Colo. App. 61, 479 P.2d 404 (1970).

Effect of failure to raise issue of damages in quiet title action. Under this rule providing for a complete adjudication of rights of the parties litigant, together with damages, if any, it was essential that any damage claims be asserted in the quiet title action and upon failure to do so, damages could not be an issue in a condemnation action. Dillinger v. North Sterling Irrigation Dist., 135 Colo. 95, 308 P.2d 606 (1957).

When evidence should be submitted to jury. In an action for the adjudication of the right to possession of real estate and for damages for alleged wrongful trespass brought under this rule, it was held that, where there are a number of fact issues and the evidence is in conflict, the evidence should be submitted to the jury for determination. Klipp v. Grusing, 119 Colo. 111, 200 P.2d 917 (1948).

Finding supported by evidence upheld on review. The controverted issue as to the nature of gypsiferous deposits was an issue of fact and there being competent evidence to support the trial court's finding that this is a placer deposit, its determination of the matter must be upheld on review. Gypsum Aggregates Corp. v. Lionelle, 170 Colo. 282, 460 P.2d 780 (1969).

Applied in Ginsberg v. Stanley Aviation Corp., 37 Colo. App. 240, 551 P.2d 1086 (1975); Mohler v. Buena Vista Bank & Trust Co., 42 Colo. App. 4, 588 P.2d 894 (1978); Atchison, T & S.F. Ry. v. North Colo. Springs Land & Imp. Co., 659 P.2d 702 (Colo. App. 1982).

II. SCOPE OF RELIEF.

The manifest intent of section (a) of this rule is to provide "a complete adjudication of the rights of all parties". Hopkins v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 193 Colo. 230, 564 P.2d 415 (1977).

This rule provides for a complete adjudication of all the rights of the parties in interest. Merth v. Hobart, 129 Colo. 546, 272 P.2d 273 (1954).

This rule has reference to a judgment finally determining the rights of all parties. Broadway Roofing & Supply, Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 154, 342 P.2d 1022 (1959).

Where neither party has satisfactorily established title, equity and this rule direct that a complete adjudication of right be made. Hanson v. Dilley, 160 Colo. 371, 418 P.2d 38 (1966).

Equitable relief for improvements. Where the powers of the court were invoked to settle a boundary dispute and the rights of the parties with respect to improvements mistakenly built upon the land, there being no bad faith on the part of any of the parties, it was the duty of the court to grant such equitable relief as the situation required. Pull v. Barnes, 142 Colo. 272, 350 P.2d 828 (1960).

Where an adjoining owner had in good faith erected improvements on adjoining land, believing it to be his own, he should be granted the right to remove same if feasible and if not, then given an equitable lien on the property for the value thereof. Pull v. Barnes, 142 Colo. 272, 350 P.2d 828 (1960).

Courts will not enforce racial restrictive covenants. The trial court's refusal to recognize the vested interest in defendant and to enforce forfeiture of the property for failure to comply with a racial restrictive covenant did not deprive defendant of property without just compensation and without due process of law. Courts will not enforce such covenants and an action for damages will not lie for violations thereof. Capitol Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Smith, 136 Colo. 265, 316 P.2d 252 (1957).

Removal of restrictive covenants. Sitting as a court of equity the trial court has the power to remove or cancel restrictive covenants as clouds on the title. Such power may be exercised when it is shown that the restrictive covenants no longer serve the purpose for which they were imposed and are no longer beneficial to those claiming under them. Zavislak v. Shipman, 147 Colo. 184, 362 P.2d 1053 (1961); Cole v. Colo. Springs Co., 152 Colo. 162, 381 P.2d 13 (1963).

Documents that reasonably designate land burdened by easements were not, as a matter of law, invalid because of vagueness. If, on remand, the easements are not determined to be otherwise unenforceable or invalid, their location will need to be fixed by the agreement of the parties or, if necessary, by the court. Stevens v. Mannix, 77 P.3d 931 (Colo. App. 2003).

Due-on-sale clause is not unreasonable restraint on alienation and does not require a case-by-case factual determination by trial courts whenever an effort is made to enforce a due-on-sale clause. Bakker v. Empire Sav.,

Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 634 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1981).

Enforcement of restrictions in lease. The law gives the lessor the right to impose restrictions in the lease on the right to assign or sublet the leased premises, and these restrictions may be enforced by forfeiture of the lease and reentry. Union Oil Co. v. Lindauer, 131 Colo. 138, 280 P.2d 444 (1955).

An action to terminate a lease of real property may be instituted under this rule. Union Oil Co. v. Lindauer, 131 Colo. 138, 280 P.2d 444 (1955).

Determination of adverse possession. In making a determination of the boundaries of the property to which the defendants have acquired title by actual occupancy and adverse possession, and quieting defendants' title thereto, the trial court is to determine the land necessarily appurtenant to the cabin, taking into consideration the location and nature of the property, and the uses to which the property lends itself, the uses made of the property by the defendants, and the evidence of visible occupation of the property by the defendants which would give notice of their exclusive and adverse claim to the owner and the public. Anderson v. Cold Spring Tungsten, Inc., 170 Colo. 7, 458 P.2d 756 (1969).

The possession necessary to establish title to property by adverse possession need not always be personal possession by the adverse claimant but, in some circumstances, may be established by the conduct of another whom the adverse claimant has authorized. Holland v. Sutherland, 635 P.2d 926 (Colo. App. 1981).

Court cannot quiet title in favor of defaulting party even when evidence presented by an appearing party supports the defaulting party's title interests. Reser v. Aspen Park Ass'n, 727 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1986).

Legal title to disputed parcel in foreclosure of deed of trust action not acquired since the documents showed parties' intent to extinguish prior deed of trust on disputed parcel. Colo. Nat'l Bank-Exch. v. Hammar, 764 P.2d 359 (Colo. App. 1988).

Court may not amplify deed by construction of contract. A decree adjudging the defendants to be the owners of the lake, together with incidental rights thereto, is tantamount to a conveyance of the lake. It is an amplification of the deed by decree, something a court may not do under the guise of construing a contract. A court cannot rewrite a contract and thereby change its terms when it is plain, clear, and unambiguous. Alexander Dawson, Inc. v. Fling, 155 Colo. 599, 396 P.2d 599 (1964).

Effect of decree following old terminology for quieting title. In an action for reformation of a mortgage and a sheriff's deed issued on its foreclosure, so as to include a parcel inadvertently omitted, the decree in form followed the old terminology for quieting title, and it was urged that the court could not quiet title in the plaintiff, since he held no title thereto. However, it was held that this contention was without merit, since the action was specifically an action for reformation, setting out properly the basis of the claim and complying sufficiently with this rule, as an action to obtain an adjudication of the rights of the parties with respect to real estate. Stubbs v. Standard Life Ass'n, 125 Colo. 278, 242 P.2d 819 (1952).

Minor improvements deemed not "taking". The placing of a few minor improvements on property does not necessarily constitute a "taking" of possessions. Holland v. Sutherland, 635 P.2d 926 (Colo. App. 1981).

Vendor's action under this rule involved the same subject matter as vendor's prior boundary line action. Therefore the subsequent action was barred by res judicata. Agee Revocable Trust v. Mang, 919 P.2d 908 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because license for recreational use of property is not an interest in the land, trial court did not err in not defining the scope of the license in quiet title action brought under this rule. Bolinger v. Neal, 259 P.3d 1259 (Colo. App. 2010).

III. COSTS.

Partial disclaimer ineffective. In an action where defendant disclaimed as to part of the premises and claimed title and right of possession as to the remainder, in case of judgment for plaintiff, defendant is not entitled to have part of the cost assessed against plaintiff. Relender v. Riggs, 20 Colo. App. 423, 79 P. 328 (1905) (decided under § 276 of the former Code of Civil Procedure).

Defendant with claim for taxes may save costs. Where a defendant disclaims title and sets up its outlays on account of taxes legally assessed, which should have been paid by the plaintiff, and asks for judgment accordingly, the cost is properly a charge against the plaintiff under this section. Empire Ranch & Cattle Co. v. Lanning, 49 Colo. 458, 113 P. 491 (1911) (decided under § 276 of the former Code of Civil Procedure).

Attorneys' fees are proper measure of damages in action for slander of title. Sussex Real Estate Corp. v. Sbrocca, 634 P.2d 999 (Colo. App. 1981).

Defendant who successfully opposed plaintiff's motion to amend quiet title decree to delete portion pertaining to title interests of defaulting defendants was not entitled to award of attorney fees. Reser v. Aspen Park Ass'n, 727 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1986).

IV. LIS PENDENS.

Annotator's note. Since section (f) of this rule is similar to § 38 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Purpose of recording lis pendens notice is to give notice of the pendency of an action to persons who may subsequently acquire or seek to acquire rights in the property. King v. W.R. Hall Transp. & Storage Co., 641 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1982).

Expired lis pendens did not provide constructive notice of the terms of the judgment of underlying lawsuit. This rule is designed to give party to suit sufficient time to file notice of appeal or to record transcript of judgment in county where property is situated, but is not intended not to extend constructive notice period beyond thirty days. Maddalone v. Wilson, 764 P.2d 403 (Colo. App. 1988) (decided under rule in effect prior to 1981 amendment).

Lis pendens brings the subject matter of the litigation within the control of the court, and renders the parties powerless to place it beyond the power of the final judgment. Powell v. Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 19 Colo. App. 57, 74 P. 536 (1903).

Third parties cannot thereafter interfere with the property. In an action involving the title to real property, the effect of filing a lis pendens is to prevent interference by third parties with the property during the pendency of the action. Shuck v. Quackenbush, 75 Colo. 592, 227 P. 1041 (1924).

Purchaser from one litigant takes subject to rights of other parties in the action. The general rule as to lis pendens is that a person who acquires an interest in property involved in litigation, pendente lite and from a party litigant, takes subject to the rights of the other parties to the suit as finally adjudicated. Powell v. Nat'l Bank of Commerce, 19 Colo. App. 57, 74 P. 536 (1903).

Proper subject of lis pendens. Where a complaint clearly shows that an action relates to the possession, use, or enjoyment of real property, it is, therefore, the proper subject of the filing of a lis pendens. Clopine v. Kemper, 140 Colo. 360, 344 P.2d 451 (1959).

The filing of a notice of lis pendens is proper if claimant shows that the underlying action relates to a right to possession, use, or enjoyment of real property. Salstrom v. Starke, 670 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1983).

Notice of lis pendens is properly filed in any case in which affirmative relief is claimed affecting the title to real property. Central Allied Profit Sharing v. Bailey, 759 P.2d 849 (Colo. App. 1988).

The notice of lis pendens and not the pleadings gives constructive notice of pending litigation affecting interests in realty. Clopine v. Kemper, 140 Colo. 360, 344 P.2d 451 (1959), overruling Central Sav. Bank v. Smith, 43 Colo. 90, 95 P. 307 (1908).

Constructive notice as of day notice is recorded. A notice of lis pendens which refers to a complaint seeking divorce and a division of property, or seeking separate maintenance and an equitable interest in property, is constructive notice as of the day notice of lis pendens is recorded. Clopine v. Kemper, 140 Colo. 360, 344 P.2d 451 (1959).

No notice to grantee under prior recorded deed. Notice of the pendency of a suit involving title to land, filed after the recording of a conveyance, is no notice to the grantee in such conveyance. Dalander v. Howell, 22 Colo. App. 386, 124 P. 744 (1912).

"Affecting the title to real property" to be expansively interpreted. An expansive interpretation of the language "affecting the title to real property", as found in section (f), serves to further the policy that successful completion of suits involving rights in real property should not be thwarted by permitting transfers of such property before such suits are resolved. Cooper v. Flagstaff Realty, 634 P.2d 1013 (Colo. App. 1981).

A proceeding by a creditor to set aside a conveyance as fraudulent pursuant to § 38-10-117 clearly falls within actions affecting the title to real property. Crown Life Ins. Co. v. April Corp., 855 P.2d 12 (Colo. App. 1993).

Litigation of promise to grant deed of trust affects title. Insofar as a case involves litigation of a promise to grant a deed of trust applying to a specific parcel of real property, it is one "affecting" title to that real property within the meaning of section (f). Cooper v. Flagstaff Realty, 634 P.2d 1013 (Colo. App. 1981).

Description of property allowing proper indexing is sufficient. The lis pendens notice contains a brief description of the property affected thereby. It is sufficient in this respect if it enables proper indexing against the proper section and block numbers. Clopine v. Kemper, 140 Colo. 360, 344 P.2d 451 (1959).

Failing to file lis pendens notice does not relieve persons who have actual notice of the pendency of the action. Buckhorn Plaster Co. v. Consol. Plaster Co., 47 Colo. 516, 108 P. 27 (1910).

Lis pendens will give notice of wife's claim against property of husband. A wife has an equitable interest in the property of her husband. In an action for separate maintenance, praying that she be awarded specific property, lis pendens duly filed is notice of her claim against that property. Tinglof v. Askerlund, 96 Colo. 27, 39 P.2d 1039 (1934); Clopine v. Kemper, 140 Colo. 360, 344 P.2d 451 (1959).

Summary judgment as to certain defendants does not release lis pendens. Under C.R.C.P. 54(b), this rule, and § 38-40-110, a lis pendens remains in full force and effect until final judgment or until final disposition of a case, and where a summary judgment dismissing the action and releasing lis pendens as to certain defendants is granted, with no determination that there is no just reason for delay in disposing of the action as to such defendants, such summary judgment is not final for any purpose and the lis pendens is not released. Broadway Roofing & Supply, Inc. v. District Court, 140 Colo. 154, 342 P.2d 1022 (1959).

Release of property from notices of lis pendens held valid. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. v. Packard, 642 P.2d 57 (Colo. App. 1982).

Disclaimer of interest under section (f)(3) is an absolute bar to future claims to interests in property pursuant to the terms of the disclaimer, regardless of the precise legal theory or reasons that led to making the disclaimer, absent fraud or duress. Vail/Arrowhead, Inc. v. District Court, 954 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1998).

An action need not be brought under this rule as a precondition to making an effective disclaimer of interest under section (f)(3). Vail/Arrowhead, Inc. v. District Court, 954 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1998).

Adequate remedy to contest release of lis pendens on appeal. Meaker v. District Court, 134 Colo. 151, 300 P.2d 805 (1956).

Continuation of lis pendens pending appeal conditioned on posting bond held valid in Wellman v. Travelers Ins. Co., 689 P.2d 1151 (Colo. App. 1984).

Motion to quash lis pendens denied since Colorado law makes no provision for the cancellation of a notice of lis pendens by any court at any time, but instead provides by section (f) of this rule that the notice shall expire automatically. McGregor v. McGregor, 101 F. Supp. 848 (D. Colo. 1951), aff'd, 201 F.2d 528 (10th Cir. 1953).

Damages for filing in suit maliciously brought. If a suit is brought maliciously and without probable cause, and notice of lis pendens filed therein, liability would attach for such filing, for any damages occasioned thereby. Johnston v. Deidesheimer, 76 Colo. 559, 232 P. 1113 (1926); Westfield Dev. v. Rifle Inv. Assoc., 786 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1990).

Proceeding to enforce adherence to criteria with respect to construction of improvements is one wherein affirmative relief is claimed affecting the title to real property within the meaning of this rule. Hammersley v. District Court, 199 Colo. 442, 610 P.2d 94 (1980).

Filing of notice of lis pendens provides only a qualified privilege with respect to a claim based on intentional interference with a contract and applies only when the one who interferes has, or honestly believes he has, a legally protected interest and, in good faith, asserts or threatens to assert such claim through proper means. Westfield Dev. v. Rifle Inv. Assoc., 786 P.2d 1112 (Colo. 1990).

Lis pendens expired with the dismissal of plaintiff's appeal. A subsequent settlement between the parties did not resurrect the lis pendens and thus was not binding on the interests of a third party which had filed an interest on the property during the pendency of the lis pendens. Perry Park Country Club, Inc. v. Manhattan Savings Bank, 813 P.2d 841 (Colo. App. 1991).

Neither filing a foreclosure action nor recording a lis pendens prevented the United States from releasing its own tax lien, thereby losing its priority over the owners' interests. U.S. v. Winchell, 793 F. Supp. 994 (D. Colo. 1992).

V. DESCRIPTION OF REAL PROPERTY.

A divorce action no longer has to describe the property affected. Clopine v. Kemper, 140 Colo. 360, 344 P.2d 451 (1959).

Judgment must fix boundary lines with certainty. A judgment decree involving the right to possession of real property must definitely and sufficiently describe it in order that an officer charged with the duty of executing a writ of possession may go upon the premises, and, without exercising any judicial functions whatever, ascertain with certainty the boundary lines fixed by the judgment. Calvin v. Fitzsimmons, 129 Colo. 420, 270 P.2d 748 (1954); Thompson v. Clarks, Inc., 162 Colo. 506, 427 P.2d 314 (1967).

The judgment and decree must be so definite and specific in defining the proper location of the boundary lines that all the parties affected thereby may comply with the judgment in every respect. Calvin v. Fitzsimmons, 129 Colo. 420, 270 P.2d 748 (1954); Thompson v. Clarks, Inc., 162 Colo. 506, 427 P.2d 314 (1967).

Court may adopt most definite of two repugnant descriptions. Where there are two repugnant descriptions in a deed, the trial court will look into the surrounding facts and will adopt the description which is most definite and certain and which in the light of the surrounding circumstances can be said to effectuate most clearly the intention of the parties. Wallace v. Hirsch, 142 Colo. 264, 350 P.2d 560 (1960).

Monuments control over monument calls. In a conveyance of interest in land, whether by ordinary deed or by dedication, if the description of the land be fixed by ascertainable monuments and by courses and distances, the well-settled general rule is that the monuments will control the courses and distances if they be inconsistent with the monument calls. Wallace v. Hirsch, 142 Colo. 264, 350 P.2d 560 (1960).

Where a conveyance is made with reference to an official map or plat, the map or plat becomes a part of the grant. Radio San Juan, Inc. v. Baker, 31 Colo. App. 151, 498 P.2d 957 (1972).

Rule 105.1. Spurious Lien or Document

(a) Petition; Contents, Order to Show Cause. Any person whose real or personal property is affected by a spurious lien or spurious document, as defined by law, may file a petition in the district court in the county in which the lien or document was recorded or filed, or in the district court for the county in which affected real property is located, for an order to show cause why the lien or document should not be declared invalid. The petition, which may also be brought as a counterclaim or a cross-claim in a pending action, shall set forth a concise statement of the facts upon which the petition is based, shall be supported by the affidavit of the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney, and shall be accompanied by a copy of the lien or document as recorded or filed in the public records. The order to show cause may be granted ex parte and shall:

(1) Direct any lien claimant and any person who recorded or filed the lien or document to appear as respondent before the court at a time and place certain not less than 14 days nor more than 21 days after service of the order to show cause why the lien or document should not be declared invalid and why such other relief provided for by statute should not be granted;

(2) State that if the respondent fails to appear at the time and place specified, the lien or document, if found by the court to be spurious, will be declared invalid and released; and

(3) State that the court shall award costs, including reasonable attorney fees, to the prevailing party.

(b) Notice; Service. The petitioner shall issue a notice to respondent setting forth the time and place for the hearing on the show cause order, which hearing shall be set not less than 14 days nor more than 21 days from service of the show cause order, and shall advise respondent of the right to file and serve a response as provided in section (c), including a reference to the last day for filing a response and the addresses at which such response must be filed and served. The notice shall contain the return address of the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney. The notice and a copy of the petition and order to show cause shall be served by the petitioner on the respondent not less than 14 days prior to the date set for the hearing, by (1) mailing a true copy thereof by first class mail to each respondent at the address or addresses stated in the lien or document and (2) filing a copy with the clerk of the district court and delivering a second copy to the clerk of the district court for posting in the clerk's office, which shall be evidenced by the certificate of the petitioner or petitioner's agent or attorney. Alternatively, the petitioner may serve the petition, notice, and show cause order upon each respondent in accordance with Rule 4, or, in the event the claim is brought as a counterclaim or cross-claim in a pending action in which the parties have appeared, in accordance with Rule 5.

(c) Response; Contents; Filing and Service. Not less than 7 days prior to the date set for the hearing, the respondent shall file and serve a verified response to the petition, setting forth the facts supporting the validity of the lien or document and attaching copies of all documents which support the validity of the lien or document. Service of such response shall be made in accordance with Rule 5(b).

(d) Hearing; Decree; Hearing Dispensed With If No Response Filed. If, following a hearing on the order to show cause, the court determines that the lien or document is a spurious lien or a spurious document, the court shall make findings of fact and enter an order and decree declaring the spurious lien or document and any related notices of lis pendens invalid, releasing the recorded or filed spurious lien or spurious document, and entering a monetary judgment in the amount of the petitioner's costs, including reasonable attorney fees, against the respondent and in favor of the petitioner. If, following the hearing on the order to show cause, the court determines that the lien or document is not a spurious lien or document, the court shall issue an order so finding and enter a monetary judgment against the petitioner and in favor of the respondent in the amount of the respondent's costs, including reasonable attorney fees. If necessary, the court may in its discretion continue the hearing on the show cause order for further proceedings and trial. If no response is filed and served by the respondent within the time permitted by section (c), the court shall examine the petition and, if satisfied that venue is proper and that the lien or document is spurious, the court shall dispense with the hearing and forthwith enter the order, which shall be a final judgment for purposes of appeal. If the petition has been personally served upon the respondent in accordance with Rule 4(e) or (g), the court shall enter judgment in favor of petitioner and against the respondent for the petitioner's costs, including reasonable attorney fees.

(e) Docket Fee. A docket fee in the amount specified by law shall be paid by the petitioner. The respondent shall pay, at the time of the filing of the response, a docket fee in the amount specified by law for a defendant or respondent in a civil action under section 13-32-101(1)(d), C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

Because a lis pendens can be a spurious document, trial court may award attorney fees and costs for a spurious lis pendens. Shyanne Props., LLC v. Torp, 210 P.3d 490 (Colo. App. 2009).

Defendants' petition for removal of a lis pendens as a spurious document constituted a counterclaim, even though it was not denominated as such, because defendants filed the petition in a pending action and not in a separate proceeding. Therefore, defendants were not required to pay a docket fee and properly served their petition under C.R.C.P. 5 using an electronic filing system. Shyanne Props., LLC v. Torp, 210 P.3d 490 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court had jurisdiction to award attorney fees and costs to defendants for a spurious lis pendens. Because plaintiff did not refute that the lis pendens was spurious at the show cause hearing, trial court had jurisdiction to enter judgment in favor of defendants and against plaintiff for defendants' costs and attorney fees. Shyanne Props., LLC v. Torp, 210 P.3d 490 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court abused its discretion in awarding attorney fees without holding an evidentiary hearing on the reasonableness and necessity of the attorney fees requested by defendants. If a party requests a hearing concerning an award of fees, the trial court must hold a hearing. Shyanne Props., LLC v. Torp, 210 P.3d 490 (Colo. App. 2009).

Rule creates an exception to the priority rule, which requires the second of two actions with the same parties and subject matter to be stayed until the first action is finally determined. Under the express language of the rule, a party challenging the validity of a recorded document may file the petition as a counterclaim or cross-claim, or the party may institute a separate proceeding. Battle N., LLC v. Sensible Hous. Co., 2015 COA 83, 370 P.3d 238.

This rule and § 38-35-204, both governing spurious lien proceedings, conflict with, and thus control over, the more general rules of pleading. Therefore, the trial court did not err when it concluded that banks could not raise their counterclaims and third-party claim in the spurious lien action and dismissed them without prejudice. Fiscus v. Liberty Mort. Corp., 2014 COA 79, 373 P.3d 644, aff'd on other grounds, 2016 CO 31, 379 P.3d 278.

REMEDIAL WRITS AND CONTEMPT

Rule 106. Forms of Writs Abolished

(a) Habeas Corpus, Mandamus, Quo Warranto, Certiorari, Prohibition, Scire Facias and Other Remedial Writs in the District Court. Special forms of pleadings and writs in habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, scire facias, and proceedings for the issuance of other remedial writs, as heretofore known, are hereby abolished in the district court. Any relief provided hereunder shall not be available in county courts. In the following cases relief may be obtained in the district court by appropriate action under the practice prescribed in the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure:

(1) Where any person not being committed or detained for any criminal or supposed criminal matter is illegally confined or restrained of his liberty;

(2) Where the relief sought is to compel a lower judicial body, governmental body, corporation, board, officer or person to perform an act which the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station, or to compel the admission of a party to the use and enjoyment of a right or office to which he is entitled, and from which he is unlawfully precluded by such lower judicial body, governmental body, corporation, board, officer, or person. The judgment shall include any damages sustained;

(3) When any person usurps, intrudes into, or unlawfully holds or exercises any office or franchise, the district attorney of the proper district may and, when directed by the governor so to do, shall bring an action against such person in the name of the people of the state, but if the district attorney declines so to do, it may be brought upon the relation and complaint of any person. The Rule heretofore existing requiring leave of court to institute such proceedings is hereby abolished. When such an action is brought against a defendant alleged to have usurped, intruded into, or who allegedly unlawfully holds or exercises any public office, civil or military, or any franchise it shall be given precedence over other civil actions except similar actions previously commenced. The judgment may determine the rightful holder of the office or franchise;

(4) Where, in any civil matter, any governmental body or officer or any lower judicial body exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion, and there is no plain, speedy and adequate remedy otherwise provided by law:

(I) Review shall be limited to a determination of whether the body or officer has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion, based on the evidence in the record before the defendant body or officer.

(II) Review pursuant to this subsection (4) shall be commenced by the filing of a complaint. An answer or other responsive pleading shall then be filed in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(III) If the complaint is accompanied by a motion and proposed order requiring certification of a record, the court shall order the defendant body or officer to file with the clerk on a specified date, the record or such portion or transcript thereof as is identified in the order, together with a certificate of authenticity. The date for filing the record shall be after the date upon which an answer to the complaint must be filed.

(IV) Within 21 days after the date of receipt of an order requiring certification of a record, a defendant may file with the clerk a statement designating portions of the record not set forth in the order which it desires to place before the court. The cost of preparing the record shall be advanced by the plaintiff, except that the court may, on objection by the plaintiff, order a defendant to advance payment for the costs of preparing such portion of the record designated by the defendant as the court shall determine is unessential to a complete understanding of the controversy; and upon a failure to comply with such order, the portions for which the defendant has been ordered to advance payment shall be omitted from the record. Any party may move to correct the record at any time.

(V) The proceedings before or decision of the body or officer may be stayed, pursuant to Rule 65 of the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(VI) Where claims other than claims under this Rule are properly joined in the action, the court shall determine the manner and timing of proceeding with respect to all claims.

(VII) A defendant required to certify a record shall give written notice to all parties, simultaneously with filing, of the date of filing the record with the clerk. The plaintiff shall file, and serve on all parties, an opening brief within 42 days after the date on which the record was filed. If no record is requested by the plaintiff, the plaintiff shall file an opening brief within 42 days after the defendant has served its answer upon the plaintiff. The defendant may file and serve an answer brief within 35 days after service of the plaintiff's brief, and the plaintiff may file and serve a reply brief to the defendant's answer brief within 14 days after service of the answer brief.

(VIII) The court may accelerate or continue any action which, in the discretion of the court, requires acceleration or continuance.

(IX) In the event the court determines that the governmental body, officer or judicial body has failed to make findings of fact or conclusions of law necessary for a review of its action, the court may remand for the making of such findings of fact or conclusions of law.

(5) When judgment is recovered against one or more of several persons jointly indebted upon an obligation, and it is desired to proceed against the persons not originally served with the summons who did not appear in the action. Such persons may be cited to show cause why they should not be bound by the judgment in the same manner as though they had been originally served with the summons, and in his answer any such person may set up any defense either to the original obligation or which may have arisen subsequent to judgment, except a discharge from the original liability by the statute of limitations.

(b) Limitations as to Time. Where a statute provides for review of the acts of any governmental body or officer or judicial body by certiorari or other writ, or for a proceeding in quo warranto, relief therein provided may be had under this Rule. If no time within which review may be sought is provided by any statute, a complaint seeking review under subsection (a)(4) of this Rule shall be filed in the district court not later than 28 days after the final decision of the body or officer. A timely complaint may be amended at any time with leave of the court, for good cause shown, to add, dismiss or substitute parties, and such amendment shall relate back to the date of filing of the original complaint.

Source: (a)(4)(IV), (a)(4)(VII), and (b) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b); IP(a) and (a)(4) amended, and comment added and effective August 17, 2020.

Purpose of rule. Under the former Code of Civil Procedure complaints apparently setting out facts sufficient for relief were held demurrable because the actions sought special writs. It was because of this result that this rule was adopted abolishing forms of writs and the special forms of pleadings formerly required. Berryman v. Berryman, 115 Colo. 281, 172 P.2d 446 (1946).

The rationale behind section (b) requires that the challenging party have had notice and an opportunity to be heard in a proceeding, subject to certiorari review, which is judicial or quasi-judicial in character. Julesburg Sch. Dist.

No. RE-1 v. Ebke, 193 Colo. 40, 562 P.2d 419 (1977).

The substantive aspects of remedial writs are preserved, and relief in the same nature as was formerly provided in such proceedings may be granted under the Rules of Civil Procedure in accordance with precedents established under the former practice. Leonhart v. District Court, 138 Colo. 1, 329 P.2d 781 (1958); People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

Rule operates only on procedure. The present Rules of Civil Procedure, and particularly this rule, operate on or with respect to matters of procedure. Enos v. District Court, 124 Colo. 335, 238 P.2d 861 (1951).

Section (a) does not preclude a court from initiating a proceeding by means other than institution of a civil action. Pena v. District Court, 681 P.2d 953 (Colo. 1984).

This rule preempts municipal provisions for review. Local ordinance provisions may not control the filing of a petition seeking review under section (a)(4). Gold Star Sausage Co. v. Kempf, 653 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982); Sky Chefs v. City & County of Denver, 653 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1982).

The 30-day time limit in section (b) preempts a municipal code’s 20-day time limit for seeking review. Gold Star Sausage Co. v. Kempf, 653 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982); Sky Chefs v. City & County of Denver, 653 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1982).

Despite a municipal code’s requirement of verification, a proceeding for review under this rule may be initiated without a verified petition because this rule does not so require. Gold Star Sausage Co. v. Kempf, 653 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

A municipal requirement that a bond be posted before a proceeding under this rule may be commenced is invalid. Sky Chefs v. City & County of Denver, 653 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1982).

This rule and C.A.R. 21 are to be construed together. Solliday v. District Court, 135 Colo. 489, 313 P.2d 1000 (1957).

Certiorari complaint not amendable under C.R.C.P. 15(c). Because invoking the relation-back doctrine of C.R.C.P. 15(c) to amend a certiorari complaint filed pursuant to this rule would undermine the important public policies of expediting resolution of challenges to zoning and annexation proceedings and of removing municipal planning and individual properties from a cloud of uncertainty, when the original complaint fails to state a claim for relief, said rule 15(c) has no application to the proceedings or to any further pleadings which may be filed. Richter v. City of Greenwood Vill., 40 Colo. App. 310, 577 P.2d 776 (1978).

“District court” refers to state and not federal courts. City of Colo. Springs v. Blanche, 761 P.2d 212 (Colo. 1988).

This rule applies only to relief sought in the district courts against inferior courts, administrative boards, and officials. Gen. Aluminum Corp. v. Arapahoe County Dist. Court, 165 Colo. 445, 439 P.2d 340 (1968).

It does not apply to original proceedings. Lucas v. District Court, 140 Colo. 510, 345 P.2d 1064 (1959).

This rule does not apply to original proceedings in the supreme court. Nolan v. District Court, 195 Colo. 6, 575 P.2d 9 (1978).

Rule to show cause limited to exceptional cases. A superior tribunal should exercise great caution and circumspection before issuing a rule to show cause to an inferior tribunal, and then only when such court is satisfied that the ordinary remedies provided by law are not applicable or are inadequate. Only in exceptional cases or classes of cases should applications of this character be allowed. Leonhart v. District Court, 138 Colo. 1, 329 P.2d 781 (1958).

Party must exhaust available administrative remedies before seeking judicial review pursuant to this rule or district court lacks jurisdiction to hear the case. This doctrine cannot be circumvented by seeking declaratory relief. City & County of Denver v. United Air Lines, Inc., 8 P.3d 1206 (Colo. 2000).

“Quasi-judicial action” defined. A quasi-judicial action, reviewable under section (a)(4), is generally characterized by the following factors: (1) A local or state law requiring that notice be given before the action is taken; (2) a local or state law requiring that a hearing be conducted before the action is taken; and (3) a local or state law directing that the action results from the application of prescribed criteria to the individual facts of the case. Baldauf v. Roberts, 37 P.3d 483 (Colo. App. 2001).

Administrative segregation actions by department of corrections are quasi-judicial actions reviewable under section (a)(4) of this rule. Baldauf v. Roberts, 37 P.3d 483 (Colo. App. 2001).

Action by the department of corrections that affects a protected liberty interest of an inmate falls within the realm of reviewable quasi-judicial activity, and review is appropriate. Fisher v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 56 P.3d 1210 (Colo. App. 2002).

Department of corrections’ (DOC) classification of inmate as sex offender is a quasi-judicial action subject to review under this rule. Vondra v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 226 P.3d 1165 (Colo. App. 2009).

Prison officials engage in quasi-judicial action when they decide to limit an inmate’s ability to file future grievances. Brooks v. Raemisch, 2016 COA 32, 371 P.3d 738.

Section (a)(4) review is sufficient for purposes of assuring that university’s and regents’ actions were functionally equivalent to the judicial process and therefore merited quasi-judicial immunity. Churchill v. Univ. of Colo. at Boulder, 293 P.3d 16 (Colo. App. 2010), aff’d, 2012 CO 54, 285 P.3d 986, cert. denied, 569 U.S. 904 (2013).

District attorney can appeal district court’s order under section (a)(4) based on court’s alleged abuse of discretion. Hotsenpiller v. Morris, 2017 COA 95, 488 P.3d 219.

Reviewing court must apply abuse of discretion or made without justification or jurisdiction standard when reviewing DOC classification of inmate as sex offender. If the evidence is conflicting, the hearing panel’s findings are binding on appeal. Vondra v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 226 P.3d 1165 (Colo. App. 2009).

Review pursuant to C.R.C.P. 57 is more appropriate than review pursuant to this rule in the context of a quasi-judicial proceeding where a declaratory judgment is requested and this rule does not provide an adequate remedy. Constitutional questions and challenges to the overall validity of a statute or ordinance are more properly reviewed under C.R.C.P. 57. Native Am. Rights Fund, Inc. v. City of Boulder, 97 P.3d 283 (Colo. App. 2004).

District attorney may appear on his or her own behalf or on behalf of a county court and a county court judge who are named defendants in an action brought under section (a)(4) of this rule. It would make little sense to prohibit the district attorney from appearing or representing the county court or its judge when the people of the state are, in practice, the real parties in interest as to the county court’s ruling, nor is there any basis to disqualify the district attorney. Huang v. County Court of Douglas County, 98 P.3d 924 (Colo. App. 2004).

Constitutional violation is not a prerequisite to review. Section (a)(4) did not require that inmate allege a protected liberty interest or a violation of due process to challenge an administrative segregation action by the department of corrections. Baldauf v. Roberts, 37 P.3d 483 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where no statute provides a different limitations period, a claim seeking review under section (a)(4) that is filed more than 28 days after the governmental body or officer’s final decision must be dismissed. Auxier v. McDonald, 2015 COA 50, 363 P.3d 747.

Plaintiff did not give adequate notice in the original complaint that he sought relief against municipal commission under section (a)(4). As a result, the court properly treated plaintiff’s section (a)(4) claim against the planning commission in the amended complaint as a new claim. Absent an exception allowing such a claim to be brought for the first time more than 28 days after the planning commission’s final decision, the court properly dismissed the claim. Auxier v. McDonald, 2015 COA 50, 363 P.3d 747.

Section (b)'s 28-day filing deadline is a strict jurisdictional limitation on section (a)(4) actions, and so it is not subject to equitable tolling or C.R.C.P. 6(b)'s excusable neglect standard. Brown v. Walker Commercial, Inc., 2022 CO 57, 521 P.3d 1014.

Review under section (a)(4) must be taken within 30 days of the date of the action for which review is sought and failure to comply with the 30-day limitations period divests the district court of subject matter jurisdiction to hear the action. Crawford v. State Dept. of Corr., 895 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1995); Baker v. City of Dacono, 928 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1996).

A litigant invokes district court jurisdiction and commences section (a)(4) review by e-filing a section (a)(4) complaint with the district court by the 28-day jurisdictional deadline; a section (a)(4) complaint is deemed to have been filed on the date it is transmitted to the e-system provider; and a section (a)(4) complaint that is not filed in the district court by the 28-day jurisdictional deadline must be dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Maslak v. Town of Vail, 2015 COA 2, 345 P.3d 972.

The fact that litigants e-filed their section (a)(4) complaint with a district court other than the one they intended did not deprive the intended county district court of its subject matter jurisdiction over the action. This rule does not state that district court jurisdiction over a section (a)(4) action is limited to the district court where a section (a)(4) complaint is originally filed, nor does it state that district court jurisdiction over a section (a)(4) action is limited to the district court where venue is proper. Maslak v. Town of Vail, 2015 COA 2, 345 P.3d 972.

A clerk's rejection of a section (a)(4) complaint does not, and cannot, alter the fact that the complaint had been "filed" in the district court on the date that it was transmitted to the e-system provider. The rejection also does not, and cannot, alter the fact that the litigants had invoked district court jurisdiction — including that of the intended county district court — on the date that they e-filed their complaint with the other district court. A clerk's rejection of a complaint under a chief justice directive rejection list cannot deprive a court of jurisdiction because the rejection list is administrative and is not a jurisdictional rule. Granting district court clerks discretionary authority under a chief justice directive to determine the district court's subject matter jurisdiction over an e-filed section (a)(4) action would render the filing rules set forth in C.R.C.P. 121 § 1-26(4) and (5) and section (a)(4) of this rule meaning-

Submitting a section (a)(4) complaint to the correct court pursuant to another district court clerk's e-filing rejection notice instructions did not constitute the filing of an entirely new and entirely separate action for purposes of invoking district court jurisdiction within section (b)'s 28-day jurisdictional window. Maslak v. Town of Vail, 2015 COA 2, 345 P.3d 972.

Since defendant did not appeal his sex offender classification in a timely manner, the parole board had the authority to impose sex offender conditions and treatment as part of defendant's parole. Similarly, the trial court lacked jurisdiction to consider defendant's claims regarding his parole conditions since the claims were based upon his classification as a sex offender. People v. Jones, 222 P.3d 377 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court properly determined that it lacked jurisdiction to hear claims for review of planning commission's June 8, 2005 final decision to issue a building permit. Section (a)(4) of this rule provides for district court review of final, quasi-judicial decisions of a governmental entity; however, such claims must be filed within 30 days after the challenged decision was rendered. If the claims are not timely filed, the district court lacks jurisdiction to hear them under section (b) of this rule. Here, because plaintiffs did not file their complaint until August 23, 2005, they exceeded the 30-day deadline. JJR 1, LLC v. Mt. Crested Butte, 160 P.3d 365 (Colo. App. 2007).

Plaintiffs' claim for declaratory relief asserting that planning commission did not provide sufficient notice to them of a permit review meeting was also properly dismissed under rule. Because section (a)(4) of this rule is the exclusive remedy for reviewing quasi-judicial decisions, all claims that effectively seek such review (whether framed as claims under section (a)(4) of this rule or not) are subject to the 30-day deadline under section (b). Thus, claims for declaratory relief under C.R.C.P. 57 that seek review of quasi-judicial decisions must be filed within 30 days. JJR 1, LLC v. Mt. Crested Butte, 160 P.3d 365 (Colo. App. 2007).

Although plaintiffs' claim against town for monetary damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 seeks review of quasi-judicial decisions, it also requests a "uniquely federal remedy" and, therefore, is not subject to the filing deadline of section (b). Because facial challenges seek review of quasi-legislative actions rather than quasi-judicial actions, they are also not subject to the filing deadline of section (b). JJR 1, LLC v. Mt. Crested Butte, 160 P.3d 365 (Colo. App. 2007).

Under doctrine of claim preclusion, an action brought under section (a)(4) can preclude claims brought in federal court under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The Colorado supreme court has not crafted an exception to the claim preclusion doctrine for such federal claims. Gale v. City & County of Denver, 2020 CO 17, 500 P.3d 351.

Since action pursuant to section (a)(4) can only be commenced pursuant to C.R.C.P. 4, C.R.C.P. 6(e) cannot apply to extend the time. Cadnetix Corp. v. City of Boulder, 807 P.2d 1253 (Colo. App. 1991).

The time restriction in section (b) deals only with certiorari or other writs taken from quasi-judicial proceedings. Julesburg Sch. Dist. No. RE-1 v. Ebke, 193 Colo. 40, 562 P.2d 419 (1977).

Section (b) of this rule has to be read together with the balance of the rule. Vigil v. Indus. Comm'n, 160 Colo. 23, 413 P.2d 904 (1966).

When so examined in connection with section (a)(2) and section (4), it is clear that section (b) must be so interpreted as not to defeat the limitations in section (a)(2) and section (4). Vigil v. Indus. Comm'n, 160 Colo. 23, 413 P.2d 904 (1966).

Strict adherence to section (b) required. Strict adherence to the deadline imposed by section (b) of this rule is required. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. District Court, 186 Colo. 308, 527 P.2d 531 (1974); Danielson v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 807 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1991).

Section (b)'s 28-day filing deadline is a strict jurisdictional limitation on section (a)(4) actions, and so it is not subject to equitable tolling or C.R.C.P. 6(b)'s excusable neglect standard. Brown v. Walker Commercial, Inc., 2022 CO 57, 521 P.3d 1014.

Twenty-eight-day filing deadline in subsection (b) is constitutionally applied in the municipal ballot initiative context. Because proponents of a municipal initiative failed to challenge the city clerk's finding that they had not collected sufficient valid signatures for placement of the initiative on the ballot within 28 days, the district court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to hear the challenge. The state may impose reasonable limits on the exercise of a constitutional right, and pro se parties must comply with procedural rules to the same extent as parties represented by attorneys. Adams v. Sagee, 2017 COA 133, 410 P.3d 800.

A claim for relief pursuant to section (a)(4) does not prevent the complaint from being amended as to other claims. Krupp v. Breckenridge Sanitation Dist., 1 P.3d 178 (Colo. App. 1999).

Failure to join indispensable parties within 30 days not fatal. As a result of the 1981 amendment to section (b), the failure to join indispensable parties within the 30-day time limit established by section (b) need no longer result in dismissal. Tri-State Generation & Transmission Co. v. City of Thornton, 647 P.2d 670 (Colo. 1982).

Failure to file a claim for judicial review within thirty days is not jurisdictionally fatal when such claim is combined with a claim for declaratory judgment. Section (b) does not prevent the district court from considering a declaratory judgment claim that challenges the constitutionality of a city's zoning ordinance even though judicial review is barred for failure to file a timely claim. Danielson v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 807 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1991).

But the district court may not exercise jurisdiction where claimant failed to challenge in the district court proceedings the facial constitutionality of a city's zoning ordinance. The district court may not raise the constitutional issue on its own motion. Danielson v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 807 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1991).

Section (b) of this rule is controlling on actions to review rezoning divisions of county commissioners. Hidden Lake Dev. Co. v. District Court, 183 Colo. 168, 515 P.2d 632 (1973).

Where the concerned parties in a rezoning determination have notice of a public hearing in which they may participate, it is not unfair to require that they litigate their challenge, be it constitutional or statutory, within the time limits established in section (b). Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975).

Under section (b), a county's final decision in a subdivision approval process took place when the board of county commissioners voted publicly to approve the subdivisions, even though the approval was subject to conditions. 3 Bar J Homeowners Ass'n, Inc. v. McMurtry, 967 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1998).

When a written resolution is revised, it is the date of adoption of the revised version that constitutes the point of administrative finality for purposes of section (b). Here, the "point of administrative finality" was May 15, 1997, the date the revised resolution was signed. Thus, the 30-day period under section (b) did not begin to run until that date, and plaintiffs' complaint was thus timely filed on Monday, June 16, 1997. Wilson v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Weld County, 992 P.2d 668 (Colo. App. 1999).

Section (b) may prevent town board from reconsidering own action. Where the town board permitted its grant of the variance to stand long after the 30-day review period under section (b) had expired, plaintiffs were entitled to, and did, rely on the variance, and, absent a change of circumstances, the board was without authority to reconsider. Andreatta v. Kuhlman, 43 Colo. App. 200, 600 P.2d 119 (1979).

Ordinances that contemplated later legislative action for purposes of meeting the conditions precedent required by the city charter were not final action under section (b). Therefore, judicial review was premature. Pub. Serv. Co. v. City of Boulder, 2016 COA 138, 410 P.3d 680.

A planning board's recommendation on a proposed rezoning application is not appealable because it is not a final decision reviewable under section (a)(4). The planning board's recommendation is only an intermediate step in the city's review process, which concludes with the city council's decision to approve or deny the proposed rezoning amendment. Under the city zoning code, the planning board does not sit as a quasi-judicial decision-maker nor are its recommendations an exercise of quasi-judicial function. Whitelaw v. Denver City Council, 2017 COA 47, 405 P.3d 433.

Unilateral action taken by a school board in refusing to grant teachers longevity increments in salary for one school for year fell outside the scope of section (b) of this rule. Julesburg Sch. Dist. No. RE-1 v. Ebke, 193 Colo. 40, 562 P.2d 419 (1977).

Petition stating grounds for relief not limited to remedy under this rule. A plaintiff who has misconceived his remedy and is seeking relief to which he is not entitled under the law should not have his petition dismissed. The remedy provided by this rule is not exclusive, and, if under the allegations of the petitions he is entitled to any relief, the court upon a hearing may grant him the relief to which he is entitled regardless of the prayer in the petition. The question, therefore, is not whether a plaintiff in a case at bar is asking for the proper remedy, but whether under his pleadings he is entitled to any remedy. Regennitter v. Fowler, 132 Colo. 489, 290 P.2d 223 (1955).

Where a review of the record made by the board of adjustment would be wholly inadequate to provide a remedy for plaintiff, the remedy provided by this rule is not exclusive. If a plaintiff elects so to do, an action should proceed upon the issues made by the pleadings as in other cases independent of this rule. Regennitter v. Fowler, 132 Colo. 489, 290 P.2d 223 (1955); Morris v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 150 Colo. 33, 370 P.2d 438 (1962).

No deprivation of due process. Standard of review provided by this rule did not deny due process to owner of building challenging safety code application. Van Sickle v. Boyes, 797 P.2d 1267 (Colo. 1990).

The determinative date for review under this rule was when the final decision was rendered and not the date upon which the decision was received. Crawford v. State Dept. of Corr., 895 P.2d 1156 (Colo. App. 1995).

Thirty-day limitations period under section (b) is jurisdictional and begins to run at the point of administrative finality, which occurs when the action complained of is complete, leaving nothing further for the agency to decide.

Cadnetix Corp. v. Boulder, 807 P.2d 1253 (Colo. App. 1991); Baker v. Dacono, 928 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1996); 3 Bar J Homeowners Ass'n., Inc. v. McMurry, 967 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1998); Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001).

Because plaintiff's original complaint did not seek review under section (a)(4), his amended complaint seeking such relief did not relate back to the original complaint. The district court, therefore, correctly dismissed as untimely the section (a)(4) claim set forth in the amended complaint. Section (b) permits a plaintiff to add, dismiss, or substitute parties in order to correct or complete a claim previously asserted under section (a)(4), but the plaintiff may not amend the complaint to seek review under section (a)(4) if such relief was not timely requested in the original complaint. If the complaint does not satisfy the criteria specified in section (a)(4), it is not a timely complaint within the meaning of section (b). Auxier v. McDonald, 2015 COA 50, 363 P.3d 747.

For purposes of judicial review of actions of the civil service commission pursuant to section (a)(4), the final decision of the commission was rendered on the date of certification and publication of the eligibility register, not on the date the commission announced that the promotional examination would contain a personnel record evaluation (PRE) component. The injury of which plaintiffs complain was not complete until the examination results were published and certified, which was the point of administrative finality. Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001).

Action filed by nonexistent corporation is a nullity. A nonprofit corporation's lawsuit is void ab initio when it was filed after expiration of the 30-day period but before the secretary of state accepted and filed amended articles of incorporation. Therefore, no good cause can be shown to allow substitution of parties. Black Canyon Citizens Coalition, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Montrose County, 80 P.3d 932 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court's review under section (a)(4) is on a de novo basis, based on the record made before the lower tribunal. Feldwerth v. Joint Sch. Dist. 28-J, 3 P.3d 467 (Colo. App. 1999); Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001).

Court's scope of review regarding sentence imposed by county court judge is strictly limited to whether the judge exceeded his jurisdiction or abused his discretion. Held that where the county judge immediately imposed sentence based on representations that defendant met the criteria for immediate sentencing under § 42-4-1301 and discovered later that defendant did not meet those criteria, county judge did not exceed his jurisdiction or abuse his discretion in resentencing the defendant.

Walker v. Arries, 908 P.2d 1180 (Colo. App. 1995).

Notwithstanding C.R.C.P. 54(d), § 13-16-111 allows a prevailing plaintiff in an action under section (a)(4) of this rule to recover costs against the state, its officers, or agencies. Branch v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 89 P.3d 496 (Colo. App. 2003).

II. HABEAS CORPUS.

This rule abolishes the special forms previously considered necessary and peculiar to the writ of habeas corpus, and relief may now be obtained either by an action or by a motion under the new practice set up in the Rules of Civil Procedure. Rogers v. Best, 115 Colo. 245, 171 P.2d 769 (1946).

Habeas corpus is a civil action, and the proceedings are governed by the rules of civil procedure. Schauer v. Smeltzer, 175 Colo. 364, 488 P.2d 899 (1971).

The application of this rule is limited to affording relief where any person not being committed or detained for any criminal or supposed criminal matter is illegally confined or restrained of his liberty. Wright v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 258, 365 P.2d 691 (1961).

Person denied parole can seek judicial review only as provided by section (a)(2) of this rule. In re Question Concerning State Judicial Review, 199 Colo. 463, 610 P.2d 1340 (1980).

Acts of parole board are not reviewable. Administrative acts of the parole board, being definitely a matter of grace, and not a matter of right, are not such a function as is reviewable by the courts by habeas corpus, certiorari, or mandamus. Berry v. State Bd. of Parole, 148 Colo. 547, 367 P.2d 338 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 927 (1962).

Decision of state board of parole to grant or deny parole is clearly discretionary since parole is a privilege, and no prisoner is entitled to it as a matter of right. In re Question Concerning State Judicial Review, 199 Colo. 463, 610 P.2d 1340 (1980).

Actions reviewable only when board failed to exercise its statutory duties. It is only when the Colorado state board of parole has failed to exercise its statutory duties that the courts of Colorado have the power to review the board's actions. In re Question Concerning State Judicial Review, 199 Colo. 463, 610 P.2d 1340 (1980).

Certification of sanity unavailable through habeas corpus. For a patient confined in the state penitentiary after being found not guilty of murder by reason of insanity and transferred from the state hospital as a dangerous patient, the remedy available to obtain a judicial determination of a claimed restoration to sanity and present mental condition is formerly prescribed by statute and provided that the superintendent of the state hospital must first certify to the committing court that the defendant is sane. Habeas corpus was an inappropriate form of relief to obtain this certification. Pigg v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 101 (10th Cir. 1966).

III. MANDAMUS.

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(2) of this rule is similar to § 342 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

A. In General.

The substantive aspects of mandamus proceedings are preserved even though this rule "abolishes the special form of pleading", writ and name of the remedy theretofore known as mandamus, and relief of the same nature as was formerly provided in mandamus actions may be granted in accordance with precedents established under the old practice. North Poudre Irrigation Co. v. Hinderlider, 112 Colo. 467, 150 P.2d 304 (1944); Hall v. City & County of Denver, 117 Colo. 508, 190 P.2d 122 (1948);

Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

Mandamus lies to compel performance of official act. Under section (a)(2) of this rule, when a board or person charged with performing an official duty fails or refuses to act, mandamus will lie to compel performance. Sheeley v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 137 Colo. 350, 325 P.2d 275 (1958).

Section (a)(2) permits the granting of relief to compel an "inferior tribunal, corporation, board, officer or person" to perform some required duty or act. Vigil v. Indus. Comm'n, 160 Colo. 23, 413 P.2d 904 (1966).

It is not an ordinary action or proceeding available as matter of right, and the courts are invested with a sound discretion as to its issuance. Hall v. City & County of Denver, 117 Colo. 508, 190 P.2d 122 (1948).

Relief is narrowly interpreted. Relief in the nature of mandamus to compel a public official to perform an act is narrowly interpreted. Brown v. Barnes, 28 Colo. App. 593, 476 P.2d 295 (1970).

Three-part test for mandamus. There is a three-part test which must be satisfied by a plaintiff before mandamus will be issued by the court: (1) The plaintiff must have a clear right to the relief sought; (2) the defendant must have a clear duty to perform the act requested; and (3) there must be no other available remedy. Gramiger v. Crowley, 660 P.2d 1279 (Colo. 1983).

Test applied in White v. Rickets, 684 P.2d 239 (Colo. 1984); Mahon v. Harst, 738 P.2d 1190 (Colo. App. 1987); Asphalt Specialties, Co. v. City of Commerce City, 218 P.3d 741 (Colo. App. 2009); Gandy v. Raemisch, 2017 COA 110, 405 P.3d 480.

It is maintainable only when there is no other adequate legal remedy. Hall v. City & County of Denver, 117 Colo. 508, 190 P.2d 122 (1948); Julesburg Sch. Dist. No. Re-1 v. Ebke, 193 Colo. 40, 562 P.2d 419 (1977).

In cases where adequate relief may be had by an action for damages, an action under section (a)(2) will not lie as a general rule. Bell v. Thomas, 49 Colo. 76, 111 P. 76 (1910); Hall v. City & County of Denver, 117 Colo. 508, 190 P.2d 122 (1948).

Mandamus will not lie where there is another specific and adequate mode of relief available to the parties. Potter v. Anderson, 155 Colo. 25, 392 P.2d 650 (1964).

Since mandamus is available only when no other adequate remedy is available, in a case where a developer's plan met the requirements of the city zoning ordinance, and the city was acting in a quasi-judicial capacity in approving or denying the developer's plan, the proper remedy available to the developer was certiorari under section (a)(4) and not mandamus under section (a)(2), and the developer was not entitled to damages. Sherman v. Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 763 P.2d 292 (Colo. 1988).

Mandamus is not appropriate unless all alternative forms of relief have been exhausted. When administrative remedies are provided by statute or ordinance, the procedure outlined in the statute must be followed if the contested matter is within the jurisdiction of the administrative authority. Egle v. City & County of Denver, 93 P.3d 609 (Colo. App. 2004).

If a plaintiff fails to exhaust administrative remedies or to establish that an exception to the exhaustion requirement excuses the failure to do so, the district court may lack subject matter jurisdiction over the action. Exhaustion is unnecessary when: (1) It is clear beyond a reasonable doubt that further administrative review by the agency would be futile because the agency will not provide the relief requested; or (2) the agency lacks the authority or capacity to determine the matters in controversy. Here, trial court correctly held plaintiffs had complete, adequate, and speedy administrative remedies to challenge zoning department's decision to approve issuance of certificate of occupancy and building department's issuance of that certificate, and the trial court did not err in dismissing complaint. Egle v. City & County of Denver, 93 P.3d 609 (Colo. App. 2004).

Where an action is based on a breach of contract, mandamus is not the exclusive remedy. Julesburg Sch. Dist. No. RE-1 v. Ebke, 193 Colo. 40, 562 P.2d 419 (1977).

In the case of ministerial officers, there is an exception to the general rule, and they may be compelled to exercise their functions according to law, even though the party has another remedy against them. An action will lie, although the party may have also a remedy upon the official bond of the ministerial officer. Bell v. Thomas, 49 Colo. 76, 111 P. 76 (1910).

Mandamus will not lie to enforce duties generally, or to control and regulate a general course of official conduct for a long series of continuous acts to be performed under varying conditions. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

Unless a party has a clear legal right to compel the action sought, he cannot maintain an action. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Beates, 88 Colo. 319, 295 P. 920 (1931); Hertz Drive-Ur-Self Sys. v. Doak, 94 Colo. 200, 29 P.2d 625 (1934).

No one is entitled to mandamus whose right is not clear and unquestionable. Sturner v. James A. McCandless Inv. Co., 87 Colo. 23, 284 P. 778 (1930); Barghler v. Farmers' Irrigation Co., 87 Colo. 605, 290 P. 288 (1930).

When the right claimed is doubtful, action will not lie. People ex rel. Foley v. Stapleton, 98 Colo. 354, 56 P.2d 931 (1936).

An action lies only where the petitioner has a clear legal right to have the respondent perform a clear legal duty. Heimbecher v. City & County of Denver, 97 Colo. 465, 50 P.2d 785 (1935).

The general rule is that a writ of mandamus will not be issued with respect to the making or enforcement of police regulations except to enforce a clear legal right or to compel the performance of a clear legal duty. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

Mandamus will not issue in doubtful cases. Potter v. Anderson, 155 Colo. 25, 392 P.2d 650 (1964).

Action lies to compel clear legal duty. Where a petition shows that there is neither a clear legal right in the petitioner nor a clear legal duty corresponding thereto, relief is properly denied. Roper v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 250, 25 P.2d 725 (1933).

An action lies only when on the one side there is a clear legal right to demand the doing of a certain thing, and on the other side a clear legal duty to do it. Schneider v. People ex rel. Grant, 95 Colo. 300, 35 P.2d 498 (1934).

An action lies to compel the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station. Bd. of Trustees v. Endner, 18 Colo. App. 65, 70 P. 152 (1902); Statton v. People ex rel. Burr, 18 Colo. App. 85, 70 P. 157 (1902); Colo. Pub. Welfare Bd. v. Viles, 105 Colo. 62, 94 P.2d 713 (1939).

Mandamus is only justified when a state agency has failed to perform a statutory duty or to adhere to its statutory responsibility. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

The one bringing the action must show a clear legal right to demand the performance of a certain act as well as a clear legal duty on the part of the officer to do the thing demanded. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

An action compelling an officer to act will lie only when that officer fails to perform an official duty. Where there is no duty to act, an action in the nature of mandamus cannot be sustained. People ex rel. Garrison v. Lamm, 622 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1980).

Mandamus will not issue to coerce an official to perform acts which it is not his official duty to perform. Potter v. Anderson, 155 Colo. 25, 392 P.2d 650 (1964).

Mandamus is an extraordinary remedy. It may be used to compel the performance by a public officer of a plain legal duty devolving upon him by virtue of his office or which the law enjoins as a duty resulting from the office. Potter v. Anderson, 155 Colo. 25, 392 P.2d 650 (1964).

Relief in the nature of mandamus will be granted only in cases where the act is administrative in nature and a clear legal duty exists under a statute to perform this act. Brown v. Barnes, 28 Colo. App. 593, 476 P.2d 295 (1970).

Mandamus is appropriate if the decision-maker has grossly abused its discretion and if the damage suffered by the petitioner cannot be cured by means of an appeal, while matters relating to the discovery of evidence are usually reviewable only on an appeal. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

Action for the performance of a purely ministerial duty involving no discretionary right or the exercise of judgment is proper. Lindsey v. Carlton, 44 Colo. 42, 96 P. 997 (1908); Hall v. City & County of Denver, 117 Colo. 508, 190 P.2d 122 (1948).

Mandamus does not lie to compel the performance of a trust sought which is discretionary or involves the exercise of judgment. Lindsey v. Carlton, 44 Colo. 42, 96 P. 997 (1908).

Mandamus has its function in those cases where the duty of the public officer or board is purely ministerial and not discretionary. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

If the act sought to be compelled is one involving the exercise of discretion on the part of the official, or requiring a choice between alternative courses of action, then relief in the nature of mandamus will be denied. Brown v. Barnes, 28 Colo. App. 593, 476 P.2d 295 (1970).

Mandamus only to compel officer to perform ministerial function. Relief in the nature of mandamus will be granted only in cases where a clear legal duty exists for an administrative officer to perform a ministerial act. Menchetti v. Wilson, 43 Colo. App. 19, 597 P.2d 1054 (1979); Sherman v. City of Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 680 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1983); Reynolds v. City Council of Longmont, 680 P.2d 1350 (Colo. App. 1984).

Mandamus is improper if the court must give directions about the manner in which administrative discretion is to be exercised. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

Mandamus will not lie to compel a quasi-judicial tribunal to exercise its discretion in a particular way. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

Approval of requests for money from county general fund is discretionary function of boards of county commissioners, not a ministerial act. Tisdell v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 621 P.2d 1357 (Colo. 1980).

Adoption of budgetary items is legislative, not judicial, in character. Tisdell v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 621 P.2d 1357 (Colo. 1980).

Mandamus will be allowed where a statute prescribes no remedy for the refusal to perform a duty made imperative thereby, or in case of doubt whether there be another effectual remedy. Bell v. Thomas, 49 Colo. 76, 111 P. 76 (1910).

Where there is a conflict between a statute and a rule, the former must govern; rules of court can neither abridge, enlarge, nor modify substantive rights of a litigant. Sherman v. Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 729 P.2d 1014 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 763 P.2d 292 (Colo. 1988).

Where rule provides that the "judgment shall include any damages sustained" but a statute makes available the doctrine of sovereign immunity as a defense to such damage award, the statute governs, and damages are not recoverable. Sherman v. Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 729 P.2d 1014 (Colo. App. 1986), aff'd, 763 P.2d 292 (Colo. 1988).

Action cannot usurp the functions of an appeal. Lindsey v. Carlton, 44 Colo. 42, 96 P. 997 (1908).

Action will not lie from the district court to compel the county court to enter a judgment in a divorce proceeding different from the judgment which had been rendered, this being an attempt to review, annul, and modify such judgment, and to usurp the functions of an appeal to such judgment, and also an attempt to control the discretion and judgment of the county court. Lindsey v. Carlton, 44 Colo. 42, 96 P. 997 (1908).

Action will not lie against a court unless it be clearly shown that such court has refused to perform some manifest duty. Lindsey v. Carlton, 44 Colo. 42, 96 P. 997 (1908).

Action will not lie when the interests of third parties who are not before the court are involved. Sturmer v. James A. McCandless Inv. Co., 87 Colo. 23, 284 P. 778 (1930); Barghler v. Farmers' Irrigation Co., 87 Colo. 605, 290 P. 288 (1930); Hertz Drive-Ur-Self Sys. v. Doak, 94 Colo. 200, 29 P.2d 625 (1934).

Action will not lie to compel the commission on judicial discipline or its executive director to investigate a complaint alleging judicial misconduct or to compel the governor to investigate a complaint of alleged judicial misconduct. The district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to compel such investigations. Higgins v. Owens, 13 P.3d 837 (Colo. App. 2000).

Failure to join indispensable parties jurisdictional error. Failure to join indispensable parties within 30 days after the final action of a tribunal is a jurisdictional defect requiring dismissal of the entire action. Smith v. County of El Paso, 42 Colo. App. 316, 593 P.2d 979 (1979).

Failure to join all indispensable parties in action under this rule within the 30-day time limit prescribed by the rule is a jurisdictional defect which requires dismissal of the action. Dahman v. City of Lakewood, 44 Colo. App. 261, 610 P.2d 1357 (1980).

Failure to join nonindispensable parties not error. Permissive joinder and permissive intervention can only be effected within 30 days after the final action taken by the tribunal; however, failure to join parties who are not indispensable is not a jurisdictional error, and therefore does not require dismissal of the suit. Smith v. County of El Paso, 42 Colo. App. 316, 593 P.2d 979 (1979).

City council is indispensable party to suit brought seeking review of denial of rezoning petition and failure to join it is a jurisdictional defect requiring dismissal. Dahman v. City of Lakewood, 44 Colo. App. 261, 610 P.2d 1357 (1980).

Naming municipality is not substitute for naming city council in an action seeking review of denial of rezoning petition. Dahman v. City of Lakewood, 44 Colo. App. 261, 610 P.2d 1357 (1980).

Relief inappropriate where board does act. Where a board does act, denying a license, as opposed to failing to act, mandamus is not appropriate. Sheeley v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 137 Colo. 350, 325 P.2d 275 (1958).

A proceeding cannot be maintained in anticipation of an omission to perform a duty or because the relator fears there will be an omission, but there must be shown an actual failure or refusal to perform the duty before an action can be maintained to compel its performance. Orman v. People, 18 Colo. App. 302, 71 P. 430 (1903).

Proceeding not appropriate to compel a ministerial officer not to act. Judgment in an action may be that a ministerial officer — where there is a clear legal duty — shall perform, or where the duty does not appear, that he need not perform, but never that he shall not perform. If the latter judicial direction is given it must be by a judgment entered in an equitable action for injunction. Brownlow v. Wunch, 102 Colo. 447, 80 P.2d 444 (1938).

Petition insufficient. The use of such words as “compel”, and the prayer that the trial court “order” the secretary of state “to perform” in a specified manner in the enforcement of the liquor code “as a duty resulting from his office” in a complaint to bring action under this rule is not sufficient to invoke the issuance of a writ of mandamus. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

Trial court was justified in drawing a distinction between the writ of mandamus and proceedings under section (a)(4) of this rule. Hall v. City & County of Denver, 117 Colo. 508, 190 P.2d 122 (1948).

POME standard for consideration of motion to dismiss claim for abuse of process based on first amendment right to petition. Trial court should consider whether the petitioning activities on the part of the party being sued for abuse of process were not immunized from liability by the first amendment because: (1) Those activities are devoid of factual support or, if supportable in fact, have no cognizable basis in law; (2) the primary purpose of the petitioning activities is to harass the other party or to effectuate some other improper objective; and (3) those petitioning activities have the capacity to have an adverse effect on a legal interest of the other party. Protect Our Mountain Environment (POME) v. District Court, 677 P.2d 1361 (Colo. 1984) (decided prior to 1981 amendment).

Standard extended to case under section (a)(2) in Concerned Members v. District Court, 713 P.2d 923 (Colo. 1986); Ware v. McCutchen, 784 P.2d 846 (Colo. App. 1989).

Relief in the nature of mandamus may be appropriate when it is alleged that a sheriff or chief of police has refused to accept applications for concealed weapons permits from private investigators who are not current or retired law enforcement officers and the sheriff or police chief has thereby breached a statutory duty to conduct a background check on each applicant. Miller v. Collier, 878 P.2d 141 (Colo. App. 1994).

A request for extraordinary relief in the form of mandamus under this rule is improper to challenge arbitrary action by the department of revenue in revoking a person's driver's license, even though petition was filed on the basis that the department refused to conduct a revocation hearing. The State Administrative Procedure Act provides the proper mechanism for seeking relief based on arbitrary action by an executive agency. Dept. of Rev. v. District Court, 802 P.2d 473 (Colo. 1990).

Money damages are not available in a proceeding under this rule. Accordingly, plaintiffs could not seek such damages in an action brought under rule and did not have a remedy at law. Sundheim v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 904 P.2d 1337 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd, 926 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996); Fortner v. Cousar, 992 P.2d 697 (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in Local 1 v. Metro Wastewater Reclamation, 876 P.2d 82 (Colo. App. 1994).

B. Illustrative Cases.

Action lies to compel the performance of a single act. People ex rel. City & County of Denver v. District Court, 81 Colo. 163, 255 P. 447 (1927).

Action may also be invoked to require the execution of a series of acts. People ex rel. City & County of Denver v. District Court, 81 Colo. 163, 255 P. 447 (1927).

To compel the issuance of a building permit which has been denied on the ground that the construction of the proposed building would infringe the zoning ordinances of the city would be improper. Hedgcock v. People ex rel. Arden Realty & Inv. Co., 98 Colo. 522, 57 P.2d 891 (1936).

An action in the nature of mandamus is a proper remedy to require a building inspector to issue a building permit. Mahnke v. Coughenour, 170 Colo. 61, 458 P.2d 747 (1969).

To compel ousted officer to deliver papers to appointee. Where an ousted secretary of an irrigation district refused to turn over the books and papers to the regular appointee, an action to compel delivery is proper. Kepley v. People ex rel. Everson, 76 Colo. 233, 230 P. 804 (1924).

To compel justice of peace to issue writ of commitment. Where a justice of the peace tried and convicted a defendant and sentenced him to imprisonment in the county jail, his duty to issue a writ of commitment was mandatory, and upon his refusal to issue such writ when demanded, action would lie to compel him to issue the writ. It was immaterial that time had elapsed since the sentence and before the writ was demanded which exceeded the length of the term of sentence. Mann v. People, 16 Colo. App. 475, 66 P. 452 (1901).

To compel revocation of unlawful order of suspension. An action under section (a)(2) lies to enforce the revocation of an order of suspension unlawfully entered against a police officer who was holding his position under civil service. Bratton v. Dice, 93 Colo. 593, 27 P.2d 1028 (1933).

Mandamus would be proper if an effort were being made to compel the civil service commission to reinstate an aggrieved employee. Turner v. City & County of Denver, 146 Colo. 336, 361 P.2d 631 (1961).

To compel audit for services. An acting public official is entitled to an audit of his claim for services rendered in his official capacity, and an action will lie to compel such audit. McNichols v. People ex rel. Hershey, 92 Colo. 469, 22 P.2d 131 (1933).

Courts will direct an officer to proceed and exercise the discretion vested in him by law. Refusal of a city auditor to approve a demand, because of claimed want of authority, amounts to a refusal to act, and an action will lie to compel action where he is vested with authority. People ex rel. Hershey v. McNichols, 91 Colo. 141, 13 P.2d 266 (1932).

To compel determination of tax. When a tax assessor refuses to perform a purely ministerial function which the law imposes, performance may be enforced by mandamus. Bohen v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 109 Colo. 283, 124 P.2d 606 (1942).

The statute is mandatory as to the requirement that a gift tax shall be determined upon proper application. The inheritance tax commissioner has no discretion in that ministerial duty and mandamus was the proper course to compel him as a public official to act. Tasher v. Trentaz, 165 Colo. 97, 437 P.2d 529 (1968).

To compel filling of vacancies. Where city charter provides for the appointment of at least two justices of the peace, any vacancy in such offices to be filled by the mayor, mandamus would lie to compel the mayor to fill any vacancy, at least to the number of two, as a mandatory public duty required by the charter. McNichols v. City & County of Denver, 109 Colo. 269, 124 P.2d 601 (1942).

To compel approval of home care application. The plaintiff completed those things required of her under the statute and under the rules, but the affirmative action by the state board of education requiring that it give its approval and make its recommendation was not done. Absent the rule which the board had no authority to promulgate, the plaintiff's application could be processed. The trial court should have directed that the board complete plaintiff's application for home care. Flemming v. Colo. State Bd. of Educ., 157 Colo. 45, 400 P.2d 932 (1965).

To grant prisoner a free transcript. Defendant is caught in a vicious circle — unable to put into a petition the matters and things which are required, and being denied a transcript because he has not asserted any of those grounds. The district court is ordered to grant the prisoner's petition for a free transcript of the proceedings at the time of the court acceptance of his plea of guilty as well as of the trial in which the determination of the degree of the offense was made. Sherbondy v. District Court, 170 Colo. 114, 459 P.2d 133 (1969).

Right of school board to demand performance of school district. Section 27-11-103 clearly requires that the "school district shall provide to the community incorporated board" a sum of money determined by a stated formula; therefore, the clear right of a school board to demand performance, and the clear legal duty on a school district to act, makes this a proper case for disposition by mandamus. Denver Ass'n for Retarded Children v. Sch. Dist. No. 1, 188 Colo. 310, 535 P.2d 200 (1975).

Mandamus was the appropriate remedy, rather than a motion under section (a)(4) of this rule, to address a school district board of education's action in not renewing a probationary teacher's employment contract. Although the school board has broad discretion in determining whether to renew employment contracts for probationary teachers, that discretion is limited by § 22-32-110 (4)(c), which prohibits the board from using as grounds for nonrenewal any actions taken by the probationary teacher in good faith and in compliance with the school district's discipline policy. Since there is no remedy provided if the school board violates this prohibition, the probationary teacher's action in seeking mandamus was appropriate. McIntosh v. Bd. of Educ. of Sch. Dist. No. 1, 999 P.2d 224 (Colo. App. 2000).

Court erred when it dismissed plaintiff's claim for mandamus relief where the executive director of the department of corrections failed to perform his duty, prescribed by § 24-60-2301, to perform the final review and determination of plaintiff's application for transfer to the Canadian penal system. Gandy v. Raemisch, 2017 COA 110, 405 P.3d 480.

Action will not lie to test rule of procedure in workmen's compensation case. This remedy may not be invoked in a workmen's compensation case for the purpose of testing the meaning or validity of a mere rule of procedure when the commission which framed it has seen fit to disregard it. Roper v. Indus. Comm'n, 93 Colo. 250, 25 P.2d 725 (1933).

Nor to compel appointment by civil service commission. A person who stands second on a civil service eligible list for appointment to a clerical position cannot compel his appointment in the absence of a showing that the person standing first had been tendered and refused the appointment or had failed to make demand therefor upon request of relator. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Beates, 88 Colo. 319, 295 P. 920 (1931).

Nor to control discretion of mayor as to appointments. Under city charter, authorizing mayor to appoint justices of the peace, the discretion of the mayor as to whom he appoints, except as it may be limited by the charter, cannot be controlled by mandamus. McNichols v. City & County of Denver, 109 Colo. 269, 124 P.2d 601 (1942).

Nor to compel appropriations. Action does not lie to compel a city council to make an appropriation for civil service commission expense. Schneider v. People ex rel. Grant, 95 Colo. 300, 35 P.2d 498 (1934).

Nor to compel school board to allow claims. It is the duty of a school board to disallow invalid claims, according to its judgment, and courts cannot control that judgment by proceedings under section (a)(2). Sorensen v. Echternacht, 74 Colo. 91, 218 P. 1046 (1923).

Nor to test title to office. When a person is in actual possession of an office under an election or commission, and exercising its duties under color of right, his title to the office cannot be tried or tested under section (a)(2). Henderson v. Glynn, 2 Colo. App. 303, 30 P. 265 (1892); City Council v. People ex rel. Ferguson, 19 Colo. App. 399, 75 P. 603 (1903).

Nor to compel admission of claimant to occupied office. When an office is already filled by an actual incumbent, exercising the functions of the office de facto, and under color of right, an action will not lie to compel the admission of another claimant. City Council v. People ex rel. Ferguson, 19 Colo. App. 399, 75 P. 603 (1903).

Nor to compel discretionary hearing. The effect of a mandamus to determine the scope of insurance coverage would be to require the commissioner to find that the filing is defective, and that the public interest requires hearings on this matter. These are matters within the discretionary function of the commissioner and therefore cannot be compelled under section (a)(2) of this rule. Brown v. Barnes, 28 Colo. App. 593, 476 P.2d 295 (1970).

Nor to compel hearing where none is provided by statute. The statutes providing for the procedures that must be followed prior to the issuance of a liquor license do not require a hearing, no hearing; after issuance is in any manner provided for in the statutes and, therefore, mandamus may not issue. Potter v. Anderson, 155 Colo. 25, 392 P.2d 650 (1964).

Nor to compel enforcement of police or criminal laws by police officers generally, such as the keeping of places of business open for the sale of liquors on Sundays or holidays. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

A public officer will not be compelled by mandamus to enforce liquor laws, since it would entail the ordering of a discretionary authority. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

Nor to compel municipal board empowered with discretionary procedures. Where an advisory board is given discretion in preparing recommendations of salaries for certain municipal employees to a city council, section (a)(2) cannot be invoked to compel the board to revise its procedures for preparing those recommendations. Reeve v. Career Serv. Bd., 636 P.2d 1307 (Colo. App. 1981).

Action does not lie to compel the department of corrections to place an inmate in community corrections if the inmate is under a detainer. Rivera-Bottzeck v. Ortiz, 134 P.3d 517 (Colo. App. 2006).

Relief unavailable where certiorari remedy was not utilized. Where there is other adequate relief available to the parties by review of the action of the local licensing authority by certiorari under section (a)(4), providing therein for stay of execution of the issuing of the license pending review, but that remedy was not sought, and the license issued, mandamus will not lie. Potter v. Anderson, 155 Colo. 25, 392 P.2d 650 (1964).

Mandamus is an inappropriate form of relief to obtain certification of sanity for a patient confined in the state penitentiary after being found not guilty of murder by reason of insanity and transferred from the state hospital as a dangerous patient. The remedy available to obtain a judicial determination of a claimed restoration to the superintendent's good faith and discretion in sanity and present mental condition is prescribed by a statute. Pigg v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 101 (10th Cir. 1966).

Allegations sufficient to state a claim of relief. Assertion by petitioner that parole board had acted pursuant to § 16-13-203 when it ordered petitioner transferred to a different facility and that the department of corrections was required to comply with that order alleged both a right and a duty owed to him by the department of corrections. Therefore, petition contained sufficient allegations to state a claim for relief in mandamus under this rule. White v. Ricketts, 684 P.2d 239 (Colo. 1984).

Mandamus relief under section (a)(2) is available to challenge the parole board's actions if it has failed to exercise its statutory duties. Although plaintiff did not expressly seek mandamus relief pursuant to section (a)(2), the gravamen of his complaint was that the parole board's failure to consider any events or circumstances prior to plaintiff's incarceration was in direct violation of statutory guidelines for parole. Under these circumstances, the trial court had jurisdiction to address the merits of the complaint. Fraser v. Colo. Bd. of Parole, 931 P.2d 560 (Colo. App. 1996).

Mandamus relief under section (a)(2) is available to compel a school district and the school district board of education to perform a state statutory duty. Denver Classroom v. City & County of Denver, 2015 COA 71, 412 P.3d 721, rev'd on other grounds, 2017 CO 30, 407 P.3d 1220.

Court applied three-part test to determine whether petitioners have established the elements of their claim for mandamus against the school district and school district board of education. The court considered whether petitioners had a clear right to relief, whether the school district and school district board of education had a clear duty under the statute, and whether the petitioners had another available remedy under the statute. Denver Classroom v. City & County of Denver, 2015 COA 71, 412 P.3d 721, rev'd on other grounds, 2017 CO 30, 407 P.3d 1220.

IV. QUO WARRANTO.

A. In General.

Law reviews. For article, "The Misuse of Judicial Flexibility in Quo Warranto Cases", see 10 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 239 (1938).

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(3) of this rule is similar to § 321 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing that section have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Common law writ. The writ of quo warranto was originally a prerogative writ of the crown against one who usurped any office, franchise, or liberty of the crown and was also used in the case of nonuse or long neglect of a franchise or misuse or abuse thereof. At common law it served the function of testing title to public and corporate offices. Burns v. District Court, 144 Colo. 259, 356 P.2d 245 (1960).

Rule substituted for common law and code. Former provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure were a substitute for the original common-law quo warranto remedy and retained the purpose and scope of that which it supplanted. These code provisions were superseded by this rule. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

Purpose of relief. Traditionally, quo warranto was directed against one charged with usurping an office, to inquire by what authority he claims to hold such office, in order to adjudge his right thereto. Its purpose was to protect the interest of the public and not to protect or promote private rights. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

The various procedural changes do not affect the basic purposes for which the writ of quo warranto was originally designed. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

The traditional concept of quo warranto relief is prevailing under this rule. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

Section (a)(3) does not enlarge or abridge substantive rights. This section is not a statute and does not, and cannot, have the force and effect of a statute, and cannot enlarge or abridge substantive rights. Enos v. District Court, 124 Colo. 335, 238 P.2d 861 (1951).

If section (a)(3) enlarges the scope of quo warranto by making relief thereunder obtainable by persons who had no access to such accommodation before, the supreme court would bestow jurisdiction upon trial courts which they did not have in the past. This would constitute a legislative act beyond its authority. The supreme court will not so encroach upon the legislative domain. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

Substantial elements of relief remain the same. While the procedural pattern has been simplified, the substance of what constitutes the basis of quo warranto relief remains the same. In order to prevail, proof of the substantive elements authorizing such relief should be of the same kind, quality, and quantity as would have warranted a favorable judgment under the older forms. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

The substance of the relief determines the character of the action; the name given an extraordinary writ such as quo warranto is unimportant. Burns v. District Court, 144 Colo. 259, 356 P.2d 245 (1960).

"Any person" in the first sentence is characterized by the following words "such person" and the context thereof. People ex rel.

Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

A proceeding under section (a)(3) is the exclusive method by which to try title to public office. People ex rel. Barton v. Londoner, 13 Colo. 303, 22 P. 764, 6 L.R.A. 444 (1889); Bd. of Comm'rs v. Gould, 6 Colo. App. 44, 39 P. 895 (1895); Wason v. Major, 10 Colo. App. 181, 50 P. 741 (1897); State R. R. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Denver & R. G. R. R., 44 Colo. 345, 98 P. 7 (1908); Roberts v. People ex rel. Duncan, 81 Colo. 338, 255 P. 461 (1927); Bd. of Comm'rs v. Wharton, 82 Colo. 466, 261 P. 4 (1927).

It is a general rule that when the statute provides a remedy to test the right to exercise a franchise or office, it is exclusive of all other remedies. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. People, 5 Colo. 60 (1879).

Thus, title to office cannot be tested by section (a)(2). Where a party is in actual possession of an office under an election or commission, and exercising its duties under color of right, his title to the office cannot be tried or tested by a proceeding under section (a)(2). City Council v. People ex rel. Ferguson, 19 Colo. App. 399, 75 P. 603 (1904).

Title to office cannot be tested in a suit brought to recover a salary. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Wharton, 82 Colo. 466, 261 P. 4 (1927).

Title to an office cannot be tried in a collateral proceeding. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Gould, 6 Colo. App. 44, 39 P. 895 (1895).

Distinction between proceeding under this section and election contest. A proceeding by the people for the purpose of trying the incumbent's title to office, regardless of the claimant's right, is not an "election contest" within the meaning of this phrase as employed in § 12 of art. VII, Colo. Const. Statutes passed by the general assembly in obedience to the constitutional mandate relating to contested elections do not deprive the courts of jurisdiction to inquire into usurpations and unlawful holdings of office or petitioners of a remedy in quo warranto. People ex rel. Barton v. Londoner, 13 Colo. 303, 22 P. 764 (1889).

A proceeding to oust a party from an office cannot be converted into a statutory election contest. People ex rel. Stidger v. Horan, 34 Colo. 304, 86 P. 252 (1905).

The right to the official salary is not to be determined in a proceeding under section (a)(3), but is to be determined in other proceedings. Capp v. People ex rel. Walker, 64 Colo. 58, 170 P. 399 (1918).

General assembly may limit time to challenge recreation district. The general assembly may validly limit the period within which the constitutionally guaranteed remedy of quo warranto is available to challenge the validity of a recreation district, unless the time is so unreasonably short as to destroy the substance of the remedy. Burns v. District Court, 144 Colo. 259, 356 P.2d 245 (1960).

Cause of action limited to parties named and served. Where relators did not bring the quo warranto action as a class action, nor did they name and serve as parties the other numerous school districts in the state, their cause of action must be limited to action against the captioned respondents who were named and served. People ex rel. Cory v. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 141 Colo. 382, 349 P.2d 381 (1960).

Corporation, not stockholder, is indispensable party. The requirements of this rule do not set forth the parties who are indispensable to a quo warranto proceeding, but provide a framework under which the state, or a shareholder if the state refuses to act, may review the propriety of a challenged election. While the legality of an issuance of stock could not be adjudicated adversely to the absent holder, yet his right to vote could be passed upon notwithstanding his absence insofar as was necessary to determine the result of the particular election that was under review. The corporation, however, is an indispensable party. State ex rel. Gentles v. Barnholt, 145 Colo. 259, 358 P.2d 466 (1961).

B. Franchises and Offices.

Law reviews. For comment on People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss (cited below), see 38 Dicta 361 (1961).

Office defined. An office is an employment on behalf of the government in any station or public trust, not transient, occasional, or incidental. People ex rel. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Garfield County Court, 59 Colo. 52, 147 P. 329 (1915).

Franchise defined. A franchise is defined as a particular privilege conferred upon individuals by grant from the government. Franchises are usually conferred upon corporations for the purpose of enabling them to do certain things. Franchises are vested in the corporate entity. Londoner v. People ex rel. Barton, 15 Colo. 246, 25 P. 183 (1890); Grant v. Elder, 64 Colo. 104, 170 P. 198 (1918).

Where it is alleged that the purpose of the challenged group is to render services to the public and that its operations are so permeated with the public interest as to be such that everyone may not engage therein as a matter of right, and that the exercise of such authority requires, or may require, a specific grant of privilege from the general assembly, a franchise is involved. People ex rel. Cory v. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 141 Colo. 382, 349 P.2d 381 (1960).

A franchise is involved in a situation where public high school districts voluntarily join together to perform jointly a public function through a public or quasi-public body that is operating independently of statutory authority. People ex rel. Cory v. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 141 Colo. 382, 349 P.2d 381 (1960).

An "office or franchise" can be deemed to exist where there has been no legislative act or constitutional provision authorizing the creation of one. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

Unless an existing statute is inconsistent with an amendment to the state constitution, then the statute continues in force subsequent to the adoption and effective date of the amendment. People ex rel. Union Trust Co. v. Superior Court, 175 Colo. 391, 488 P.2d 66 (1971).

The statute which established the superior court was never inconsistent with the constitutional provisions that judicial power shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, and others. Therefore, the statute was not automatically repealed by enactment of new constitutional provision. People ex rel. Union Trust Co. v. Superior Court, 175 Colo. 391, 488 P.2d 66 (1971) (decided prior to abolition of superior courts).

The right of a county judge to hold office is dependent upon the validity of the proceedings by which he was appointed, but such right cannot be determined in an injunctive proceeding, because the exclusive means of determining whether a person unlawfully holds any office is by a writ in the nature of quo warranto. McCamant v. City & County of Denver, 31 Colo. App. 287, 501 P.2d 142 (1972).

This rule relates to public offices. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

It does not authorize a contest over private office in a quo warranto action. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

It was not in contemplation of this remedy that the district attorney, either on his own motion or at the behest of the governor or the request of the individual, should intervene in the governance of an unincorporated society. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

The provisions of this rule may not be utilized by members of a labor union to dislodge other members from offices which they hold in the organization, the application of the rule and the remedy being limited to public officers. People ex rel. Mijares v. Kniss, 144 Colo. 551, 357 P.2d 352 (1960).

Section (a)(3) was not intended to give private person right to redress his own wrongs. Section (a)(3) was not intended to give a private person the right to question the corporate existence of another, in order to protect his own rights or redress his own wrongs, unless it may be in that class of cases where the title to an office is involved, or some similar question is presented. If the law officer should refuse, the private relator could proceed and institute an action to remedy a public wrong. In the latter case, however, it must appear that the object aimed at is a public one, and is the protection of the interests and the maintenance of the welfare of the people. People ex rel. Union Pac. Ry. v. Colo. E. Ry., 8 Colo. App. 301, 46 P. 219 (1896); State R. R. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Denver & R. G. R. R., 44 Colo. 345, 98 P. 7 (1908); People ex rel. Weisbrod v. Lockhard, 26 Colo. App. 439, 143 P. 273 (1914), aff'd, 65 Colo. 558, 178 P. 565 (1919).

When the action is brought to protect private rights, it should not be maintained. This remedy is for the protection of the interests of the public as contradistinguished from private rights, and when the object of a proceeding is the protection of the latter, the action should not be maintained. State R. R. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Denver & R. G. R. R., 44 Colo. 345, 98 P. 7 (1930).

An action lies to try right of those lawfully elected directors of private corporations. The phrase "any franchise" in section (a)(3) includes the powers and rights conferred upon a private corporation, and an action lies to try the right of those lawfully elected directors of a private corporation and wrongfully prevented from acting. Grant v. Elder, 64 Colo. 104, 170 P. 198 (1918).

An action in quo warranto is authorized with respect to corporations, which are creatures of statute. State ex rel. Gentles v. Barnholt, 145 Colo. 259, 358 P.2d 466 (1961).

An action lies to test the title of the office of a director of an irrigation district. Lockhard v. People ex rel. Hasselbush, 80 Colo. 31, 250 P. 152 (1926).

Action to determine the validity of a high school activities association. In a proper case quo warranto is a suitable method to test the validity of the Colorado high school activities association activities. People ex rel. Cory v. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 141 Colo. 382, 349 P.2d 381 (1960).

A club organized in violation of law may be dissolved under section (a)(3). A club organized ostensibly as a social club, but in fact with the sole purpose to dispense intoxicating liquors, in violation of law and local ordinances, may be dissolved by a proceeding under section (a)(3). Canon City Labor Club v. People ex rel. Jamieson, 21 Colo. App. 37, 121 P. 120 (1912).

Action may not be used to test the regularity of the appointment of commissioners to hold an incorporation election for a town, as such commissioners are not public officers. Commissioners appointed under the statute to hold an election upon the question whether a town shall become incorporated are not public officers. People ex rel. Denver & R. G. R. R. v.

Garfield County Court, 59 Colo. 52, 147 P. 329 (1915).

However, when the town is declared formed the validity of the proceeding may be tested under section (a)(3). People ex rel. Denver & R. G. R. R. v. Garfield County Court, 59 Colo. 52, 147 P. 329 (1915).

The writ of quo warranto is a proper proceeding to attack the legal existence of a quasi-municipal corporation. Burns v. District Court, 144 Colo. 259, 356 P.2d 245 (1960).

This section provides a proper remedy in cases involving incorporations of towns and cities. Wiltgen v. Berg, 164 Colo. 139, 435 P.2d 378 (1967).

C. Who May Bring Action.

As a general rule, prosecutions for public wrongs must be instituted by the state through properly authorized agents, while the individual can only sue for injuries peculiarly affecting him. People ex rel. Byers v. Grand River Bridge Co., 13 Colo. 11, 21 P. 898 (1889).

If the defendant corporation has violated the law, either by doing some forbidden act or by neglecting to do some act enjoined upon it, it is not every person who may call it to account for such violation. People ex rel. Byers v. Grand River Bridge Co., 13 Colo. 11, 21 P. 898 (1889).

Exception where agent neglects or refuses to bring action. The provision permitting an action to be brought by a purely private party, upon the neglect or refusal of the district attorney to bring such action, must be construed with reference to this general rule. People ex rel. Byers v. Grand River Bridge Co., 13 Colo. 11, 21 P. 898 (1889).

Where by statute authority is given to a particular officer, its exercise by any other officer is forbidden by implication. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R. v. People, 5 Colo. 60 (1879).

Under § 32-6-107 providing for the election and organization of metropolitan recreation districts, quo warranto is available only to the people on relation of the attorney general. Burns v. District Court, 144 Colo. 259, 356 P.2d 245 (1960).

District attorney is proper officer to determine whether public interest is involved. Under section (a)(3), the district attorney is the proper officer to determine in the first instance whether the public interest is involved, and whether or not a franchise, as contemplated by that provision, is properly an issue. People v. Painless Parker Dentist, 85 Colo. 304, 275 P. 928, cert. denied, 280 U.S. 566 (1929).

Refusal of district attorney to bring action is sufficient to authorize action by private parties. It was alleged and proven that the district attorney upon request made by relators and their attorneys and upon complaint being submitted to him, refused to prosecute the proceedings, and under the circumstances in this case such refusal was sufficient to authorize the court to permit the prosecution upon the relation of such private parties without the aid or sanction of the district attorney. Canon City Labor Club v. People ex rel. Jamieson, 21 Colo. App. 37, 121 P. 120 (1912).

Where there is no allegation in the complaint that the district attorney has declined to institute an action under this rule, nothing in the complaint discloses that the claimant has any special interest separate and apart from that held by the general public, and the complaint fails to allege the violation of any of claimant's rights which the law recognizes and for which a remedy is provided, such an action may not be maintained by a private citizen. McCamant v. City & County of Denver, 31 Colo. App. 287, 501 P.2d 142 (1972).

In order to support an action by the people for redress of a wrong, that wrong must appear to have been done to the people. People ex rel. Union Pac. Ry. v. Colo. E. Ry., 8 Colo. App. 301, 46 P. 219 (1896).

The provisions which give permission to a private party to bring the action and also to have the right of one other than the incumbent adjudicated, do not turn the proceeding from one to protect the public interests into one to safeguard the purely private rights of the relator. State R. R. Comm'n v. People ex rel. Denver & R. G. R. R., 44 Colo. 345, 98 P. 7 (1908).

Person is not disqualified because of having been opposing candidate for office in question. One possessing the qualifications of "freeholder, resident and elector" is not disqualified from acting as plaintiff in the proceedings by reason of having been the opposing candidate for the office in question. People ex rel. Barton v. Londoner, 13 Colo. 303, 22 P. 764 (1889).

A certain degree of interest on the part of plaintiffs in the proceedings is generally deemed requisite; and the officious intermeddling by parties having absolutely no interest, either as taxpayers or voters, is disfavored. People ex rel. Barton v. Londoner, 13 Colo. 303, 22 P. 764 (1889); Canon City Labor Club v. People ex rel. Jamieson, 21 Colo. App. 37, 121 P. 120 (1912).

A plaintiff must have some interest in the matter before he would be entitled to institute such proceedings. People ex rel. Byers v. Grand River Bridge Co., 13 Colo. 11, 21 P. 898 (1899); People ex rel. Weisbrod v. Lockhard, 26 Colo. App. 439, 143 P. 273 (1914), aff'd, 65 Colo. 558, 178 P. 565 (1919).

Any person making a sufficient showing of a special interest in the business of the corporation and its property is a proper party. State ex rel. Gentles v. Barnholt, 145 Colo. 259, 358 P.2d 466 (1961).

Resident electors and taxpayers of a city are competent plaintiffs in such case. Canon City Labor Club v. People ex rel. Jamieson, 21 Colo. App. 37, 121 P. 120 (1912).

A taxpayer may act as relator in quo warranto proceedings against one claiming to exercise a public office. People ex rel. Cory v. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 141 Colo. 382, 349 P.2d 381 (1960).

A private citizen and taxpayer is undoubtedly interested in the duties required of public officials authorized to levy taxes or to expend the proceeds of taxation, and has a standing to maintain quo warranto proceedings in a matter of public interest in which he has a special interest by reason of being a contributor to the public funds. People ex rel. Cory v. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 141 Colo. 382, 349 P.2d 381 (1960).

Stockholders, officers, and corporations are suitable plaintiffs. In the absence of express provisions, proceedings to determine the title to office and to oust persons who are illegally in possession may be instituted by the corporation, by officers who have the legal title to the office, or by stockholders. State ex rel. Gentles v. Barnholt, 145 Colo. 259, 358 P.2d 466 (1961).

Where the proceedings involve the entire control of the corporation, the grievance alleged is not just that accruing to an individual, but one common to the entire corporate body, and suit may be brought by one or more stockholders affected. State ex rel. Gentles v. Barnholt, 145 Colo. 259, 358 P.2d 466 (1961).

Claim for damages is not sufficient interest to authorize suit to dissolve corporation. The fact that the plaintiff owns land which the defendant corporation has appropriated without compensation does not give him such an interest as enables him to maintain the action to dissolve the corporation. His interest is not one in which the public is concerned, being merely a right to sue for damages. People ex rel. Byers v. Grand River Bridge Co., 13 Colo. 11, 21 P. 898 (1889).

Private persons may maintain proceedings to dissolve corporation organized for illegal purpose. If private persons may institute and maintain proceedings to oust the mayor of a great city, to prohibit the regents of the state university from exercising certain powers claimed by them, there is no good reason why such private persons may not, by like permission of the court, institute and maintain proceedings to dissolve a corporation alleged to have been organized mala fide for the sole purpose of carrying on some business in defiance of the laws of the state and the ordinances of the city, and to the detriment of the public welfare.

Canon City Labor Club v. People ex rel. Jamieson, 21 Colo. App. 37, 121 P. 120 (1912).

Action to try the validity of contested corporate elections. Where the validity of a corporate election is in dispute, and it involves nothing but the title to the board of directors, in the absence of a statute created specially for the specific purpose of trying the validity of contested corporate elections, a proceeding under section (a)(3) is an appropriate remedy, and private individuals elected, but wrongfully prevented from acting upon the board by the intruders, may apply to the district attorney, and, if he fails to act, may bring an action themselves in the name of the people to oust the usurpers from exercising the franchises and to install the relators. Grant v. Elder, 64 Colo. 104, 170 P. 198 (1918).

A private person is not entitled to maintain an action to oust a corporation of its franchise. Under license from the city the defendant corporation had, at great expense, constructed a line of telephone occupying with its structures the public streets. Since the city had accepted and was still accepting valuable services from defendant and had taken no step to revoke the license, a private citizen was not entitled to maintain an action to oust defendant of the franchise, especially as the municipality had the power of revocation, and the like power was vested in the inhabitants through the initiative. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. People ex rel. Wilson, 68 Colo. 487, 190 P. 513 (1920).

V. CERTIORARI OR PROHIBITION.

A. In General.

For article, "Land Use Decisionmaking: Legislative or Quasi-judicial Action", see 18 Colo. Law. 241 (1989).

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(4) of this rule is similar to §§ 331 through 341 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule provides for writs in the nature of certiorari or prohibition. Eveready Freight Serv., Inc. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 131 Colo. 172, 280 P.2d 442 (1955); Colo. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. District Court, 138 Colo. 227, 331 P.2d 502 (1958).

The adoption of this rule altered procedural aspects only of the remedy previously known as certiorari. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

The substantive aspects remain the same. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

Proceedings authorized by section (a)(4) of this rule are extraordinary in nature, and may not be employed as a substitute for prescribed appellate procedures. Kirbens v. Martinez, 742 P.2d 330 (Colo. 1987).

Section (a)(4) does not confer any legally protected interest for purposes of establishing standing. Rather, the rule establishes procedures for seeking review when standing otherwise independently exists. Reeves v. City of Fort Collins, 170 P.3d 850 (Colo. App. 2008).

An order of the district court refusing to issue a citation to show cause directed to the county court is proper under section (a)(4) and does not imply any determination by the court of the merits of the case. Since there is nothing in the record to establish any final judgment in favor of either party, appellate review is unavailable. Milburn v. El Paso County Ct., 859 P.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1993).

Purpose of action is to review the action of an inferior tribunal, board, or officer who, in exercising judicial functions, has exceeded the jurisdictional or grossly abused the discretion which the law reposes in such tribunal or officer, and no review is allowed, nor, in the judgment of the court, any plain, speedy, and adequate remedy. Union Pac. Ry. v. Bowler, 4 Colo. App. 25, 34 P. 940 (1893); Union P. R. R. v. Wolfe, 26 Colo. App. 567, 144 P. 330 (1914); Nisbet v. Frincke, 66 Colo. 1, 179 P. 867 (1919).

The function of a proceeding under this rule is to review the action of an inferior tribunal which has allegedly exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion. Kornfeld v. Perl Mack Liquors, Inc., 193 Colo. 442, 567 P.2d 383 (1977).

The purpose of an action brought under section (a)(4) is to determine if an inferior tribunal, exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions, has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion. Garland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 660 P.2d 20 (Colo. App. 1982).

Standard for challenging inferior tribunal. A superior court should exercise great caution and circumspection before issuing a rule to show cause to an inferior tribunal, and then only when such court is satisfied that the ordinary remedies provided by law are not applicable or are inadequate. Only in exceptional cases or classes of cases should applications of this character be allowed. Kirbens v. Martinez, 742 P.2d 330 (Colo. 1987).

The purpose of prohibition is to prevent usurpation or unwarranted assumption of jurisdiction on the part of an inferior tribunal. Colo.

State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. District Court, 138 Colo. 227, 331 P.2d 502 (1958).

A writ of prohibition is a proper method of challenging the jurisdiction of a trial court. County Court v. Ruth, 194 Colo. 352, 575 P.2d 1 (1977); Empiregas, Inc. of Pueblo v. Pueblo County Court, 713 P.2d 937 (Colo. App. 1985).

Relief under section (a)(4) is appropriate to contest a lower court's order of criminal contempt. Jordan v. County Court, 722 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1986).

Prohibition defined. Prohibition is commonly defined as a writ to prevent the exercise by a tribunal possessing judicial powers of jurisdiction over matters not within its cognizance, or exceeding its jurisdiction in matters of which it has cognizance. Bustamante v. District Court, 138 Colo. 97, 329 P.2d 1013 (1958).

Relief in the nature of prohibition is discretionary. There is a wide discretion vested in a district court to which a petition is addressed seeking relief in the nature of prohibition. Justice Court v. Coleman, 137 Colo. 12, 320 P.2d 336 (1958).

Grant of prohibition should not be reversed except for abuse of discretion. In a proceeding in a district court seeking relief in the nature of prohibition against enforcement of a judgment of a justice of the peace, where the complaint alleges facts sufficient to authorize the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, to grant the relief sought, the judgment of the district court will not be disturbed in the absence of a showing of an abuse of such discretion. Justice Court v. Coleman, 137 Colo. 12, 320 P.2d 336 (1958).

A writ of certiorari will not issue as a matter of right, but only upon good cause shown, as for an abuse of discretion. People ex rel. Kimball v. Crystal River Corp., 131 Colo. 163, 280 P.2d 429 (1955).

Although an order to show cause is usually granted on an ex parte application for a writ of certiorari to the trial court or judge, it is not allowed as a matter of right or as a matter of course, but is a matter within the discretion of that court. The very right to issue a rule to show cause legally presupposes a judicial discretionary authority. Berry v. State Bd. of Parole, 148 Colo. 547, 367 P.2d 338 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 927 (1962).

Certiorari is the continuing of a prior action, a form of appellate review. North Glenn Sub. Co. v. District Court, 187 Colo. 409, 532 P.2d 332 (1975).

Relief available for exceeding jurisdiction or abuse of discretion. This rule limits the issuance of certiorari and prohibition to cases where an inferior tribunal exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion, and where there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy. Eveready Freight Serv., Inc. v. Pub. Utils.

Comm'n, 131 Colo. 172, 280 P.2d 442 (1955); Colo. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. District Court, 138 Colo. 227, 331 P.2d 502 (1958); Turner v. City & County of Denver, 146 Colo. 336, 361 P.2d 631 (1961); People ex rel. Orcutt v. District Court, 167 Colo. 162, 445 P.2d 887 (1968); State Farm v. City of Lakewood, 788 P.2d 808 (Colo. 1990).

The license authority rulings are subject to certiorari review by the courts, and, if its action in refusing a license is found to be arbitrary or capricious, a court has the authority, and the duty, to order the license to issue. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Salardino, 136 Colo. 421, 318 P.2d 596 (1957); Morris-Schindler, LLC v. City & County of Denver, 251 P.3d 1076 (Colo. App. 2010).

Prohibition lies to prevent an inferior tribunal, whether it has judicial or quasi-judicial powers, from usurping a jurisdiction with which it is not legally vested. Leonhart v. District Court, 138 Colo. 1, 329 P.2d 781 (1958).

Prohibition may issue to prevent a court from proceeding against the express prohibition of a statute or where an adequate and exclusive remedy to obtain certain relief is provided by statute and the inferior court proceeds by another remedy. Bustamante v. District Court, 138 Colo. 97, 329 P.2d 1013 (1958).

A writ of prohibition is proper, not only in cases where the lower tribunal has no legal authority to act at all, but also in cases wherein such inferior tribunal, although having general jurisdiction over a particular class of cases, has exceeded such jurisdiction in the particular case. Bustamante v. District Court, 138 Colo. 97, 329 P.2d 1013 (1958).

Whenever the question is whether a public board or commission has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion, certiorari is the proper remedy to secure a review of its action. Holly Dev., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 140 Colo. 95, 342 P.2d 1032 (1959).

The various licensing authorities have discretionary power in granting or denying licenses and their actions will not be disturbed on review unless arbitrary or capricious. Quedens v. J. S. Dillon Co., 146 Colo. 161, 360 P.2d 984 (1961).

When a trial court exceeds its jurisdiction in a statutory proceeding, a writ of prohibition is the appropriate remedy. Evans v. District Court, 182 Colo. 93, 511 P.2d 471 (1973).

Misinterpretation or misapplication of governing law by an agency is an alternative ground for finding an abuse of discretion under section (a)(4). District properly determined that correctional hearing officer abused discretion by failing to document that inmate had knowingly and voluntarily waived right to remain silent during administrative hearing as required by agency regulation. Gallegos v. Garcia, 155 P.3d 405 (Colo. App. 2006).

Proper remedy under this rule for abuse of discretion by prison hearing officer is to remand the case for a new hearing, rather than to expunge the inmate's disciplinary conviction. Gallegos v. Garcia, 155 P.3d 405 (Colo. App. 2006).

No abuse of discretion. There is no evidence that the department of corrections officer violated any of the department's regulations related to the inmate grievance, and the inmate failed to show how he was prejudiced by any of the actions by the department of corrections officer. Alward v. Golder, 148 P.3d 424 (Colo. App. 2006).

No authority to consider constitutional issues. Procedures afforded by this rule are available to review the decision of a local licensing authority in suspending a license, but does not provide authority for consideration of constitutional issues. Two G's, Inc. v. Kalbin, 666 P.2d 129 (Colo. 1983).

Constitutional challenges are not within scope of review under section (a)(4). Price Haskell v. Denver Dept. of Excise & Licenses, 694 P.2d 364 (Colo. App. 1984).

Stay of proceedings only against inferior tribunals. The provisions of section (a)(4) do not provide for a stay order against any party which is not "an inferior tribunal". PII of Colo., Inc. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 239, 591 P.2d 1316 (1979).

Relief granted only against tribunal. Since a proceeding under this rule is properly brought against the inferior tribunal and the rule to show cause issues only against the tribunal, the relief may be granted, if at all, against the tribunal only. Kornfeld v. Perl Mack Liquors, Inc., 193 Colo. 442, 567 P.2d 383 (1977).

Discretionary powers of district court. The issuance of a citation to show cause under this rule lies within the district court's broad discretionary powers. The district court may dismiss a complaint filed pursuant to this rule if the complaint is defective on its face or if no relief can be granted. Info. Please, Inc. v. District Court, 194 Colo. 42, 568 P.2d 1162 (1977).

Where district court failed to issue the required citation to show cause to the county court, the court of appeals exceeded its jurisdiction by reaching the issue and ordering that a writ of prohibition issue. County Court v. Ruth, 194 Colo. 352, 575 P.2d 1 (1977).

For purpose of standing for district court review, no relief can be afforded if person suffers injury in fact, but not from violation of a legally protected right. Brown v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 720 P.2d 579 (Colo. App. 1985).

If there is illegal search and seizure, a defendant has plain, speedy, and adequate remedy by motion to suppress and for return of property, and prohibition will not lie in district court to bar further related proceedings in county court. Seccombe v. District Court, 180 Colo. 420, 506 P.2d 153 (1973).

This rule provides a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy of review of a decision of the conservation board as to the sufficiency of a petition, by virtue of which rule the district court is authorized to determine whether or not the board had jurisdiction or abused its discretion. Friesen v. People ex rel. Fletcher, 118 Colo. 1, 192 P.2d 430 (1948).

Where it is contended that the county court was without or exceeded its jurisdiction, or abused its discretion, section (a)(4) provides a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy. People ex rel. Wilson v. Blake, 128 Colo. 111, 260 P.2d 592 (1953).

Although the Denver city charter does not spell out a procedure for judicial review of the orders of the civil service commission of Denver, a remedy nevertheless exists through the extraordinary writs, provision for which is found in § 9 of art. VI, Colo. Const. Turner v. City & County of Denver, 146 Colo. 336, 361 P.2d 631 (1961).

This rule's relief is not an exclusive remedy, declaratory judgment being available to obtain review of matters not reviewable by certiorari. Corper v. City & County of Denver, 36 Colo. App. 118, 536 P.2d 874 (1975), aff'd, 191 Colo. 252, 552 P.2d 13 (1976).

The validity of zoning ordinances has been challenged by certiorari review under section (a)(4), and declaratory relief under C.R.C.P. 57, and on occasion, these forms of relief have been pursued simultaneously. Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975).

Declaratory judgment may be proper remedy. As a general rule, judicial review by way of section (a)(4) is the exclusive remedy for one challenging a rezoning determination on a parcel of property. Where persons have not had prior notice of a rezoning hearing and have not participated in it, certiorari review is not always an effective remedy and a hearing de novo under a declaratory judgment is a proper and effective remedy. Norby v. City of Boulder, 195 Colo. 231, 577 P.2d 277 (1978).

The district court may consider a declaratory judgment claim that challenges the constitutionality of a city's zoning ordinance even though judicial review claim is barred for failure to file a timely claim in accordance with section (b). Danielson v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 807 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1991).

But the district court may not exercise jurisdiction where claimant failed to challenge in the district court proceedings the facial constitutionality of a city's zoning ordinance and the district court may not raise the constitutional issue on its own motion. Danielson v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 807 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1991).

Where no hearing was held by the board before it made its decision, section (a)(4) of this rule is clearly not plaintiffs' exclusive remedy. Ebke v. Julesburg Sch. Dist. No. RE-1, 37 Colo. App. 349, 550 P.2d 355 (1976), aff'd on other grounds, 193 Colo. 40, 562 P.2d 419 (1977).

Requirements of C.R.C.P. 65 not applicable. While C.R.C.P. 65 provides that no restraining order or preliminary injunction shall issue except upon giving security by the applicant, that no order or injunction shall issue without notice, except under certain situations, and that an early hearing shall be provided, no such conditions appear in section (a)(4) of this rule. PII of Colo., Inc. v. District Court, 197 Colo. 239, 591 P.2d 1316 (1979).

This rule does not require the submission of an affidavit or verification of the complaint in order to perfect an action for review. U-Tote-M of Colo., Inc. v. City of Greenwood Vill., 39 Colo. App. 28, 563 P.2d 373 (1977).

A complaint neither verified nor accompanied by an affidavit suffices to initiate a proceeding for review, and a citation to show cause need not thereafter issue as such orders presuppose a judicial discretionary authority. U-Tote-M of Colo., Inc. v. City of Greenwood Vill., 39 Colo. App. 28, 563 P.2d 373 (1977).

The request for an order to certify the record was not necessary to the perfection of plaintiff's action. U-Tote-M of Colo., Inc. v. City of Greenwood Vill., 39 Colo. App. 28, 563 P.2d 373 (1977).

Orders to certify the record are not issued under section (a)(4) of this rule merely as a matter of course. U-Tote-M of Colo., Inc. v. City of Greenwood Vill., 39 Colo. App. 28, 563 P.2d 373 (1977).

Neither section (a)(4) of this rule nor any other pertinent rule of procedure requires a plaintiff to request certification of the record. U-Tote-M of Colo., Inc. v. City of Greenwood Vill., 39 Colo. App. 28, 563 P.2d 373 (1977).

Plaintiff's failure to request an order certifying the record within 30 days of the city council's decision denying his beverage license application did not require dismissal of the complaint, since plaintiff was only required to "apply for review" within the prescribed 30-day period. U-Tote-M of Colo., Inc. v. City of Greenwood Vill., 39 Colo. App. 28, 563 P.2d 373 (1977).

Distinction between judicial and administrative acts. The test for distinguishing judicial and quasi-judicial acts from administrative acts is to determine whether the function under consideration involves the exercise of discretion and requires notice and hearing. If these elements are present the "finding" is generally a quasi-judicial act; if any of them are absent, it is generally an administrative act. Hoffman v. City of Fort Collins, 30 Colo. App. 123, 489 P.2d 355 (1971); Van Pelt v. State Bd. for Cmty.

Act of dismissing probationary firefighters is administrative where the only limitation on dismissal is approval by the civil service commission, the civil service commission's approval is not based on preexisting legal standards or policy considerations, and there is no right to appeal dismissal. Chellsen v. Pena, 857 P.2d 472 (Colo. App. 1992).

Quasi-judicial action decides rights and liabilities based upon past or present facts. City & County of Denver v. Eggert, 647 P.2d 216 (Colo. 1982).

The action of an agency will be deemed quasi-judicial for section (a)(4) purposes if: (1) A state or local law requires that the body give adequate notice to the community before acting; (2) a state or local law requires that the body conduct a public hearing pursuant to notice at which time concerned citizens must be given an opportunity to be heard and present evidence; and (3) a state or local law requires the body to make a determination by applying the facts of a specific case to certain criteria established by law. City & County of Denver v. Eggert, 647 P.2d 216 (Colo. 1982).

Quasi-judicial action generally involves a determination of rights, duties, or obligations of specific individuals by applying legal standards or policy considerations to facts developed at a hearing conducted for purpose of resolving interests in question. State Farm v. City of Lakewood, 788 P.2d 808 (Colo. 1990); Carpenter v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 813 P.2d 773 (Colo. App. 1990).

Quasi-legislative action reflects public policy relating to matters of permanent or general character, is not normally restricted to identifiable persons or groups, and is usually prospective in nature. In addition, such action requires the balancing of questions of judgment and discretion, is of general application, and concerns an area usually governed by legislation. State Farm v. City of Lakewood, 788 P.2d 808 (Colo. 1990).

Absence of notice and public hearing requirement is not determinative of the nature of the action. The nature of the decision and the process by which it is reached is the predominant consideration in determining whether an action is quasi-judicial. Carpenter v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 813 P.2d 773 (Colo. App. 1990).

Although the board of county commissioners of Boulder county provided notice and public hearings, the board's actions in adopting a rezoning resolution were quasi-legislative in nature based on the prospective nature and broad impact of the resolution. Therefore, landowner is not entitled to relief under section (a)(4). Jafay v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Boulder County, 848 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1993).

Where city council was acting in a legislative capacity when it approved an ordinance requiring relocation underground of overhead electricity and communications facilities by owners and operators at their own cost, telecommunications provider was not entitled to certiorari review under section (a)(4). US West Commc'ns v. City of Longmont, 924 P.2d 1071 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd on other grounds, 948 P.2d 509 (Colo. 1997).

The fixing of the time and manner of payment of restitution for all prisoners by the director of the department of corrections pursuant to statute is not a judicial or quasi-judicial action on the part of the department or the correctional facility, therefore, the district court lacked jurisdiction to hear prisoner's complaint and did not err in dismissing the complaint on that basis. Jones v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 53 P.3d 1187 (Colo. App. 2002).

Test applied in Stuart v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 699 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1985).

Commission's denial of applicant's appeal of disqualification from employment was quasi-judicial action even though regulations did not require a formal hearing on the appeal. Carpenter v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 813 P.2d 773 (Colo. App. 1990).

Act must be judicial to be reviewable. Where the state board of land commissioners wrongfully canceled a lease of state school lands on the ground that the rent was delinquent, when in fact it was not, and executed a lease thereof to another party, the act was not judicial in its nature and is not subject to review under section (a)(4). State Bd. of Land Comm'rs v. Carpenter, 16 Colo. App. 436, 66 P. 165 (1901).

When the civil service commission of Denver is acting in a quasi-judicial capacity, certiorari is the proper remedy for review of its decision. Turner v. City & County of Denver, 146 Colo. 336, 361 P.2d 631 (1961).

Incorporation proceedings are judicial in nature and the district court could entertain an action enforcing priority of jurisdiction with respect to dual actions involving the same subject matter and substantially the same parties. Wiltgen v. Berg, 164 Colo. 139, 435 P.2d 378 (1967).

Under this rule, certiorari is available only upon exercise of a "judicial or quasi-judicial" function. Hoffman v. City of Fort Collins, 30 Colo. App. 123, 489 P.2d 355 (1971).

Where the charter of a city establishes a civil service commission and provides for hearing and review of dismissals by the manager of safety, these charter provisions clearly place the commission in a quasi-judicial position and bring its decisions within the purview of this rule. Hoffman v. City of Fort Collins, 30 Colo. App. 123, 489 P.2d 355 (1971).

Although the supreme court has repeatedly stated that zoning and rezoning are legislative matters, an ordinance prescribing standards and procedures for obtaining a rezoning establishes a quasi-judicial, rather than a legislative, procedure by: (1) Providing for notice and hearing; and (2) setting forth the criteria to be taken into account by the planning commission in arriving at its decision, and therefore, an alleged abuse of discretion by the commission is reviewable under this rule. Kizer v. Beck, 30 Colo. App. 569, 496 P.2d 1062 (1972).

It cannot be legislative or executive. The court does not review an order, action, or proceeding, unless it be judicial in its nature, and not legislative or merely ministerial. State Bd. of Land Comm'rs v. Carpenter, 16 Colo. App. 436, 66 P. 165 (1901); Colo.-Ute Elec. Ass'n v. Air Pollution Control Comm'n, 41 Colo. App. 393, 591 P.2d 1323 (1978), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. CF&I Steel Corp. v. Colo. Air Pollution Control Comm'n, 199 Colo. 463, 610 P.2d 85 (1980).

Sections (a)(2) and (a)(4) of this rule are inapplicable to challenges of legislative actions. Cherokee Water & Sanitation v. El Paso, 770 P.2d 1339 (Colo. App. 1988).

The fact-finding function of the board of county commissioners' proceeding under the county housing authority act was the exercise of a legislative directive and not a quasi-judicial proceeding reviewable under this rule. The board finds the facts but passes no judgment thereon; it is given no judicial power. Smith v. Waymire, 29 Colo. App. 544, 487 P.2d 599 (1971).

If the act of removal is executive, not judicial or quasi-judicial, it is not reviewable by certiorari. Hoffman v. City of Fort Collins, 30 Colo. App. 123, 489 P.2d 355 (1971).

Where the subject of a declaratory judgment action is the review of an executive or administrative decision, section (a)(4) is neither the appropriate nor the exclusive remedy by which a declaration of rights could be obtained. Bonacci v. City of Aurora, 642 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1982).

If the law makes no provisions for hearing, but gives power to remove and only requires that reasons therefor be stated in writing and filed, and if the officer desires, he may be given an opportunity to explain, the removal act is "executive" so far as the right to review by certiorari is concerned. Hoffman v. City of Fort Collins, 30 Colo. App. 123, 489 P.2d 355 (1971).

From the explicit wording of this rule, certiorari will not apply for review of the propriety of legislative action. Kizer v. Beck, 30 Colo. App. 569, 496 P.2d 1062 (1972).

A challenge to legislation and the governmental legislative conduct is not available in proceedings to review quasi-judicial governmental acts pursuant to section (a)(4). Liquor & Beer Licensing Ad. Bd. v. Cinco, 771 P.2d 482 (Colo. 1989).

Constitutionality of regional development code may not be appropriately raised or considered in a claim brought under subsection (a)(4). Review under subsection (a)(4) is limited to whether a governmental actor abused its discretion in a quasi-judicial decision-making context. Subsection (a)(4)(I) does not permit judicial review of legislative acts, such as the passage of a code or ordinance, but only of quasi-judicial acts, such as the application of the ordinance to a particular set of facts. Yakutat Land Corp. v. Langer, 2020 CO 30, 462 P.3d 65.

City's decision to exterminate prairie dogs in a city park was administrative, not quasi-judicial, and was not subject to judicial review under section (a)(4). Prairie Dog Advocates v. City of Lakewood, 20 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2000).

The career service board's decision to demote an employee because she did not have the level of education required by the city's personnel policy was administrative rather than quasi-judicial in nature. The employee, therefore, was not entitled to judicial review of the board's action under section (a)(4). Bourgeron v. City & County of Denver, 159 P.3d 701 (Colo. App. 2006).

Quasi-legislative action is prospective in nature, is of general application, and requires the balancing of questions of judgment and discretion. City & County of Denver v. Eggert, 647 P.2d 216 (Colo. 1982).

A master plan that established land use policies, was prospective in nature and general in character, and had not been applied against plaintiff's property is legislative in nature. Condiotti v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 983 P.2d 184 (Colo. App. 1999).

Judicial review of quasi-legislative action is more limited than that of quasi-judicial action; thus, a court may not substitute its opinion for that of a school board. Bruce v. Sch. Dist. No. 60, 687 P.2d 509 (Colo. App. 1984).

It may be maintained if remedy is not plain and adequate. People ex rel. L'Abbe v. District Court, 26 Colo. 386, 58 P. 604 (1899); Union P. R. R. v. Wolfe, 26 Colo. App. 567, 144 P. 330 (1914); State Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Cummings, 83 Colo. 379, 265 P. 687 (1928).

Whenever there is no direct remedy provided for review, the writ of certiorari lies, even though some other remedy can be conceived as possible in the future. Holly Dev., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 140 Colo. 95, 342 P.2d 1032 (1959).

Whether the amendment could operate retrospectively was at least doubtful even to a prudent lawyer making a realistic evaluation of possible remedies. Considering the presence of this dilemma it cannot be said that a plain, speedy, and adequate legal remedy existed. Toland v. Strohl, 147 Colo. 577, 364 P.2d 588 (1961).

If the remedy is inadequate, it is no remedy, and gives to a court of record in a proceeding under this rule the same right, and imposes upon it the same duty, to grant relief as if no right of review existed. Union P. R. R. v. Wolfe, 26 Colo. App. 567, 144 P. 330 (1914).

Expense of trial may not be used as grounds for prohibition. Seccombe v. District Court, 180 Colo. 421, 506 P.2d 153 (1973).

The fact that proceedings may be expensive and may result in ultimate reversal of the trial court for error, affords insufficient basis for resort to proceedings in the nature of prohibition. Leonhart v. District Court, 138 Colo. 1, 329 P.2d 781 (1958).

Delay and expense do not ordinarily render appeal inadequate. The delay and expense of an appeal or other available remedy ordinarily furnish no sufficient reasons for holding that the remedy by appeal is not adequate or speedy, although there are many instances in which the expense and delay of an appeal have, in part at least, impelled the superior court to grant prohibition. Prinster v. District Court, 137 Colo. 393, 325 P.2d 938 (1958).

The court may quash or refuse to quash the proceeding complained of. No rights growing out of such proceeding can be enforced. State Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Cummings, 83 Colo. 379, 265 P. 687 (1928).

It has no power to correct a mistake of fact or erroneous conclusion from the facts, made by the inferior tribunal. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Spears, 79 Colo. 588, 247 P. 563 (1926).

Court will not restrain mere error. A writ of prohibition never issues to restrain a lower tribunal from committing mere error in deciding a question properly before it. Prinster v. District Court, 137 Colo. 393, 325 P.2d 938 (1958).

Although "good cause" was not specifically alleged as the basis for amending the complaint, the district court did not abuse its discretion when it granted motion to avoid piece-meal litigation. Neighbors For A Better Approach v. Nepa, 770 P.2d 1390 (Colo. App. 1989).

Restraint from final adjudication within court's jurisdiction not appropriate. Prohibition may never be used to restrain a trial court having jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter from proceeding to a final conclusion. Prinster v. District Court, 137 Colo. 393, 325 P.2d 938 (1958).

Prohibition of statutory functions of executive department. A district court does not have jurisdiction to prohibit a branch of the executive department from carrying out its statutory functions. Colo. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. District Court, 138 Colo. 227, 331 P.2d 502 (1958);

Chonoski v. State Dept. of Rev., 699 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1985).

A claim that the statute under which an executive department is proceeding is unconstitutional will not clothe the judiciary with power to interfere with or control such department in advance of its taking final action. Colo. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. District Court, 138 Colo. 227, 331 P.2d 502 (1958); People ex rel. Orcutt v. District Court, 167 Colo. 162, 445 P.2d 887 (1968); Colo. Dept. of Rev. v. District Court, 172 Colo. 144, 470 P.2d 864 (1970).

Power to stay orders is modifiable by statute. While the courts have power to issue stay orders in certiorari proceedings, statutes may modify or abrogate that power. In the annexation statutes it is clear that the general assembly intended to preclude the issuance of a stay order pending appeal of the annexation proceedings. In this respect they were not legislating on procedure but declaring by substantive law a legal status. City of Westminster v. District Court, 167 Colo. 263, 447 P.2d 537 (1968).

Where the general assembly, in the interest of public safety, has provided a reasonable limitation upon the right to secure postponement of the effective date of suspension of a driver's license by the director of revenue, requiring a showing of irreparable injury, the courts have no power to nullify by procedural rule the limitations so imposed, the function of the courts being limited to a review of the acts of the director. Theobald v. District Court, 148 Colo. 466, 366 P.2d 563 (1961).

Review of denial of license does not stay new application. Where a party applied for a liquor license which was denied, a proceeding to review such denial under this rule does not operate to stay the hand of the licensing officer in receiving and acting upon the application of another party for a license to operate at the same location. Cronin v. Ward, 144 Colo. 192, 355 P.2d 655 (1960).

When (1) a statute, rule, or regulation requires that an individual or entity obtain a license to perform a certain activity, (2) the requirement of the license is valid, and (3) there are judicial remedies to challenge an alleged wrongful refusal of that license, the person or entity may not disregard the licensing requirements, but instead must suspend engaging in the activity for which the license is required pending judicial resolution of the alleged wrongful denial. Here, plaintiffs knew that the city council had affirmed the city's denial of their renewal application and, aware that a preliminary injunction had not been granted, chose to continue to operate their business without the proper license. Because the ordinance was valid, plaintiffs cannot assert wrongful denial as a defense to operating their business without a valid license.

Fortner v. Cousar, 992 P.2d 697 (Colo. App. 1999).

Determination by trial court that plaintiff's license had been wrongfully denied was not the equivalent of granting plaintiffs a license. Therefore, trial court properly determined that plaintiffs were not licensed for the period between the city council's denial of their license and trial court's reversal in their favor on procedural grounds. Fortner v. Cousar, 992 P.2d 697 (Colo. App. 1999).

Section provides for civil action. Section (a)(4) clearly contemplates the application of C.R.C.P. 2 providing for one form of civil action since it requires a complaint which must be filed and summons issued and served as in other actions. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

Other rules of civil procedure, when pertinent, apply to proceedings under this rule. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

The time limit for a section (a)(4) action is that specified by applicable statute or, if there is none, then not later than 30 days from the final decision complained of. Norby v. City of Boulder, 195 Colo. 231, 577 P.2d 277 (1978); Sullivan v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 692 P.2d 1106 (Colo. 1984).

Pleading requirements of section (a)(4) must yield to conflicting statutory procedures codified in § 40-6-115 of the Public Utilities Law. Silver Eagle Servs. v. P.U.C., 768 P.2d 208 (Colo. 1989).

Compliance with time limitation of section (b) required. Any challenge to an agency action under section (a)(4) must be perfected within the 30-day limitation of section (b) of this rule. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. District Court, 186 Colo. 308, 527 P.2d 531 (1974); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Carter, 193 Colo. 225, 564 P.2d 421 (1977); Smith v. County of El Paso, 42 Colo. App. 316, 593 P.2d 979 (1979); Thorne v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 638 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

The failure to bring a section (a)(4) proceeding within 30 days of the enactment of the city rezoning ordinance is a jurisdictional defect under section (b). Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975); Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Carter, 193 Colo. 225, 564 P.2d 421 (1977).

Failure to bring the requisite certiorari action within 30 days as provided by section (b) of this rule is a jurisdictional defect. Lorenz v. City of Littleton, 38 Colo. App. 16, 550 P.2d 884 (1976); Gold Star Sausage Co. v. Kempf, 653 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982); Sullivan v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 692 P.2d 1106 (Colo. 1984).

Where the time for perfecting the review of a rezoning decision, pursuant to section (a)(4) had expired at the time indispensable parties were added as parties defendant, the failure of the plaintiffs to perfect their petition for certiorari review within 30 days constituted a fatal defect which required that the complaint be dismissed, since the requirements of section (b) must be construed as a statute of limitation. Westlund v. Carter, 193 Colo. 129, 565 P.2d 920 (1977).

Failure to pursue timely remedies bars declaratory judgment action. Plaintiff's failure to pursue remedies provided in § 24-4-106, judicial review under the administrative procedure act, and section (a)(4) of this rule in a timely manner bars a declaratory judgment action. Greyhound Racing Ass'n v. Colo. Racing Comm'n, 41 Colo. App. 319, 589 P.2d 70 (1978).

Failure to file a claim for judicial review within 30 days is not jurisdictionally fatal when such claim is combined with a declaratory claim. Section (b) does not prevent the district court from considering a declaratory judgment claim that challenges the constitutionality of a city's zoning ordinance even though judicial review is barred for failure to file a timely claim. Danielson v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 807 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1991).

But the district court may not exercise jurisdiction where claimant failed to challenge in the district court proceedings the facial constitutionality of a city's zoning ordinance. The district court may not raise the constitutional issue on its own motion. Danielson v. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment, 807 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1991).

Plaintiff need not cause district court to issue citation in 30 days. Perfection of an appeal under this rule does not require that the plaintiff cause the district court to issue a citation within the same 30-day period. Info. Please, Inc. v. District Court, 194 Colo. 42, 568 P.2d 1162 (1977).

Necessity for calling attention to lack of jurisdiction. Order in the nature of a writ of prohibition will not be issued to an inferior court unless the attention of the court whose proceedings it is sought to arrest first has been called to the lack of jurisdiction alleged, unless extraordinary circumstances are present. Justice Court of Precinct No. 1 v. People ex rel. Harvey, 109 Colo. 287, 124 P.2d 934 (1942).

Prohibition will not issue where the attention of the inferior tribunal has not been called to its alleged lack of jurisdiction, since one summoned can appear specially in the court or quasi-judicial agency to move that process be quashed as to him. The court in such cases is vested with power to determine whether it has jurisdiction. City of Thornton v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 154 Colo. 431, 391 P.2d 374 (1964).

Prohibition will not issue where the attention of the inferior tribunal has not been called to its alleged lack of jurisdiction. Town of Vail v.

District Court, 163 Colo. 305, 430 P.2d 477 (1967).

Joinder of all of petitioner's claims in one action required. When an action is timely filed under section (a)(4), public policy requires the joinder of all of the petitioner's claims in one action. Powers v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 651 P.2d 463 (Colo. App. 1982).

This includes constitutional claims. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Sundheim, 926 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996).

Lack of jurisdiction for failure to join parties. This rule provides a 30-day limitation for filing an action for certiorari. Because an appeal must be perfected—as well as commenced—within the time period established, and part of the perfection of an appeal requires the joinder of indispensable parties, an amendment to a complaint seeking to add a party as indispensable to the action, filed after the time limitation for filing, was too late. City & County of Denver v. District Court, 189 Colo. 342, 540 P.2d 1088 (1975).

Standard for determining whether party must be joined. The correct standard for determining whether a party must be joined in a section (a)(4) action is that the appropriate municipal body to be joined is the inferior tribunal which made the decision being contested, and not some other municipal body. Gold Star Sausage Co. v. Kempf, 653 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

Failure to join all indispensable parties in a C.R.C.P. 106 action within the time limit prescribed by the rule is a jurisdictional defect which requires dismissal of the action. Norby v. City of Boulder, 195 Colo. 231, 577 P.2d 277 (1978).

An action brought under section (a)(4) must be “perfected” as well as filed within the 30-day limit. Tri-State Generation & Transmission Co. v. City of Thornton, 647 P.2d 670 (Colo. 1982).

Indispensable parties must be correctly joined. Perfection of a challenge to an agency action includes the correct joinder of indispensable parties as required by C.R.C.P. 19. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Carter, 193 Colo. 225, 564 P.2d 421 (1977).

Failure to join party in petition for review is not jurisdictionally fatal. Since a section (a)(4) petition may be amended to add parties, where the defendant does not protest or show prejudice, the failure to join a party as a named party defendant in the petition for review is not jurisdictionally fatal. Soon Yee Scott v. City of Englewood, 672 P.2d 225 (Colo. App. 1983).

The person whose rezoning application is challenged is an indispensable party to that proceeding. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Carter, 193 Colo. 225, 564 P.2d 421 (1977).

Motion for new trial necessary before review. Proceedings under this rule are subject to C.R.C.P. 59 requiring a motion for new trial or an order dispensing therewith and such requirements apply whether the reviewing court acts as a trial court or as an appellate tribunal in reviewing the actions of a quasi-judicial tribunal. Colo. State Bd. of Exam'rs of Architects v. Marshall, 136 Colo. 200, 315 P.2d 198 (1957).

Under this rule it is necessary in actions in the nature of certiorari to move for a new trial. Walter v. Walter, 136 Colo. 405, 318 P.2d 221 (1957).

Lack of adequate appeal must be alleged. Carlton v. Carlton, 44 Colo. 27, 96 P. 995 (1908).

Taxpayers have standing to question scope of board powers. As taxpayers it is clear the relators have standing to question the legality of expenditures of public funds and to enjoin such expenditures if they are proved to be unconstitutional or without legal authority; they also have the right to question other acts of the school district that are alleged to be beyond the scope of its powers. People ex rel. Cory v. Colo. High Sch. Activities Ass'n, 141 Colo. 382, 349 P.2d 381 (1960).

This section makes no distinction between an aggrieved individual and a municipal corporation which seeks review in the interest of the public as a whole. Turner v. City & County of Denver, 146 Colo. 336, 361 P.2d 631 (1961).

Section (a)(4) provides a taxpayer a right of review in a state court from a proceeding in an inferior tribunal. Local 1497, Nat'l Fed'n of Fed. Employees v. City & County of Denver, 301 F. Supp. 1108 (D. Colo. 1969), appeal dismissed, 396 U.S. 273 (1970).

Trial court's dismissal of petition for prohibition or mandamus was affirmed where plaintiffs, who brought the action in their official capacities as members of the board of county commissioners to protest state-ordered reappraisals of properties in the county, have neither standing nor legal authority to maintain this action; taxpayers who are adversely affected may have judicial review. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Love, 172 Colo. 121, 470 P.2d 861 (1970).

A competitor is not a person substantially aggrieved by the district court action, which would give him a right to seek review under section (a)(4) of this rule. Woda v. City of Colo. Springs, 40 Colo. App. 173, 570 P.2d 1318 (1977).

The certification of the record is an official act of the inferior tribunal and is not necessarily contingent upon certification of the transcript of the proceedings by a certified shorthand reporter. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 174 Colo. 149, 483 P.2d 380 (1971).

In certain circumstances, a court, even in a certiorari proceeding, should order a remand to an administrative agency on clear-cut issues involving documentary evidence. Johnston

v. City Council, 177 Colo. 223, 493 P.2d 651 (1972).

Action of municipal legislative body quasi-judicial. In order to support a finding that the action of a municipal legislative body is quasi-judicial and thus subject to review by certiorari, all of the following factors must exist: (1) A state or local law requiring that the body give adequate notice to the community before acting; (2) a state or local law requiring that the body conduct a public hearing, pursuant to notice, at which time concerned citizens must be given an opportunity to be heard and present evidence; and (3) a state or local law requiring the body to make a determination by applying the facts of a specific case to certain criteria established by law. Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975).

Rezoning quasi-judicial. Enactment of a rezoning ordinance by the legislative body of a city, governed by both state zoning statutes as well as the municipal code, pursuant to statutory criteria, after notice and a public hearing, constitutes a quasi-judicial function subject to certiorari review. Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975).

Although early decisions viewed the enactment of rezoning ordinances as a legislative function, more recent decisions have held such activity to be a quasi-judicial function and reviewable under section (a)(4). Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975).

Rezoning procedures are reviewed under section (a)(4) of this rule as quasi-judicial activities. Corper v. City & County of Denver, 36 Colo. App. 118, 536 P.2d 874 (1975), aff'd, 189 Colo. 421, 552 P.2d 13 (1976).

The amendment of a general zoning ordinance is a quasi-judicial act reviewable under this rule. Corper v. City & County of Denver, 191 Colo. 252, 552 P.2d 13 (1976).

Exclusive when entire zoning ordinance not challenged. Section (a)(4) is now an exclusive remedy to challenge a rezoning determination where the entire general zoning ordinance is not challenged and where a review of the record would be an adequate remedy. Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975); Corper v. City & County of Denver, 191 Colo. 252, 552 P.2d 13 (1976); Higby v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 689 P.2d 635 (Colo. App. 1984).

Certiorari relief is the exclusive remedy for allegedly invalid rezoning. Gold Run, Ltd. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 38 Colo. App. 44, 554 P.2d 317 (1976).

Section (a) of this rule is the exclusive process to challenge a rezoning determination as to specific property. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Carter, 193 Colo. 225, 564 P.2d 421 (1977).

Section (a)(4) of this rule provides the exclusive remedy for challenging a rezoning determination of specific land. Westlund v. Carter, 193 Colo. 129, 565 P.2d 920 (1977).

This rule provides the exclusive remedy for challenging a rezoning determination and the time limitations for certiorari review. Info. Please, Inc. v. District Court, 194 Colo. 42, 568 P.2d 1162 (1977).

Exclusive where specific amendatory zoning ordinance challenged. Where plaintiff was challenging a specific amendatory ordinance as applied to the property of the defendants and not the general zoning ordinance of the city, his exclusive remedy was to bring an action for certiorari review under section (a)(4), and, thus, his initial complaint seeking a declaratory judgment and injunctive relief was properly dismissed. Lorenz v. City of Littleton, 38 Colo. App. 16, 550 P.2d 884 (1976).

Where denial of variance challenged. Where denial of a variance from a county building code requirement was challenged, then a section (a)(4) proceeding was the exclusive remedy. Van Huysen v. Bd. of Adjustment, 38 Colo. App. 9, 550 P.2d 874 (1976).

Property owners can maintain claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against planning board for violations of federal constitutional rights even though this rule purports to be the exclusive remedy for challenging zoning decisions since the owners are seeking monetary damages under that claim and not declaratory or injunctive relief. Sclavenitis v. Cherry Hills Bd. of Adjustment, 751 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1988).

A § 1983 damage claim exists separately from an action for reviewing a quasi-judicial decision made by a government entity and, accordingly, the § 1983 claim is not required to be filed within the 30-day rule set forth in this rule. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Sundheim, 926 P.2d 545 (Colo. 1996).

Plaintiff's claim for permanent injunction moot and judgment dismissing action proper when plaintiff failed to seek temporary or preliminary injunctive relief in connection with challenge to zoning ordinance which authorized construction of facility, coupled with actual completion of facility during pending litigation. Zoning Bd. of Adjustment v. DeVilbiss, 729 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1986).

City and zoning administrators are proper parties to bring decision of board of adjustment before district court and ultimately appeal to court of appeals. City & County of Denver v. Bd. of Adjustment, 31 Colo. App. 324, 505 P.2d 44 (1972).

Judicial review of denial of rezoning of land is properly limited to review of record of proceedings before county planning commission and county commissioners. Famularo v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 180 Colo. 333, 505 P.2d 958 (1973).

Where the zoning body has established requirements governing a particular use and the developer has met those requirements, the zoning body exceeded its jurisdiction when, using its discretion, it rejected the developer's plan. Sherman v. City of Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 680 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1983); Sherman v. Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 763 P.2d 292 (Colo. 1988).

And where developer's plan met the requirements of the city zoning ordinance, and the city's action in approving or denying the developer's plan was quasi-judicial in nature, the proper remedy available to the developer was certiorari under section (a)(4) and not mandamus under section (a)(2), and the developer was not entitled to damages. Sherman v. Colo. Springs Planning Comm'n, 763 P.2d 292 (Colo. 1988).

The weighing of evidence and the determination of fact are functions of the rezoning board and are not matters for consideration upon appellate review. Coleman v. Gormley, 748 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1987).

Approval by city council of initial petition for formation of special district within boundaries of city was legislative in nature and action not reviewable pursuant to this rule. State Farm v. City of Lakewood, 788 P.2d 808 (Colo. 1990).

Zoning board's approval of rezoning application was final only when board executed and approved development plan and filing deadline commenced on that date. Luck v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 789 P.2d 475 (Colo. App. 1990).

A zoning ordinance amendment is not subject to review pursuant to this rule where the amendment is of general application, may be enacted by initiative, and is subject to referendum. Russell v. City of Central, 892 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1995).

Board exceeded its jurisdiction and acted arbitrarily and capriciously where it approved a special review land use that was dependent on the validity of an ordinance. Russell v. City of Central, 892 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1995).

Whatever form a final decision may take in any given context, a party whose property interests are adversely affected by it may not, in the absence of timely notice of the decision, be deprived of review for failing to seek it in a timely manner. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. RCI Dev. Ptr., 252 P.3d 1104 (Colo. 2011).

The loss of a right to judicial review for failure to timely file in the absence of adequate notice would clearly violate due process of law. By including the disposition of two related applications in the written resolution it was required to formally adopt to approve land developer's 1041 application, the board of county commissioners made clear its intent to supersede, or finalize, the earlier oral adoption of all three applications. Where the ripeness of neither the planned unit development application nor the preliminary subdivision plat application was disputed, the complaint seeking judicial review of both was timely filed. Citizens for Resp. Growth v. RCI Dev. Ptr., 252 P.3d 1104 (Colo. 2011).

Section (a)(4) held improperly applied in wrongful discharge, outrageous conduct, and civil rights action against town. Wilson v. Town of Avon, 749 P.2d 990 (Colo. App. 1987).

District court does not have jurisdiction under this rule to review an interlocutory order of a state administrative agency, absent a showing of irreparable harm from such order. T & S Leasing v. District Court, 728 P.2d 729 (Colo. 1986).

There is no right to appeal to the district court a decision of the judicial department personnel board of review. The decision is final and is not subject to appeal. Judicial Dept. v. Judicial Dept. Pers. Bd., 2021 COA 82, 495 P.3d 355, aff'd, 2022 CO 52, 519 P.3d 1035.

Since municipal court rules became effective on April 1, 1970, the argument that there is no established procedure in the municipal courts is therefore moot. Municipal Court v. Brown, 175 Colo. 433, 488 P.2d 61 (1971).

Motion for new trial not required. A motion for new trial to secure appellate review of a district court's judgment in a proceeding under this rule is not required where the hearing in the district court did not involve controverted issues of fact. Cline v. City of Boulder, 35 Colo. App. 349, 532 P.2d 770 (1975).

The administrative and judicial review provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act of Colorado are complete, definitive, and organic, without the need of supplementation from other legislative acts or the procedural relief afforded by C.R.C.P. 16. Gardner v. Friend, 849 P.2d 817 (Colo. App. 1992).

Denial of a non-conforming use application and denial of a variation application were final decisions for purposes of this rule and judicial review was the exclusive remedy for review of such decisions. A petition for review was, therefore, subject to the 30-day filing deadline. Buck v. Park, 839 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1992).

But, where the decision of the commission was merely a recommendation to the city council and the city council had responsibility for the final decision, the decision of the commission was not final agency action and was not appealable. Buck v. Park, 839 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1992).

A temporary civil protection order issued by a county under § 13-14-104.5 (1)(a) is not a final decision for purposes of review under section (a)(4) of this rule. Martin v. Arapahoe County Court, 2016 COA 154, 405 P.3d 356.

Absent a showing of prejudice, the premature filing of an appeal does not preclude the court from addressing the case on its merits. Save Park County v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 969 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 990 P.2d 35 (Colo. 1999).

Certiorari review is not appropriate to review the decision of a sheriff or a chief of police denying an application for a concealed weapons permit. Miller v. Collier, 878 P.2d 141 (Colo. App. 1994).

The scope of this rule includes prison disciplinary proceedings. Mariani v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 956 P.2d 625 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in Shearer v. Bd. of Trustees of Firemen's Pension Fund, 121 Colo. 592, 218 P.2d 753 (1950); Rothwell v. Coffin, 122 Colo. 140, 220 P.2d 1063 (1950); Bacon v. Steigman, 123 Colo. 62, 225 P.2d 1046 (1950); Berger v. People, 123 Colo. 403, 231 P.2d 799, cert. denied, 342 U.S. 837 (1951); Mardi, Inc. v. City & County of Denver, 151 Colo. 28, 375 P.2d 682 (1962); Fort Collins-Loveland Water Dist. v. City of Fort Collins, 174 Colo. 79, 482 P.2d 986 (1971); North Kiowa-Bijou Mgt. Dist. v. Ground Water Comm'n, 180 Colo. 313, 505 P.2d 377 (1973); City of Lakewood v. District Court, 181 Colo. 69, 506 P.2d 1228 (1973); Ross v. Fire & Police Pension Ass'n, 713 P.2d 1304 (Colo. 1986); Gallagher v. County Court, 759 P.2d 859 (Colo. App. 1988).

B. Extent of Review.

Scope of review strictly limited. The scope of review granted to the district court in a proceeding under section (a)(4) of this rule is strictly limited. City of Colo. Springs v. District Court, 184 Colo. 177, 519 P.2d 325 (1974).

It is beyond the scope of this rule to challenge administrative regulations on the grounds that such rules are vague and overbroad. Mariani v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 956 P.2d 625 (Colo. App. 1997).

In an appeal from a judgment entered in a proceeding under this rule, the court of appeals is in the same position as the district court concerning the review of the county court proceeding. Empiregas, Inc. of Pueblo v. County Court, 713 P.2d 937 (Colo. App. 1985).

In reviewing a local board of adjustment's decision pursuant to section (a)(4) of this rule, the court of appeals calls into question the decision of the board itself, not the district court's determination on review. The review is based solely on the record that was before the board, and the decision must be affirmed unless there is no competent evidence in the record to support it such that it was arbitrary or capricious. The court considers whether the board abused its discretion or exceeded its jurisdiction, as well as whether it applied an erroneous legal standard. City & County of Denver v. Bd. of Adjustment, 55 P.3d 252 (Colo. App. 2002);

Lieb v. Trimble, 183 P.3d 702 (Colo. App. 2008).

This rule limits the issuance of orders in the nature of prohibition to cases where an inferior tribunal has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion in exercising judicial or quasi-judicial functions, and where there is no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Banking Bd. v. District Court, 177 Colo. 77, 492 P.2d 837 (1972).

In other words the scope of review is limited to the inquiry as to whether jurisdiction has been exceeded, discretion abused, or authority regularly pursued. City Council v. Hanley, 19 Colo. App. 390, 75 P. 600 (1904); Graeb v. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 55 Colo. 523, 139 P. 1099 (1913); Chenoweth v. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 57 Colo. 74, 141 P. 132 (1914); Thompson v. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 59 Colo. 549, 151 P. 436 (1915); State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Noble, 65 Colo. 410, 177 P. 141 (1918); State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Boulls, 69 Colo. 361, 195 P. 325 (1920); State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Brown, 70 Colo. 116, 198 P. 274 (1921); White v. Andrew, 70 Colo. 50, 197 P. 564 (1921); Dilliard v. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 69 Colo. 575, 196 P. 866 (1921); Doran v. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 78 Colo. 153, 240 P. 335 (1925); State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Spears, 79 Colo. 588, 247 P. 563 (1934); Bd. of Comm'rs v. Dunlap, 83 Colo. 360, 265 P. 94 (1928); Pub. Utils. Comm'n v. City of Loveland, 87 Colo. 556, 289 P. 1090 (1930); State Bd. of Dental Exam'rs v. Savelle, 90 Colo. 177, 8 P.2d 693 (1932); Pub. Utils. Comm'n v. Erie, 92 Colo. 151, 18 P.2d 906 (1933); City & County of Denver v. People ex rel. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 129 Colo. 41, 266 P.2d 1105 (1954).

The court can review the action of the state board of medical examiners only upon the question of jurisdiction or great abuse of discretion. White v. Andrew, 70 Colo. 50, 197 P. 564 (1921).

The remedy is restricted in its inquiry to jurisdictional questions and to a manifest abuse of discretion. State Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Cummings, 83 Colo. 379, 265 P. 687 (1928).

Under section (a)(4) the court is limited to a determination of questions of jurisdiction and abuse of discretion. Hawkins v. Hunt, 113 Colo. 468, 160 P.2d 357 (1945); Shupe v. Boulder County, 230 P.3d 1269 (Colo. App. 2010).

A review of the action of the state board of health in revoking a license for the operation of a chiropractic sanitarium was held to be limited to the inquiry as to whether jurisdiction has been exceeded, discretion abused, or authority regularly pursued. Spears Free Clinic & Hosp. for Poor Children v. State Bd. of Health, 122 Colo. 147, 220 P.2d 872 (1950).

The sole matter before a trial court under the record is governed by this rule and limits the inquiry to a determination of whether the licensing authority has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion. Bacher v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 136 Colo. 67, 314 P.2d 607 (1957).

Under this rule the function of the district court is to determine whether the respondent authorities have exceeded their jurisdiction or abused their discretion. La Junta Easy Shops, Inc. v. Hendren, 164 Colo. 55, 432 P.2d 754 (1967).

The breadth of the district court's review does not extend further than to determine whether the inferior tribunal has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion. City of Colo. Springs v. District Court, 184 Colo. 177, 519 P.2d 325 (1974).

An appellate court's review under section (a)(4) is limited to a determination of whether the governmental body or officer has exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion, based on the evidence in the record before the defendant body or officer. Since the question is whether there is adequate support for the decision reached by the administrative tribunal, the appellate court is in the same position as the district court in reviewing an administrative decision under section (a)(4). Ad Two, Inc. v. City & County of Denver, 9 P.3d 373 (Colo. 2000); Covered Bridge, Inc. v. Town of Vail, 197 P.3d 281 (Colo. App. 2008).

Review of a prison disciplinary decision is limited to whether the prison officials exceeded their jurisdiction or abused their discretion. Under this standard, the decision of the prison officials must be upheld if there is "some evidence" to support it. Washington v. Atherton, 6 P.3d 346 (Colo. App. 2000).

Consideration of evidence relevant to jurisdiction proper. In determining whether the board had exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion, the trial court properly gave consideration to evidence of material facts which could not escape notice, and did not substitute the decision of the board. Bd. of Adjustment v. Abe Perlmutter Constr. Co., 131 Colo. 230, 280 P.2d 1107 (1955).

The merits of the case are not involved. On proceedings to review an order of an administrative body the only questions presented are: Did the board exceed its jurisdiction, or abuse its discretion? The merits of the controversy are not involved. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Noble, 65 Colo. 410, 177 P. 141 (1918).

It brings up no issue of law or fact not involved in the question of jurisdiction. Under no circumstances can the review be extended to the merits. Upon every question except the mere question of power, the action of the inferior tribunal is final and conclusive. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Brown, 70 Colo. 116, 198 P. 274 (1921).

Whether a decision on the merits is right or wrong is not within the issue. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Brown, 70 Colo. 116, 198 P. 274 (1921); State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. Spears, 79 Colo. 588, 247 P. 563, 54 A.L.R. 1498 (1926).

It does not settle disputed facts. The object of the proceeding is not to settle or determine disputed facts, but to investigate and correct errors of law of a jurisdictional nature, and abuses of discretion. Doran v. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 78 Colo. 153, 240 P. 335 (1925).

A district court could not, in proceedings to determine whether a justice of the peace exceeded his jurisdiction, determine disputed questions of fact. Toland v. Strohl, 147 Colo. 577, 364 P.2d 588 (1961).

Mere irregularities are not reviewable. Phillips County Court v. People ex rel. Chicago, B. & Q. R. R., 55 Colo. 258, 133 P. 752 (1913).

Mere disagreement with a ruling is not sufficient showing of abuse of discretion to require issuance of a writ of prohibition. Bristol v. County Court, 143 Colo. 306, 352 P.2d 785 (1960).

Judgment of lower court will not be rejudged on merits. While power is vested in the courts to review the proceedings of all inferior jurisdictions to correct jurisdictional errors, they will not rejudge their judgments on the merits. The correctional power extends no further than to keep them within the limits of their jurisdiction, and to compel them to exercise it with regularity. Bd. of Aldermen v. Darrow, 13 Colo. 460, 22 P. 784 (1889); State Bd. of Land Comm'rs v. Carpenter, 16 Colo. App. 436, 66 P. 165 (1901).

The district court has no jurisdiction to review the action of a city council in a matter of contest of election of its members, and to determine whether the action of the council in such contested election was justified by the evidence. City Council v. Hanley, 19 Colo. App. 390, 75 P. 600 (1904).

Section (a)(4) not substitute for available statutory review. A party cannot substitute proceedings seeking declaratory and injunctive relief under section (a)(4) for an available avenue of plain, speedy and adequate review prescribed by the general assembly. Claskey v. Klapper, 636 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1981).

Review pursuant to C.R.C.P. 57 is appropriate where section (a)(4) relief is unavailable because the challenged action is legislative or because review of the record is an insufficient remedy. Grant v. District Court, 635 P.2d 201 (Colo. 1981).

The court acted within its discretion in dismissing a claim for declaratory relief under C.R.C.P. 57, because the review provided under this rule had already considered all the issues in that claim. Denver Center for Performing Arts v. Briggs, 696 P.2d 299 (Colo. 1985).

Section (a)(4) cannot be substituted for an appeal. When a county court overruled defendant's motion to vacate the judgment, it had jurisdiction over the subject matter and over the person of the defendant and exercised that jurisdiction regularly. It may be that it ought to have vacated the judgment and that it committed error in not doing so, but this is a matter to be determined by appeal and not by a proceeding under section (a)(4). Pierce v. Hamilton, 55 Colo. 448, 135 P. 796 (1913).

The words "abuse of discretion" in section (a)(4) do not mean such an abuse of discretion as may be committed by a court in overruling a motion to vacate a judgment when the action of the court may be reviewed on appeal, for otherwise an action would lie to review the action of a county court in refusing to set aside a default and vacate a judgment taken thereon in almost any case. Pierce v. Hamilton, 55 Colo. 448, 135 P. 796 (1913).

"Abuse of discretion" does not entail only acts in excess of jurisdiction, and this section is not therefore limited solely to a determination of whether the inferior tribunal exceeded its jurisdiction. Ragsdale v. County Court, 39 Colo. App. 341, 567 P.2d 817 (1977).

Thus, claim of unconstitutionality is not considered. The question of constitutionality of a statute under which the executive department is proceeding is a matter to be raised on appeal after the executive has performed its function. Colo. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. District Court, 138 Colo. 227, 331 P.2d 502 (1958); People ex rel. Orcutt v. District Court, 167 Colo. 162, 445 P.2d 887 (1968); Colo. Dept. of Rev. v. District Court ex rel. County of Adams, 172 Colo. 144, 470 P.2d 864 (1970).

Where the only question before the Colorado courts was the validity of an ordinance, and plaintiff could obtain relief only if the ordinance were held to be invalid, and where his allegations were adequate for this purpose, and that was the issue upon which the case was tried and decided, this rule was not applicable. Heron v. City of Denver, 251 F.2d 119 (10th Cir. 1958).

Contentions of unconstitutionality under this rule provide no basis for jurisdiction in the district court under this rule. People ex rel. Orcutt v. District Court, 167 Colo. 162, 445 P.2d 887 (1968).

District court lacks subject matter jurisdiction to review office of attorney regulation counsel (OARC)'s decision not to pursue further investigation of complainant's allegation of professional misconduct against opposing counsel. The supreme court, as part of its inherent powers, has exclusive authority to regulate and supervise the practice of law in Colorado, including the structure and administration of attorney discipline proceedings. Chessin v. Office of Attorney Regulation, 2020 CO 9, 458 P.3d 888.

De novo review was impermissible under this rule. Hessling v. City of Broomfield, 193 Colo. 124, 563 P.2d 12 (1977).

A trial de novo of the issues in a municipal court cannot be had under the certiorari provisions of this rule. Serra v. Cameron, 133 Colo. 115, 292 P.2d 340 (1956).

In a certiorari proceeding, the reviewing court is to ascertain from the record of the lower tribunal alone whether the inferior tribunal regularly pursued its authority, and thereupon pronounce judgment accordingly. Johnston v. City Council, 177 Colo. 223, 493 P.2d 651 (1972).

In the absence of some showing of facts, either in the petition for review or in the supporting affidavits, which would tend to indicate that the city council's action was arbitrary or an abuse of discretion, the district court's review under section (a)(4) of this rule is limited to the record before it. City of Colo. Springs v. District Court, 184 Colo. 177, 519 P.2d 325 (1974).

Reviewing court on certiorari review of an administrative body's decision is limited to what appeared of record. Ford Leasing Dev. Co. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 186 Colo. 418, 528 P.2d 237 (1974).

District court review under this rule proceeding is limited to the record. Cline v. City of Boulder, 35 Colo. App. 349, 532 P.2d 770 (1975).

In a certiorari proceeding pursuant to section (a)(4), the district court's review is limited to a review of the record before it and introduction of new testimony is not appropriate. Hazelwood v. Saul, 619 P.2d 499 (Colo. 1980).

In reviewing a decision pursuant to this rule, an appellate court must review the decision of the agency rather than the decision of the district court; review of an agency's findings of fact is limited to whether the agency had competent evidence on which to base its decision. Save Park County v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 969 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 990 P.2d 35 (Colo. 1999).

The reviewing court must also determine whether an agency misconstrued or misapplied the law; the agency's interpretation of its own regulations must be reviewed to ensure that it does not amend its regulations in the guise of interpreting them. Save Park County v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 969 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 990 P.2d 35 (Colo. 1999).

Taking testimony is unnecessary for review. In the course of hearing under a writ of certiorari, this section sets up the correct procedure. Essentially it is a review proceeding of an inferior tribunal and thus testimony is not in order. Toland v. Strohl, 147 Colo. 577, 364 P.2d 588 (1961).

District court on its own motion may not order a remand to supplement the record where the evidence had been presented on all issues necessary for a determination of the validity of the action taken and the record is complete. Cline v. City of Boulder, 35 Colo. App. 349, 532 P.2d 770 (1975); Garland v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 660 P.2d 20 (Colo. App. 1982).

Court cannot interfere with commission's findings if supported by competent evidence. The scope of review in certiorari proceedings, and the authority of courts to interfere with the findings of tribunals vested with exclusive jurisdiction to determine particular issues has been judicially defined. The reviewing court cannot consider whether the commission's findings are right or wrong, substitute its judgment for that of the commission, or interfere in any manner with the commission's findings if there is any competent evidence to support the same. State Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Hazlett, 119 Colo. 173, 201 P.2d 616 (1948).

The lawful determination of a properly constituted authority will not be interfered with when the record discloses competent evidence on which it is based, and the action of the inferior tribunal appears to be neither arbitrary nor capricious. Marker v. City of Colo. Springs, 138 Colo. 485, 336 P.2d 305 (1959).

Where civil service commission, acting in a quasi-judicial capacity, reviews record of proceedings before city manager of safety for purpose of determining whether police officers were properly discharged, and the evidence before the manager substantiated the charge and supported his findings and conclusions, the commission is bound by the manager's supported findings and may not adopt different conclusions to hold a de novo trial without expressly determining that the findings are not supported by the evidence, or that errors of law have occurred. Turner v. City & County of Denver, 146 Colo. 336, 361 P.2d 631 (1961).

The authority of the court and the scope of its review in certiorari proceedings is limited to a determination of whether there is any competent evidence to support the decision of the inferior tribunal. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967); Cooper v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 43 Colo. App. 258, 604 P.2d 1186 (1979); Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001).

While the reviewing court can determine that a portion of the test established by the civil service commission was arbitrary and capricious, the court cannot determine the remedy. Determination of a remedy is left to the commission. Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001).

The proper function of a district court under this rule is to affirm a city council where there is "any competent evidence" to support the council's decision. Bauer v. City of Wheat Ridge, 182 Colo. 324, 513 P.2d 203 (1973).

A court subjecting a rezoning decision of a city zoning authority to this rule review must uphold the decision unless there is no competent evidence to support it. Corper v. City & County of Denver, 191 Colo. 252, 552 P.2d 13 (1976); Pub. Emp. Ret. Ass'n v. Stermole, 874 P.2d 444 (Colo. App. 1993); City of Colo. Springs v. Givan, 897 P.2d 753 (Colo. 1995); IBC Denver II, LLC v. City of Wheat Ridge, 183 P.3d 714 (Colo. App. 2008).

An administrative finding of fact must be upheld on review under section (a)(4) where competent evidence supports it in the record. Denver Ctr. for Performing Arts v. Briggs, 696 P.2d 299 (Colo. 1985); Elec. Power Res. v. City & County of Denver, 737 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1987); Fedder v. McCurdy, 768 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1989); Neighbors For A Better Approach v. Nepa, 770 P.2d 1390 (Colo. 1989).

Record must clearly show abuse of discretion. To authorize a court finding that a municipal zoning board has grossly abused its discretion in failing to restrict an owner in the use of his property, the record should clearly show such abuse when the complaint is made by those who seek a benefit to their own properties by the imposition of restrictions on others. Bd. of Adjustment v. Handley, 105 Colo. 180, 95 P.2d 823 (1939).

In a proper case for the issuance of the writ, the extent of the review by the district court should have been to ascertain from the record whether the county court regularly pursued its authority. Morefield v. Koehn, 53 Colo. 367, 127 P. 234 (1912).

The determination of whether there is competent evidence to support a lower tribunal's decision is made upon examination of the record of administrative proceedings, including a transcript of the testimony and other evidence before the inferior tribunal. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967).

Abuse of discretion means there is no competent evidence to support the decision. Ross v. Fire & Police Pension Ass'n, 713 P.2d 1304 (Colo. 1986); Bentley v. Valco, Inc., 741 P.2d 1266 (Colo. App. 1987).

A petition for certiorari showing on its face that no relief could be granted, was properly dismissed without further inquiry. Berry v. State Bd. of Parole, 148 Colo. 547, 367 P.2d 338 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 927 (1962).

In order for a court to set aside a decision of an administrative body on certiorari review, there must be no competent evidence to support the decision. Ford Leasing Dev. Co. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 186 Colo. 418, 528 P.2d 237 (1974).

Court review of agency decision under this rule limited to matters contained within the record of the proceeding before the agency. Fedder v. McCurdy, 768 P.2d 711 (Colo. App. 1989).

Burden of providing record on petitioner.

In appealing an administrative decision to the district court, the burden of providing an adequate record is upon the administrative agency on the order to show cause from the district court. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 174 Colo. 149, 483 P.2d 380 (1971).

Burden of proof on petitioner. A party seeking to invoke prohibition to restrain county court from proceeding in a pending action has the burden of establishing facts justifying its application. Bristol v. County Court, 143 Colo. 306, 352 P.2d 785 (1960).

A zoning ordinance is presumed to be valid, and one assailing it bears the burden of overcoming that presumption, and the courts must indulge every intendment in favor of its validity. Huneke v. Glaspy, 155 Colo. 593, 396 P.2d 453 (1964).

Petitioners must show substantial prejudice in a rezoning decision by the city council acting as a quasi-judicial decision-maker to overcome a presumption of integrity, honesty, and impartiality. Whitelaw v. Denver City Council, 2017 COA 47, 405 P.3d 433.

When a city council relies on competent evidence to determine that rezoning is in compliance with justifying circumstances, its decision is not demonstrated to be arbitrary and capricious. Whitelaw v. Denver City Council, 2017 COA 47, 405 P.3d 433.

One claiming the invalidity of a rezoning ordinance has the burden of establishing its invalidity beyond a reasonable doubt. Corper v. City & County of Denver, 191 Colo. 252, 552 P.2d 13 (1976).

Before relief can be granted under section (a)(4), the plaintiff must prove that the inferior tribunal lacked jurisdiction or abused its discretion. Clary v. County Court, 651 P.2d 908 (Colo. App. 1982).

Threshold showing required to avoid strict application of rule requiring record review only. The burden is on the person seeking review to show that either there are imperfections in the record as well as resulting prejudice or that members of the board improperly considered evidence not before the board or that members engaged in improper conduct affecting the result of the board. Whelden v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 782 P.2d 853 (Colo. App. 1989).

Incomplete record leaving nothing to review requires reversal. Imperfection of a determination of an administrative board which leaves no avenue for a court to take in reviewing the matter, and which furnishes no basis upon which to resolve whether the board may or may not be sustained, requires reversal. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Salardino, 136 Colo. 421, 318 P.2d 596 (1957).

In absence of record, taking testimony on jurisdiction not improper. A district court could hardly determine whether a justice of the peace exceeded his jurisdiction when it has no record before it. In the circumstances, the court's action in hearing testimony bearing on the issue of jurisdiction alone was not improper. Toland v. Strohl, 147 Colo. 577, 364 P.2d 588 (1961).

Civil service commission disciplinary decision upheld unless gross abuse of discretion.

The discipline imposed by a civil service commission is a matter peculiarly within its area of expertise, and will not be interfered with by the courts in the absence of a gross abuse of discretion. Ramirez v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 42 Colo. App. 383, 594 P.2d 1067 (1979).

Review of quasi-judicial action. Decision of a hearing officer for the Denver career service board is sustained when it is shown that the findings are supported by "any competent evidence". Jimerson v. Prendergast, 697 P.2d 804 (Colo. App. 1985); Mayerle v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 738 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1987); Getsch v. Hawker, 748 P.2d 1304 (Colo. App. 1987).

Role of a district court on review of a rezoning application is to affirm the findings of fact of a city council if there is "any competent evidence" in the record to support the findings. Dillon Cos. v. City of Boulder, 183 Colo. 117, 515 P.2d 627 (1973).

Ex parte exchanges may not arbitrarily be screened from appellate scrutiny. Ex parte exchanges between an advocate and an adjudicatory tribunal may not arbitrarily be screened from appellate scrutiny. Peoples Natural Gas Div. v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 626 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1981).

Appellate court is in same position as district court when reviewing an administrative decision under this rule. The appropriate consideration for an appellate court is whether there is adequate evidentiary support for the decision reached by the administrative tribunal, not whether there is adequate evidentiary support for the lower court's decision on reviewing the record. City of Colo. Springs v. Givan, 897 P.2d 753 (Colo. 1995); Whitelaw v. Denver City Council, 2017 COA 47, 405 P.3d 433.

An administrative body's decision may be reversed only if there is no competent evidence to support the decision. McCann v. Lettig, 928 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1996).

No competent evidence means that there is an absence of evidence in the record to support the ultimate decision of the administrative body, and hence, the decision can only be explained as an arbitrary and capricious exercise of authority. McCann v. Lettig, 928 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1996).

"No competent evidence" means that the ultimate decision of the administrative body is so devoid of evidentiary support that it can only be explained as an arbitrary and capricious exercise of authority. Cruzen v. Career Serv. Bd.

of City & County of Denver, 899 P.2d 373 (Colo. App. 1995); Bd. of County Comm'rs of Routt County v. O'Dell, 920 P.2d 48 (Colo. 1996); Carney v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 30 P.3d 861 (Colo. App. 2001); Whitelaw v. Denver City Council, 2017 COA 47, 405 P.3d 433.

Court of appeals should not have reweighed the evidence in section (a)(4) action merely because the evidence considered by the board was documentary in nature. The competent evidence standard of review should have governed. Bd. of Comm'rs of Routt County v. O'Dell, 920 P.2d 48 (Colo. 1996).

A complete written transcript of the evidentiary phase of a proceeding before an agency is not required in order for the court to conduct a meaningful review of that agency's actions. Whether a review of an agency's actions is meaningful depends on whether the record contains sufficient competent evidence to support its decision. Martinez v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 992 P.2d 692 (Colo. App. 1999).

Meaningful review requires that there be a record that accurately and fully reflects the evidence relied upon and the findings of fact and conclusions of law from the agency's proceedings, so that a reviewing court is able to determine, upon the state of the record before it, whether the agency's actions were arbitrary and capricious. Martinez v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 992 P.2d 692 (Colo. App. 1999).

It is not unduly burdensome to require the plaintiff to produce an affidavit containing sufficient allegations and evidence to raise questions concerning whether competent evidence had been presented in support of an agency's decision. Martinez v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 992 P.2d 692 (Colo. App. 1999).

Scope of review on appeal is limited to determining whether the tribunal exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion. Coates v. City of Cripple Creek, 865 P.2d 924 (Colo. App. 1993); Abbott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Weld County, 895 P.2d 1165 (Colo. App. 1995); McCann v. Lettig, 928 P.2d 816 (Colo. App. 1996).

Review of the decision of an administrative law judge is limited to a determination of whether the ALJ exceeded his or her jurisdiction or abused his or her authority. City & County of Denver v. Fey Concert Co., 960 P.2d 657 (Colo. 1998).

Section (a)(4)(I) does not provide the judicial standards of review of a decision of the public utilities commission; the controlling standards of a district court's review of a public utilities commission decision are provided in § 40-6-115. Ace West Trucking v. P.U.C., 788 P.2d 755 (Colo. 1990).

Inappropriate application of section (a)(4)(I) not reversible error. District court's use of incorrect standard of review of a decision of the public utilities commission did not constitute reversible error where record as a whole demonstrated that the court could not have otherwise resolved the issues applying the correct standard of review. Ace West Trucking v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 788 P.2d 755 (Colo. 1990).

The proceedings authorized by section (a)(4) cannot be substituted for regular appellate procedures and this rule may not be used to review pretrial evidentiary rulings. People v. Adams County Court, 793 P.2d 655 (Colo. App. 1990).

The trial court's scope of review in proceeding under this rule was strictly limited to determining whether the board for the fire and police pension association, in conducting a hearing under the Board's rules, exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion. Pueblo v. Fire & Police Pension Ass'n, 827 P.2d 597 (Colo. App. 1992).

In reviewing action of administrative agency, court may consider whether agency's hearing officer misconstrued or misapplied law in making a determination as to abuse of discretion. Stamm v. City & County of Denver, 856 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1993).

When interpreting an ordinance, a court may review its other provisions in order to construe the disputed section in context. Humana, Inc. v. Bd. of Adjustment, 537 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1975); Abbott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Weld County, 895 P.2d 1165 (Colo. App. 1995).

The construction of an ordinance by administrative officials charged with its enforcement should be given deference by the courts and if there is a reasonable basis for the administrative agency's application of the law, the decision may not be set aside on review. Abbott v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Weld County, 895 P.2d 1165 (Colo. App. 1995); Covered Bridge, Inc. v. Town of Vail, 197 P.3d 281 (Colo. App. 2008).

The court may not set aside an administrative board's interpretation of the law if it is supported by a reasonable basis. Lieb v. Trimble, 183 P.3d 702 (Colo. App. 2008); Covered Bridge, Inc. v. Town of Vail, 197 P.3d 281 (Colo. App. 2008).

Appeals involving sufficiency of the evidence determinations are generally discouraged. People v. Holder, 658 P.2d 870 (Colo. 1983); Abbott v. County Ct. in & for County of Grand, 886 P.2d 730 (Colo. 1994).

Judicial review of prison disciplinary proceedings must take into account the correctional setting of the proceeding and state's interest in safe and efficient operation of its prison system. Review of a prison disciplinary decision is limited to whether the prison officials exceeded their jurisdiction or abused their discretion. A reviewing court must uphold the decision of the prison officials if the decision is supported by some evidence in the record. The scope of judicial review in this type of case is very limited. Thomas v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 117 P.3d 7 (Colo. App. 2004).

C. Illustrative Cases.

City manager of safety lacks authority to rescind or modify a disciplinary order against a police officer once the order is final, and a disciplinary order becomes final once the period for appealing it has passed without an appeal being filed. Allowing the manager of safety to modify an order after it is final would be absurd because an officer could never be assured that the disciplinary proceedings were at an end. Murr v. Civil Serv. Comm'n of Denv., 2019 COA 51M, 459 P.3d 699.

Challenge must await exercise of statutory duties. In an action by package liquor licensees to compel the secretary of state to prohibit other licensees from making deliveries to customers, there was nothing upon which certiorari can operate where there are no proceedings before the secretary of state for the court to review, where there is no complaint of excess of jurisdiction, and the secretary of state not having acted at all, cannot be said to have abused his discretion. Ahern v. Baker, 148 Colo. 408, 366 P.2d 366 (1961).

After the agriculture commissioner has determined the amount of the assessment and called for collection, if payment is not forthcoming, then the commissioner may file a claim for collection of the assessment. It is at such time that the corporate respondents have a full and complete opportunity to challenge the assessment. Until the commissioner makes a determination of the amount of the assessment, the judiciary has no jurisdiction to interfere where the commissioner is merely exercising his statutory duties. People ex rel. Orcutt v. District Court, 167 Colo. 162, 445 P.2d 887 (1968).

Restricted statutory review was not adequate remedy at law. Where by the terms of the ordinance there could be no dispute but that the Denver board of adjustment, having resort solely to the terms of the ordinance, would be bound to find that the building permit was in error, and in any further "appeal" under the ordinance prescribed certiorari procedure, the court would be confined to a review of the record upon that same restricted issue under section (a) of this rule, and likewise could only affirm that the permit did not comply with the ordinance terms, plaintiff did not have an "adequate remedy at law" by an ordinance-appeal since the board was powerless, because of its restricted jurisdiction to reverse the revocation of the permit on the grounds of equitable estoppel due to advanced construction or to do anything other than affirm that the permit did not comply with the requirements of the ordinance.

Failure to exhaust statutory review bars remedy under rule. A claimant who fails to seek a review of an industrial commission order in the district court within the 20-day period specified by § 8-53-107 is thereafter barred from asking judicial review and cannot obtain what amounts to similar relief by asserting a right under section (a)(2) and section (4). Vigil v. Indus. Comm'n, 160 Colo. 23, 413 P.2d 904 (1966).

Not applicable where breach of contract alleged. Section (a)(4) of this rule, review in the nature of certiorari, is applicable where a party is attacking an action taken by a board. However, that rule is directed to an action against the board for exceeding its jurisdiction or abusing its discretion, but permits relief only where there is no "plain, speedy, and adequate remedy", and thus does not apply where the plaintiffs allege a breach of a preexisting contract. Ebke v. Julesburg Sch. Dist. No. RE-1, 37 Colo. App. 349, 50 P.2d 355 (1976), aff'd on other grounds, 193 Colo. 40, 562 P.2d 419 (1977).

Neither district court nor court of appeals can properly review county court's finding of probable cause in a proceeding under this rule. Zaharia v. County Court ex rel. County of Jefferson, 673 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1983).

District court may not review a county court's finding that no probable cause exists. Gallagher v. Arapahoe County Court, 772 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1989), cert. denied, 778 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1989).

District court review of county court judge's denial of motion to recuse is proper under section (a)(4). Kane v. County Court Jefferson County, 192 P.3d 443 (Colo. App. 2008).

Action does not lie to the collector of taxes, either to review his action, or any prior action upon which his own is based, and it would be an anomalous practice to convert an action brought against a county treasurer to restrain the collection of a void tax into an action against the board of county commissioners to review its proceedings in levying the tax, even though, in a proper case, this remedy is appropriate. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Bonner, 24 Colo. 220, 49 P. 366 (1897).

No action to compel warrants for moral obligation. Where a city charter forbade the auditor to disburse city funds except in payment of legal obligations, an action could not be maintained to compel him to issue warrants as directed by the city council for the payment of a mere moral obligation. Cross v. McNichols, 118 Colo. 442, 195 P.2d 975 (1948).

District court has jurisdiction to enjoin city from requiring railroads to pay for viaduct construction. Where a city manager is directed to recommend a bill for an ordinance requiring the construction of a viaduct and apportioning the cost as he deems proper and reasonable among the railroads, although relief under this rule is inappropriate insofar as the manager may make changes in his plan for the viaduct or in his apportionment of costs, the district court has jurisdiction to declare that the city is proceeding without authority and to enjoin it from proceeding to require the railroads to pay for construction of the viaduct. Denver & R. G. W. R. v. City & County of Denver, 673 P.2d 354 (Colo. 1983).

District court could not entertain city's action under this rule as the city was required to file appeal of county court's dismissal of traffic prosecution pursuant to municipal court rule rather than seek review in district court. City & County of Denver v. Harrell, 759 P.2d 847 (Colo. App. 1988).

Jurisdiction to restrain county judge under disqualification. Where motions were filed in county court to set aside judgments rendered by a former county judge before a presiding county judge who had acted as counsel for the judgment debtors, the presiding judge was disqualified to act on such motions, and it was his duty to certify the matter to the district court, and refusing to do so the district court had jurisdiction by writs of prohibition and certiorari to restrain the county judge from setting aside said judgments and to order him to certify the proceedings to the district court. People ex rel. Brown v. District Court, 26 Colo. 226, 56 P. 1115 (1899).

Judgments of justices of the peace may be reviewed by a proceeding under section (a)(4) from the county court where no appeal is provided by statute. Loloff v. Heath, 31 Colo. 172, 71 P. 1113 (1903).

Review of decision of state board of health. An action under § 13-45-113, providing for a review in the district court of a decision of the state board of health, is a statutory action and not controlled by this rule. Grimm v. State Bd. of Health, 121 Colo. 269, 215 P.2d 324 (1950).

Certiorari lies to state board of public welfare. The appropriate proceeding to review a determination of the state board of public welfare directing payment of benefits to a resident of a federal military reservation is certiorari. Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Donoho, 144 Colo. 321, 356 P.2d 267 (1960).

Interlocutory orders in eminent domain reviewable. In eminent domain proceedings, where an order for temporary possession was clearly interlocutory, and an appeal would not lie to review the same, complainants had no plain, speedy or adequate remedy at law, and certiorari will lie. Swift v. Smith, 119 Colo. 126, 201 P.2d 609 (1948); Potashnik v. Pub. Serv. Co., 126 Colo. 98, 247 P.2d 137 (1952).

The proper proceeding for relief from an interlocutory order in eminent domain actions is by certiorari, when directed to an endangered fundamentally substantive and substantial right. Town of Glendale v. City & County of Denver, 137 Colo. 188, 322 P.2d 1053 (1958).

Prison board proceedings reviewable. This section is an authorization to test the legality of the prison board proceedings in the state courts whereby good time credits were forfeited by the prison board following the return of the appellant to prison after an escape. Henry v. Patterson, 363 F.2d 443 (10th Cir. 1966).

Discretionary release of dangerous patient from state penitentiary reviewable. For a patient confined in the state penitentiary after being found not guilty of murder by reason of insanity and transferred from the state hospital as a dangerous patient, petitioner is entitled to attack the superintendent's good faith and discretion in failing to initiate the statutory proceedings to certify the patient sane by resort to the procedures outlined in Parker v. People (108 Colo. 362, 117 P.2d 316 (1941)) or in section (a)(4) of this rule. Pigg v. Patterson, 370 F.2d 101 (10th Cir. 1966).

Administrative acts of parole board not reviewable. The action of a parole board is type of administrative decision not reviewable by certiorari. Berry v. State Bd. of Parole, 148 Colo. 547, 367 P.2d 338 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 927 (1962).

The referral of an inmate for placement in a community corrections program is not reviewable under section (a)(4). Rivera-Bottzcek v. Ortiz, 134 P.3d 517 (Colo. App. 2006).

The dismissal of personnel under home rule charter not reviewable. Where the city charter of a home rule city does not provide for a civil service system, the charter places authority in the city manager for hiring and firing police department personnel, and there are no provisions in the charter for hearing or review of dismissals ordered by the city manager, the district court has no jurisdiction to review the city manager's action in dismissing a police officer on certiorari. Hoffman v. City of Fort Collins, 30 Colo. App. 123, 489 P.2d 355 (1971).

Whether county court abused its discretion in failing to allow a plaintiff to recall witnesses at a preliminary hearing is properly before district court. Zaharia v. County Court ex rel. County of Jefferson, 673 P.2d 378 (Colo. App. 1983).

Quasi-judicial acts of city council are properly reviewable. When deciding upon the proper form of judicial review, acts of a city council which had the earmarks of quasi-judicial proceedings, i.e., notice to individual landowners, hearings, and decision-making by the application of facts to specified criteria established by law, were properly reviewed under section (a)(4). Margolis v. District Court, 638 P.2d 297 (Colo. 1981).

Ordering cessation of waste disposal at landfill is quasi-judicial. In ordering the cessation of hazardous waste and sewage sludge disposal at a landfill, the county commissioners were adjudicating the rights and obligations of only the parties involved, which is quasi-judicial action. City & County of Denver v. Eggert, 647 P.2d 216 (Colo. 1982).

Sale of real estate by city council not a judicial or quasi-judicial action subject to review because there is no state or local law requiring city council to apply certain criteria before selecting a buyer. Walsenburg Sand & Gravel Co. v. City Council of Walsenburg, 160 P.3d 297 (Colo. App. 2007).

Individual or public may exercise remedy from civil service orders. Certiorari from an order of the civil service commission of Denver is available on behalf of an aggrieved employee, and the public, the city and county of Denver, acting through its proper officers in the public interest, may exercise the remedy extended to individuals even though specific provision is not made therefor in the charter. The rules of civil procedure are broad enough to cover this condition. Turner v. City & County of Denver, 146 Colo. 336, 361 P.2d 631 (1961).

Plaintiffs' complaint for breach of contract should not have been dismissed based on exclusivity of review under this section because the board of county commissioners, who denied the plaintiffs' claim was not acting as a quasi-judicial body. Montez v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 674 P.2d 973 (Colo. App. 1983).

It is the nature of the decision rendered by the governmental body and the process by which that decision was reached that is the predominant consideration in determining whether the body has exercised a quasi-judicial function, and not the existence of a legislative scheme mandating notice and a hearing. Cherry Hills Resort Dev. Co. v. City of Cherry Hills Vill., 757 P.2d 622 (Colo. 1988); Widder v. Durango Sch. Dist. No. 9-R, 85 P.3d 518 (Colo. 2004).

If the governmental decision is likely to adversely affect the protected interests of specific individuals, and if a decision is to be reached through the application of preexisting legal standards or policy considerations to present or past facts, then the governmental body appears to be acting in a quasi-judicial capacity. Cherry Hills Resort Dev. Co. v. City of Cherry Hills Vill., 757 P.2d 622 (Colo. 1988); Widder v. Durango Sch. Dist. No. 9-R, 85 P.3d 518 (Colo. 2004).

A school district's decision about whether to terminate an employee who claims that he acted in good faith and in compliance with a conduct and discipline code involves a determination of the rights, duties, or obligations of specific individuals on the basis of presently existing standards to past or present facts.

Widder v. Durango Sch. Dist. No. 9-R, 85 P.3d 518 (Colo. 2004).

Dual incorporation subject to jurisdiction. The county court was acting improperly in allowing both incorporations to proceed simultaneously, and it was proper for the district court to entertain an action to enforce this priority of jurisdiction, and to enter its order staying proceedings. Wiltgen v. Berg, 164 Colo. 139, 435 P.2d 378 (1967).

Court cannot prohibit duties where statute provides for review. Where the state board of medical examiners is proceeding pursuant to its statutory authority, a trial court has no authority to issue an absolute writ prohibiting the board from performing the duties imposed upon it by law, where a statute provides for reconsideration by the board of any orders issued by it and court review of any action taken in revoking a physician's license. Colo. State Bd. of Med. Exam'rs v. District Court, 138 Colo. 227, 331 P.2d 502 (1958).

Court lacks jurisdiction to compel stay in violation of statute. No discretion is afforded the annexing municipality. Section 31-8-118 (1), providing that judicial review shall not stay the application of annexation ordinances, is mandatory and therefore, absent a finding of inapplicability or unconstitutionality, the district court lacks jurisdiction to order the city to disobey the clear mandate of the statute. City of Westminster v. District Court, 167 Colo. 263, 447 P.2d 537 (1968).

No abuse of discretion where commissioner had not yet acted. There could be no abuse of discretion by the agriculture commissioner in conducting a hearing, for he had not yet acted when the order in the nature of prohibition was issued by the district court. The only basis which would support the district court's action would be that the commissioner lacked jurisdiction to proceed, and it is clear that there could be no such finding for the reason that the commissioner did and does have jurisdiction — sole and exclusive original jurisdiction. People ex rel. Orcutt v. District Court, 167 Colo. 162, 445 P.2d 887 (1968).

By holding a suspension hearing upon being advised that gambling activities had occurred on the licensed premises in violation of statute and departmental rule and regulation, the director of revenue was proceeding within his power, authority, and jurisdiction. The director had not yet acted in any manner whatsoever to the prejudice of the rights of the licensees. The trial court's rule prohibiting the director from proceeding with the hearing presumed that respondents' constitutional rights might be violated because a criminal proceeding had been previously commenced. No court can presume public officers will, in the performance of their duties, conduct their offices in an unlawful manner so as to deprive affected persons of their constitutional rights. The writ of prohibition was prematurely invoked in the trial court by respondents. People ex rel. Heckers v. District Court, 170 Colo. 533, 463 P.2d 310 (1970).

Eminent domain order was not abuse of discretion. In a proceeding in the nature of prohibition brought pursuant to this rule, the trial court was held not to have exceeded its jurisdiction or abused its discretion in denying motion to dismiss condemnation proceedings and in finding that the parties to the condemnation proceedings had failed to reach an agreement as to the purchase price of the land thereby giving the trial court jurisdiction over such proceedings. Old Timers Baseball Ass'n v. Housing Auth., 122 Colo. 597, 224 P.2d 219 (1950).

Denial of pension not supported by evidence. The firemen's pension fund board of trustees did not exceed its jurisdiction nor abuse its discretion in denying the application for retirement and pension where the findings were based on conflicting evidence. Hubbard v. Pueblo Firemen's Pension Fund, 150 Colo. 495, 374 P.2d 492 (1962).

Decision of zoning authority not beyond its jurisdiction. The district court correctly determined that the board of adjustment did not exceed its jurisdiction or abuse its discretion when it allowed homeowner to repair stock car in his garage. A reviewing court should not lightly find an abuse of discretion where a zoning authority refuses to restrict an owner's use of his property upon the complaint of persons seeking to benefit their own property by imposing restrictions on another's use of his property. Shumate v. Zimmerman, 166 Colo. 488, 444 P.2d 872 (1968).

The director of the building department lawfully issued the permit in conformance with the practice and ordinances in effect at the time of the application; that the director's letter attempting to limit the height of the contemplated structure, and thus give effect to the height limitations of the "mountain view ordinance" adopted after the permit was issued, was based upon a strained and unrealistic interpretation of the nature of the permit. The permittee justifiably changed his position in reliance on the permit to his detriment, thus, in ordering the director to recognize the construction permit as a general building permit, not foundation permit, the board of appeals was acting within its delegated jurisdiction, and in so doing it did not abuse its discretion. Crawford v. McLaughlin, 172 Colo. 366, 473 P.2d 725 (1970).

The record shows that proper notice was given, that full public hearings were held, and that all of the procedural aspects required by ordinance and due process of law were followed meticulously by the city. The hearings did not produce any unanimity of opinion as to the desirability of the rezoning, but there was more than ample support in the evidence to warrant the council's conclusion that the intent and aims of the ordinance were well met by the proposed plan of the church. Plaintiffs, on the other hand, fell far short of showing that they had been deprived of any reasonable use of their property by operation of the zoning ordinance. As a matter of law the city council did not act unreasonably, arbitrarily, or abuse its discretion. Moore v. City of Boulder, 29 Colo. App. 248, 484 P.2d 134 (1971).

Sufficient standards in county zoning resolution for denial of special use. Where a county zoning resolution sets out general standards for granting or denying a special use, which include the requirements that the proposed use: (1) Will be in harmony and compatible with the character of the surrounding areas and neighborhood; (2) will be consistent with the county comprehensive plan; (3) will not result in an over-intensive use of land; (4) will not have a material adverse effect on community capital improvement programs; (5) will not require a level of community facilities and services greater than that which is available; (6) will not result in undue traffic congestion or traffic hazards; (7) will not cause significant air, water, or noise pollution; (8) will be adequately landscaped, buffered, and screened; and (9) will not otherwise be detrimental to the health, safety, or welfare of the present or future inhabitants of the county; and also provides that if a special use is granted, the commissioners may impose such conditions and safeguards as are necessary to insure compliance with these standards, these provisions provide sufficient standards for the denial of a special use. C & M Sand & Gravel v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 673 P.2d 1013 (Colo. App. 1983).

Rezoning decision. The determination of whether a council reasonably applied statutory criteria in exercising its statutory power to rezone involves a consideration of whether the council abused its discretion or exceeded the bounds of its jurisdiction and is properly resolved in a certiorari proceeding under section (a)(4). Snyder v. City of Lakewood, 189 Colo. 421, 542 P.2d 371 (1975).

Landowner with land adjacent to or in vicinity of rezoned land may proceed under this rule. A landowner has standing to challenge a rezoning and then to seek review of the zoning authority's action under section (a)(4) if his land is adjacent to or in the vicinity of the land being rezoned, even though he may not live within the territory of the zoning authority. City of Thornton v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 42 Colo. App. 102, 595 P.2d 264 (1979), aff'd, 629 P.2d 605 (Colo. 1981); Whitelaw v. Denver City Council, 2017 COA 47, 405 P.3d 433.

Plain language of zoning code authorizes zoning authorities of municipality, including planning commission, to review and deny the development plan of a permitted use. Because zoning code can and does grant such authority to the planning commission, the commission was authorized to deny a permitted use by means of the review criteria and, in doing so, did not abuse its discretion or exceed its jurisdiction. City of Colo. Springs v. Securcare Self Storage, Inc., 10 P.3d 1244 (Colo. 2000).

City properly denied property owner's subdivision application, and district court properly rejected property owner's challenge to denial under section (a)(4). "Geologic condition" or "natural hazard", as used in the city's zoning code, includes threats of flooding and mud flows from a diverted natural waterway. Evidence in the record supports city's conclusion that the subject parcel was threatened by flooding and mud flow, which required mitigation. City rightly concluded that relevant provision of the code allows subdivision approval to be conditioned on mitigation of public safety risks. This flooding risk potentially endangers public health, safety, and welfare. The risk remains intertwined with both the geologic feature of the area and natural events, although water would overflow from a diversionary structure built by the city. City properly denied application because flooding risk from diverted creek required mitigation of the geologic conditions and natural hazards threatening the subject property for which the application did not provide. Alpenhof, LLC v. City of Ouray, 2013 COA 9, 297 P.3d 1052.

In connection with section (a)(4) proceeding, trial court abused its discretion when it failed to adopt reasonable interpretation by county board of adjustment (BOA) of county land use code (code) and when it ordered a remand to the BOA for additional findings based on court's own interpretation of those provisions. BOA did not abuse its discretion when it ruled that a lapse provision in the code did not apply to a special use permit because the permit had been issued before the provision's enactment. The BOA had adopted the construction of the code provided by the director of the county's land use department, which is a reasonable construction of the code provisions especially in light of the record. Sierra Club v. Billingsley, 166 P.3d 309 (Colo. App. 2007).

Even assuming withholding by county land use official of copy of e-mail was in violation of Colorado Open Records Act (CORA), neither CORA nor section (a)(4) contains any provision that would authorize remand for reconsideration of determination by BOA that lapse provision contained in county land use code did not apply to special use permit in light of withholding copy of e-mail. Moreover, inclusion of withheld e-mail in administrative record of BOA was irrelevant to court's determination under section (a)(4).

Even if the appropriate remedy were to remand for inclusion of e-mail in BOA's administrative record, document would not affect conclusion that BOA did not abuse its discretion when it ruled lapse provision did not apply to permit. Because BOA determined lapse provision did not apply, e-mail's assertion that special use had lapsed was irrelevant. Sierra Club v. Billingsley, 166 P.3d 309 (Colo. App. 2007).

Standing to challenge annexation lacking under this rule. Standing to challenge zoning and standing to challenge annexation are quite different matters; proceedings of the former may be, and proceedings of the latter may not be, attacked under this rule. City of Thornton v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 42 Colo. App. 102, 595 P.2d 264 (1979), aff'd, 629 P.2d 605 (Colo. 1981).

Finding of temporary disability unsupported by evidence is arbitrary. There is credible evidence in the record showing a permanent disability status; there is no evidence whatsoever to support the pension board's supplemental finding of a temporary disability status. The board in making its award on a temporary disability basis rather than on a permanent disability basis exercised its discretion arbitrarily and capriciously. Putnam v. Trustees of Police Pension Bd., 170 Colo. 278, 460 P.2d 778 (1969).

Refusal to hear jurisdiction question was abuse. In an action against nonresident defendants who are served with process by service upon an alleged agent, where one defendant moves to quash the service and the other defendant moves to dismiss the action, granting a motion to strike the motion to quash and the motion to dismiss is an abuse of discretion under this rule, since it denies such defendants a right to be fully heard on the question of the court's jurisdiction of the person. Bardahl Mfg. Corp. v. District Court, 134 Colo. 112, 300 P.2d 524 (1956).

To favor one applicant over another is discriminatory and suggests the exercise of an unwarranted and uncontrolled discretion on the part of the licensing authority. Thus, the issuance of a license to another person in an area shortly after applicant's application was rejected on the ground that the needs of the neighborhood were satisfied is arbitrary. Geer v. Presto, 135 Colo. 536, 313 P.2d 980 (1957).

Prohibition issues where accused is charged with offense outside court's jurisdiction. The general rule is that the writ of prohibition may not be used to test the sufficiency of an information; but this is subject to qualification, recognized in almost every jurisdiction, that where the accusation is not merely defective or technically insufficient, nor merely demurrable or subject to a motion to quash or set aside, but is elementary and fundamentally defective in substance, so that it charges a crime in no manner or form, an accused is entitled to have a writ of prohibition issue, or where it appears that the information charges an offense not within the jurisdiction of a trial court. Bustamante v. District Court, 138 Colo. 97, 329 P.2d 1013 (1958).

Regulations by county commissioners designed to depress property values with a view to future acquisition thereof may form the basis of a cause of action for compensation on the theory of inverse condemnation against the public entity initiating the regulation. Hermanson v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 42 Colo. App. 154, 595 P.2d 694 (1979).

Where a decision of a county board of adjustment is challenged, that board is the "inferior tribunal" that is the subject of a section (a)(4) proceeding. Benes v. Jefferson County Bd. of Adjustment, 36 Colo. App. 131, 537 P.2d 753 (1975).

In an action challenging the legality of a special assessment by a city council, judicial review is obtained and is limited to certiorari under this rule. City & County of Denver v. District Court, 189 Colo. 342, 540 P.2d 1088 (1975).

Where city code of home-rule city did not specify nature of review from special assessment, it is appropriate that review be had under section (a)(4), which is specifically authorized where there is no available plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Orchard Court Dev. Co. v. City of Boulder, 182 Colo. 361, 513 P.2d 199 (1973).

Section (a)(4), is a proper vehicle for judicial review of special assessments levied under Boulder's home-rule powers. Cline v. City of Boulder, 35 Colo. App. 349, 532 P.2d 770 (1975).

Attacks on application of historical preservation ordinance. An allegation that the vagueness of an historical preservation ordinance is indicated by the fact that it does not show which design the historical commission will approve is not a facial constitutional attack, but rather a challenge upon the application of the ordinance, which must be brought under this rule. South of Second Assocs. v. Georgetown, 196 Colo. 89, 580 P.2d 807 (1978).

Refusal of city to issue multiple licenses under state law was ultra vires. Where the state fermented malt beverages act permits a licensee to hold multiple licenses, the city of Denver may not prohibit the issuance of more than one license. When a city is vested with authority to administer a statute and adopt regulations to enforce it, regulation must be within the perimeter of the statute. In prohibiting what it could only regulate, the city acted ultra vires. Big Top, Inc. v. Schooley, 149 Colo. 116, 368 P.2d 201 (1962).

Residents of neighborhood affected by liquor licensing decision may seek judicial review. Residents of a neighborhood affected by the granting of a liquor license, by virtue of that fact alone, have a strong interest in insuring that the liquor licensing procedure is fairly and properly administered, and are persons who may seek judicial review of liquor licensing decisions under this rule. Norris v. Grimsley, 41 Colo. App. 231, 585 P.2d 925 (1978).

Operator of competing liquor store lacks standing to appeal liquor licensing decision of a local authority, either under § 12-47-101 or as a person "substantially aggrieved" by the disposition of the case in the lower court pursuant to this rule, since economic injury from lawful competition does not confer standing to question the legality of a competitor's operations. Norris v. Grimsley, 41 Colo. App. 231, 585 P.2d 925 (1978).

Default judgment exceeded court's discretion and authority. The grant of a default judgment for failure of the civil service commission to timely request an extension of time for filing the record on review exceeded its discretion and authority when at the time of the hearing in the lower court on the motion for default, the record had been lodged and the merits of the case had been put in issue. Civil Serv. Comm'n v. Doyle, 162 Colo. 1, 424 P.2d 368 (1967).

Grant of discovery was abuse of discretion. Where no facts were presented which tended to indicate that the city council's zoning decision was irregular, invalid, arbitrary, and capricious or the result of an abuse of discretion, the district court abused its discretion under section (a)(4) of this rule by granting discovery. City of Colo. Springs v. District Court, 184 Colo. 177, 519 P.2d 325 (1974).

Civil service commission order justified relief. Refusal by the civil service commission to restore a former policeman to his previous position on the police force of Denver after his honorable discharge from the armed forces of the United States because he volunteered when he was in no immediate danger of being drafted was an abuse of discretion as contemplated by this rule and hence the district court had jurisdiction to reinstate him. Hanebuth v. Patton, 115 Colo. 166, 170 P.2d 526 (1946).

Where civil service commission specifically upheld findings of police chief that police officer was guilty under disciplinary charges that demonstrated a direct disregard for the public good and purposes of the police department, the commission's decision to suspend the officer rather than to discharge him as police chief had ordered was an invasion of authority delegated to police chief by city charter and constituted an abuse of discretion. Thomas v. City & County of Denver, 29 Colo. App. 442, 487 P.2d 591 (1971).

Because the civil service commission failed to tell the applicant why she was disqualified from employment, the applicant could not submit reasons and documentation in support of her appeal. The commission's denial of her appeal was, therefore, an abuse of discretion. Carpenter v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 813 P.2d 773 (Colo. App. 1990).

Civil service commission decision not arbitrary, capricious, or without justification where commission deemed an assault committed by the plaintiff involved the use of force, was a misdemeanor crime of violence barring possession of a firearm under federal law, and plaintiff was thus subject to disqualification from employment as a police officer. Even though the municipal assault statute was broad enough to be violated without the use of physical force, it is appropriate to look at the charging documents as a whole to determine the precise crime of which the defendant was convicted. Ward v. Tomsick, 30 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where zoning ordinance authorizes continuance, in separate provisions of both nonconforming uses and nonconforming structures and allows for change of nonconforming use to another nonconforming use but contains no provision relating to change of nonconforming structure to another nonconforming structure, any use change is required to be effected within existing structures or not at all, and board of adjustment has no authority to grant permit to allow razing of nonconforming greenhouse and construction on the site of four apartment buildings as more restrictive nonconforming structures. City & County of Denver v. Bd. of Adjustment, 31 Colo. App. 324, 505 P.2d 44 (1972).

Setting of salaries is a legislative function, and the establishment of prevailing rates as an incident to fixing salaries is a quasi-legislative rather than a judicial or quasi-judicial function. Denver Police Protective Ass'n v. City & County of Denver, 665 P.2d 150 (Colo. App. 1983).

Vacating a roadway is a legislative act, and is not subject to review under this rule. Sutphin v. Mourning, 642 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1981).

Review of water ratemaking proceeding. Because a water ratemaking proceeding is a legislative action, section (a)(4) is not the proper vehicle for review of a ratemaking order of the county commissioners. Talbott Farms, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 43 Colo. App. 131, 602 P.2d 886 (1979).

Decisions by college or its president not subject to review under section (a)(4). Van Pelt v. State Bd. for Cmty. Colls. & Occupational Educ., 195 Colo. 316, 577 P.2d 765 (1978).

Private hospital board not inferior tribunal. A private hospital board is not a public agency and, therefore, not an "inferior tribunal" within the scope of section (a)(4). Even v. Longmont United Hosp. Ass'n, 629 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1981); Green v. Lutheran Med. Ctr. Bd. of Dirs., 739 P.2d 872 (Colo. App. 1987).

Actions of municipal advisory board not reviewable. Actions by an advisory board reporting to a city council in an effort to set salaries of certain municipal employees are not subject to review under section (a)(4). Reeve v. Career Serv. Bd., 636 P.2d 1307 (Colo. App. 1981).

County board of commissioners' actions were quasi-legislative and not quasi-judicial and therefore not subject to judicial review under the arbitrary and capricious standard of section (a)(4). Dill v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Lincoln County, 928 P.2d 809 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defense attorney's conduct in contesting court's refusal to allow withdrawal of guilty plea based on sentencing not contemplated in plea agreement was zealous representation of the client and did not constitute contempt because it did not create an obstruction which hindered the performance of the court's judicial duty. Jordan v. County Court, 722 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1986).

Trial court applied proper standard of review. In considering decision of board of adjustment, the trial court found competent evidence in the record to support the board's decision and that there was a reasonable basis for the agency's application of the law. Platte River Environ'l Conservation Org. v. Nat'l Hog Farms, Inc., 804 P.2d 290 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court did not err in reviewing PERA board's decision under section (a)(4) where it was held that PERA trustees' fiduciary duties did not prevent them from performing quasi-judicial functions in determining member's eligibility for disability benefits, and thereby did not exceed its jurisdiction nor were certain board rules ultra vires. Tepley v. Pub. Emp. Retirement Ass'n, 955 P.2d 573 (Colo. App. 1997).

District court does not have jurisdiction to review a county court's finding of probable cause pursuant to this section. Defendant may seek extraordinary relief under C.A.R. 21. Abbott v. County Ct. in & for County of Grand, 886 P.2d 730 (Colo. 1994).

Review pursuant to this rule is available for nonfactual procedural matters in preliminary hearing. Abbott v. County Ct. in & for County of Grand, 886 P.2d 730 (Colo. 1994).

Action for review for an abuse of discretion under section (a)(4) of this rule was not appropriate where the statute limited the school district board of education's discretion in determining whether to renew a probationary teacher's employment contract. Section 22-32-110 (4)(c), prohibits the board from using as grounds for nonrenewal any actions taken by the probationary teacher in good faith and in compliance with the school district's discipline policy. Since there is no remedy provided if the school board violates this prohibition, the probationary teacher's action in seeking mandamus, rather than review of an abuse of discretion, was appropriate. McIntosh v. Bd. of Educ. of Sch. Dist. No. 1, 999 P.2d 224 (Colo. App. 2000).

District court has the authority to review an action of a board of education for an abuse of discretion under this rule and § 22-33-108. Nichols ex rel. Nichols v. DeStefano, 70 P.3d 505 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd by an equally divided court, 84 P.3d 496 (Colo. 2004).

Board of county commissioners (board) correctly construed the pertinent regional development code provisions and the analytical framework for determining the appropriate use classification for the subject property. Langer v. Bd. of Comm'rs of Larimer County, 2020 CO 31, 462 P.3d 59.

Board did not abuse its discretion in classifying mountain roller coaster project as a park and recreation facility rather than as an outdoor commercial recreation or entertainment establishment within the meaning of regional development code. Langer v. Bd. of Comm'rs of Larimer County, 2020 CO 31, 462 P.3d 59.

Board of adjustment (BOA) did not abuse its discretion when it declined to review use-classification determination that mountain roller coaster was a park and recreational facility within the meaning of the regional development code. Because the BOA did not misconstrue or misapply applicable law, it did not abuse its discretion. Yakutat Land Corp. v. Langer, 2020 CO 30, 462 P.3d 65.

BOA did not abuse its discretion by not requiring location and extent review prior to approval of mountain roller coaster development. Yakutat Land Corp. v. Langer, 2020 CO 30, 462 P.3d 65.

Applied in Protect Our Mountain v. District Court, 677 P.2d 1361 (Colo. 1984); Montoya v. Career Serv. Bd., 708 P.2d 478 (Colo. App. 1985); Fisher v. County Court, 718 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1986); Krupp v. Breckenridge Sanitation Dist., 1 P.3d 178 (Colo. App. 1999); Stor-N-Lock Partners # 15, LLC v. Thornton, 2018 COA 65, 488 P.3d 352.

VI. OTHER WRITS.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Contracts", see 34 Dicta 85 (1957).

Annotator's note. Since section (a)(5) of this rule is similar to §§ 255 through 260 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant case construction of those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Remedy is exclusive. The method provided by section (a)(5), whereby partners not served in an action against a partnership may be made individually liable on the judgment rendered therein against the partnership, is exclusive. Blythe v. Cordingly, 20 Colo. App. 508, 80 P. 495 (1905).

Section (a)(5) does not provide an "alternate, cumulative remedy" to § 13-50-105 that a party may elect in lieu of naming a defendant during the pendency of an action where a corporate respondent was a member of the partnership whose identity was known by plaintiff but not named in the original action based upon a friendship with plaintiff's counsel. Gutrich v. LaPlante, 942 P.2d 1266 (Colo. App. 1996), aff'd sub nom. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

Section (a)(5) may provide relief in the context of partnership law when: (1) The plaintiff could not have determined the existence or status of individual partners despite reasonable attempts to ascertain their identities; (2) the plaintiff could not bring about personal jurisdiction in the original action; or (3) some other reason beyond the plaintiff's control prevented the plaintiff from naming and serving the individual partners. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

Show cause rule remedies nondisclosure of partnership interest. Although application to add an additional party was not made at the time of the trial when the facts appeared, no injury could obtain by requiring the wife to show cause why she is not liable to answer under this judgment. Had she and her husband properly demeaned themselves concerning the matter of revealing to the public by proper affidavit the status of their partnership business interests, she would no doubt have been made a party defendant in the original action. The judgment creditor had a right to rely upon the record at the time of filing his action. To now deny plaintiff the right to discover the true interest entering into the judgment would be to reward people for misrepresentation and nondisclosure to the injury and detriment upon a relying public. Womack v. Grandbush, 134 Colo. 1, 298 P.2d 735 (1956).

Creditor entitled to rule against active partner not of record. Where a husband and wife were active partners in an enterprise, but the public records did not disclose that the wife had an interest therein, a creditor who obtains a judgment against the husband on a partnership obligation in an action to which the wife was not made a party is entitled to a rule on the wife under section (a)(5) to show cause why she should not be held to answer for the judgment. Womack v. Grandbush, 134 Colo. 1, 298 P.2d 735 (1956).

When judgment may be rendered. The only judgment which can be rendered against a copartnership on a firm debt or obligation is one against the copartnership jointly, and the partners summoned or appearing, whether the summons is served upon all or one or more of the defendants. Blythe v. Cordingly, 20 Colo. App. 508, 80 P. 495 (1905).

Partnership interest of nonparty subject to judgment lien. A judgment against one partner is not effective against another partner not made a party to the action, nor against the partnership where the partnership was not sued, except that the partnership interest of the partner sued is subject to the judgment lien to the extent of such interest and such partner's interest therein may be sold on execution. Womack v. Grandbush, 134 Colo. 1, 298 P.2d 735 (1956).

Section (a)(5) permits a trial court to issue a show-cause order, analogous to a writ of scire facias, to partners who were neither named nor served originally in an action against the partnership. Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Wells Plaza Ltd. P'ship, 826 P.2d 427 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section (a)(5) was designed to provide relief, previously available under the writ of scire facias, as a post-judgment remedy permitting a creditor to collect on an existing yet unsatisfied judgment. It is not a substitute for maintaining an action where remedies are available to a person under statutory provisions. Gutrich v. Cogswell & Wehrle, 961 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1998).

Because the fire and police pension association is not an agency of state government, the standard of review of a decision of the association is not whether there is "substantial evidence" under § 24-4-106 (7), of the State Administrative Procedure Act, but rather, whether there is "no competent evidence" under section (a)(4) to support the decision. Pueblo v. Fire & Police Pension Ass'n, 827 P.2d 597 (Colo. App. 1992).

This rule merely abolished the form and not the substance of remedial writs such as the writ of ne exeat. A district court still possesses the authority to issue a writ in the nature of ne exeat, which is designed to prevent a person from leaving the court's jurisdiction. In re People ex rel. B.C., 981 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1999).

Rule 106.5. Correctional Facility Quasi-Judicial Hearing Review

(a) Scope. This rule applies to every action brought by an inmate to review a decision resulting from a quasi-judicial hearing of any facility of the Colorado Department of Corrections ("CDOC") or any private facility in Colorado involving a CDOC inmate for events that occurred at the facility. To the extent this rule does not cover procedures in such cases, the parties shall follow C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4). All other provisions of C.R.C.P. 106(a)(4) shall apply except where modified by this Rule 106.5. The provisions of C.R.C.P. 106(b) and C.R.C.P. 5 shall govern all cases brought under this Rule 106.5.

(b) Designation of Defendant. Only the Executive Director of the CDOC and the Warden of the facility shall be named as Defendants and shall be listed as such. The District Court shall dismiss any other Defendant.

(c) Venue. All actions under this rule shall be filed in the district court in the county in which the quasi-judicial agency action occurred, even if the inmate is no longer assigned to that facility at the time the complaint is filed.

(d) Service of Process.

(1) If the inmate does not qualify for in forma pauperis status, the rules relating to service of process set forth in C.R.C.P. 4(e)(10) shall apply, but only the Warden, the Executive Director of the Department of Corrections, and the Attorney General shall be served.

(2) If the inmate files a motion to proceed in forma pauperis status and that motion is granted, service of process shall be accomplished in the following manner: The clerk of the District Court shall scan the complaint and serve it by electronic means on the Attorney General, the Executive Director of the Department of Corrections, and the Warden of the Facility (or the designee of each of these officials), along with a notice indicating the fact of the inmate's filing and the date received by the Court. Each person notified shall send a confirmation by electronic means indicating that the specified official has received the electronic notice and the scanned copy of the complaint.

(e) Response of Defendant. Within 21 days after the date on which the Attorney General sends acknowledgment that it has received the notice and complaint from the Clerk of the District Court, the Defendants shall file either (1) an answer to the complaint and a certified copy of the record as explained below, or (2) a motion in response to the complaint.

(f) Notice to Submit Record. The facility shall file the certified record and affidavit of certification directly to the Court no later than the deadline to file an answer or motion as indicated above. This obligation to submit the record shall not apply if the Attorney General notifies the Warden within 14 days of the electronic service that a motion to dismiss the complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction has been filed, in which event the filing of the record shall be suspended pending disposition of the motion.

(g) Contents of the Record. The certified record submitted by the Warden to the District Court shall contain all material related to the proceeding at the facility to permit the Court to address the issues raised in the complaint. The record shall include the Notice of Charges, the Disposition of Charges, the Offender Appeal Form, all exhibits offered at the hearing, and the current applicable version of the Code of Penal Discipline. If any part of the proceeding was recorded, a copy of the recording shall be provided.

(h) Cost of the Record. The cost of preparation of the record shall initially be paid by the Warden but, upon the filing of the certified record with the Court, the Warden shall immediately deduct the cost of preparation of the record, including the recording, from the inmate's account. If there are insufficient funds in that account, the Warden shall apply a charge to that account. In no event shall the filing of the record be delayed because the inmate has no assets and no means by which to pay the cost of certification of the record.

(i) Briefs.

(1) If counsel for the Defendants files a motion to dismiss, the inmate shall have 14 days after service of the motion to file a brief in response, and the defense counsel shall have 14 days after service of the response to file a reply.

(2) If the defense counsel files an answer and the Warden files the certified record, the inmate shall have 42 days following notice of filing of the record in which to file a brief. In this event, the brief shall set forth the reasons why the inmate believes that the District Court should rule that the Warden has exceeded his or her jurisdiction or abused his or her discretion. The inmate must set forth in the brief specific references to the record that support the inmate's position. Defense counsel shall have 35 days after service of the brief to file a response and the inmate shall have 14 days after service of the response to file a reply.

(j) Time Periods. The parties shall follow the time periods set forth above unless the Court, on motion and for good cause shown, enters an order altering those time periods.

(k) Promulgation of Rule. A copy of this Rule 106.5 shall be made available in the law library of every facility operated by the Colorado Department of Corrections and every private prison in Colorado that houses CDOC inmates.

Source: Entire rule added and effective February 7, 2008; (e), (f), and (i) amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b); (d)(2) amended and effective April 17, 2020.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Judicial Review of Prison Quasi-Judicial Hearings Under Rule 106.5," see 44 Colo. Law. 37 (Dec. 2015).

Because private prison lacks authority to make a final determination on a disciplinary action that affects the liberty of an inmate, timely filing of an appeal is measured from the date of the private prisons monitoring unit's decision and not the date of the warden's decision. Geerdes v. Colo. Dept. of Corr., 226 P.3d 1261 (Colo. App. 2010).

This rule does not apply to actions seeking review of parole board decisions. It is not a mechanism for obtaining judicial review of parole board decisions. Moore v. Dept. of Corrs., 2018 COA 99, 440 P.3d 1163.

This rule applies only to review of quasi-judicial decisions over which the department of corrections' executive director and the prison warden have ultimate authority. Moore v. Dept. of Corrs., 2018 COA 99, 440 P.3d 1163.

Rule 107. Remedial and Punitive Sanctions for Contempt

(a) Definitions. (1) Contempt: Disorderly or disruptive behavior, a breach of the peace, boisterous conduct or violent disturbance toward the court, or conduct that unreasonably interrupts the due course of judicial proceedings; behavior that obstructs the administration of justice; disobedience or resistance by any person to or interference with any lawful writ, process, or order of the court; or any other act or omission designated as contempt by the statutes or these rules.

(2) Direct Contempt: Contempt that the court has seen or heard and is so extreme that no warning is necessary or that has been repeated despite the court's warning to desist.

(3) Indirect Contempt: Contempt that occurs out of the direct sight or hearing of the court.

(4) Punitive Sanctions for Contempt: Punishment by unconditional fine, fixed sentence of imprisonment, or both, for conduct that is found to be offensive to the authority and dignity of the court.

(5) Remedial Sanctions for Contempt: Sanctions imposed to force compliance with a lawful order or to compel performance of an act within the person's power or present ability to perform.

(6) Court: For purposes of this rule, "court" means any judge, magistrate, commissioner, referee, or a master while performing official duties.

(b) Direct Contempt Proceedings. When a direct contempt is committed, it may be punished summarily. In such case an order shall be made on the record or in writing reciting the facts constituting the contempt, including a description of the person's conduct, a finding that the conduct was so extreme that no warning was necessary or the person's conduct was repeated after the court's warning to desist, and a finding that the conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. Prior to the imposition of sanctions, the person shall have the right to make a statement in mitigation.

(c) Indirect Contempt Proceedings. When it appears to the court by motion supported by affidavit that indirect contempt has been committed, the court may ex parte order a citation to issue to the person so charged to appear and show cause at a date, time and place designated why the person should not be punished. The citation and a copy of the motion, affidavit and order shall be served directly upon such person at least 21 days before the time designated for the person to appear. If such person fails to appear at the time so designated, and it is evident to the court that the person was properly served with copies of the motion, affidavit, order, and citation, a warrant for the person's arrest may issue to the sheriff. The warrant shall fix the date, time and place for the production of the person in court. The court shall state on the warrant the amount and kind of bond required. The person shall be discharged upon delivery to and approval by the sheriff or clerk of the bond directing the person to appear at the date, time and place designated in the warrant, and at any time to which the hearing may be continued, or pay the sum specified. If the person fails to appear at the time designated in the warrant, or at any time to which the hearing may be continued, the bond may be forfeited upon proper notice of hearing to the surety, if any, and to the extent of the damages suffered because of the contempt, the bond may be paid to the aggrieved party. If the person fails to make bond, the sheriff shall keep the person in custody subject to the order of the court.

(d) Trial and Punishment. (1) Punitive Sanctions. In an indirect contempt proceeding where punitive sanctions may be imposed, the court may appoint special counsel to prosecute the contempt action. If the judge initiates the contempt proceedings, the person shall be advised of the right to have the action heard by another judge. At the first appearance, the person shall be advised of the right to be represented by an attorney and, if indigent and if a jail sentence is contemplated, the court will appoint counsel. The maximum jail sentence shall not exceed six months unless the person has been advised of the right to a jury trial. The person shall also be advised of the right to plead either guilty or not guilty to the charges, the presumption of innocence, the right to require proof of the charge beyond a reasonable doubt, the right to present witnesses and evidence, the right to cross-examine all adverse witnesses, the right to have subpoenas issued to compel attendance of witnesses at trial, the right to remain silent, the right to testify at trial, and the right to appeal any adverse decision. The court may impose a fine or imprisonment or both if the court expressly finds that the person's conduct was offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. The person shall have the right to make a statement in mitigation prior to the imposition of sentence.

(2) Remedial Sanctions. In a contempt proceeding where remedial sanctions may be imposed, the court shall hear and consider the evidence for and against the person charged and it may find the person in contempt and order sanctions. The court shall enter an order in writing or on the record describing the means by which the person may purge the contempt and the sanctions that will be in effect until the contempt is purged. In all cases of indirect contempt where remedial sanctions are sought, the nature of the sanctions and remedies that may be imposed shall be described in the motion or citation. Costs and reasonable attorney's fees in connection with the contempt proceeding may be assessed in the discretion of the court. If the contempt consists of the failure to perform an act in the power of the person to perform and the court finds the person has the present ability to perform the act so ordered, the person may be fined or imprisoned until its performance.

(e) Limitations. The court shall not suspend any part of a punitive sanction based upon the performance or non-performance of any future acts. The court may reconsider any punitive sanction. Probation shall not be permitted as a condition of any punitive sanction. Remedial and punitive sanctions may be combined by the court, provided appropriate procedures are followed relative to each type of sanction and findings are made to support the adjudication of both types of sanctions.

(f) Appeal. For the purposes of appeal, an order deciding the issue of contempt and sanctions shall be final.

Annotator's note. Since C.R.C.P. 107, is similar to §§ 166 and 356 through 369 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant cases construing those sections have been included in the annotations to this rule.

This rule applies to both civil and criminal contempt. In re Stone, 703 P.2d 1319 (Colo. App. 1985).

As part of its inherent authority to issue orders that are necessary for the performance of judicial functions, a court has the power to enforce obedience to its orders through contempt sanctions. People v. McGlotten, 134 P.3d 487 (Colo. App. 2005).

The power to punish for contempt is a judicial power within the meaning of the constitution, and it belongs exclusively to the courts except in cases where the constitution confers such power upon some other body. People v. Swena, 88 Colo. 337, 296 P. 271 (1931).

A finding of contempt is within the discretion of the trial court, and its ruling will not be disturbed on appeal absent an abuse of discretion. In re Gomez, 728 P.2d 747 (Colo. App. 1986); In re Roberts, 757 P.2d 1108 (Colo. App. 1988).

Nothing in this rule or the forcible entry and detainer (FED) statute precludes the remedy of contempt in an FED action under appropriate circumstances. Hartsel Springs Ranch v. Cross Slash Ranch, 179 P.3d 237 (Colo. App. 2007).

A finding of contempt can be brought under this rule and proved with evidence other than jury deliberation, provided the prosecution can show beyond a reasonable doubt the following elements: (1) The prospective juror knowingly and willfully gave an untruthful answer or deliberately failed to disclose information during voir dire in response to a specific question asked; (2) the purpose of the juror's untruthful answer or nondisclosure was to gain acceptance on the jury and to obstruct the administration of justice; and (3) the juror's untruthful answer or nondisclosure did obstruct the administration of justice. People v. Kriho, 996 P.2d 158 (Colo. App. 1999).

Court must make findings in both types of contempt procedures. For contempt in the presence of the court, the judgment must recite the facts constituting the contempt. For contempt out of the presence of the court, the judgment must include, among other considerations, a finding that the court's order has not been complied with. In re McGinnis, 778 P.2d 281 (Colo. App. 1989).

The power to punish for contempt is inherent in all courts. Allen v. Bailey, 91 Colo. 260, 14 P.2d 1087 (1932).

Jurisdiction to punish contempt rests solely in contemned court; no court can try a contempt against another. Gonzales v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1981).

A court's right of self-preservation is not limited by statutory enumeration of causes of contempts. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880).

The power to punish for contempt should be used sparingly, with caution, deliberation, and due regard to constitutional rights; it should be exercised only when necessary to prevent actual, direct obstruction of, or interference with, the administration of justice. In re People in Interest of Murley, 124 Colo. 581, 239 P.2d 706 (1951); Conway v. Conway, 134 Colo. 79, 299 P.2d 509 (1956).

Intent to interfere with administration of justice not required for contempt finding; rather, the intent is a guide to be used by the trial court in exercising its discretion to punish. In re Stone, 703 P.2d 1319 (Colo. App. 1985).

This rule does not purport to limit the application of contempt to parties, officers of the court, or those subject to direct orders. Rather, the rule defines contempt broadly to include any conduct by any person that obstructs or interferes with judicial proceedings. In re Lopez, 109 P.3d 1021 (Colo. App. 2004).

Correction officials are officers of the court whose compliance with a mittimus directing them to take custody of a juvenile could be enforced by a contempt proceeding. People in Interest of S.C., 802 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1989).

Judge conducting a settlement conference has the same authority to impose sanctions as the trial judge for conduct related to the settlement conference which interferes with the functions of the court. Halaby, McCrea & Cross v. Hoffman, 831 P.2d 902 (Colo. 1992).

Language in this rule authorizing district court to sanction an "officer of the court" does not include a judge who is presiding over the same case in which the alleged contempt has taken place. People v. Proffitt, 865 P.2d 929 (Colo. App. 1993).

A remedial contempt order only describes the means by which the contempt can be purged and the sanctions that will be in effect until the contempt is purged. Other than costs and reasonable attorney fees, a trial court is without authority to require, as a remedial sanction, monetary payments that do not force compliance with or performance of a court order. Sec. Investor Prot. Corp. v. First Entm't Holding Corp., 36 P.3d 175 (Colo. App. 2001).

Attorney fees can be awarded under section (d)(2) only as a component of remedial sanctions; however, under section (a)(1)(5), a remedial sanction must include a purge clause. Where the contemnor commits a one-time violation, incapable of being purged, attorney fees may not be assessed as a remedial sanction. Thus, a punitive sanction, such as a fine or imprisonment, is the only avenue for punishment. No remedial sanction was imposed, nor could one have been. The CAT scan contempt constituted a one-time violation of a 2007 order committed over a year before father even raised the issue with the court. By that time, mother could not undo what she had done. In re Webb, 284 P.3d 107 (Colo. App. 2011).

A pro se attorney litigant is not necessarily precluded from an attorney fee award under either section (d)(2) of this rule or § 13-17-102 in a contempt proceeding. Wimmershoff v. Finger, 74 P.3d 529 (Colo. App. 2003).

An alleged contemnor who is indigent has the right to court-appointed counsel if a court initiates a contempt proceeding and uses a jail sentence as an available remedial sanction. In re A.C.B., 2022 COA 3, 507 P.3d 1078.

Not error for defendants' counsel to have been permitted to prosecute the contempt proceedings. Conduct that is found to be offensive to the authority and dignity of the court pursuant to this rule is not criminal conduct, and contempt is not a statutory criminal offense. The power to impose punitive sanctions for such conduct is an inherent and indispensable power of the court. It is not derived from statute and exists independent of legislative authority. Eichhorn v. Kelley, 111 P.3d 544 (Colo. App. 2004).

Lack of an express grant of authority in the Colorado Rules for Magistrates to award attorney fees on review does not divest or otherwise curtail the district court's already existing authority to make such an award under section (d)(2). In re Naekel, 181 P.3d 1177 (Colo. App. 2008).

Applied in Catron v. Catron, 40 Colo. App. 476, 577 P.2d 322 (1978); Cavanaugh v. State, Dept. of Soc. Servs., 644 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); People v. Coyle, 654 P.2d 815 (Colo. 1982); Menin v. County Court, 697 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1984).

II. DEFINITION.

A. In General.

Contempt consists as well in the manner of the person committing it as in the subject-matter of its foundation. Matters which, if true, would in their very nature be scandalous may be presented, hinted at, or brought to the attention of the court in so respectful a manner that no judge would ever think to construe a contempt therefrom; while, on the other hand, it is easy to see when, under the guise and pretense of setting out privilege and necessary matters, circumstances are detailed, and scandalous and insulting charges and innuendos are made and insinuated upon pretended "information and belief" in manner that bears the unmistakable earmarks of malice and deliberate contempt. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880).

The question of contempt does not depend on intention, although, where the contempt was intended, this is an aggravating feature which goes to the gravamen of the offense. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880); In re People in Interest of Murley, 124 Colo. 581, 239 P.2d 706 (1951).

Rule is applicable to criminal contempt. This rule clearly includes a definition encompassing, and procedures governing, both civil and criminal contempt. People v. Razatos, 699 P.2d 970 (Colo. 1985).

Distinction between civil and criminal contempts. Contempts of court are civil where they consist in the disobedience of some judicial order entered for the benefit or advantage of another party to the proceeding and criminal where there are acts disrespectful to the court or its process, or obstructing the administration of justice, or tending to bring the court into disrepute. Wyatt v. People, 17 Colo. 252, 28 P. 961 (1892).

Two types of civil contempt are recognized: One, consisting of a present refusal to perform an act in the power of the person to perform, which normally constitutes injury to others for whose benefit it is required; the other, conduct which is derogatory to the authority or dignity of the court. In the former case, the court may order the respondent imprisoned, not for a definite time, but until he performs the act which he is commanded and is able to perform; in the latter case, the court may order punishment to vindicate the dignity of the court by fine or imprisonment, or both, which should be definite as to amount and time, regardless of subsequent compliance with the court order. In the former case, the court must, upon hearing, make a finding both of the facts constituting contempt and of a present duty and ability to perform; in the latter case, the court must make a finding of facts constituting misbehavior and that the conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. In re People in Interest of Murley, 124 Colo. 581, 239 P.2d 706 (1951).

Rules for civil contempt may guide, but do not control, procedures for prosecuting criminal contempt. People v. Tyer, 796 P.2d 15 (Colo. App. 1990).

B. Misbehavior.

There is no exact rule to define such contempts; but any disorderly conduct calculated to interrupt the proceedings; any disrespect or insolent behavior toward the judges presiding; any breach of order, decency, decorum, either by parties and persons connected with the tribunal, or by strangers present; or, a fortiori, any assault made in view of the court is punishable in this summary way. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880).

Contempt by press. Courts have the inherent power to summarily convict and punish for a contempt of court those responsible for articles published in reference to a cause pending when such articles are calculated to interfere with the due administration of justice in such cause. Neither the statutes nor the constitution present any barrier to the exercise of such powers, and the power to punish summarily in such cases is essential to the very existence of a court, since the contrary rule would place it in the power of a vicious person to so conduct himself as to prevent any kind of a trial. Cooper v. People ex rel. Wyatt, 13 Colo. 337, 22 P. 790 (1889).

The press may without liability to punishment for contempt challenge, in the interest of the public good, the conduct of judges and other court officers and also of parties, jurors, and witnesses in connection with causes that have been wholly determined. It may also fairly and reasonably review and comment upon court proceedings from day to day as they take place. Cooper v. People ex rel. Wyatt, 13 Colo. 337, 22 P. 790 (1889).

C. Disobedience of Court Orders.

Law reviews. For article, "The Enforcement of Divorce Decrees in Colorado", see 21 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 364 (1949).

Refusal to obey an order of court entered in connection with a criminal investigation is a criminal contempt. Mainland v. People, 111 Colo. 198, 139 P.2d 366 (1943).

In order for court to enter punitive order in a criminal contempt proceeding, the court must find that the alleged contemner's behavior constitutes noncompliance with the court order and that such conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. Griffin v. Jackson, 759 P.2d 839 (Colo. App. 1988).

Where an order of the court is made in a civil action, its violation constitutes a civil, not a criminal, contempt. Zobel v. People ex rel. Kyle, 49 Colo. 142, 111 P. 846 (1910).

Disobedience of a lawful order made by the court for the benefit of a private litigant comes clearly within this rule. Zobel v. People ex rel. Kyle, 49 Colo. 142, 111 P. 846 (1910).

Contempt of supreme court rule is punishable and enforceable by lower court before whom contempt occurred. Wooden v. Park Sch. District, 748 P.2d 1311 (Colo. App. 1987).

A person who has actual notice of an injunctive order violates it at his peril. People ex rel. Darby v. District Court, 19 Colo. 343, 35 P. 731 (1894).

Contempt proceedings are equally available to enforce a judgment determining the property rights of the parties to a divorce proceeding, as are orders for the payment of alimony, counsel fees, and other costs. Harvey v. Harvey, 153 Colo. 15, 384 P.2d 265 (1963).

Court may exercise power of contempt to enforce orders entered in a dissolution of marriage proceeding. Gonzales v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1981).

A district court which has entered a decree of dissolution possesses continuing in personam and subject matter jurisdiction to enforce its child support orders by punishing a noncomplying obligor for contempt of court. Gonzales v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1981).

There is a distinction between a contempt proceeding and an action to collect accrued alimony or support installments. Hauck v. Schuck, 143 Colo. 324, 353 P.2d 79 (1960).

One who refuses to pay money belonging to an estate into court in compliance with a judicial order is guilty of civil contempt. Munson v. Luxford, 95 Colo. 12, 34 P.2d 91 (1934).

Where the contempt order is based on the failure of the husband to obtain drug counseling, the order is remedial in nature and the trial court must specify how the husband may purge himself of that contempt. In re Zebedee, 778 P.2d 694 (Colo. App. 1988).

Post-dissolution contempt proceeding to enforce permanent orders is remedial in nature if the court's order imposes remedial sanctions such as an attorney fees award, a requirement to pay amounts due plus arrearages, and the initial suspension of a sentence to imprisonment, but the order does not contain language concerning vindication of the court's authority and dignity. In re Lodeski, 107 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2004).

Court reporters may be held in contempt for failing to produce transcripts in a timely manner. People v. McGlotten, 134 P.3d 487 (Colo. App. 2005).

Constructive contempt. Where a court having jurisdiction has ordered the payment of money into the registry of the court and the person to whom the order is directed fails to make the payment as commanded and contempt proceedings are instituted, the alleged contempt is constructive or indirect. Urbancich v. Mayberry, 124 Colo. 311, 236 P.2d 535 (1951).

The violation of the term of a decree in a quiet-title action is not contempt of court unless the decree contained a mandatory or prohibitive provision. McMullin v. City & County of Denver, 125 Colo. 231, 242 P.2d 240 (1952).

Interference with a water commissioner in the discharge of his official duties does not constitute contempt of court within this rule declaring disobedience to any lawful writ, order, rule, or process issued by the court to be a contempt, since he is not an officer of the court in which the decree of priorities is entered under which he is distributing water, being appointed by the governor and, to a certain extent, being under the control and direction of the irrigation division engineer and the state engineer. Roberson v. People ex rel. Soule, 40 Colo. 119, 90 P. 79 (1907).

No contempt where one is unable to comply with court order. There was insufficient evidence, as a matter of law, to support the conclusion of the judge that the respondents had neglected or refused to comply with the writs of habeas corpus, which was the contempt with which they were charged, where the respondents could not produce children in court against the wishes of the mother, who had continuous control and custody. Eatchel v. Lanphere, 170 Colo. 545, 463 P.2d 457 (1970).

A mittimus issued by the district court ordering corrections officials to take custody of state prisoners is not a basis for contempt where the corrections officials lack the ability to admit the prisoners. People v. Lockhart, 699 P.2d 1332 (Colo. 1985).

Correction officials were guilty of contempt for disobeying a mittimus directing them to take custody of a juvenile, where their duty to take custody of the juvenile was statutorily mandated and adequate funds would have been available throughout the juvenile's period of commitment to enable the officials to take custody of the juvenile. Under such circumstances, the existence of a blanket administrative policy of refusing admittance to such juveniles, which was instituted because the department was running out of money, is not a defense. People in Interest of S.C., 802 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1989).

Insufficient basis for contempt and abuse of trial court's discretion where attorney made a single comment, "Sir, it does not.", to the judge concerning a reference in the Code of Professional Responsibility. The test is whether or not the comment constitutes an obstruction of the court's administration of justice or operates to bring the judiciary into disrespect or disregard. Hill v. Boatright, 890 P.2d 180 (Colo. App. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds sub nom. Boatright v. Derr, 919 P.2d 221 (Colo. 1996).

Record does not support judge's finding that defense counsel violated the court's previous rulings. Therefore, the court abused its discretion in finding defense counsel in contempt. People v. Jones, 262 P.3d 982 (Colo. App. 2011).

Contempt of a court order does not supercede requirement to set a hearing pursuant to § 13-54.5-109 (1)(a). The court may not sanction a party for his or her failure to comply with a court order by refusing to set or by suspending a hearing on an objection or claim of exemption. The setting of a hearing is mandatory, not discretionary. Borrayo v. Lefever, 159 P.3d 657 (Colo. App. 2006).

Bankruptcy stay applicable to civil contempt action for post-divorce enforcement of separation agreement. The nature of the contempt action is determined by review of the purpose and character of the sanctions imposed against the contemnor. Where the contemnor had the ability to request reconsideration of the jail time once payment was made; the sanctions were designed to force payment to a third party, not to uphold the dignity of the court; the court imposed attorney fees for the enforcement proceeding; and the court's primary consideration was the impact on third parties, the contempt action was remedial in nature. In re Weis, 232 P.3d 789 (Colo. 2010).

Contemnor cannot turn an enforcement action into a criminal matter outside of the automatic bankruptcy stay simply by requesting punitive sanctions. In re Weis, 232 P.3d 789 (Colo. 2010).

Arbitrator's award is not a "court order" for purposes of contempt statute. Where neither party petitioned the district court for an order confirming the award, the court erred in finding husband guilty of indirect contempt for failing to comply with arbitrator's order to take the parties' children to therapy. In re Leverett, 2012 COA 69, 318 P.3d 31.

III. DIRECT CONTEMPT.

In the absence of statutory regulation, courts may deal with matter of contempt in a summary manner. Guiraud v. Nevada Canal Co., 79 Colo. 289, 245 P. 485 (1926).

This rule permits summary punishment of a contemner for acts committed in the court's presence. DeMott v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 531, 486 P.2d 451 (1971).

The summary contempt power may be used to punish acts or conduct which take place in the immediate presence of the court and are witnessed by the trial judge. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 180, 512 P.2d 266 (1973).

The summary contempt power is necessary to insure and preserve decorum in the courtroom. People v. Ellis, 189 Colo. 378, 540 P.2d 1082 (1975).

The summary contempt power is ample to prevent disruption and provides the trial judge with the power to punish contemptuous conduct which occurs in his presence. People v. Ellis, 189 Colo. 378, 540 P.2d 1082 (1975).

Design of contempt power. The power of a judge to punish contempt committed in his presence is not designed to protect his own dignity or person, but to protect the rights of litigants and the public by ensuring that the administration of justice shall not be thwarted or obstructed. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 180, 512 P.2d 266 (1973).

Summary punishment for contempt is permitted because a court could not properly administer justice if disturbances within the courtroom could not be suppressed by immediate punishment. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 180, 512 P.2d 266 (1973).

Punishment for contempt can only be imposed summarily when a direct contempt is committed; that is, when the judge has personal knowledge of the act which has disrupted court proceedings or demonstrated the contemner's disrespect for the court. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 180, 512 P.2d 266 (1973).

Summary punishment for contempt of court must be strictly confined to those instances where the contemptuous conduct occurs in open court and is seen or heard by the trial judge. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 180, 512 P.2d 266 (1973); Dooley v. District Court, 811 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1991).

Attorney's alleged lack of preparation for a hearing was indirect, not direct, contempt, and therefore summary punishment was improper. Dooley v. District Court, 811 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1991).

Fact that judge ordered a hearing two days after occurrence of allegedly contemptuous behavior was evidence that judge considered the contempt indirect rather than direct. Dooley v. District Court, 811 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1991).

A court may hold a person in direct contempt only when the court has either given prior warning that a person's behavior, if repeated, will constitute contempt and the contemnor persists in such behavior or the person's conduct is so extreme that no warning is necessary. People v. Aleem, 149 P.3d 765 (Colo. 2007).

If conduct amounts to a direct contempt committed in the presence of the court, the record must show, with reference to the matter allegedly constituting the contempt, what actually happened with particularity. Pittman v. District Court, 149 Colo. 380, 369 P.2d 85 (1962).

Where full evidentiary hearing not necessary. Where the judge is aware of the contemptuous conduct from personal observation, where no lawful justification exists for the contemptuous behavior, and where the penalty is not of the type that can be mitigated by any evidence offered, a full-fledged evidentiary hearing is not necessary and summary procedure is appropriate. People v. Lucero, 196 Colo. 276, 584 P.2d 1208 (1978).

Where a judgment does not recite the facts constituting the contempt, the judgment is not properly supported. Handler v. Gordon, 108 Colo. 501, 120 P.2d 205 (1941).

This rule requires the order of commitment to recite the facts only where summary punishment is inflicted. Shore v. People, 26 Colo. 516, 59 P. 49 (1899); Eykelboom v. People, 71 Colo. 318, 206 P. 388 (1922).

Cases of criminal contempt are not within the provisions of this rule requiring the order of commitment to recite the facts only where summary punishment is inflicted. Eykelboom v. People, 71 Colo. 318, 206 P. 388 (1922).

For cases of criminal contempt for refusal to answer to grand jury question analogized to this rule, see Smaldone v. People, 158 Colo. 7, 405 P.2d 208 (1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 1012 (1966); see also Salardino v. People, 158 Colo. 12, 405 P.2d 211 (1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 1012 (1966); Quintana v. People, 158 Colo. 14, 405 P.2d 212 (1965), cert. denied, 382 U.S. 1013 (1966); Smaldone v. People, 158 Colo. 16, 404 P.2d 276 (1965); Smaldone v. People, 158 Colo. 21, 404 P.2d 279 (1965); Tomeo v. People, 158 Colo. 26, 404 P.2d 287 (1965).

Trial judge has power to punish summarily for contempt any lawyer who in his presence willfully contributes to disorder or disruption in the courtroom. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 180, 512 P.2d 266 (1973).

Voluntary appearance in court subjects one to contempt power of court. Where defendant was served an unsigned copy of summons and default judgment was therefore rendered invalid, defendant's voluntary appearance in court submitted him nevertheless to the jurisdiction of the court and would support a contempt judgment where he was found to have committed perjury in the presence of the court. Brown v. Amen, 147 Colo. 468, 364 P.2d 735 (1961).

Contempt sentence of contemnor who has left the court will be upheld. Where the contempt is a direct one made in the presence of the court and the court proceeds at once to try the contemnor and sentence him, such sentence will be upheld, though made after the contemnor has left the presence of the court. Shotkin v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R., 124 Colo. 141, 235 P.2d 990 (1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 906 (1952).

Refusal of witness receiving immunity to supply grand jury testimony. A witness who, despite receiving immunity, persists before a trial court judge in refusing on fifth amendment grounds to supply grand jury testimony, commits contempt "in the presence of the court" and may be punished summarily. People v. Lucero, 196 Colo. 276, 584 P.2d 1208 (1978).

A court has the right to punish one summarily for contempt for manifest perjury committed in the court's presence where it knows judicially that his testimony was false. Eykelboom v. People, 71 Colo. 318, 206 P. 388 (1922); Murer v. Rogowski, 29 Colo. App. 235, 480 P.2d 853 (1971).

In order that perjury may be a contempt of court it must appear that: (1) The alleged false answers had an obstructive effect, (2) that there existed judicial knowledge of the falsity of the testimony, and (3) that the question was pertinent to the issue. Handler v. Gordon, 111 Colo. 234, 140 P.2d 622 (1943).

Perjurious statements do not by themselves substantially obstruct or halt a trial or demonstrate contempt for the judicial process if the court cannot judicially know that the testimony is false without the presentation of collateral evidence to establish such falsity. Murer v. Rogowski, 29 Colo. App. 235, 480 P.2d 853 (1971).

Where the trial court's finding of perjury is based on collateral evidence introduced by a party to impeach the other party's testimony, and not upon anything inherently incredible or self-contradictory in the other party's testimony itself, such perjury does not have the effect of substantially obstructing or halting the judicial process, and thus a contempt finding would be in error. Murer v. Rogowski, 29 Colo. App. 235, 480 P.2d 853 (1971).

Where a party is using delaying tactics in his request for continuance, the court should deny request rather than holding him in contempt. Altobella v. Priest, 153 Colo. 309, 385 P.2d 585 (1963).

Facts would not support a finding of direct contempt, where no warning was given at the time defendant allegedly made offensive statement to the court, and the primary factual foundation consisted of the defendant's responses to the courts questions. People v. Ellis, 189 Colo. 378, 540 P.2d 1082 (1975).

Facts supported finding of direct contempt when defendant admittedly made offensive statement during the course of proceedings even though obscenity was directed toward counsel for the People and merely overheard by the court. There was no abuse of discretion by the trial court given the fact that the defendant admitted it was inappropriate and an affront to the dignity of the court and its proceedings, and given the fact that defendant was an attorney admitted to the Bar. People v. Holmes, 967 P.2d 192 (Colo. App. 1998).

Oral stipulations rescinded. Behavior was not direct contempt punishable by summary proceedings, where all respondent did was to rescind a previous oral stipulation entered into in open court by directing her attorney to repudiate the stipulation. Ealy v. District Court, 189 Colo. 308, 539 P.2d 1244 (1975).

Provision in this rule that judgments shall be "final" refers only to extent of review. Cooper v. People ex rel. Wyatt, 13 Colo. 337, 22 P. 790 (1889).

IV. INDIRECT CONTEMPT.

Law reviews. For article, "The Nuts and Bolts of Collecting Support", see 19 Colo. Law. 1595 (1990).

Contempt, which does not occur in the presence of the court, is either criminal or civil, depending on the purpose and character of the sanctions sought to be imposed in the citation. People v. Razatos, 699 P.2d 970 (Colo. 1985); Groves v. District Court, 806 P.2d 947 (Colo. 1991).

A delay in trial caused by counsel's preparation of jury instructions should have been evaluated as indirect contempt rather than direct contempt because the court did not observe or hear any of the offending behavior. The order for sanctions was set aside because none of the procedures for a hearing and the imposition of sanctions was followed by the trial court. Martinez v. Affordable Hous. Network, Inc., 109 P.3d 983 (Colo. App. 2004), rev'd on other grounds, 121 P.3d 1201 (Colo. 2005).

This rule is applicable to civil contempt for violating an injunction. Shore v. People, 26 Colo. 516, 59 P. 49 (1899).

Those to be adjudged in contempt must be subject to court's jurisdiction. Where contempt citations were issued to officers of home for the mentally defective because they had refused admission of child ordered there by court, said officials were parties to no proceeding and had not submitted themselves to jurisdiction of court and consequently were not amenable to its commands. People ex rel. Dunbar v. County Court, 128 Colo. 374, 262 P.2d 550 (1953).

A court which acquires personal jurisdiction over party in divorce proceedings has continuing "in personam" jurisdiction to modify child support orders and to enforce original custody orders through exercise power of contempt; therefore, personal service on party out of state is sufficient and party's failure to appear does not deprive court of jurisdiction or power to punish for contempt. Brown v. Brown, 31 Colo. App. 557, 506 P.2d 386 (1972), modified, 183 Colo. 356, 516 P.2d 1129 (1974).

Compliance with the procedure governing contempt matters is essential before jurisdiction to punish for contempt attaches. Urbancich v. Mayberry, 124 Colo. 311, 236 P.2d 535 (1951).

The procedural provisions of section (c) are not exclusive. In re Peper, 38 Colo. App. 177, 554 P.2d 727 (1976).

There is no fixed procedural formula for contempt proceedings; rather the polestar in determining the validity of contempt procedures is whether due process of law is accorded. In re Peper, 38 Colo. App. 177, 554 P.2d 727 (1976).

Section (c) does not mandate a conference with opposing counsel before filing a motion for an indirect contempt citation, although doing so could be useful, or even advisable. In re Cyr, 186 P.3d 88 (Colo. App. 2008).

The provision in this rule, requiring an affidavit of facts constituting contempt, is designed to meet actual contemptuous acts committed out of the presence of the court; it has no application to contempt committed in the immediate presence of the court. Jensen v. Jensen, 96 Colo. 151, 40 P.2d 238 (1935).

A constructive contempt must be brought to the court's attention by affidavit; this affidavit must state facts which, if established, would constitute a contempt, and if it does not do so the court is without jurisdiction to proceed. Wyatt v. People, 17 Colo. 252, 28 P. 961 (1892).

This provision as to affidavits is simply declaratory common-law practice, and the rule concerning the materiality of the affidavit should prevail to the same extent in the absence of statute. Wyatt v. People, 17 Colo. 252, 28 P. 961 (1892).

The affidavit must contain an averment that the charges were false as well as malicious. Fort v. Coop. Farmers' Exch., Inc., 81 Colo. 431, 256 P. 319 (1927).

It is not necessary that the affidavit charging the offense set forth the evidence by which the general declarations therein are to be established; general declarations or ultimate facts only are required. Guiraud v. Nevada Canal Co., 79 Colo. 289, 245 P. 485 (1926); In re Roberts, 757 P.2d 1108 (Colo. App. 1988).

If the petition and affidavit state facts which if true show that a contempt was committed, the court acquires jurisdiction, otherwise not. Fort v. People ex rel. Coop. Farmers' Exch., Inc., 81 Colo. 420, 256 P. 325 (1927).

Where affidavit fails to state facts showing contempt, court is without jurisdiction. When an affidavit is presented as a basis of a proceeding for contempt, the court must, in the first instance, examine the same, and, if the facts presented do not show that a contempt has been committed, the court will be without jurisdiction to proceed; but if the facts are sufficient, the court may take jurisdiction, and its subsequent orders will not be reviewed for mere errors. Cooper v. People ex rel. Wyatt, 13 Colo. 337, 22 P. 790 (1889).

Notice of charge required. A contempt sanction may not be imposed until the alleged contemner has received notice of the charge, including the nature of the act of contempt that he is alleged to have committed. Griffin v. Jackson, 759 P.2d 839 (Colo. App. 1988); Dooley v. District Court, 811 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1991).

Right to notice of purpose of hearing. Under section (c), a defendant has the right to have notice of the purpose of the hearing and to have an opportunity to be heard. Wright v. District Court, 192 Colo. 553, 561 P.2d 15 (1977).

Essential to due process in contempt proceedings is the right of one to know that the purpose of the hearing is the ascertainment of whether he is guilty of contempt. In re Peper, 38 Colo. App. 177, 554 P.2d 727 (1976).

A judgment of contempt entered without affidavit, notice, or hearing is void for want of jurisdiction. Pomeranz v. Class, 82 Colo. 173, 257 P. 1086 (1927).

Direct criminal contempts are punishable summarily without affidavit, notice, rule to show cause, or other process. Shotkin v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R., 124 Colo. 141, 235 P.2d 990 (1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 906 (1952).

Jurisdiction over a criminal contempt charge was not lost because it was initiated by the filing of a verified information rather than by the citation procedure under this rule, which would have been the better practice. People v. Barron, 677 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1984).

Motion may be included in affidavit. An affidavit containing a statement equivalent to a motion for the issuance of a citation is a sufficient "motion supported by affidavit"; the fact that the motion is included in the affidavit instead of being presented as a separate document does not invalidate it. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 115 Colo. 501, 175 P.2d 387 (1946).

Court must issue a citation in order to obtain jurisdiction. To obtain jurisdiction to punish for contempt based on interference with the execution of legal process or the administration of justice, it is necessary for the trial court to issue a citation commanding the respondents to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for interfering with the execution of legal process or obstructing the administration of justice. Where this is not done, the trial court has no power to punish for contempt based on the grounds of interference and obstruction.

Eatchel v. Lanphere, 170 Colo. 545, 463 P.2d 457 (1970).

The accused can be convicted of no contempt other than that charged in the citation, since the citation for contempt plays a very important role in enabling the person charged to understandingly shape his course and prepare his defense. Eatchel v. Lanphere, 170 Colo. 545, 463 P.2d 457 (1970); Wright v. District Court, 192 Colo. 553, 561 P.2d 15 (1977); Dooley v. District Court, 811 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1991).

Where contempt citation alleged only that attorney failed to prepare for hearing, court's findings referring to attorney's habits in courtroom and in his preparation and filing of motions and briefs could not stand. Dooley v. District Court, 811 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1991).

Even though the citation did not include all of the grounds for contempt that were specified in the verified motion attached to the citation, the court held that the issues specified in the motion could be raised as grounds for contempt because the husband received full notice of them through the motion and was not denied due process. In re Lamutt, 881 P.2d 445 (Colo. App. 1994).

Citation for failing to appear in court as directed is specific enough. A citation reciting that one is to appear on a certain day to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt in accordance with an attached court order citing him for contempt for failure to appear in court as directed is specific enough to enable him either to defend or explain in mitigation his absence from court. Harthun v. District Court, 178 Colo. 118, 495 P.2d 539 (1972).

Hearing necessary for out-of-court contempt. In those cases where the judge did not personally observe the contemptuous conduct, a hearing is necessary to find the facts, and the hearing enables the judge to ascertain the facts of the occurrence and permits the defendant to explain his behavior and offer evidence to mitigate the penalty. People v. Lucero, 196 Colo. 276, 584 P.2d 1208 (1978).

A hearing is essential to due process. When it is clear that matters happened outside the presence of the court, it is necessary to hold a hearing on the contempt charge, for a procedure which accords with due process of law is essential. Harthun v. District Court, 178 Colo. 118, 495 P.2d 539 (1972).

A situation, involving a possible indirect contempt, requires, as a minimum, notice of the charge, the right to be represented by counsel, a hearing, the right to call and confront witnesses, and specific findings by the court. Losavio v. District Court, 182 Colo. 180, 512 P.2d 266 (1973).

Due process is a sham when a judge is both prosecutor and judge in an indirect contempt case. Harthun v. District Court, 178 Colo. 118, 495 P.2d 539 (1972).

Procedure held violative of provisions of this rule. Where the only citation served upon the defendant was that which commanded him to appear before the court “for examination upon oath on the matter of said complaint and to abide by the orders of this court entered upon said hearing”; at the time he appeared he was not informed by the citation that he was being subjected to proceedings in contempt; no order of the court had as yet been entered requiring any act on his part; on the date of his appearance, the court at one and the same time, entered the order requiring the performance of an act within 30 days, and erroneously adjudged that a warrant for the imprisonment might issue at the expiration of that time if the act commanded was not performed; this procedure was in violation of the mandatory provisions of this rule. Urbancich v. Mayberry, 124 Colo. 311, 236 P.2d 535 (1951).

Failure of defendant to appear as ordered by the court may constitute an indirect contempt of court. As an indirect contempt, the procedure prescribed by sections (c) and (d) must be followed. People v. Madonna, 651 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1982).

Attorney’s appearance by telephone rather than in person at court hearing constituted indirect contempt instead of direct contempt. Attorney did nothing during telephone call to disrupt court proceedings and attorney’s alleged violation was her failure to appear at a scheduled hearing. In re Johnson, 939 P.2d 479 (Colo. App. 1997).

An alleged assault by a third party could in no way constitute contempt by defendant either within or without the presence of the court, even if he “instigated” or was indirectly involved in the attack, such behavior (occurring in front of the courthouse, outside of the judge’s view) would in no event be punishable under the summary procedures of this rule. Duran v. District Court, 190 Colo. 272, 545 P.2d 1365 (1976).

Rule held not complied with. McMullin v. City & County of Denver, 125 Colo. 231, 242 P.2d 240 (1952).

V. TRIAL AND PUNISHMENT.

Law reviews. For note, “Trial by Jury in Contempt Cases”, see 2 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 115 (1930). For article, “Expediting Court Procedure”, see 10 Dicta 113 (1933).

Two types of civil contempt are provided for by section (d). Marshall v. Marshall, 35 Colo. App. 442, 536 P.2d 845 (1975), modified, 191 Colo. 165, 551 P.2d 709 (1976).

The first type of civil contempt consists of a present refusal to perform an act in the power of the person to perform, normally constituting injury to others for whose benefit the act is required. Where such contempt is found, a court may enter a remedial order to enforce obedience consisting of an imposition of imprisonment, not for a definite time, but only until respondent performs the act which he is commanded and is able to perform. However, before a court can make a finding of contempt which would justify a remedial order, it must make findings which are supported by evidence that there is a refusal to perform the act in question, that there is a present duty to perform such act, and that there is a present ability to perform. Marshall v. Marshall, 35 Colo. App. 442, 536 P.2d 845 (1975), modified, 191 Colo. 165, 551 P.2d 709 (1976); In re Hartt, 43 Colo. App. 335, 603 P.2d 970 (1979).

To justify punishment for civil contempt consisting of a refusal to perform a required act for the benefit of others, the trial court must upon hearing make a finding both of the facts constituting contempt and of the present duty and ability to perform. Marshall v. Marshall, 191 Colo. 165, 551 P.2d 709 (1976).

There must be two findings of present duty and ability to pay: one which supports the contempt finding, and a second which justifies the imposition of a remedial order. In re Hartt, 43 Colo. App. 335, 603 P.2d 970 (1979).

The second type of civil contempt consists of conduct derogatory to the authority or dignity of the court. For such contempt, the court may enter a punitive order to vindicate its dignity, imposing a fine or imprisonment, or both, but that punishment should be definite as to amount and time, regardless of subsequent compliance with the court order. The court must, however, make findings of fact which are supported by evidence that respondent’s conduct constitutes misbehavior and that such conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. Furthermore, before a court may consider the issue of contempt which would support a punitive order the citation issued to the respondent must state that punishment may be imposed to vindicate the dignity of the court. Marshall v. Marshall, 35 Colo. App. 442, 536 P.2d 845 (1975), modified, 191 Colo. 165, 551 P.2d 709 (1976).

Requirement of finding that conduct offends court’s dignity constitutionally grounded. Although there is no fixed procedural formula for contempt proceeding, the requirement that there be an explicit finding by the trial court that the contemner’s conduct offends the dignity of the court is grounded in constitutional principles. Lobb v. Hodges, 641 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1982).

Finding need not be in exact language of rule. Although a trial court need not make a finding in the exact language of section (d), i.e., “to vindicate the dignity of the court,” nevertheless, the language used must be sufficient to comply with the rule. Lobb v. Hodges, 641 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1982).

Contempt proceedings should accord due process. Although there is no fixed procedural formula for contempt proceedings, so that technical nicety is not required, courts should improvise a procedure which accords with due process of law. Essential to due process in contempt proceedings is the right of one to know that the purpose of a hearing is the ascertainment of whether he is guilty of contempt. Austin v. City & County of Denver, 156 Colo. 180, 397 P.2d 743 (1964).

A court violates an attorney's due process rights if the court does not provide reasonable notice of the charges and an opportunity to be heard when it delays final adjudication and sentencing on a contempt charge until after the trial that created the contempt situation. People v. Jones, 262 P.3d 982 (Colo. App. 2011).

Fifth amendment protection against self-incrimination operates in a contempt proceeding. Griffin v. Western Realty Sales Corp., 665 P.2d 1031 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Razatos, 699 P.2d 970 (Colo. 1985).

Sixth amendment right to be present at trial applies to criminal contempt proceedings. The conclusions and findings made by a presiding disciplinary judge when the respondent was not present were rejected by the court. While the record indicated that respondent had proper notice of the hearing, it contained no affirmative waiver of his right to be present, and no findings that respondent knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily waived his right to be present and participate at the hearing. In re Bauer, 30 P.3d 185 (Colo. 2001).

Although punitive contempt is not a common law or statutory crime, the possibility of incarceration associated with such proceedings is sufficient to require recognition and protection of the rights afforded to criminal defendants, including the right not to be called as a witness. In re Alverson, 981 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1999).

Magistrate's error of requiring father to take the stand to invoke the privilege on a question by question basis after magistrate had been informed that father would assert the privilege violated father's fifth amendment right not to be called as a witness, and because the magistrate error was not harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, it required reversal of the contempt order. In re Alverson, 981 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1999).

Petitioner is entitled to detailed notice and an opportunity to be heard before a contempt sanction can be imposed against her. Ealy v. District Court, 189 Colo. 308, 539 P.2d 1244 (1975); Wright v. District Court, 192 Colo. 553, 561 P.2d 15 (1977); People in Interest of S.C., 802 P.2d 1101 (Colo. App. 1989).

Defendant's due process rights were not violated when trial court entered judgment in the amount of accrued fines under contempt order without conducting an additional hearing. Due process entitles contemnor to an evidentiary hearing only if, in response to county's motion, he raised a genuine issue of material fact as to whether he complied with original order. Court's November 2003 contempt order put defendant on notice that remedial fines would accrue until he had complied with original July 2003 order, and county's motion in April 2006 put defendant on notice that fines had accrued for noncompliance with original order and that county had asked court to enter judgment in that amount. Defendant's response to county's motion failed to raise genuine issues of material fact that required trial court to conduct an evidentiary hearing. Bd. of County Comm'rs for Larimer v. Gurtler, 181 P.3d 315 (Colo. App. 2007).

Where a jail sentence may be imposed in a contempt proceeding, the alleged contemnor, if indigent, is entitled to the appointment of counsel. If a husband cited for contempt for failure to make child support payments to his former wife was refused legal services by at least two private attorneys because he was unable to pay requested fee, he was entitled to have his assets examined and considered by court in determining eligibility for court-appointed counsel under supreme court indigency guidelines. In re Wyatt, 728 P.2d 734 (Colo. App. 1986).

The question of whether there was any willful intent to interfere with the administration of justice requires a notice and hearing as a prerequisite to a judgment of contempt. District Att'y v. District Court, 150 Colo. 136, 371 P.2d 271 (1962).

When a trial court renders judgment "regardless of intent", it commits error in failing to determine intent because willful intent to inconvenience and delay the court is essential to a finding of contempt where an attorney fails to appear. Harthun v. District Court, 178 Colo. 118, 495 P.2d 539 (1972).

It is error for a judge who cites one for indirect contempt to also act as trial judge and prosecutor in a later hearing on the charge. Harthun v. District Court, 178 Colo. 118, 495 P.2d 539 (1972).

It is proper to ask a fellow judge to take his place. Where conditions do not make it impracticable, or where the delay may not injure public or private right, a judge called upon to act in a case of contempt in which he is involved may, without flinching from his duty, properly ask that one of his fellow judges take his place. Harthun v. District Court, 178 Colo. 118, 495 P.2d 539 (1972).

A person is entitled to have a different judge hear a contempt proceeding than the judge who issued the contempt charge if there is actual bias or the appearance of bias. The appearance of bias may be shown by a running controversy between the judge and the accused. People v. Jones, 262 P.3d 982 (Colo. App. 2011).

Where the contempt is charged by affidavit and the contemner makes no denial thereof, the court need not examine witnesses, in the absence of a request therefor by the accused. Zobel v. People ex rel. Kyle, 49 Colo. 142, 111 P. 846 (1910).

In any event, the right of trial by jury does not extend to cases of contempt. Cooper v. People ex rel. Wyatt, 13 Colo. 337, 22 P. 790 (1889).

Statutory provisions relating to change of venue have no application to proceedings to punish contempts unless such proceedings are expressly included in the written law. Guiraud v. Nevada Canal Co., 79 Colo. 289, 245 P. 485 (1926).

One charged with contempt of court has no right to a change of venue. Guiraud v. Nevada Canal Co., 79 Colo. 289, 245 P. 485 (1926).

The doctrine of laches is applicable to enforcement procedures for contempt. Hauck v. Schuck, 143 Colo. 324, 353 P.2d 79 (1960).

An accused can be convicted of no contempt other than that charged in the citation. Harthun v. District Court, 178 Colo. 118, 495 P.2d 539 (1972).

An order for attorney's fees is an adjunct of a finding of guilty of contempt, and so an award of attorney's fees by the trial court must be set aside if the judgment of contempt cannot stand. Eatchel v. Lanphere, 170 Colo. 545, 463 P.2d 457 (1970).

Awards of reasonable attorneys' fees to the person damaged by the contemner's behavior are an adjunct of a finding that the contemner is guilty of contempt and are not conditioned upon the ability to pay. In re Weisbart, 39 Colo. App. 115, 564 P.2d 961 (1977).

Imposition of attorney's fees limited. This rule does not authorize imposition of attorney's fees to recompense the contemnor, no matter how inappropriate may be the contempt proceeding initiated by the person claiming damage. Avco Fin. Servs. of Colo., Inc. v. Gonzales, 653 P.2d 751 (Colo. App. 1982).

This rule does not extend beyond authorization for imposition of attorney's fees against a contemnor for the benefit of the person damaged by the contempt. Avco Fin. Servs. of Colo., Inc. v. Gonzales, 653 P.2d 751 (Colo. App. 1982).

Attorney fees cannot be awarded as a punitive sanction in a contempt proceeding. Eichhorn v. Kelley, 56 P.3d 124 (Colo. App. 2002); In re Lopez, 109 P.3d 1021 (Colo. App. 2004).

District court erred in awarding costs and attorney fees under section (d)(1). Sheep grazing activities that resulted in contempt citation were not ongoing at the time of the contempt hearing; they had occurred in the past. Thus contemnor could not purge his contempt because he could not undo what he had done. Therefore, remedial sanctions such as the assessment of costs and attorney fees could not be imposed against contemnor in these circumstances. Section (d)(2) permits the assessment of costs and attorney fees if remedial sanctions are imposed against a contemnor. In contrast, the provisions relating to punitive contempt sanctions under section (d)(1) do not authorize the assessment of costs and attorney fees. Aspen Springs Metro. Dist. v. Keno, 2015 COA 97,716 P.3d 369.

Although attorney fees cannot be awarded as a punitive sanction in a contempt proceeding, attorney fees can be awarded if the case involves an agreement or contract for an award of such fees to the prevailing party. This rule does not preclude the trial court from enforcing a valid fee-shifting agreement. In re Sanchez-Vigil, 151 P.3d 621 (Colo. App. 2006).

Specific findings as to the reasonableness of attorney fees not required. In re Bernardoni, 731 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1986).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding plaintiff costs for travel and meal expenses related to contempt order because the costs were reasonable and necessary. Madison Capital Co., LLC v. Star Acquisition VIII, 214 P.3d 557 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court abused its discretion in awarding plaintiff costs for a client fee related to contempt order because the affidavit submitted for recovery of the fee failed to establish that it was incurred solely for the related litigation. At least some portion of the fee was for general business costs; therefore, the fee is not recoverable. Madison Capital Co., LLC v. Star Acquisition VIII, 214 P.3d 557 (Colo. App. 2009).

Plaintiff's costs and attorney fees incurred in connection with defendants' appeal of contempt order may be awarded under section (d)(2) rule since they were incurred in connection with the contempt proceedings. However, plaintiff's fees and costs incurred in connection with defendants' appeal of award of said attorney fees may not be awarded under section (d)(2) because they were not incurred in connection with the related contempt proceedings. Rather, they were incurred as a consequence of defendants' appeal of the standards applied by the trial court in awarding said fees and costs. Madison Capital Co., LLC v. Star Acquisition VIII, 214 P.3d 557 (Colo. App. 2009).

Words apparently scandalous or offensive, but susceptible of a different construction, may be explained by the speaker or writer, and he be relieved of the charge of contempt on sworn disavowal of intent to commit it; but when the words are necessarily offensive and insulting, such disavowal, while it may excuse, cannot justify. Hughes v. People, 5 Colo. 436 (1880).

No contempt where “not in the power of the person to perform”. Where evidence disclosed that parent was unable to make immediate payment of support for minor child ordered by juvenile court, there was no failure to perform “an act in the power of the person to perform”, and contempt proceeding should have been dismissed. In re People in Interest of Murley, 124 Colo. 581, 239 P.2d 706 (1951).

If the evidence in a contempt proceeding discloses that a party is unable to make the payments required by a support order, there is no refusal to perform an act within his power under section (d) and the contempt proceeding must be dismissed. In re Crowley, 663 P.2d 267 (Colo. App. 1983); McVay v. Johnson, 727 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1986).

Remedial contempt sanctions cannot be imposed on an attorney who failed to pay restitution ordered by the court when the master’s findings did not establish the attorney’s present ability to pay the ordered restitution. People v. Razatos, 699 P.2d 970 (Colo. 1985).

Before a remedial contempt order under section (c) can enter, the court must find that the contemnor has the ability to comply with its order and make findings that justify the imposition of the remedial sanction. Wilkinson v. Bd. of County Comm’rs, 872 P.2d 1269 (Colo. App. 1993); In re Estate of Elliott, 993 P.2d 474 (Colo. 2000).

A court may not impose remedial contempt sanctions without making the required finding of a present ability to comply or without including a purge clause. In re Lodeski, 107 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2004).

Exclusive penalties. Since section (d) precisely delineates the penalties to be assessed for the purpose of vindicating the dignity of the court, the only remedies available are a fine or imprisonment. Blank v. District Court, 190 Colo. 114, 543 P.2d 1255 (1975).

Remedial orders and punitive orders distinguished. Under section (d) of this rule, there is recognized the distinction between a remedial order, the purpose of which is primarily to enforce obedience to a writ, and a punitive order to vindicate the authority of the law and uphold the dignity of the court. In the former case the fine which may be imposed is limited to the damages and expense resulting from the contempt and is payable to the person damaged thereby, and the imprisonment which may be imposed may continue only until the contemnor shall comply with the order of the court. In the latter case the fine or imprisonment is not dependent on damage or subsequent performance but is a matter solely within judicial discretion. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 115 Colo. 501, 175 P.2d 387 (1946).

If punishment for contempt of court is conditioned upon the contemner’s future performance of a duty he has to another person, then the contempt order is no longer punitive, but becomes remedial. In re Crowley, 663 P.2d 267 (Colo. App. 1983); McVay v. Johnson, 727 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1986).

Where sanctions could not be clearly categorized as punitive or remedial, but appeared to contain attributes of both, order was vacated and remanded. People ex rel. Pub. Utils. Comm’n v. Entrup, 143 P.3d 1120 (Colo. App. 2006).

One thousand dollar fine for attorney’s failure to timely file jury instructions is necessary to vindicate dignity of court and is not arbitrary or vindictive. Wooden v. Park Sch. District, 748 P.2d 1311 (Colo. App. 1987).

Proof of willfulness need not predicate a court’s order for remedial contempt sanctions. In re Cyr, 186 P.3d 88 (Colo. App. 2008).

Contempt order cannot be construed to constitute both a punitive and remedial contempt order where single sanction was imposed to compel performance of act. McVay v. Johnson, 727 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1986).

Fine in any amount is permissible for vindication of the dignity of the court, but it is made payable to the court, not to the parties. Brown v. Brown, 183 Colo. 356, 516 P.2d 1129 (1973).

When court levies fine, it must make findings of fact that the parties’ conduct constituted misbehavior which offended the court’s authority and dignity. Bd. of Water Works v. Pueblo Water Works Employees Local 1045, 196 Colo. 308, 586 P.2d 18 (1978).

Imposition of jail sentence could not be sustained when the trial court did not make any finding that appellant had the present ability to comply with its remedial orders for the payment of money. In re Roberts, 757 P.2d 1108 (Colo. App. 1988).

A court may imprison a receiver for contempt for failure to pay over funds as ordered. Taylor v. Taylor, 79 Colo. 487, 247 P. 174 (1926).

Penal sanctions imposed only to prevent obstruction of justice. A court before imposing penal sanctions for contempt should proceed with caution and deliberation as the power should be exercised only when necessary to prevent obstruction or interference with the administration of justice. Lobb v. Hodges, 641 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1982).

Confinement for contempt for longer than six months is constitutionally impermissible unless the person has been given the opportunity for a jury trial. People v. Zamora, 665 P.2d 153 (Colo. App. 1983).

Language of court imposing jail term for punitive contempt complies with rule. Language of trial court imposing jail term for punitive contempt that: "The reason for the punitive finding or punitive order of the court was to vindicate the dignity of this court and I think that vindication is long overdue in this case" was sufficient to comply with the requirements of this rule. In re Joseph, 44 Colo. App. 128, 613 P.2d 344 (1980).

A commitment to jail for contempt is justified for failure to pay alimony and attorneys' fees in a divorce action, but any commitment for failure of the defendant-husband to pay the plaintiff-wife for money loaned is not justified. Harvey v. Harvey, 153 Colo. 15, 384 P.2d 265 (1963).

Trial court can enforce its temporary maintenance and child support orders through punitive contempt proceedings, despite the fact that a judgment had entered on amounts due and not paid under such orders. In re Nussbeck, 974 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1999).

Neither the Colorado Children's Code nor this rule authorizes default judgment as a sanction against a parent for failing to appear at a dependency and neglect adjudicatory hearing. People in Interest of K.J.B., 2014 COA 168, 342 P.3d 597.

An order of imprisonment for making false report held unauthorized. An order imprisoning a quasi-receiver for making false reports, unless she pay a judgment rendered against her based in part, at least, on rents and issues received from the property under claim of right is unauthorized. Taylor v. Taylor, 79 Colo. 487, 247 P. 174 (1926).

One may be imprisoned until he performs instead of a term certain. This rule, by providing that a party guilty of contempt consisting of failure to perform an act in the power of such person to perform may be imprisoned until its performance, negates a claim that one may be committed only for a term certain. Harvey v. Harvey, 153 Colo. 15, 384 P.2d 265 (1963).

When imprisonment of contemnor for indefinite period prohibited. Where the trial court fails to find that contemnor had resources at the time of sentence with which he could purge himself of contempt, it may not order his imprisonment for an indefinite period. In re Hartt, 43 Colo. App. 335, 603 P.2d 970 (1979).

A punitive fine or imprisonment may be imposed only if the citation so states. Shapiro v. Shapiro, 115 Colo. 501, 175 P.2d 387 (1946); People v. Razatos, 699 P.2d 970 (Colo. 1985).

Unconditional fine imposed as punitive sanction in remedial contempt proceeding was error because a separate contempt proceeding to address the failure to submit a financial affidavit as ordered was never commenced. In re Lodeski, 107 P.3d 1097 (Colo. App. 2004).

Finding required to enter punitive order. In order for a court to enter a punitive order for contempt, it must, on supporting evidence, find that the alleged contemner's conduct constitutes misbehavior and that such conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the court. Lobb v. Hodges, 641 P.2d 310 (Colo. App. 1982).

Damages and attorney fees. Awards of attorney fees are incidental to a finding of contempt and are not conditioned upon the ability to pay. Likewise, awards of damages suffered by the contempt, plus costs, are incidental to the contempt finding and are not conditioned upon the ability to pay. In re Harris, 670 P.2d 446 (Colo. App. 1983).

In a proceeding involving only contempt for violation of a temporary restraining order, it is not proper for a court to make a restraining order permanent. Renner v. Williams, 140 Colo. 432, 344 P.2d 966 (1959).

The matter of dealing with contempt is within the sound discretion of the trial court, and its determination is final unless an abuse of such discretion is clearly shown. Conway v. Conway, 134 Colo. 79, 299 P.2d 509 (1956); DeMott v. Smith, 29 Colo. App. 531, 486 P.2d 451 (1971).

Trial court's decision on facts is conclusive. Where the trial court has jurisdiction, regularly pursues its authority, and there is evidence of contempt, its decision on the facts is conclusive. Wall v. District Court, 146 Colo. 74, 360 P.2d 452 (1961).

In the review of judgments in contempt, the supreme court goes no farther than to inquire if the court pronouncing sentence had jurisdiction of the parties and of the offense charged. Wall v. District Court, 146 Colo. 74, 360 P.2d 452 (1961).

Hearing required before revocation of suspended contempt sentence. In re Bernardoni, 731 P.2d 146 (Colo. App. 1986).

Review must be within the appellate court's jurisdiction. The supreme court has no jurisdiction to review the judgment of the district court imposing a penalty for a contempt of court civil in character, unless some question is involved such as is required to give the supreme court jurisdiction in other civil actions. Naturita Canal & Reservoir Co. v. People ex rel. Meenan, 30 Colo. 407, 70 P. 691 (1902).

Appellate court lacked jurisdiction to consider defendants' appeal of contempt order because defendants did not file a timely appeal of the order. Order entering remedial sanctions against defendant was final and appealable under this rule, but defendants failed to file appeal within 45 days after the order was entered pursuant to C.A.R. 4(a) and section (f) of this rule. Madison Capital Co., LLC v. Star Acquisition VIII, 214 P.3d 557 (Colo. App. 2009).

Review is confined to whether the trial court had jurisdiction and regularly pursued its authority. Cooper v. People ex rel. Wyatt, 13 Colo. 337, 22 P. 790 (1889); Guiraud v. Nevada Canal Co., 79 Colo. 289, 245 P. 485 (1926); Clear Creek Power & Dev. Co. v. Cutler, 79 Colo. 355, 245 P. 939 (1926); Fort v. Coop. Farmers' Exch., Inc., 81 Colo. 431, 256 P. 319 (1927); Fort v. People ex rel. Coop. Farmers' Exch., Inc., 81 Colo. 420, 256 P. 325 (1927).

An order in contempt proceedings, if beyond the power of the trial court to enter, is subject to review. Wyatt v. People, 17 Colo. 252, 28 P. 961 (1892); Taylor v. Taylor, 79 Colo. 487, 247 P. 174 (1926).

Although, in reviewing a contempt proceeding, the appellate court is not privileged to pass upon the weight or sufficiency of the evidence but is limited to the question of whether the trial court had jurisdiction. Coolidge v. People ex rel. District Att'y, 72 Colo. 35, 209 P. 504 (1922).

Mere irregularities are not reviewable. Where in a proceeding to punish a contempt the court acts within its jurisdiction, mere irregularities are not reviewable on error. Zobel v. People ex rel. Kyle, 49 Colo. 142, 111 P. 846 (1910).

However, the punishment may be reviewed to determine whether excessive or arbitrary.

While punishment for contempt which consists of conduct derogatory is discretionary, the supreme court not only may inquire as to jurisdiction and regularity of procedure, but also may determine whether or not the punishment imposed is so excessive and incommensurate with the gravity of the offense as to be arbitrary and vindictive. In re People in Interest of Murley, 124 Colo. 581, 239 P.2d 706 (1951).

Combining contempt and alimony findings inappropriate. Where respondent court combined its ruling on contempt issue with its decision to terminate alimony, there is no alternative but to remand this case to the trial court to take further evidence on the alimony issue and to make more appropriate findings. Blank v. District Court, 190 Colo. 114, 543 P.2d 1255 (1975).

Punishment held excessive. Shotkin v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. R., 124 Colo. 141, 235 P.2d 990 (1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 906, reh'g denied, 343 U.S. 937 (1952).

Punishment held arbitrary and oppressive. In re People in Interest of Murley, 124 Colo. 581, 239 P.2d 706 (1951).

Applied in Schnier v. District Court, 696 P.2d 264 (Colo. 1985).

AFFIDAVITS, ARBITRATION, MISCELLANEOUS

Rule 108. Affidavits

An affidavit may be sworn to either within or without this state before any officer authorized by law to take and certify the acknowledgment of deeds conveying lands. When any rule of civil procedure requires an affidavit or other sworn declaration, an unsworn declaration under C.R.S. § 13-27-101 et seq. may be used in its place.

Source: Entire rule amended and adopted, effective March 5, 2020.

Cross references: For officers authorized to take acknowledgments of deeds, see §§ 24-12-104, 24-12-105, and 38-30-126 to 38-30-135, C.R.S.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since C.R.C.P. 108 is similar to § 373 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was supplanted by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941, relevant case construction of that section has been included in the annotations to this rule.

An officer of a foreign jurisdiction administering an oath to an affiant is presumed to be acting within the territorial jurisdiction for which he was appointed. Tucker v. Tucker, 21 Colo. App. 94, 121 P. 125 (1912).

That in the caption of an affidavit the venue as laid in Colorado is not sufficient to overcome this presumption. Tucker v. Tucker, 21 Colo. App. 94, 121 P. 125 (1912).

Rule 109. Arbitration

Repealed March 17, 1994, as to cases filed on or after July 1, 1994.

Rule 109.1. Mandatory Arbitration

Repealed May 30, 1991, as to cases filed on and after July 1, 1991.

Rule 110. Miscellaneous

(a) Amendments. No writ or process shall be quashed, nor any order or decree set aside, nor any undertaking be held invalid, nor any affidavit, traverse, or other paper be held insufficient if the same is corrected within the time and manner prescribed by the court, which shall be liberal in permitting amendments.

(b) Use of Terms. Words used in the present tense shall include the future; singular shall include the plural; masculine shall include the feminine; person or party shall include all manner of organizations which may sue or be sued. The use of the word clerk, sheriff, marshal, or other officer means such officer or his deputy or other person authorized to perform his duties. The word "oath" includes the word "affirmation"; and the phrase "to swear" includes "to affirm"; signature or subscription shall include mark, when the person is unable to write, his name being written near it and witnessed by a person who writes his own name as a witness. A superintendent, overseer, foreman, sales director, or person occupying a similar position, may be considered a managing agent for the purposes of these rules.

(c) Certificates. Certificates shall be made in the name of the officer either by the officer or by his deputy.

(d) Cross Claimants, Counterclaimants and Third-Party Claimants. Where a cross claim, counterclaim or third-party claim is filed, the claimant thereunder shall have the same rights and remedies as if a plaintiff.

ANNOTATION

In construing section 128 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, relating to affidavits or bonds, the court held that amendments under that section must be confined to cases in which the insufficiency was not jurisdictional, and that the section was not intended to permit interposing of affidavit where there was either none at all or its equivalent. Mentzer v. Ellison, 7 Colo. App. 315, 43 P. 464 (1896).

Prior to the adoption of this rule, general assembly endeavored to make it plain that substance, not form, was the controlling consideration. Waite v. People, 83 Colo. 162, 262 P. 1009 (1928) (decided under § 478 of the former Code of Civil Procedure, which was replaced by the Rules of Civil Procedure in 1941).

Rule 120.1. Order Authorizing Expedited Sale Pursuant to Statute	672

CHAPTER 17

COURT PROCEEDINGS: SALES UNDER POWERS

Rule 120. Orders Authorizing Foreclosure Sale Under Power in a Deed of Trust to the Public Trustee

(a) Motion for Order Authorizing Sale. When an order of court is desired authorizing a foreclosure sale under a power of sale contained in a deed of trust to a public trustee, any person entitled to enforce the deed of trust may file a verified motion in a district court seeking such order. The motion shall be captioned: “Verified Motion for Order Authorizing a Foreclosure Sale under C.R.C.P. 120,” and shall be verified by a person with knowledge of the contents of the motion who is competent to testify regarding the facts stated in the motion.

(1) Contents of Motion. The motion shall include a copy of the evidence of debt, the deed of trust containing the power of sale, and any subsequent modifications of these documents. The motion shall describe the property to be sold, shall specify the facts giving rise to the default, and may include documents relevant to the claim of a default.

(A) When the property to be sold is personal property, the motion shall state the names and last known addresses, as shown by the records of the moving party, of all persons known or believed by the moving party to have an interest in such property which may be materially affected or extinguished by such sale.

(B) When the property to be sold is real property and the power of sale is contained in a deed of trust to a public trustee, the motion shall state the name and last known address, as shown by the real property records of the clerk and recorder of the county where the property or any portion thereof is located and the records of the moving party, of:

- (i) the grantor of the deed of trust;
- (ii) the current record owner of the property to be sold;
- (iii) all persons known or believed by the moving party to be personally liable for the debt secured by the deed of trust;
- (iv) those persons who appear to have an interest in such real property that is evidenced by a document recorded after the recording of the deed of trust and before the recording of the notice of election and demand for sale; and
- (v) those persons whose interest in the real property may otherwise be affected by the foreclosure.

(C) In describing and giving notice to persons who appear to have acquired a record interest in real property, the address of each such person shall be the address that is given in the recorded instrument evidencing such person’s interest. If such recorded instrument does not give an address or if only the county and state are given as the address of such person, no address need be stated for such person in the motion.

(2) Setting of Response Deadline; Hearing Date. On receipt of the motion, the clerk shall set a deadline by which any response to the motion must be filed. The deadline shall be not less than 21 nor more than 35 days after the filing of the motion. For purposes of any statutory reference to the date of a hearing under C.R.C.P. 120, the response deadline set by the clerk shall be regarded as the scheduled hearing date unless a later hearing date is set by the court pursuant to section (c)(2) below.

(b) Notice of Response Deadline; Service of Notice. The moving party shall issue a notice stating:

- (1) a description of the deed of trust containing the power of sale, the property sought to be sold at foreclosure, and the facts asserted in the motion to support the claim of a default;

(2) the right of any interested person to file and serve a response as provided in section (c), including the addresses at which such response must be filed and served and the deadline set by the clerk for filing a response;

(3) the following advisement: “If this case is not filed in the county where your property or a substantial part of your property is located, you have the right to ask the court to move the case to that county. If you file a response and the court sets a hearing date, your request to move the case must be filed with the court at least 7 days before the date of the hearing unless the request was included in your response.”; and

(4) the mailing address of the moving party and, if different, the name and address of any authorized servicer for the loan secured by the deed of trust. If the moving party or authorized servicer, if different, is not authorized to modify the evidence of the debt, the notice shall state in addition the name, mailing address, and telephone number of a representative authorized to address loss mitigation requests. A copy of C.R.C.P. 120 shall be included with or attached to the notice. The notice shall be served by the moving party not less than 14 days prior to the response deadline set by the clerk, by:

(A) mailing a true copy of the notice to each person named in the motion (other than any person for whom no address is stated) at that person’s address or addresses stated in the motion;

(B) filing a copy with the clerk for posting by the clerk in the courthouse in which the motion is pending; and

(C) if the property to be sold is a residential property as defined by statute, by posting a true copy of the notice in a conspicuous place on the subject property as required by statute. Proof of mailing and delivery of the notice to the clerk for posting in the courthouse, and proof of posting of the notice on the residential property, shall be set forth in the certificate of the moving party or moving party’s agent. For the purpose of this section, posting by the clerk may be electronic on the court’s public website so long as the electronic address for the posting is displayed conspicuously at the courthouse.

(c) Response Stating Objection to Motion for Order Authorizing Sale; Filing and Service.

(1) Any interested person who disputes, on grounds within the scope of the hearing provided for in section (d), the moving party’s right to an order authorizing sale may file and serve a response to the motion. The response must describe the facts the respondent relies on in objecting to the issuance of an order authorizing sale, and may include copies of documents which support the respondent’s position. The response shall be filed and served not later than the response deadline set by the clerk. The response shall include contact information for the respondent including name, mailing address, telephone number, and, if applicable, an e-mail address. Service of the response on the moving party shall be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 5(b).

(2) If a response is filed stating grounds for opposition to the motion within the scope of this Rule as provided for in section (d), the court shall set the matter for hearing at a later date. The clerk shall clear available hearing dates with the parties and counsel, if practical, and shall give notice to counsel and any self-represented parties who have appeared in the matter, in accordance with the rules applicable to e-filing, no less than 14 days prior to the new hearing date.

(d) Scope of Issues at the Hearing; Order Authorizing Foreclosure Sale; Effect of Order. The court shall examine the motion and any responses.

(1) If the matter is set for hearing, the scope of inquiry at the hearing shall not extend beyond

(A) the existence of a default authorizing exercise of a power of sale under the terms of the deed of trust described in the motion;

(B) consideration by the court of the requirements of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, 50 U.S.C. § 3931, as amended;

(C) whether the moving party is the real party in interest; and

(D) whether the status of any request for a loan modification agreement bars a foreclosure sale as a matter of law.

The court shall determine whether there is a reasonable probability that a default justifying the sale has occurred, whether an order authorizing sale is otherwise proper under the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, whether the moving party is the real party in interest, and, if each of those matters is determined in favor of the moving party, whether evidence presented in support of defenses raised by the respondent and within the scope of this Rule prevents the court from finding that there is a reasonable probability that the moving party is entitled to an order authorizing a foreclosure sale. The court shall grant or deny the motion in accordance with such determination. For good cause shown, the court may continue a hearing.

(2) If no response has been filed by the response deadline set by the clerk, and if the court is satisfied that venue is proper and the moving party is entitled to an order authorizing sale, the court shall forthwith enter an order authorizing sale.

(3) Any order authorizing sale shall recite the date the hearing was completed, if a hearing was held, or, if no response was filed and no hearing was held, shall recite the response deadline set by the clerk as the date a hearing was scheduled, but that no hearing occurred.

(4) An order granting or denying a motion filed under this Rule shall not constitute an appealable order or final judgment. The granting of a motion authorizing a foreclosure shall be without prejudice to the right of any person aggrieved to seek injunctive or other relief in any court of competent jurisdiction, and the denial of any such motion shall be without prejudice to any other right or remedy of the moving party.

(e) The court shall not require the appointment of an attorney to represent any interested person as a condition of granting such motion, unless it appears from the motion or other papers filed with the court that there is a reasonable probability that the interested person is in the military service.

(f) Venue. For the purposes of this section, a consumer obligation is any obligation

(1) as to which the obligor is a natural person, and

(2) is incurred primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose.

Any proceeding under this Rule involving a consumer obligation shall be brought in and heard in the county in which such consumer signed the obligation or in which the property or a substantial part of the property is located. Any proceeding under this Rule that does not involve a consumer obligation or an instrument securing a consumer obligation may be brought and heard in any county. However, in any proceeding under this Rule, if a response is timely filed, and if in the response or in any other writing filed with the court, the responding party requests a change of venue to the county in which the encumbered property or a substantial part thereof is situated, the court shall order transfer of the proceeding to such county.

(g) Return of Sale. The court shall require a return of sale to be made to the court. If it appears from the return that the sale was conducted in conformity with the order authorizing the sale, the court shall enter an order approving the sale. This order is not appealable and shall not have preclusive effect in any other action or proceeding.

(h) Docket Fee. A docket fee in the amount specified by law shall be paid by the person filing the motion. Unless the court shall otherwise order, any person filing a response to the motion shall pay, at the time of the filing of such response, a docket fee in the amount specified by law for a defendant or respondent in a civil action under section 13-32-101(1)(d), C.R.S.

COMMENTS

[1] The 1989 amendment to C.R.C.P. 120 (Sales Under Powers) is a composite of changes necessary to update the Rule and make it more workable. The amendment was developed by a special committee made up of practitioners and judges having expertise in that area of practice, with both creditor and debtor interests represented.

[2] The changes are in three categories. There are changes that permit court clerks to perform many of the tasks that were previously required to be accomplished by the Court and thus save valuable Court time. There are changes to venue provisions of the Rule for compliance with the Federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. There are also a number of editorial changes to improve the language of the Rule.

[3] There was considerable debate concerning whether the Federal "Fair Debt Collection Practices Act" is applicable to a C.R.C.P. 120 proceeding. Rather than attempting to mandate compliance with that federal statute by specific rule provision, the Committee recommends that a person acting as a debt collector in a matter covered by the provisions of the Federal “Fair Debt Collection Practices Act” be aware of the potential applicability of the Act and comply with it, notwithstanding any provision of this Rule.

Annotator’s note. Since this rule is similar to this rule as it existed prior to its 2017 amendment and to rules antecedent to that rule, relevant cases construing those rules are included in these annotations.

This rule was repealed and readopted to provide for due process safeguards to one who challenges the entitlement to foreclose a deed of trust containing a power of sale to the public trustee. Valley Dev. at Vail, Inc. v. Warder, 192 Colo. 316, 557 P.2d 1180 (1976).

Due process requires opportunity to be heard. Due process under section (d) requires only that the respondents to the motion be given an opportunity to be heard on their contentions.

Moreland v. Marwich, Ltd., 629 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1981), rev’d on other grounds, 665 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1983).

Provisions of this rule must be strictly complied with by one seeking foreclosure under a power of sale through the public trustee. Dews v. District Court, 648 P.2d 662 (Colo. 1982).

Proceedings under this rule do not carry sufficient finality for the Rooker-Feldman doctrine to apply. The Rooker-Feldman doctrine is a rule of civil procedure enunciated by the United States supreme court in two cases, Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co., 263 U.S. 413 (1923), and District of Columbia Court of Appeals v. Feldman, 460 U.S. 462 (1983). The Rooker-Feldman doctrine prohibits a federal action that tries to modify or set aside a state court judgment because the state proceedings should not have led to that judgment. Brickert v. Deutsche Bank Nat’l Trust Co., 380 F. Supp. 3d 1127 (D. Colo. 2019).

When the state court has already issued an order authorizing sale, a proceeding under this rule cannot serve as the basis for abstention under Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37 (1971), because there is no ongoing state proceeding. Brickert v. Deutsche Bank Nat’l Trust Co., 380 F. Supp. 3d 1127 (D. Colo. 2019).

The plain language of section (d)(4) states that this rule cannot be used to bar a suit under the issue preclusion doctrine, otherwise known as collateral estoppel. Brickert v. Deutsche Bank Nat’l Trust Co., 380 F. Supp. 3d 1127 (D. Colo. 2019).

A completed foreclosure need not be set aside where the complaining party received timely actual notice and was not prejudiced. Amos v. Aspen Alps 123, LLC, 298 P.3d 940 (Colo. App. 2010), aff’d, 2012 CO 46, 280 P.3d 1256.

The provisions of this rule are predicated upon the requirements of the soldiers’ and sailors’ civil relief act, and the rule was adopted for the purpose of establishing a procedure for compliance therewith. That act by its plain provisions does not prevent the foreclosure of security for any obligation pursuant to a written agreement of the parties executed during the period of military service. Whitaker v. Hearnberger, 123 Colo. 545, 233 P.2d 389 (1951).

The purpose of the rule is only to establish the status of the debtor with respect to military service. Hastings v. Security Thrift & Mtg. Co., 145 Colo. 36, 357 P.2d 919 (1960).

Proceedings under this rule are designed to afford holders of notes secured by deeds of trust a means of avoiding questions of marketability of title derived from sales thereunder. Where the debtor was not in military service, the sale by the public trustee could have proceeded without reference to this rule without prejudice to the debtor. Hastings v. Security Thrift & Mtg. Co., 145 Colo. 36, 357 P.2d 919 (1960).

This rule implements the statutory public trustee foreclosure system. Bakers Park Mining & Milling Co. v. District Court, 662 P.2d 483 (Colo. 1983).

Proceedings under this rule are not adversary proceedings in which the court determines issues and enters a final judgment, and no appeal may be taken to review the same. Hastings v. Security Thrift & Mtg. Co., 145 Colo. 36, 357 P.2d 919 (1960).

When hearing required. If a response to the motion seeking sale under the public trustee's deed is timely filed, the court should conduct a hearing on the existence of the default, and other relevant issues if raised in the response. Dews v. District Court, 648 P.2d 662 (Colo. 1982).

The scope of inquiry for a hearing held pursuant to this rule is limited to the existence of a default or other circumstances authorizing the sale, and action collateral to such hearing is necessary to resolve all other issues. Ragsdale Bros. Roofing v. United Bank, 744 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1987); In re Carpenter, 200 B.R. 47 (D. Colo. 1996).

The purpose and scope of a hearing pursuant to this rule are very narrow: the trial court must determine whether there is a reasonable probability that a default or other circumstance authorizing exercise of a power of sale has occurred. The test is whether, considering all relevant evidence, there is a reasonable probability that a default exists. United Guar. Residential Ins. Co. v. Vanderlaan, 819 P.2d 1103 (Colo. App. 1991); Plymouth Capital Co. v. District Court, 955 P.2d 1014 (Colo. 1998).

Determination of real party in interest. The trial court in a proceeding under this rule must consider whether the moving parties are the real parties in interest when the issue is properly raised by the debtors. Goodwin v. District Court, 779 P.2d 837 (Colo. 1989).

The defenses of waiver and estoppel are valid defenses that should be considered by the trial court in a proceeding under this rule if properly raised by the debtor. Goodwin v. District Court, 779 P.2d 837 (Colo. 1989).

There is no requirement that an order directing foreclosure be filed in the county where the property affected is located. Hastings v. Security Thrift & Mtg. Co., 145 Colo. 36, 357 P.2d 919 (1960).

The notice procedure requires nothing more than that the notices be mailed to the mortgagee at the address given in the deed of trust. Motlong v. World Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 168 Colo. 540, 452 P.2d 384 (1969).

Certificate of mailing not conclusive. Although section (b) states that "mailing and posting shall be evidenced by the certificate of the clerk", the certificate is not conclusive proof of compliance with the rule but only creates a presumption which may be rebutted with evidence of noncompliance. Dews v. District Court, 648 P.2d 662 (Colo. 1982).

Court may retain supervisory jurisdiction over proposed foreclosure. The narrowly circumscribed scope of a proceeding under this rule does not preclude the court from retaining supervisory jurisdiction over a proposed foreclosure for purposes of ensuring that due process is accorded to the parties. Bakers Park Mining & Milling Co. v. District Court, 662 P.2d 483 (Colo. 1983).

Ex parte appointment of receiver. While the ex parte appointment of a receiver may be permissible under emergency circumstances or where notice is impractical, a case must be pending at the time of the appointment. Johnson v. McCaughan, Carter & Scharrer, 672 P.2d 221 (Colo. App. 1983).

A receivership hearing did not provide petitioners with an effective opportunity to be heard on the issue of foreclosure. Valley Dev. at Vail, Inc. v. Warder, 192 Colo. 316, 557 P.2d 1180 (1976).

Injunctive action is not the exclusive action which may be taken under this rule as an aggrieved person may also seek other relief in any court having jurisdiction. Ragsdale Bros. Roofing v. United Bank, 744 P.2d 750 (Colo. App. 1987).

Foreclosure sale must be scheduled within seven days of hearing. When a creditor seeks to foreclose a deed of trust or mortgage, the foreclosure sale must be scheduled not less than seven days after the hearing conducted under this rule. Kirchner v. Sanchez, 661 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1983).

Petitioners may be allowed additional time to redeem. The trial court acts within the limits of its discretion when it allows the petitioners additional time to redeem from the foreclosure sales. Moreland v. Marwich, Ltd., 665 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1983).

Attorney's fees not provided for. The determination of whether attorneys' fees can be recovered and the amount that is due is not within the permissible scope of a proceeding under this rule. Bakers Park Mining & Milling Co. v. District Court, 662 P.2d 483 (Colo. 1983).

Proceedings under this rule are a "judicial proceeding" and, therefore, "legal action" for the purposes of the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. Thus, former section (f) of this rule, which permitted an action to be filed in any county, was preempted by federal law. But acceptance by district court clerks of improperly filed actions was not "state action" for the purposes of 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Zartman v. Shapiro and Meinhold, 811 P.2d 409 (Colo. App. 1990) (decided under rule in effect prior to 1989 amendment), aff'd, 823 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1992).

The federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act requires that an action to enforce an interest in real property securing a consumer's obligation, brought by a debt collector, must be brought only in a judicial district in which the real property is located. For purposes of the federal act an attorney who qualifies under the first sentence of the definition in 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6) is a debt collector. Shapiro and Meinhold v. Zartman, 823 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1992) (decided under rule in effect prior to 1989 amendment).

Entities engaged in non-judicial foreclosure actions in this state are not debt collectors under the FDCPA. A non-judicial foreclosure differs from a judicial foreclosure in that the sale does not preserve to the trustee the right to collect any deficiency in the loan amount personally against the mortgagor. A creditor may collect a deficiency only after the non-judicial foreclosure sale and through a separate action. Thus, a non-judicial foreclosure proceeding is not covered because it only allows the trustee to obtain proceeds from the sale of the foreclosed property, and no more. Obduskey v. Wells Fargo, 879 F.3d 1216 (10th Cir. 2018), aff'd sub nom. Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus LLP, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 3d 390 (2019).

Court order under this rule to reform a bid ex post facto was beyond its authority. United Guar. Res. Ins. v. Vanderlaan, 819 P.2d 1103 (Colo. App. 1991).

The statute of limitations applies to each installment due on a note separately and does not begin to run on any one installment until that installment is due. Right to foreclose on note pursuant to this rule is not extinguished because recovery on certain payments is barred by the statute of limitations. Application of Church, 833 P.2d 813 (Colo. App. 1992).

Plaintiffs' due process rights not violated where claim of insufficient notice arises out of their own failure to comply with the change of address requirements in the deed of trust. Plaintiffs failed to provide to defendant, in writing, a notice of change of address. Defendant thus utilized address specified in the deed of trust to serve its motion and notice under this rule and to provide the public trustee with plaintiffs' most current address. The plain language of the deed of trust expresses the parties' intentions concerning notice and changes of address. Defendant's adherence to the deed of trust' notice provision complied with the notice requirements of section (a). Thus, the notice provision in the deed of trust and defendant's compliance with that provision comported with the requirements of section (a). Estates in Eagle Ridge, LLLP v. Valley Bank & Trust, 141 P.3d 838 (Colo. App. 2005).

Denver district court had jurisdiction to enter order authorizing foreclosure sale in proceeding filed in that court under this rule notwithstanding pending Larimer county proceeding. Under the circumstances of this case, the rule of priority of jurisdiction did not divest the Denver district court of jurisdiction to enter the order authorizing sale. There was no risk of inconsistent decision or duplicative efforts, because defendant had abandoned its efforts to obtain an order authorizing sale from the Larimer county district court and, indeed, had not even filed the necessary documentation to allow it to obtain such an order from the court. Thus, policy reasons supporting rule of priority of jurisdiction are not implicated here. Estates in Eagle Ridge, LLLP v. Valley Bank & Trust, 141 P.3d 838 (Colo. App. 2005).

Applied in Good Fund, Ltd.-1972 v. Church, 40 Colo. App. 403, 579 P.2d 1174 (1978); Boulder Lumber Co. v. Alpine of Nederland, Inc., 626 P.2d 724 (Colo. App. 1981); Krause v. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 631 P.2d 1158 (Colo. App. 1981); Wiley v. Bank of Fountain Valley, 632 P.2d 282 (Colo. App. 1981); Kemp v. Empire Sav., Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 660 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1983); Rustic Hills Shopping Plaza, Inc. v. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n 661 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1983); Krause v. Columbia Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 661 P.2d 265 (Colo. 1983); Klingensmith v. Serafini, 663 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1983).

Rule 120.1. Order Authorizing Expedited Sale Pursuant to Statute

(a) Motion; Contents. An order of the court authorizing an expedited sale pursuant to section 38-38-903, C.R.S. may be sought in conjunction with the order authorizing sale. An eligible holder as defined by statute may file a verified motion, together with a supporting affidavit, in a district court seeking an order authorizing an expedited sale together with the motion for order authorizing sale pursuant to C.R.C.P. Rule 120. The affidavit shall state the following: (1) The moving party is an eligible holder as that term is defined by statute; (2) the subject deed of trust secures an eligible evidence of debt as that term is defined by statute; and (3) the property has been abandoned as defined by statute, or in the alternative, the grantor of the deed of trust requests an order for expedited foreclosure sale. Upon receipt of the motion and supporting affidavit, the clerk shall fix a time and place for a hearing on the motion for order authorizing sale and the motion for an expedited sale. The time fixed for hearing shall be not less than twenty nor more than thirty calendar days after the filing of the motion for expedited sale.

(b) Notice; Contents; Service. The moving party shall issue a combined notice in English and in Spanish, which shall include the provisions as specified in C.R.C.P. Rule 120(b) and add a statement that the moving party is seeking in addition to the order authorizing sale, an order for expedited foreclosure sale. The moving party shall additionally state that the property is abandoned, or in the alternative that the grantor of the deed of trust has requested the order for expedited foreclosure sale. At least fifteen calendar days prior to the hearing, the combined notice shall be served by the moving party as required by C.R.C.P. 120, and in addition shall be either personally served on the grantor of the deed of trust, or posted at the real property as provided in C.R.C.P. Rule 120(b). Such mailing, delivery to the clerk for posting, and personal service or property posting shall be evidenced by the certificate of the moving party or the moving party's agent.

(c) Response; Contents; Filing and Service. The grantor of the deed of trust may dispute the moving party's motion for expedited sale in the same time frame as provided in C.R.C.P. Rule 120.

(d) Hearing; Scope of Issues; Order; Effect. At the time and place set for the hearing or to which the hearing may have been continued, the court shall examine the motion and responses, if any. The scope of inquiry under this section shall not extend beyond the determination that the property is abandoned as that term is defined by statute, or that the grantor requests for an order for expedited sale. The court shall enter the order for expedited sale if there is clear and convincing evidence that the property has been abandoned or that the grantor of the deed of trust has requested such order. In order to establish clear and convincing evidence that the property has been abandoned, the moving party shall file an affidavit with the court as provided by statute. The court shall determine whether there is clear and convincing evidence that the property is abandoned.

(e) Hearing Dispensed with if no Response Filed. If no response has been filed within the time permitted by C.R.C.P. Rule 120(c), the court shall examine the motion and, if satisfied that the moving party is entitled to an order for expedited sale upon the facts stated in the motion and affidavit, the court shall dispense with the hearing and forthwith enter the order for expedited sale.

CHAPTER 17A

PRACTICE STANDARDS AND LOCAL COURT RULES

Rule 121. Local Rules — Statewide Practice Standards

(a) Repeal of local rules. All District Court local rules, including local procedures and standing orders having the effect of local rules, enacted before April 1, 1988 are hereby repealed.

(b) Authority to enact local rules on matters which are strictly local. Each court by action of a majority of its judges may from time to time propose local rules and amendments of local rules not inconsistent with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure or Practice Standards set forth in C.R.C.P. 121(c), nor inconsistent with any directive of the Supreme Court. A proposed rule or amendment shall not be effective until approved by the Supreme Court. No local procedure shall be effective unless adopted as a local rule in accordance with this Section (b) of C.R.C.P. 121. To obtain approval, three copies of any proposed local rule or amendment of a local rule shall be submitted to the Supreme Court through the office of the State Court Administrator. Reasonable uniformity of local rules is required. Numbering and format of any proposed local rule or amendment of a local rule shall be as prescribed by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court's approval of a local rule or local procedure shall not preclude review of that rule or procedure under the law of circumstances of a particular case.

(c) Matters of statewide concern. The Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure and the following rule subject areas called "Practice Standards" are declared to be of statewide concern and shall preempt and control in their form and content over any differing local rule:

DISTRICT COURT* PRACTICE STANDARDS

§§ 1-1 to End

*Includes Denver Probate Court where applicable.

Section 1-1

ENTRY OF APPEARANCE AND WITHDRAWAL

1. Entry of Appearance.

No attorney shall appear in any matter before the court unless that attorney has entered an appearance by filing an Entry of Appearance or signing a pleading. An entry of appearance shall state (a) the identity of the party for whom the appearance is made; (b) the attorney's office address; (c) the attorney's telephone number; (d) the attorney's E-Mail address; and (e) the attorney's registration number.

2. Withdrawal From an Active Case.

(a) An attorney may withdraw from a case, without leave of court where the withdrawing attorney has complied with all outstanding orders of the court and either files a notice of withdrawal where there is active co-counsel for the party represented by the withdrawing attorney, or files a substitution of counsel, signed by both the withdrawing and replacement attorney, containing the information required for an Entry of Appearance under subsection 1 of this Practice Standard as to the replacement attorney.

(b) Otherwise an attorney may withdraw from a case only upon approval of the court. Such approval shall rest in the discretion of the court, but shall not be granted until a motion to withdraw has been filed and served on the client and the other parties of record or their attorneys and either both the client and all counsel for the other parties consent in writing at or after the time of the service of said motion, or at least 14 days have expired after service of said motion. Every motion to withdraw shall contain the following advisements:

(I) the client has the burden of keeping the court and the other parties informed where notices, pleadings or other papers may be served;

(II) if the client fails or refuses to comply with all court rules and orders, the client may suffer possible dismissal, default or other sanctions;

(III) the dates of any proceedings, including trial, which dates will not be delayed nor proceedings affected by the withdrawal of counsel;

(IV) the client's and the other parties' right to object to the motion to withdraw within 14 days after service of the motion;

(V) if the client is not a natural person, that it must be represented by counsel in any court proceedings unless it is a closely held entity and first complies with section 13-1-127, C.R.S.; and

(VI) the client's last known address and telephone number.

(c) The client and the opposing parties shall have 14 days after service of a motion to withdraw within which to file objections to the withdrawal.

(d) If the motion to withdraw is granted, the withdrawing attorney shall promptly notify the client and the other parties of the effective date of the withdrawal.

3. Withdrawal From Completed Cases.

In any civil case which is concluded and in which all related orders have been submitted and entered by the court and complied with by the withdrawing attorney, an attorney may withdraw from the case without leave of court by filing a notice in the form and content of Appendix to Chapters 1 to 17A, Form 36, C.R.C.P. [JDF Form 83], which shall be served upon the client and all other parties of record or their attorneys, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 5. The withdrawal shall automatically become effective 14 days after service upon the client and all other parties of record or their attorneys unless there is an objection filed, in which event the matter shall be assigned to an appropriate judicial officer for determination.

4. Entries of Appearance and Withdrawals by Members or Employees of Law Firms, Professional Corporations or Clinics.

The entry of an appearance or withdrawal by an attorney who is a member or an employee of a law firm, professional corporation or clinic shall relieve other members or employees of the same law firm, professional corporation or clinic from the necessity of filing additional entries of appearance or withdrawal in the same litigation unless otherwise indicated.

5. Notice of Limited Representation Entry of Appearance and Withdrawal.

In accordance with C.R.C.P. 11(b) and C.R.C.P. Rule 311(b), an attorney may undertake to provide limited representation to a pro se party involved in a court proceeding. Upon the request and with the consent of a pro se party, an attorney may make a limited appearance for the pro se party in one or more specified proceedings, if the attorney files and serves with the court and the other parties and attorneys (if any) a notice of the limited appearance prior to or simultaneous with the proceeding(s) for which the attorney appears. At the conclusion of such proceeding(s), the attorney's appearance terminates without the necessity of leave of court, upon the attorney filing a notice of completion of limited appearance. Service on an attorney who makes a limited appearance for a party shall be valid only in connection with the specific proceeding(s) for which the attorney appears.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The purpose of section 1-1(5) is to implement Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure 11(b) and 311(b), which authorize limited representation of a pro se party either on a pro bono or fee basis, in accordance with Colorado Rule of Professional Conduct 1.2. This provision provides assurance that an attorney who makes a limited appearance for a pro se party in a specified case proceeding(s), at the request of and with the consent of the pro se party, can withdraw from the case upon filing a notice of completion of the limited appearance, without leave of court.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

An “active case” is any case other than a “completed case” as described in subsection 3 of the Practice Standard.

Section 1-2

SPECIAL ADMISSION OF OUT-OF-STATE AND FOREIGN ATTORNEYS

Special admission of an out-of-state or foreign attorney shall be in accordance with C.R.C.P. Chapter 18, Rules Governing Admission to the Bar 205.3 and 205.5.

Section 1-3

JURY FEES

Each party exercising the right to trial by jury shall file and serve a demand therefor and simultaneously pay the requisite jury fee. The demand and payment of the jury fee shall be in accordance with Rule 38. The jury fee shall not be returned under any circumstances. Failure of a party to timely file and serve a demand for trial by jury and pay the jury fee shall constitute a waiver of that party’s right to trial by jury. When any party exercises the right to trial by jury, every other party to the action must pay the requisite jury fee unless such other party files a notice of waiver of the right to trial by jury pursuant to Rule 38(a)(2). Any party who has demanded a trial by jury and has paid the requisite jury fee and any party who has not waived the right to trial by jury and has paid the requisite jury fee is entitled to trial by jury of all issues properly designated for trial by jury unless that party waives such right pursuant to Rule 38(e).

Source: Entire section repealed and reenacted July 12, 1990, effective September 1, 1990.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Amendment of this practice standard is to conform it to the requirements of C.R.S. 13-71-144 (1989) and amended C.R.C.P. 38. Under that statutory requirement, each party who wishes to be assured of having a jury trial, must demand a jury trial and pay a jury fee within the time specified. The case will be tried to a jury if the party demanding a jury trial makes a timely demand, pays the jury fee at the time of the demand and does not later waive a jury trial. If a demand is timely made and the jury fee timely paid, the right to jury trial cannot be withdrawn as against a party who has demanded a jury trial and timely paid a jury fee. For a party to be certain of having a jury trial, that party must demand it and timely pay a jury fee.

Section 1-4SUPPRESSION FOR SERVICE OF PROCESS

In any civil action, upon written request of the claiming party, the fact of the filing of a case shall be suppressed by the clerk only upon order of the court to secure service of summons or other process and such order shall expire upon service of such summons or other process.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This Practice Standard was a local rule found in most districts. It provides the machinery for the clerk to temporarily suppress the fact of filing of a case temporarily to avoid publicity that may affect ability to serve process. Such temporary suppression in aid of service of process, is different from the Practice Standard pertaining to limitation of access to court files.

Section 1-5LIMITATION OF ACCESS TO COURT FILES

1. Nature of Order. Upon motion by any party named in any civil action, the court may limit access to court files. The order of limitation shall specify the nature of limitation, the duration of the limitation, and the reason for limitation.

2. When Order Granted. An order limiting access shall not be granted except upon a finding that the harm to the privacy of a person in interest outweighs the public interest.

3. Application for Order. A motion for limitation of access may be granted, ex parte, upon motion filed with the complaint, accompanied by supporting affidavit or at a hearing concerning the motion.

4. Review by Order. Upon notice to all parties of record, and after hearing, an order limiting access may be reviewed by the court at any time on its own motion or upon the motion of any person.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This Practice Standard was made necessary by lack of uniformity throughout the districts concerning access to court files. Some districts permitted free access after service of process was obtained. Others, particularly in malpractice or domestic relations cases, almost routinely prohibited access to court file information. The committee deemed it preferable to have machinery available for limitation in an appropriate case, but also a means for other entities having interest in the litigation, including the media, to have access.

Section 1-6SETTINGS FOR TRIALS OR HEARINGS/SETTINGS
BY TELEPHONE

1. All settings of trials and hearings, other than those set on the initiative of the court, shall be by the courtroom clerk upon notice to all other parties. Settings by telephone are encouraged. The original or a copy of the notice shall be on file with the courtroom clerk before the setting and shall contain the following:

(a) The caption of the case with designation "Notice to Set" or "Notice to Set by Telephone."

(b) The nature of the matter being set.

(c) The date and time at which the setting will occur.

(d) The courtroom clerk's address, by division or courtroom number if applicable and telephone number.

(e) A statement that the party or attorney being notified may appear or if not present, will be called at or about the time specified.

- (f) A statement if the setting is to be by telephone.
2. The party issuing the notice to set shall be responsible for contacting all other counsel and clearing available dates with them.
3. Any attorney receiving the notice to set who does not personally appear at the setting shall have personnel at his or her office, supplied with a current appointment calendar and authorized to make settings for that attorney, at the date and time in the notice.
4. The party requesting the setting shall immediately confirm in writing the date and time of the matter that has been set with all other parties or their attorneys and shall file that confirmation with the court.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The change in Standard 1-6 is to allow for settings on initiative of the Court. This change is to resolve the question raised by several districts as to whether the Court had the power to initiate its own settings. There has also been a slight tidying-up of language of the first sentence.

Section 1-7

AUDIO-VISUAL DEVICES

The photographing, broadcasting, televising or recording of court proceedings in any courtroom shall be governed in accordance with Canon 3 of the Code of Judicial Conduct of the State of Colorado.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This Practice Standard was deemed necessary because it was apparent from local rules of a number of counties that there was a general lack of awareness of Canon 3 of the Code of Judicial Conduct pertaining to photographing, broadcasting, televising or recording court proceedings. This Practice Standard draws attention to Canon 3 and incorporates its provisions by reference.

Section 1-8

CONSOLIDATION

A party seeking consolidation shall file a motion to consolidate in each case sought to be consolidated. The motion shall be determined by the court in the case first filed in accordance with Practice Standard § 1-15. If consolidation is ordered, all subsequent filings shall be in the case first filed and all previous filings related to the consolidated cases placed together under that case number, unless otherwise ordered by the court. Consolidation of matters pending in other districts shall be determined in accordance with C.R.C.P. 42.1.

Section 1-9

RELATED CASES

1. A party to a civil case shall file a notice identifying all related cases of which the party has actual knowledge.
2. Related cases are civil, criminal, or other proceedings that: a) involve one or more of the same parties and common questions of fact; and b) are pending in any state or federal court or were terminated within the previous 12 months.
3. A party shall file the required notice at the time of its first pleading under Rule 7(a) or its first motion under Rule 12(b).

4. A party shall promptly file a supplemental notice of any change in the information required under this rule.

Source: Entire section amended and committee comment added, adopted January 7, 2021, effective April 1, 2021.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The purpose of this Practice Standard is to afford notice of related state or federal cases that are pending or were recently terminated.

Any actions to be taken following such notice are left to the parties and the court.

Section 1-10

DISMISSAL FOR FAILURE TO PROSECUTE

1. Upon due notice to the opposite party, any party to a civil action may apply to have any action dismissed when such action has not been prosecuted or brought to trial with due diligence.

2. The court, on its own motion, may dismiss any action not prosecuted with due diligence, upon 35 days' notice in writing to each attorney of record and each appearing party not represented by counsel, or require the parties to show cause in writing why the case should not be dismissed. Showing of cause and objections thereto shall be determined in accordance with Practice Standard § 1-15 (Determination of Motions).

3. If the case has not been set for trial, no activity of record in excess of 12 continuous months shall be deemed prima facie failure to prosecute.

4. Failure to show cause on or before the date set forth in the court's notice shall justify dismissal without further proceedings.

5. Any dismissal under this rule shall be without prejudice unless otherwise specified by the court.

Source: 2. amended and adopted December 14, 2011, effective January 1, 2012, for all cases pending on or filed on or after January 1, 2012, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 1(b).

COMMITTEE COMMENT

The purpose of this Practice Standard is to encourage prosecution of pending cases and permit machinery to dispose of matters which are not being prosecuted. Dismissal is without prejudice, and there are sufficient safeguards incorporated into the Practice Standard to permit retention on the docket if cause for the delay and interest in the case is shown. The Practice Standard does not mandate that the court search its files and send out notices, but permits such action if the court wishes. The Practice Standard also permits initiation of the procedure by motion.

CONTINUANCES

Motions for continuances of hearings or trials shall be determined in accordance with Practice Standard 1-15 and shall be granted only for good cause. Stipulations for continuance shall not be effective unless and until approved by the court. A motion for continuance or request for extension of time will not be considered without a certificate that a copy of the motion has also been served upon the moving attorney's client.

Section 1-12MATTERS RELATED TO DISCOVERY

1. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, reasonable notice for the taking of depositions pursuant to C.R.C.P. 30(b)(1) shall not be less than 7 days. Before serving a notice to take a deposition, counsel seeking the deposition shall make a good faith effort to schedule it by agreement at a time reasonably convenient and economically efficient to the proposed deponent and counsel for all parties. Prior to scheduling or noticing any deposition, all counsel shall confer in a good faith effort to agree on a reasonable means of limiting the time and expense of that deposition. Pending resolution of any motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 26(c), the filing of the motion shall stay the discovery at which the motion is directed. If the court directs that any discovery motion under Rule 26(c) be made orally, then movant's written notice to the other parties that a hearing has been requested on the motion shall stay the discovery to which the motion is directed.

2. Motions under Rules 26(c) and 37(a), C.R.C.P., shall set forth the interrogatory, request, question or response constituting the subject matter of the motion.

3. Interrogatories and requests under Rules 33, 34, and 36, C.R.C.P., and the responses thereto shall be served upon other counsel or parties, but shall not be filed with the court. If relief is sought under Rule 26(c), C.R.C.P., or Rule 37(a), C.R.C.P., copies of the portions of the interrogatories, requests, answers or responses in dispute shall be filed with the court contemporaneously with the motion. If interrogatories, requests, answers or responses are to be used at trial, the portions to be used shall be made available and placed, but not filed, with the trial judge at the outset of the trial insofar as their use reasonably can be anticipated.

4. The originals of all stenographically reported depositions shall be delivered to the party taking the deposition after submission to the deponent as required by Rule 30(e), C.R.C.P. The original of the deposition shall be retained by the party to whom it is delivered to be available for appropriate use by any party in a hearing or trial of the case. If a deposition is to be used at trial, it shall be made available for inspection and placed, but not filed with the trial judge at the outset of the trial insofar as its use reasonably can be anticipated.

5. Unless otherwise ordered, the court will not entertain any motion under Rule 37(a), C.R.C.P., unless counsel for the moving party has conferred or made reasonable effort to confer with opposing counsel concerning the matter in dispute before the filing of the motion. Counsel for the moving party shall file a certificate of compliance with this rule at the time the motion under Rule 37(a), C.R.C.P., is filed. If the court requires that any discovery motion be made orally, then movant must make a reasonable effort to confer with opposing counsel before requesting a hearing from the court.

COMMENTS1994

[1] Provisions of the practice standard are patterned in part after the local rule now in effect in the United States District Court for the District of Colorado. This practice standard specifies the minimum time for the serving of a notice to take deposition. Before serving a notice, however, counsel are required to make a good faith effort to schedule the deposition by agreement at a time reasonably convenient and economically efficient to the deponent and all counsel. Counsel are also required to confer in a good faith effort to agree on a reasonable means of limiting the time and expense of any deposition. The provisions of this Practice Standard are also designed to lessen paper mass/filing space problems and resolve various general problems related to discovery.

[2] This rule was amended to address situations arising in courts that require oral discovery motions.

Section 1-13DEPOSITION BY AUDIO TAPE RECORDING

When a deposition is taken by audio tape recording under C.R.C.P. 30(b)(4), the following procedures shall be followed:

- (a) An oath or affirmation shall be administered to the witness by a notary public or other officer authorized to administer oaths.
- (b) Two tape recorders with separate microphones shall be used.
- (c) Speakers shall identify themselves before each statement except during extended colloquy between examiner and deponent.
- (d) The recording shall be transcribed at the expense of the party taking the deposition.
- (e) The transcribed testimony shall be made available for correction and signature by the deponent in accordance with Rule 30(e), C.R.C.P.
- (f) The tape from which the transcription is made shall be retained by the party taking the deposition. The second tape shall be retained by the adverse party. Both tapes shall be preserved until the litigation is concluded.
- (g) The party responsible for the transcription shall make available to the other parties upon request copies of the transcription at a reasonable charge and shall also submit to the other parties copies of changes, if any, which are made by the deponent and shall also inform the other parties of the date when the deposition is available for signature and whether signature is obtained.
- (h) The transcription shall be retained by the party taking the deposition and made available in accordance with Paragraph 4 Practice Standard § 1-12 (Matters Related To Discovery).

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This Practice Standard sets forth detailed procedural safeguards for taking of depositions by tape recording as set out in Sanchez v. District Court, 200 Colo. 33, 624 P.2d 1314 (1981).

Section 1-14DEFAULT JUDGMENTS

1. To enter a default judgment under C.R.C.P. 55(b) of the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, the following documents in addition to the motion for default judgment are necessary:

- (a) The original summons showing valid service on the particular defendant in accordance with Rule 4, C.R.C.P.
- (b) An affidavit stating facts showing that venue of the action is proper. The affidavit may be executed by the attorney for the moving party.
- (c) An affidavit or affidavits establishing that the particular defendant is not a minor, an incapacitated person, an officer or agency of the State of Colorado, or in the military service. The affidavit must be executed by the attorney for the moving party on the basis of reasonable inquiry.
- (d) An affidavit or affidavits or exhibits establishing the amount of damages and interest, if any, for which judgment is being sought. The affidavit may not be executed by the attorney for the moving party. The affidavit must be executed by a person with knowledge of the damages and the basis therefor.

(e) If attorney fees are requested, an affidavit that the defendant agreed to pay attorney fees or that they are provided by statute; that they have been paid or incurred; and that they are reasonable. The attorney for the moving party may execute the affidavit setting forth those matters listed in or required by Colorado Rule of Professional Conduct 1.5.

(f) If the action is on a promissory note, and the original note is paper based, the original note shall be presented to the court in order that the court may make a notation of the judgment on the face of the note.

(g) A proposed form of judgment which shall recite in the body of the judgment:

- (1) The name of the party or parties to whom the judgment is to be granted;
- (2) The name of the party or the parties against whom judgment is being taken;
- (3) Venue has been considered and is proper;
- (4) When there are multiple parties against whom judgment is taken, whether the relief is intended to be a joint and several obligation;
- (5) Where multiple parties are involved, language to comply with C.R.C.P. 54(b), if final judgment is sought against less than all the defendants;
- (6) The principal amount, interest and attorney's fees, if applicable, and costs which shall be separately stated.

2. If further documentation, proof or hearing is required, the court shall so notify the moving party.

3. If the party against whom default judgment is sought is in the military service, or his status cannot be shown, the court shall require such additional evidence or proceeding as will protect the interests of such party in accordance with the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (SCRA), 50 U.S.C. § 3931, including the appointment of an attorney when necessary. The appointment of an attorney shall be made upon application of the moving party, and expense of such appointment shall be borne by the moving party, but taxable as costs awarded to the moving party as part of the judgment except as prohibited by law.

4. In proceedings which come within the provisions of Rules 55 or 120, C.R.C.P., attendance by the moving party or his attorney shall not be necessary in any instance in which all necessary elements for entry of default under those rules are self-evident from verified motion in the court file. When such matter comes up on the docket with no party or attorney appearing and the court is of the opinion that necessary elements are not so established, the court shall continue or vacate the hearing and advise the moving party or attorney accordingly.

This Practice Standard was needed because neither C.R.C.P. 55, nor any local rule specified the elements necessary to obtain a default judgment and each court was left to determine what was necessary. One faced with the task of attempting to obtain a default judgment usually found themselves making several trips to the courthouse, numerous phone calls and redoing needed documents several times. The Practice Standard is designed to minimize both court and attorney time. The Practice Standard sets forth a standardized check list which designates particular items needed for obtaining a default judgment. For guidance on affidavits, see C.R.C.P. 108. See also Section 13-63-101, C.R.S., concerning affidavits and requirements by the court.

Section 1-15DETERMINATION OF MOTIONS*1. Motions and Briefs; When Required; Time for Serving and Filing — Length.

(a) Except motions during trial or where the court orders that certain or all non-dispositive motions be made orally, any motions involving a contested issue of law shall be supported by a recitation of legal authority incorporated into the motion, which shall not be filed with a separate brief. Unless the court orders otherwise, motions and responsive briefs not under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) or (2), or 56 are limited to 15 pages, and reply briefs to 10 pages, not including the case caption, signature block, certificate of service and attachments. Unless the court orders otherwise, motions and responsive briefs under C.R.C.P. 12(b)(1) or (2) or 56 are limited to 25 pages, and reply briefs to 15 pages, not including the case caption, signature block, certificate of service and attachments. All motions and briefs shall comply with C.R.C.P. 10(d).

(b) The responding party shall have 21 days after the filing of the motion or such lesser or greater time as the court may allow in which to file a responsive brief. If a motion is filed 42 days or less before the trial date, the responding party shall have 14 days after the filing of the motion or such lesser or greater time as the court may allow in which to file a responsive brief.

(c) Except for a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 56, the moving party shall have 7 days after the filing of the responsive brief or such greater or lesser time as the court may allow to file a reply brief. For a motion pursuant to C.R.C.P. 56, the moving party shall have 14 days after the filing of the responsive brief or such greater or lesser time as the court may allow to file a reply brief.

(d) A motion shall not be included in a response or reply to the original motion.

2. Affidavits. If facts not appearing of record may be considered in disposition of the motion, the parties may file affidavits with the motion or within the time specified for filing the party's brief in this section 1-15, Rules 6, 56 or 59, C.R.C.P., or as otherwise ordered by the court. Copies of such affidavits and any documentary evidence used in connection with the motion shall be served on all other parties.

3. Effect of Failure to File Legal Authority. If the moving party fails to incorporate legal authority into a written motion, the court may deem the motion abandoned and may enter an order denying the motion. Other than motions seeking to resolve a claim or defense under C.R.C.P. 12 or 56, failure of a responding party to file a responsive brief may be considered a confession of the motion.

4. Motions to Be Determined on Briefs, When Oral Argument Is Allowed; Motions Requiring Immediate Attention. Motions shall be determined promptly if possible. The court has discretion to order briefing or set a hearing on the motion. If possible, the court shall determine oral motions at the conclusion of the argument, but may take the motion under advisement or require briefing before ruling. Any motion requiring immediate disposition shall be called to the attention of the courtroom clerk by the party filing such motion.

5. Notification of Court's Ruling; Setting of Argument or Hearing When Ordered. Whenever the court enters an order denying or granting a motion without a hearing, all parties shall be forthwith notified by the court of such order. If the court desires or authorizes oral argument or an evidentiary hearing, all parties shall be so notified by the court. After notification, it shall be the responsibility of the moving party to have the motion set for oral argument or hearing. Unless the court orders otherwise, a notice to set oral argument or hearing shall be filed in accordance with Practice Standard § 1-6 within 7 days of notification that oral argument or hearing is required or authorized.

6. Effect of Failure to Appear at Oral Argument or Hearing. If any of the parties fails to appear at an oral argument or hearing, without prior showing of good cause for non-appearance, the court may proceed to hear and rule on the motion.

7. Sanctions. If a frivolous motion is filed or if frivolous opposition to a motion is interposed, the court may assess reasonable attorney's fees against the party or attorney filing such motion or interposing such opposition.

8. Duty to Confer. Unless a statute or rule governing the motion provides that it may be filed without notice, moving counsel and any self-represented party shall confer with opposing counsel and any self-represented parties before filing a motion. The requirement of self-represented parties to confer and the requirement to confer with self-represented parties shall not apply to any incarcerated person, or any self-represented party as to whom the requirement is contrary to court order or statute, including, but not limited to, any person as to whom contact would or precipitate a violation of a protection or restraining order. The motion shall, at the beginning, contain a certification that the movant in good faith has conferred with opposing counsel and any self-represented parties about the motion. If the relief sought by the motion has been agreed to by the parties or will not be opposed, the court shall be so advised in the motion. If no conference has occurred, the reason why, including all efforts to confer, shall be stated.

9. Unopposed Motions. All unopposed motions shall be so designated in the title of the motion.

10. Proposed Order. Except for orders containing signatures of the parties or attorneys as required by statute or rule, each motion shall be accompanied by a proposed order submitted in editable format. The proposed order complies with this provision if it states that the requested relief be granted or denied.

11. Motions to Reconsider. Motions to reconsider interlocutory orders of the court, meaning motions to reconsider other than those governed by C.R.C.P. 59 or 60, are disfavored. A party moving to reconsider must show more than a disagreement with the court's decision. Such a motion must allege a manifest error of fact or law that clearly mandates a different result or other circumstance resulting in manifest injustice. The motion shall be filed within 14 days from the date of the order, unless the party seeking reconsideration shows good cause for not filing within that time. Good cause for not filing within 14 days from the date of the order includes newly available material evidence and an intervening change in the governing legal standard. The court may deny the motion before receiving a responsive brief under paragraph 1(b) of this standard.

[1] This Practice Standard was necessary because of lack of uniformity among the districts concerning how motions were to be made, set and determined. The Practice Standard recognizes that oral argument and hearings are not necessary in all cases, and encourages disposition of motions upon written submissions. The standard also sets forth the uniform requirements concerning filing of legal authority, filing of matters not already of record necessary to determination of motions, and the manner of setting an oral argument if argument is permitted. The practice standard is broad enough to include all motions, including venue motions. Some motions will not require extended legal analysis or affidavits. Obviously, if the basis for a motion is simple and routine, the citation of authorities can be correspondingly simple. Motions or briefs in excess of 10 pages are discouraged.

[2] This standard specifies contemporaneous recitation of legal authority either in the motion itself for all motions except those under C.R.C.P. Rule 56. Moving counsel should confer with opposing counsel before filing a motion to attempt to work out the difference prompting the motion. Every motion must, at the beginning, contain a certification that the movant, in good faith, has conferred with opposing counsel about the motion. If there has been no conference, the reason why must be stated. To assist the court, if the relief sought by the motion has been agreed to or will not be opposed, the court is to be so advised in the motion.

[3] Paragraph 4 of the standard contains an important feature. Any matter requiring immediate action should be called to the attention of the courtroom clerk by the party filing a motion for forthwith disposition. Calling the urgency of a matter to the attention of the court is a responsibility of the parties. The court should permit a forthwith determination.

[4] Paragraph 11 of the standard neither limits a trial court's discretion to modify an interlocutory order, on motion or sua sponte, nor affects C.R.M. 5(a).

2015

[5] The sentence in the 1994 comment that "motions or briefs in excess of 10 pages are discouraged" has been superseded by the 2015 amendments to the rule on the length of motions and briefs. The sentence in the 1994 comment that "moving counsel should confer with opposing counsel before filing a motion to attempt to work out the difference prompting the motion" is corrected to change the word "should" to "shall" to be consistent with the wording of the rule.

Section 1-16PREPARATION OF ORDERS AND OBJECTIONS AS TO FORM

1. When directed by the court, the attorney for the prevailing party or such attorney as the court directs shall file and serve a proposed order within 14 days of such direction or such other time as the court directs. Prior to filing the proposed order, the attorney shall submit it to all other parties for approval as to form. The proposed order shall be timely filed even if all parties have not approved it as to form. A party objecting to the form of the proposed order as filed with court shall have 7 days after service of the proposed order to file and serve objections and suggested modifications to the form of the proposed order.

2. Alternatively, when directed by the court, the attorney for the prevailing party or such attorney as the court directs shall file and serve a stipulated order within 14 days after the ruling, or such other time as the court directs. Any matter upon which the parties cannot agree as to form shall be designated in the proposed order as "disputed." The proposed order shall set forth each party's specific alternative proposal for each disputed matter.

3. Objecting, proposing modification or agreeing to the form of a proposed order or stipulated order, shall not affect a party's rights to appeal the substance of the order.

Section 1-17COURT SETTLEMENT CONFERENCES

1. At any time after the filing of Disclosure Certificates as required by C.R.C.P. 16, any party may file with the courtroom clerk and serve a request for a court settlement conference, together with a notice for setting of such request. The court settlement conference shall, if the request is granted, be conducted by any available judge other than the assigned judge. In all instances, the assigned judge shall arrange for the availability of a different judge to conduct the court settlement conference.

2. All discussions at the settlement conference shall remain confidential and shall not be disclosed to the judge who presides at trial. Statements at the settlement conference shall not be admissible evidence for any purpose in any other proceeding.

3. This Rule shall not apply to proceedings conducted pursuant to Rule 16.2(i).

Source: Entire section amended and adopted September 30, 2004, effective for Domestic Relations Cases as defined in 16.2(a) filed on or after January 1, 2005, and for post-decree motions filed on or after January 1, 2005.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This Practice Standard provides machinery for settlement conference upon request of the parties. The Practice Standard was deemed necessary because it was previously not possible to have a settlement conference in some districts. The committee recognized that there may be practical difficulties in a particular district because of nonavailability of a separate judge. It was felt that this problem could perhaps be largely overcome by cooperation between several districts or by use of a retired judge to make the service available.

Part 2 of the Practice Standard was deemed necessary to encourage settlement conference participation by litigants. Confidentiality and nonadmissibility of statements or communications made at settlement conference should override and prevail as a matter of policy over any asserted right or interest to the contrary.

Section 1-18PRETRIAL PROCEDURE, CASE MANAGEMENT, DISCLOSURE AND SIMPLIFICATION OF ISSUES

Pretrial procedure, case management, disclosure and simplification of issues shall be in accordance with C.R.C.P. 16.

Editor's note: The Committee Comment to this section, was deleted from these rules when changes were made to this section November 12, 1987, pursuant to Court change #1987 (17).

Section 1-19JURY INSTRUCTIONS

Jury instructions shall be prepared and tendered to the court pursuant to C.R.C.P. 16(g).

Source: Entire section amended and adopted April 14, 1994, effective January 1, 1995, for all cases filed on or after that date; entire section amended and comment added effective January 12, 2017.

COMMENT1983

This Standard makes preparation and timing of submission of jury instructions uniform throughout the state. It reasonably assures preparation of instructions and verdict forms before commencement of trial, but retains some needed flexibility in their final form. To permit use of preprepared forms, save time and expense, and to facilitate last-moment revision, the Standard mandates use of photocopies rather than typed originals for submission to the jury.

Section 1-20SIZE AND FORMAT OF DOCUMENTS

All court documents shall be prepared in 8-1/2" x 11" format with black type or print and conform to the format, and spacing requirements specified in C.R.C.P. 10(d). Except documents filed by E-Filing or facsimile copy, all court documents shall be on recycled white paper. Any form required by these rules may be reproduced by word processor or other means, provided that the reproduction substantially follows the format of the form and indicates the effective date of the form which it reproduces.

Source: Entire section amended and effective September 6, 1990; entire section and committee comment amended July 9, 1992, effective October 1, 1992; entire section amended March 17, 1994, effective July 1, 1994; entire section and committee comment amended and adopted October 20, 2005, effective January 1, 2006.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This standard draws attention to the requirements of C.R.C.P. 10(d) pertaining to paper size, paper quality, format and spacing of court documents. Color of paper and print requirements for documents not filed by E-Filing or facsimile copy were made necessary because colors other than black and white create photocopying and microfilming difficulties. Provision is also made to clarify that forms reproduced by word processor are acceptable if they follow the format of the form and state the effective date of the form which it reproduces.

Section 1-21COURT TRANSCRIPTS

1. A party requesting a transcript shall arrange for preparation of the transcript directly with the reporter, or if the session or proceeding was recorded by mechanical or electronic means, the courtroom clerk. Where a transcript is to be made a part of the record on appeal, a party shall request preparation of the transcript by reference in the Designation of Record and by direct arrangement with the court reporter or courtroom clerk as provided herein.

2. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, a court reporter may require a deposit of sufficient money to cover the estimated cost of preparation before preparing the transcript.

3. The transcript shall be signed and certified by the person preparing the transcript. A transcript lodged with the court shall not be removed from the court without court order except when transmitted to the appellate court.

Source: 1. and 3. amended and adopted October 20, 2005, effective January 1, 2006.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

This Practice Standard sets forth uniform requirements for obtaining, paying for, certification and removal of court reporter transcripts.

Section 1-22COSTS AND ATTORNEY FEES

1. Costs. A party claiming costs shall file a Bill of Costs within 21 days of the entry of order or judgment or within such greater time as the court may allow. The Bill of Costs shall itemize and provide a total of costs being claimed. Taxing and determination of costs shall be in accordance with C.R.C.P. 54(d) and Practice Standard § 1-15. Any party that may be affected by the Bill of Costs may request a hearing within the time permitted to file a reply in support of the Bill of Costs. Any request shall identify those issues that the party believes should be addressed at the hearing. When required to do so by law, the court shall grant a party's timely request for a hearing. In other cases where a party has made a timely request for a hearing, the court shall hold a hearing if it determines in its discretion that a hearing would materially assist the court in ruling on the motion.

2. Attorney Fees. (a) Scope. This practice standard applies to requests for attorney fees made at the conclusion of the action, including attorney fee awards requested pursuant to Section 13-17-102, C.R.S. It also includes awards of fees made to the prevailing party pursuant to a contract or statute where the award is dependent upon the achievement of a successful result in the litigation in which fees are to be awarded and the fees are for services rendered in connection with that litigation. This practice standard does not apply to attorney fees which are part of a judgment for damages and incurred as a result of other proceedings, or for services rendered other than in connection with the proceeding in which judgment is entered. This practice standard also does not apply to requests for attorney fees on matters relating to pre-trial sanctions and motions for default judgment unless otherwise ordered by the court.

(b) Motion and Response. Any party seeking attorney fees under this practice standard shall file and serve a motion for attorney fees within 21 days of entry of judgment or such greater time as the court may allow. The motion shall explain the basis upon which fees are sought, the amount of fees sought, and the method by which those fees were calculated. The motion shall be accompanied by any supporting documentation, including materials evidencing the attorney's time spent, the fee agreement between the attorney and client, and the reasonableness of the fees. Any response and reply, including any supporting documentation, shall be filed within the time allowed in practice standard § 1-15. The court may permit discovery on the issue of attorney fees only upon good cause shown when requested by any party.

(c) Hearing; Determination of Motion. Any party which may be affected by the motion for attorney fees may request a hearing within the time permitted to file a reply. Any request shall identify those issues which the party believes should be addressed at the hearing. When required to do so by law, the court shall grant a party's timely request for a hearing. In other cases where a party has made a timely request for a hearing, the court shall hold a hearing if it determines in its discretion that a hearing would materially assist the court in ruling on the motion. In exercising its discretion as to whether to hold a hearing in these cases, the court shall consider the amount of fees sought, the sufficiency of the disclosures made by the moving party in its motion and supporting documentation, and the extent and nature of the objections made in response to the motion. The court shall make findings of fact to support its determination of the motion. Attorney fees awarded under this practice standard shall be taxed as costs.

[1] Costs. This Standard establishes a uniform, optimum time within which to claim costs. The 15 day requirement encourages prompt filings so that disputes on costs can be determined with other post-trial motions. This Standard also requires itemization and totaling of cost items and reminds practitioners of the means of determining disputes on costs. C.R.S. 13-16-122 (1981) sets forth those items generally awardable as costs.

[2] Attorney Fees. Subject to certain exceptions, this Standard establishes a uniform procedure for resolving attorney fee disputes in matters where the request for attorney fees is made at the conclusion of an action or where attorney fees are awarded to the prevailing party (see "Scope"). Unless otherwise ordered by the court, attorney fees under C.R.S. 14-10-119 should be heard at the time of the hearing on the motion or proceeding for which they are requested.

[3] The prior version of Rule 121, Section 1-22(2) addressed when and under what circumstances a party is entitled to a hearing regarding an award of attorney fees, but no rule addressed the circumstances regarding a hearing on costs. The procedural mechanisms regarding awards of attorney fees and awards of costs should be the same, and thus the rule change adds the existing language regarding hearings on attorney fees to awards of costs.

Section 1-23

BONDS IN CIVIL ACTIONS

1. Bonds Which Are Automatically Effective Upon Filing With the Court. The following bonds are automatically effective upon filing with the clerk of the court:

(a) Cash bonds in the amount set by court order, subsection 3 of this rule, or any applicable statute.

(b) Certificates of deposit issued by a bank chartered by either the United States government or the State of Colorado, in the amount set by court order, subsection 3 of this rule, or any applicable statute. The certificate of deposit shall be issued in the name of the clerk of the court and payable to the clerk of the court, and the original of the certificate of deposit must be deposited with the clerk of the court.

(c) Corporate surety bonds issued by corporate sureties presently authorized to do business in the State of Colorado in the amount set by court order, subsection 3 of this rule, or any applicable statute. A power of attorney showing the present or current authority of the agent for the surety signing the bond shall be filed with the bond.

2. Bonds Which Are Effective Only Upon Entry of an Order Approving the Bond.

(a) Letters of credit issued by a bank chartered by either the United States government or the State of Colorado, in the amount set by court order, subsection 3 of this rule, or any applicable statute. The beneficiary of the letter of credit shall be the clerk of the district court. The original of the letter of credit shall be deposited with the clerk of the court.

(b) Any Other Proposed Bond.

3. Amounts of Bond.

(a) Supersedeas Bonds. Unless the court otherwise orders, or any applicable statute directs a higher amount, the amount of a supersedeas bond to stay execution of a money judgment shall be 125% of the total amount of the judgment entered by the court (including any prejudgment interest, costs and attorneys fees awarded by the court). The amount of a supersedeas bond to stay execution of a non-money judgment shall be determined by the court. Nothing in this rule is intended to limit the court's discretion to deny a stay with respect to non-money judgments. Any interested party may move the trial court (which shall have jurisdiction notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal) for an increase in the amount of the bond to reflect the anticipated time for completion of appellate proceedings or any increase in the amount of judgment.

(b) Other Bonds. The amounts of all other bonds shall be determined by the court or by any applicable statute.

4. Service of Bonds Upon All Parties of Record. A copy of all bonds or proposed bonds filed with the court shall be served on all parties of record in accordance with C.R.C.P. 5(b).

5. No Unsecured Bonds. Except as expressly provided by statute, and except with respect to appearance bonds, no unsecured bond shall be accepted by the court.

6. Objections to Bonds. Any party in interest may file an objection to any bond which is automatically effective under subsection 1 of this rule or to any proposed bond subject to subsection 2 of this rule. A bond, which is automatically effective under subsection 1 remains in effect unless the court orders otherwise. Any objections shall be filed not later than 14 days after service of the bond or proposed bond except that objections based upon the entry of any amended or additional judgment shall be made not later than 14 days after entry of any such amended or additional judgment.

7. Bonding over a Lien. If a money judgment has been made a lien upon real estate by the filing of a transcript of the judgment record by the judgment creditor, the lien shall be released upon the motion of the judgment debtor or other interested party if a bond for the money judgment has been approved and filed as provided in this section 1-23. The order of the court releasing the lien may be recorded with the clerk and recorder of the county where the property is located. Once the order is recorded, all proceedings by the judgment creditor to enforce the judgment lien shall be discontinued, unless a court orders otherwise.

8. Proceedings against Surety or other Security Provider. When these rules require or permit the giving of a bond or other type of security, the surety or other security provider submits to the jurisdiction of the court. The liability of the surety or other security provider may be enforced on motion without the necessity of an independent action. At the time any party seeks to enforce such liability, it shall provide notice of its motion or other form of request to all parties of record and the surety or other security provider in accordance with C.R.C.P. 5(b).

9. Definition. The term "bond" as used in this rule includes any type of security provided to stay enforcement of a money judgment or any other obligation including providing security under C.R.C.P. 65.

COMMENTS

[1] The Committee is aware that issues have arisen regarding the effective date of a bond, and thus the effectiveness of injunction orders and other orders which are conditioned upon the filing of an acceptable bond. Certain types of bonds are almost always acceptable and thus, under this rule, are automatically effective upon filing with the Court subject to the consideration of timely filed objections. Other types of bonds may or may not be acceptable and should not be effective until the Court determines the sufficiency of the bond. The court may permit property bonds upon such conditions as are appropriate to protect the judgment creditor (or other party sought to be protected). Such conditions may include an appraisal by a qualified appraiser, information regarding liens and encumbrances against the property, and title insurance.

[2] This rule also sets the presumptive amount of a supersedeas bond for a money judgment. The amount of a supersedeas bond for a non-money judgment must be determined in the particular case by the court and this rule is not intended to affect the court's discretion to deny a supersedeas bond in the case of a non-money judgment.

FACSIMILE COPIES

1. Facsimile copy, defined. A facsimile copy is a copy generated by a system that encodes a document into electrical signals, transmits these electrical signals over a telephone/data line, then reconstructs the signals to print an exact duplicate of the original document at the receiving end.

2. Facsimile copies which conform with the quality requirements specified in C.R.C.P. 10(d)(1) may be filed with the court in lieu of the original document. Once filed with the court, the facsimile copy shall be treated as an original for all court purposes. If a facsimile copy is filed in lieu of the original document, the attorney or party filing the facsimile shall retain the original document for production to the court, if requested to do so.

3. The court is not required to provide confirmation that it has received a facsimile transmission.

4. Any facsimile copy transmitted directly to the court shall be accompanied by a cover sheet which states the title of the document, case number, number of pages, identity and voice telephone number of transmitter and any instructions.

5. Payment of any required filing fees shall not be deferred for documents filed with the court by facsimile transmission.

6. This rule shall not require courts to have a facsimile machine nor shall the court be required to transmit orders or other material to attorneys or parties via facsimile transmission.

COMMITTEE COMMENT

Facsimile transmissions are becoming commonplace in the business world. It was therefore deemed reasonable that the court system adapt to accommodate the use of this technology. Use of the technology, however, should not create more work for court staff. In order not to add to the duties of overburdened court personnel, provision is made that court personnel need not provide confirmation that a facsimile transmission has been received. This should not create difficulty for attorneys because almost all equipment manufactured today provides confirmation that a document has been received. This confirmation should be attached to the document sent and retained with the original document in the party's file.

The committee envisioned at least two ways in which facsimile filings could be accomplished. The first would be an arrangement where the facsimile machine would be located in a court clerk's office. The other would be where transmissions would be made to a machine outside the courthouse and then delivered to the clerk for filing. These rules were designed to accommodate both kinds of filings.

Ordinary thermofax paper fades in sunlight, deteriorates with handling and has a short shelf life. Therefore, only permanent plain paper which is not subject to these infirmities is acceptable for court purposes.

The committee also recognized that a requirement for filing of the original after filing of a facsimile copy would create more work for court staff. The committee therefore decided to accept facsimile copies in lieu of the original with the provision that the original would be maintained if it were ever needed for any purpose.

The requirement under C.R.C.P. 121, Sec. 1-15 for filing of a copy of any motions or briefs has been modified so that a copy is also filed with the clerk of the court. The clerk of the court is then responsible for distributing the copy to the courtroom clerk. This change is necessary because the courtroom clerk will ordinarily not have a separate facsimile machine.

Some judicial districts have or are acquiring the ability to accept credit cards or bank cards for payment of fees and fines. In the judicial districts where bank cards can be used for payment, parties may file complaints, answers and other pleadings which require a filing fee by faxing an appropriate bank card authorization along with the pleadings. If a judicial district does not accept payment by bank card, those types of pleadings cannot be filed by facsimile transmission because payment of filing fees will not be deferred.

The committee believes that reasonable fees can be charged for the costs associated with facsimile filings. However, the setting of such fees is not within the scope of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

The adoption of this rule does not require an attorney to have a designated facsimile telephone number.

Section 1-26

ELECTRONIC FILING AND SERVICE SYSTEM

1. Definitions:

(a) Document: A pleading, motion, writing or other paper filed or served under the E-System.

(b) E-Filing/Service System: The E-Filing/Service System ("E-System") approved by the Colorado Supreme Court for filing and service of documents via the Internet through the Court-authorized E-System provider.

(c) Electronic Filing: Electronic filing ("E-Filing") is the transmission of documents to the clerk of the court, and from the court, via the E-System.

(d) Electronic Service: Electronic service ("E-Service") is the transmission of documents to any party in a case via the E-System. Parties who have subscribed to the E-System have agreed to receive service, other than service of a summons, via the E-System.

(e) E-System Provider: The E-Service/E-Filing System Provider authorized by the Colorado Supreme Court.

(f) Signatures:

(I) Electronic Signature: An electronic sound, symbol, or process attached to or logically associated with an electronic record and executed or adopted by the person with the intent to sign the E-filed or E-served document.

2. Types of Cases Applicable: E-Filing and E-Service may be used for certain cases filed in the courts of Colorado as the service becomes available. The availability of the E-System will be determined by the Colorado Supreme Court and announced through its web site <http://www.courts.state.co.us/supct/supct.htm> and through published directives to the clerks of the affected court systems. E-Filing and E-Service may be mandated pursuant to Subsection 13 of this Practice Standard 1-26.

3. To Whom Applicable:

(a) Attorneys licensed or certified to practice law in Colorado, or admitted pro hac vice under C.R.C.P. 205.3 or 205.5, may register to use the E-System. The E-System provider will provide an attorney permitted to appear pursuant to C.R.C.P. 205.3 or 205.5 with a special user account for purposes of E-Filing and E-Serving only in the case identified by a court order approving pro hac vice admission. The E-System provider will provide an attorney certified as pro bono counsel pursuant to C.R.C.P. 204.6 with a special user account for purposes of E-Filing and E-Serving in pro bono cases as contemplated by that rule. An attorney may enter an appearance pursuant to Rule 121, Section 1-1, through E-Filing. In districts where E-Filing is mandated pursuant to Subsection 13 of this Practice Standard 1-26, attorneys must register and use the E-System.

(b) Where the system and necessary equipment are in place to permit it, pro se parties and government entities and agencies may register to use the E-System.

4. Commencement of Action—Service of Summons: Cases may be commenced under C.R.C.P. 3 by E-Filing the initial pleading. Service of a summons shall be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4.

5. E-Filing—Date and Time of Filing: Documents filed in cases on the E-System may be filed under C.R.C.P. 5 through an E-Filing. A document transmitted to the E-System Provider by 11:59 p.m. Colorado time shall be deemed to have been filed with the clerk of the court on that date.

6. E-Service—When Required - Date and Time of Service: Documents submitted to the court through E-Filing shall be served under C.R.C.P. 5 by E-Service. A document transmitted to the E-System Provider for service by 11:59 p.m. Colorado time shall be deemed to have been served on that date.

7. Filing Party to Maintain the Signed Copy—Paper Document Not to Be Filed—Duration of Maintaining of Document: A printed or printable copy of an E-Filed or E-Served document with original, electronic, or scanned signatures shall be maintained by the filing party and made available for inspection by other parties or the court upon request, but shall not be filed with the court. When these rules require a party to maintain a document, the filer is required to maintain the document for a period of two years after the final resolution of the action, including the final resolution of all appeals. For domestic relations decrees, separation agreements and parenting plans, original signature pages bearing the attorneys, parties', and notaries' signatures must be scanned and E-filed. For probate of a will, the original must be lodged with the court.

8. Documents Requiring E-Filed Signatures: For E-Filed and E-Served documents, signatures of attorneys, parties, witnesses, notaries and notary stamps may be affixed electronically or documents with signatures obtained on a paper form scanned.

9. C.R.C.P. 11 Compliance: An e-signature is a signature for the purposes of C.R.C.P. 11.

10. Documents under Seal: A motion for leave to file documents under seal may be E-Filed. Documents to be filed under seal pursuant to an order of the court may be E-Filed at the direction of the court; however, the filing party may object to this procedure.

11. Transmitting of Orders, Notices and Other Court Entries: Beginning January 1, 2006, courts shall distribute orders, notices, and other court entries using the E-System in cases where E-Filings were received from any party.

12. Form of E-Filed Documents: C.R.C.P. 10 shall apply to E-Filed documents. A document shall not be transmitted to the clerk of the court by any other means unless the court at any later time requests a printed copy.

13. E-Filing May be Mandated: With the permission of the Chief Justice, a chief judge may mandate E-Filing within a county or judicial district for specific case classes or types of cases. A judicial officer may mandate E-Filing and E-Service in that judicial officer's division for specific cases, for submitting documents to the court and serving documents on case parties. Where E-Filing is mandatory, the court may thereafter accept a document in paper form and the court shall scan the document and upload it to the E-Service Provider. After notice to an attorney that all future documents are to be E-Filed, the court may charge a fee of $50 per document for the service of scanning and uploading a document filed in paper form. Where E-Filing and E-Service are mandatory, the Chief Judge or appropriate judicial officer may exclude pro se parties from mandatory E-Filing requirements.

14. Relief in the Event of Technical Difficulties:

(a) Upon satisfactory proof that E-Filing or E-Service of a document was not completed because of: (1) an error in the transmission of the document to the E-System Provider which was unknown to the sending party; (2) a failure of the E-System Provider to process the E-Filing when received, or (3) other technical problems experienced by the filer or E-System Provider, the court may enter an order permitting the document to be filed nunc pro tunc to the date it was first attempted to be sent electronically.

(b) Upon satisfactory proof that an E-Served document was not received by or unavailable to a party served, the court may enter an order extending the time for responding to that document.

15. Form of Electronic Documents:

(a) Electronic document format, size and density: Electronic document format, size, and density shall be as specified by Chief Justice Directive # 11-01.

(b) Multiple Documents: Multiple documents (including proposed orders) may be filed in a single electronic filing transaction. Each document (including proposed orders) in that filing must bear a separate document title.

(c) Proposed Orders: Proposed orders shall be E-Filed in editable format. Proposed orders that are E-Filed in a non-editable format shall be rejected by the Court Clerk's office and must be resubmitted.

Annotator’s note. The following annotations include cases decided under prior versions of the sections.

Purpose of rule. This rule is intended to provide uniformity among the various district courts as to procedural matters. People ex rel. Sullivan v. Swihart, 897 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1995).

Authority of district court rules is recognized so long as they do not conflict with the Colorado rules of civil procedure or with any directive of the supreme court. Danburg v. Realities, Inc., 677 P.2d 439 (Colo. App. 1984).

Not all standing orders are local rules. Section (a) of this rule clearly distinguishes between “standing orders having the effect of local rules” and those that do not. Therefore, not all standing orders are required to be reviewed by the supreme court. People ex rel. Sullivan v. Swihart, 897 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1995).

This rule contemplates supreme court approval only for standing orders that affect the rights of litigants before the court. People ex rel. Sullivan v. Swihart, 897 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1995).

Standing order of chief judge of judicial district prohibiting possession of a deadly weapon or firearm in designated areas of courthouse was a valid exercise of the chief judge’s authority as to administrative matters, did not affect the procedural rights of litigants, and did not require supreme court approval under this rule. People ex rel. Sullivan v. Swihart, 897 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1995).

Late filings. This rule applies only to the failure to file a brief and does not apply to late filings. Charles Milne Assoc. v. Toponce, 770 P.2d 1313 (Colo. App. 1988).

Trial court’s failure to comply with procedural requirements concerning notice and time for filing responsive brief before ruling on motion to dismiss is an abuse of discretion. Lanes v. Scott, 688 P.2d 251 (Colo. App. 1984).

Court order vacated where the court granted a proposed order three days after it was filed in violation of § 1-16, which allows a party seven days to object to the form of a proposed order. Laleh v. Johnson, 2016 COA 4, 405 P.3d 286, aff’d, 2017 CO 93, 403 P.3d 207.

Court’s sua sponte order of dismissal for failure to prosecute cannot stand if it is not preceded by the notice required by § 1-10 and C.R.C.P. 41. In re Custody of Nugent, 955 P.2d 584 (Colo. App. 1997); Koh v. Kumar, 207 P.3d 900 (Colo. App. 2009).

A delay reduction order does not suffice to provide notice of dismissal under § 1-10. Koh v. Kumar, 207 P.3d 900 (Colo. App. 2009).

Juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in declining to consider failure of the mother to file a responsive pleading to the father’s post-trial motion as a confession of motion. M.H.W. by M.E.S. v. D.J.W., 757 P.2d 1129 (Colo. App. 1988).

Failure to give an opportunity to respond to authority cited in support of or in opposition to a motion is harmless unless prejudice is shown. Benson v. Colo. Comp. Ins. Auth., 870 P.2d 624 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where there has been an unusual delay in prosecuting an action, prejudice to the defendant will be presumed. Therefore, in the absence of mitigating circumstances, an unusual delay in prosecuting an action justifies dismissal with prejudice. Richardson v. McFee, 687 P.2d 517 (Colo. App. 1984).

District court erred in exercising its discretion to dismiss appellant’s case pursuant to § 1-10(3) of this rule due to appellant’s inactivity while it waited 13 months for a ruling from the court on its motion for summary judgment on the counterclaims. Appellant, having done all that was required to obtain a ruling from the court on the merits, was not obligated to renew its motion for summary judgment on the counterclaims or even remind the court that the motion needed to be ruled on to avoid the prospect of dismissal. Hudak v. Med. Lien Mgmt., Inc., 2013 COA 83, 305 P.3d 429.

Trial court held not to have abused discretion in dismissing action with prejudice for failure to prosecute. Rossi v. Mathers, 749 P.2d 964 (Colo. App. 1987).

Scope of issues raised by a trial data certificate is limited only by the breadth of notice provided by the complaint. Under our rules of civil procedure, the precise legal theory asserted by a claimant is not controlling, so long as the complaint gives sufficient notice of the transaction sued upon. Yoder v. Hooper, 695 P.2d 1182 (Colo. App. 1984), aff’d, 732 P.2d 852 (Colo. 1987).

Trial court erred when it concluded deponent received “reasonable notice” of deposition under § 1-12 (1). Deponent received deposition notice only two days before the deposition, and one of those days was a Sunday. As such, deponent did not receive at least five days notice before the deposition. However, under C.R.C.P. 32(d)(1), “all errors and irregularities in the notice for taking a deposition are waived unless written objection is promptly served upon the party giving the notice”. Keenan ex rel. Hickman v. Gregg, 192 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2008).

Provision inapplicable to summary judgment motions. Because of the drastic nature of summary judgment, provisions under § 1-15 concerning confession of motions are inapplicable to motions for summary judgment under this rule. Seal v. Hart, 755 P.2d 462 (Colo. App. 1988).

Failure to present controverting affidavit or other evidentiary materials are not grounds for summary judgment. Murphy v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 747 P.2d 691 (Colo. App. 1987).

Failure of nonmoving party to present affidavits or other evidentiary materials opposing a motion for summary judgment does not alone provide a proper basis for the entry of a judgment on the pleadings. Quiroz v. Goff, 46 P.3d 486 (Colo. App. 2002).

Only under extreme circumstances should sanction of dismissal or entry of default judgment be imposed. This rule should not be applied in a manner which unreasonably denies a party its day in court. Nagy v. District Court, 762 P.2d 158 (Colo. 1988) (decided under rule in effect prior to 1987 repeal and readoption); Pinkstaff v. Black & Decker (U.S.), Inc., 211 P.3d 698 (Colo. 2009).

Section 1-14 (2) requires the court to explain to the moving party why a motion for default judgment is deficient when the court denies the motion for default judgment. Spiremedia Inc. v. Wozniak, 2020 COA 10, 487 P.3d 1211.

It is within the district court’s discretion to conduct an evidentiary hearing or rule on the submitted motions to vacate or modify an arbitration award. BFN-Greely, LLC v. Adair Group, Inc., 141 P.3d 937 (Colo. App. 2006).

Mere citation of a rule of civil procedure is not a “recitation of legal authority” as required by § 1-15 (7) of this rule. Box v. Wickham, 713 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1985).

Trial court improperly awarded attorney fees upon determining that a motion was frivolous due to an erroneous finding that the court had no jurisdiction. In re Smith, 757 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1988).

Post-trial motion for the award of attorney fees is analogous to a request for taxing costs and should follow procedures established by C.R.C.P. 54(d) and § 1-22 of this rule. A trial court may address the issue of the award of attorney fees for services rendered in connection with the underlying litigation on a post-trial basis, whether or not counsel has previously sought to “reserve” the issue. Roa v. Miller, 784 P.2d 826 (Colo. App. 1989).

An award of attorney fees under § 13-17-102 cannot be held to be confessed by failure to respond to a motion for fees. Artes-Roy v. Lyman, 833 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1992).

A claim or defense is frivolous for purposes of assessing attorney fees if the proponent can present no rational argument based on the evidence or law in support of that claim or defense. McKown-Katy v. Rego Co., 776 P.2d 1130 (Colo. App. 1989), rev’d in part on other grounds, 801 P.2d 536 (Colo. 1990).

Determination of whether motion is frivolous is a matter within the discretion of the trial court. McKown-Katy v. Rego Co., 776 P.2d 1130 (Colo. App. 1989), rev’d in part on other grounds, 801 P.2d 536 (Colo. 1990).

Whether motion was frivolous under § 1-15 (7) is applied in Liebowitz v. Aimexco Inc., 701 P.2d 140 (Colo. App. 1985).

Award of attorney fees incurred in pursuing motions for sanctions improper under § 1-15 (7) where the defense to the motions, while ultimately unsuccessful, had a rational basis in fact and law and did not lack substantial justification. Boulder County Bd. of County Comm’rs v. Kraft Bldg. Contractors, 122 P.3d 1019 (Colo. App. 2005).

The provisions of § 1-15 concerning confession of a motion by failing to respond thereto are inapplicable to a motion for summary judgment. Koch v. Sadler, 759 P.2d 792 (Colo. App. 1988).

Rule is permissive, not mandatory, so that failure to file brief in opposition to motion for partial summary judgment may be considered a confession of the motion, but is not automatically considered such. Visintainer Sheep v. Centennial Gold, 748 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1987).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim must be considered on its merits like a motion for summary judgment and cannot be deemed confessed by a failure to respond. Therefore, trial court erred in failing to consider the merits of plaintiffs’ claims for relief as required by C.R.C.P. 12(b)(5) in resolving defendant’s motion to dismiss. Hemmann Mgmt. Servs. v. Mediacell, Inc., 176 P.3d 856 (Colo. App. 2007).

A party has 15 days to respond to a motion and it is an abuse of discretion for a trial court to grant a motion only 12 days after it was filed. Weatherly v. Roth, 743 P. 2d 453 (Colo. App. 1987).

Trial court’s ex-parte communication with defendant’s counsel directing counsel to prepare the form of order was not improper and did not require the attorney fee order to be vacated, where the communication was made after the court had reached its decision based on full briefing of the issues and a telephone hearing, where plaintiff’s counsel was given an opportunity to object and did in fact object, and where there was no evidence of bias on the part of the judge or prejudice to plaintiff as a result of the court's action. Aztec Minerals Corp. v. State, 987 P.2d 895 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial judge's refusal to disqualify himself from proceeding amounted to abuse of discretion where trial judge acted as settlement judge in litigation underlying the present legal malpractice case and allegations, in light of policies expressed in § 1-17 of this rule that a settlement judge for a particular action should not thereafter have any dealings with the case and that a judge assigned for proceedings other than settlement should not be privy to discussions that occurred at court settlement conferences, were sufficient to raise a reasonable inference of the appearance of actual or apparent bias or prejudice. Tripp v. Borchard, 29 P.3d 345 (Colo. App. 2001).

For factors to use in determining appropriateness and severity of sanctions for failure to file a trial data certificate, see Nagy v. District Court, 762 P.2d 158 (Colo. 1988) (decided under rule in effect prior to 1987 repeal and readoption).

Sanction imposed for violation of § 1-18's requirement of timely filing of trial data certificate denied defendant its right to defend against plaintiff's claim. AAA Crane Serv. v. Omnibank, 723 P.2d 156 (Colo. App. 1986).

Sanctions may include dismissal, but only if court follows notice requirements of C.R.C.P. 41(b) and § 1-10 (2) of this rule. Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

In addition, it was an abuse of discretion for court to impose a sanction for both parties' failure to file trial data certificates which was detrimental only to plaintiff, and benefitted the equally noncomplying defendants. Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

Imposition of sanctions for noncompliance is not mandated; the language of § 1-18 (1) (d) is permissive in nature. Nagy v. District Court, 762 P.2d 158 (Colo. 1988) (decided under rule in effect prior to 1987 repeal and readoption).

The trial court has considerable discretion to determine whether noncompliance with mandatory pretrial procedures justifies the imposition of sanctions against the noncomplying party. People v. Milton, 732 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1987).

Trial court's decision not to impose any sanction for noncompliance with pretrial procedures is an abuse of discretion only if, based on the particular circumstances, the decision was manifestly arbitrary, unreasonable, or unfair. People v. Milton, 732 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1987).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion for failing to prohibit the state's witnesses from testifying in case in chief for failure to file trial data certificate setting forth the names of the witnesses. People v. Milton, 732 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1987).

Trial court did not apply an erroneous legal standard in determining reasonableness of plaintiff's attorney fees. Without any supporting affidavit or exhibit, defendants' opposition to award of attorney fees incurred in connection with contempt proceedings constituted mere argument and did not create a genuine issue of material fact as to the reasonableness of the fees. Moreover, the award of attorney fees was based on sufficient evidence supporting the reasonableness of the fees. Madison Capital Co., LLC v. Star Acquisition VIII, 214 P.3d 557 (Colo. App. 2009).

Notwithstanding the discretionary language in § 1-22 (2)(c), a party is entitled to an evidentiary hearing to determine a reasonable amount of attorney fees, when the party presents an expert's affidavit raising disputed issues of fact and a significant amount of fees has been requested. Roberts v. Adams, 47 P.3d 690 (Colo. App. 2001).

Discretion to grant or deny belated request. Where party did not file motion for fees until 24 days after expiration of 15-day period and did not request extension of time nor offer excuse for delay, court did not abuse its discretion by denying the motion. Major v. Chons Bros., Inc., 53 P.3d 781 (Colo. App. 2002).

Although § 1-22 requires a party seeking costs to file a request within 15 days of the judgment, it also permits the request to be filed within such greater time as the court may allow. Although plaintiff filed the request for costs outside of the deadline, the court chose to address the issue. There is no abuse of discretion in the trial court's decision to address plaintiff's request under the "within such greater time as the court may allow" standard. Phillips v. Watkins, 166 P.3d 197 (Colo. App. 2007).

A request for an award of costs and fees under § 1-22 which has been filed beyond the 15-day deadline does not preclude the trial court's consideration even though the party fails to request an extension of time. In re Wright, 841 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1992).

Not an abuse of discretion for trial court to award attorney fees under § 1-22 beyond the 15-day deadline and without expressly granting an extension. US Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. Henry Schein, Inc., 205 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2009); Anderson v. Pursell, 244 P.3d 1188 (Colo. 2010).

The court relied on specified information indicating the reasons for the late filing of the motion for attorney fees. US Fax Law Ctr., Inc. v. Henry Schein, Inc., 205 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court not required to deny a motion for costs and attorney fees if it is filed outside of the 15-day time limit, even if the submitting party does not request an extension of time. Anderson v. Pursell, 244 P.3d 1188 (Colo. 2010).

Issues concerning recovery of attorney fees not sought as damages are outside the purview of C.R.C.P. 59 and outside the purview of C.R.C.P. 59(j)'s requirement that a motion be denied as a matter of law if it is not decided within 60 days. Anderson v. Pursell, 244 P.3d 1188 (Colo. 2010).

Even though plaintiff filed his bill of costs and an amended bill of costs more than 15 days after the entry of judgment, the trial court considered both the bill of costs and the amended bill in awarding minimal costs. Thus, the bill of costs was filed within "such greater time as the court may allow" and the trial court was required under § 13-17-202 to award the plaintiff "reasonable costs" incurred after the offer of settlement. Borquez v. Robert C. Ozer, P.C., 923 P.2d 166 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 940 P.2d 371 (Colo. 1997).

The rule does not require a court to determine that a filing made outside the 15-day period was attributable to excusable neglect or to make any other findings such as those required under C.R.C.P. 6(b). Parry v. Kuhlmann, 169 P.3d 188 (Colo. App. 2007).

Section 1-22 (2) does not require a party seeking attorney fees as costs to provide the disclosures mandated under C.R.C.P. 26 for experts who will testify at trial. Chartier v. Weinland Homes, Inc., 25 P.3d 1279 (Colo. App. 2001).

Section 1-22 (2)(b) does not require a written fee agreement to accompany every motion for attorney fees and costs. The section only provides a non-exhaustive list of examples of supporting documentation, and does not require a particular type of supporting documentation for every motion. Nesbitt v. Scott, 2019 COA 154, 457 P.3d 134.

Failure of wife to file a motion in conformity with this rule in dissolution of marriage action does not operate as a waiver of her request for fees where wife had properly requested fees in her response to husband's petition; attorney fees were also listed as a disputed issue in the parties' joint trial management certificate; and husband acknowledged that wife raised the issue at the permanent orders hearing. In re Hill, 166 P.3d 269 (Colo. App. 2007).

The right to a jury trial, once proper demand is made and fee is paid pursuant to § 1-3 of this rule, may be lost only for reasons stated in C.R.C.P. 39(a). The trial court, in an action for payment of medical benefits, abused its discretion in denying the insured a jury trial on the basis that the insured failed to file jury instructions in accordance with § 1-19 of this rule. Neither this rule nor C.R.C.P. 39(a) includes a waiver provision on such basis.

Whaley v. Keystone Life Ins. Co., 811 P.2d 404 (Colo. App. 1989).

Where defendant in prior action sought and obtained dismissal for failure to prosecute but did not specifically request dismissal with prejudice, order of dismissal did not so specify, and no good cause was shown for defendant's failure to request dismissal with prejudice, subsequent "clarification" of order to specify dismissal with prejudice was ineffective. McElvaney v. Batley, 824 P.2d 73 (Colo. App. 1991).

Expert's designation and summary of testimony was available and met the requirement of this rule to provide both sides with the opportunity to prepare adequately for trial and to prevent undue surprise. Fenton v. Fibreboard Corp., 827 P.2d 564 (Colo. App. 1991).

Confession of motion due to failure to respond in accordance with subsection (3) does not automatically render a pro se litigant's claims "frivolous and groundless". Separate findings on the issue are required before court may award attorney fees against such parties under § 13-17-102. Artes-Roy v. Lyman, 833 P.2d 62 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendants waived their rights to a hearing on costs pursuant to this section where they did not request such hearing at trial. Van Schaack v. Van Schaack Holdings, Ltd., 856 P.2d 15 (Colo. App. 1992).

It was within the trial court's discretion to award expert witness fees for designated experts who did not testify at trial where such award was supported by evidence in the record. Van Schaack v. Van Schaack Holdings, Ltd., 856 P.2d 15 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court had discretion to impose sanctions, including issuing an order limiting scope of expert's testimony at trial where plaintiff failed to disclose identity of experts or their opinions and failed to supplement responses to discovery when additional information became known. Locke v. Vanderark, 843 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court properly excluded psychiatrist's testimony regarding the association between IQ and hydrocephalic condition where plaintiff failed to disclose opinion, failed to disclose psychiatrist's qualifications, and failed to update discovery responses. Locke v. Vanderark, 843 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court properly held that tardily disclosed expert opinion went beyond fair scope of previously disclosed opinion where plaintiff failed to make timely disclosure of expert's opinion concerning damages relating to matters beyond those provided in discovery. Locke v. Vanderark, 843 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1992).

Generally, the trial court determines a motion on the written motion and submitted briefs, and it is within the discretion of the court whether to allow an evidentiary hearing.

City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section 1-5 creates a presumption that all court records are to be open. Anderson v. Home Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1996).

Section 1-5 places the burden upon the party seeking to limit access to a court file to overcome this presumption in favor of public accessibility by demonstrating that the harm to the privacy of a person in interest outweighs the public interest in the openness of court files. Anderson v. Home Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1996).

The fact that the parties claim that a court file contains extremely personal, private, and confidential matters is generally insufficient to constitute a privacy interest warranting the sealing of that entire file under § 1-5. In re Purcell, 879 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1994); Anderson v. Home Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1996).

The expectation of privacy or confidentiality in court records has been found to exist only in those limited instances involving sexual assault claims, trade secrets, potentially defamatory material, or threats to national security. Anderson v. Home Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1996).

A broad limited access order denying access to the entire court file was not warranted where a medical malpractice charge against a licensed health care professional implicates the public interest and involves more than a private dispute between individuals. Anderson v. Home Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court may not enter a limited access order based solely upon an agreement between the parties to the litigation. If the evidence does not support the required finding under § 1-5 (2), no such order may be entered. Anderson v. Home Ins. Co., 924 P.2d 1123 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court did not abuse its discretion in denying party's request to seal record where it was not required to seal the record under this section and the record contained nothing unusual and no material that would mandate that it be sealed. In re Purcell, 879 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1994).

Movant's constitutional right to due process was not violated by trial court's denial of motion for costs and damages without a separate hearing on the motion where movant did not request an evidentiary hearing on its motion and trial court, in ruling on the motion, assumed movant could prove damages but determined, based on written motion and briefs, that an award of damages would be oppressive and inequitable. City & County of Denver v. Ameritrust, 832 P.2d 1054 (Colo. App. 1992).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing defendants to file their reply to plaintiff's response more than ten days after the response was filed where, in accepting the reply, the court stated that it had been filed within a reasonable time and that, in the interest of fundamental fairness, substance would be placed ahead of procedure. Armstead v. Memorial Hosp., 892 P.2d 450 (Colo. App. 1995).

Letter of credit was properly released by trial court, since the court was the beneficiary of the letter of credit. Vento v. Colo. Nat'l Bank, 985 P.2d 48 (Colo. App. 1999).

District court clerk's rejection of complaint filed does not, and cannot, alter the fact that the complaint had been "filed" in the district court under C.R.C.P. 106(b) on the date it was transmitted to the e-system provider. The rejection therefore also does not and cannot alter the fact that the litigants had invoked district court jurisdiction, including that of the intended county district court, on the date they e-filed their complaint with the other district court. Maslak v. Town of Vail, 2015 COA 2, 345 P.3d 972.

Section 1-1 (2) is applied in Barry v. Ashley Anderson, P.C., 718 F. Supp. 1492 (D. Colo. 1989).

Section 1-10 is applied in Powers v. Prof'l Rodeo Cowboys, 832 P.2d 1099 (Colo. App. 1992).

Section 1-10 (2) is applied in Maxwell v. W.K.A. Inc., 728 P.2d 321 (Colo. App. 1986).

Section 1-11 is applied in Herrera v. Anderson, 736 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1987); Todd v. Bear Valley Village Apts., 980 P.2d 973 (Colo. 1999).

Section 1-15 is applied in Herrera v. Anderson, 736 P.2d 416 (Colo. App. 1987); Ogawa v. Riley, 949 P.2d 118 (Colo. App. 1997).

Section 1-18 is applied in Baumann v. Rhode, 710 P.2d 493 (Colo. App. 1985); Conrad v. Imatani, 724 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1986); Coffee v. Inman, 728 P.2d 376 (Colo. App. 1986).

Section 1-19 is applied in Whaley v. Keystone Life Ins. Co., 811 P.2d 404 (Colo. App. 1989).

Rule 122. Case Specific Appointment of Appointed Judges Pursuant to C.R.S. § 13-3-111	715

CHAPTER 17B

APPOINTED JUDGES

Rule 122. Case Specific Appointment of Appointed Judges Pursuant to C.R.S. § 13-3-111

(a) Appointed Judges.

(1) At any time after a civil action, excluding juvenile delinquency proceedings, is filed in a trial court of record, upon agreement of all parties that a specific retired or resigned justice of the Supreme Court, or a retired or resigned judge of any other court of record within the state of Colorado be appointed to hear the action and upon agreement that one or more of the parties shall pay the agreed upon compensation of the selected justice or judge, together with all other compensation and expenses incurred, the Chief Justice may appoint such justice or judge who consents to perform judicial duties for such action.

(2) The decision as to whether such justice or judge shall be appointed to judicial duties, pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, shall be entirely within the discretion of the Chief Justice. The Chief Justice has the authority to reject or approve any deviations from these rules agreed to by the parties. The Chief Justice may require such undertakings as in his or her opinion may be necessary to ensure that proceedings held pursuant to this section shall be without expense to the state of Colorado.

(3) The compensation and expenses paid to an Appointed Judge shall be at the rate agreed upon by the parties and the Appointed Judge and rate of compensation must be approved by the Chief Justice at the time of making the appointment.

(4) The Appointed Judge shall have the same authority as a full-time sitting judge. Orders, decrees, verdicts and judgments entered by an Appointed Judge shall have the same force and effect and may be enforced or appealed in the same manner as any other order, decree, verdict, or judgment.

(b) Qualifications. To be eligible to serve as an Appointed Judge, a person must be a Senior Judge, a retired or resigned justice of the Supreme Court, or a retired or resigned judge of the court of appeals, a district court, probate court, juvenile court or county court, who has served as a judge in one or more of said courts for a total of at least six years. If a judge has served in the Colorado State Court System and as a judge in the Federal Court System, those years of service may be combined for the purpose of meeting the six year requirement. Such person must be currently licensed to practice law in Colorado.

(c) Motion for Appointment. A request for the appointment of an Appointed Judge shall be made by a joint motion filed by all parties to a case and shall be signed as approved by the Appointed Judge. The original of such motion shall be filed with the Supreme Court with a copy filed in the originating court — the court of record in which the case was originally filed. Such motion shall include:

(1) The name, address, and registration number of the Appointed Judge;

(2) The rate of compensation agreed to be paid to the Appointed Judge;

(3) The Appointed Judge's agreement to be bound by Section II of the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct, Applicability of Code to Senior and Retired Judges, and the Appointed Judge's agreement that the Chief Justice may ask the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel and the Colorado Commission on Judicial Discipline for any record of his or her imposed discipline, or pending disciplinary proceeding, if any;

(4) A realistic estimate of all compensation and expenses for the Appointed Judge, any needed personnel, rental of an appropriate facility outside the courthouse, if needed, in which to hold the proceedings, payment for any requested jury, and all other anticipated compensation and expenses, including travel, lodging and meals, and provisions assuring that all such compensation and expenses will be paid by the parties; and

(5) An agreement as to who is responsible for initial payment of the compensation and expenses of the action, and who is responsible for payment of the compensation and expenses upon final judgment;

(6) The agreement of the parties and the Appointed Judge that none of the compensation and expenses shall be paid by the state of Colorado;

(7) A copy signed by the Appointed Judge of the following oath: "I, (name of Appointed Judge), do solemnly swear or affirm that I will support the Constitution of the United States and of the State of Colorado, and faithfully perform the duties of the office upon which I am about to enter."

(8) Any other matters the parties desire to be considered by the Chief Justice in exercising his or her discretion.

(9) A form order approving the appointment.

(10) A statement acknowledging that the Chief Justice may approve or reject the order or, upon the agreement of all the parties and of the Appointed Judge, may change any of the provisions of the order.

The parties shall file the Chief Justice's ruling on the motion in the case file in the originating court.

(d) Duration of Appointment. The appointment shall last for so long as the parties specify in the motion and order of appointment. In the absence of such specification, the appointment shall last until entry of a final, appealable judgment, order or decree or, in dissolution actions, until the entry of Permanent Orders.

(e) Compensation and Expenses. Upon the appointment of an Appointed Judge by the Chief Justice, the parties shall forthwith deposit in an agreed escrow or trust account to be administered by the Appointed Judge or some other person acceptable to the parties and the Appointed Judge, sufficient funds to pay the estimated compensation and expenses of the case for the duration of the appointment. If, at any time, the Appointed Judge determines that the funds on deposit are insufficient to cover all further compensation and expenses, the Appointed Judge may order the parties promptly to deposit sufficient additional funds to cover such amount. An Appointed Judge may withdraw from the appointment after reasonable notice and with permission of the Chief Justice if this order is not complied with, and the case proceedings shall revert to the originating court. Within a reasonable time after the conclusion of the Appointed Judge's duties on the case, the parties shall file in the record of the case in the originating court a report of the total compensation paid for the Appointed Judge's services and the total expenses paid by the parties in the case.

(f) Rules Applicable to Proceedings. Proceedings before an Appointed Judge shall be conducted pursuant to Rules applicable to the originating court. All filings shall be open records available for public review and inspection unless sealed upon motion and order, and all proceedings shall be open to the public in the same manner and pursuant to the same law applicable to the originating court.

(g) Record.

(1) The original of each filing in all proceedings before an Appointed Judge shall be filed with the clerk of the originating court and a copy shall be provided to the Appointed Judge.

(2) The parties and the Appointed Judge shall comply with all applicable rules and Chief Justice Directives relating to reporting, filing and maintaining the record.

(3) The originals of any reporter's notes or recording medium, along with any exhibits tendered, shall be filed with the clerk of the originating court pursuant to C.R.C.P. 80(d). The parties shall pay the costs of a court reporter or for any recording equipment that is acceptable to all parties.

(h) Location of Proceedings.

(1) Unless consented to by the parties and ordered by the Appointed Judge for good cause, the location of evidentiary proceedings and trial of a matter subject to this rule shall be pursuant to C.R.C.P. 98.

(2) The parties and the Appointed Judge shall arrange for an appropriate facility in which proceedings shall be held. If available, a room in the courthouse may be used for one or more proceedings in the case. Use of available court rooms, equipment or facilities within the courthouse shall not be considered an expense to the state that the parties are required to bear or reimburse;

(3) Whenever proceedings are scheduled in advance, the Appointed Judge shall timely file a Notice of Hearing with the clerk of the originating court giving notice of the date, time, nature and location of the proceedings.

(4) Except when proceedings are taking place in a courthouse, the parties shall arrange for or assure that there is sufficient premises liability insurance to assure that any injury to a party, other participant or spectator at the proceedings is covered without expense to the state of Colorado. Such insurance shall name the state of Colorado as an additional insured.

(i) Jury Trials.

(1) The Colorado Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act applies to jury trials conducted pursuant to this rule.

(2) When a trial by jury has been properly demanded, before setting the case for trial the Appointed Judge shall coordinate the start of the trial with the jury commissioner and the district administrator for the originating court so that jurors are selected and voir dire is held in the courthouse to which the prospective jurors are summoned.

(3) If the trial is held outside the courthouse, the parties shall be responsible for offering transportation from the courthouse to the location of the trial for the duration of the trial. Such transportation shall be at no cost to the jurors or the state of Colorado. The parties shall arrange for or assure that there is sufficient liability insurance to assure that any injury to a juror related to such transportation is covered without expense to the state of Colorado. Such insurance shall name the state of Colorado as an additional insured.

(4) Not later than 3 business days following the conclusion of their service as jurors, the parties shall pay the jurors at the statutory rate pursuant to the Colorado Uniform Jury Selection and Service Act. The parties also shall pay all related expenses such as meals for the jurors and the costs of a bailiff. Payments made pursuant to this section should not be made through the court.

(5) If the trial is held outside the courthouse, jurors shall be instructed to the effect that such fact does not affect their responsibility and the importance of their service.

(6) In the event the jury is cancelled, postponed or a jury is waived, the Appointed Judge shall notify the jury commissioner as soon as possible.

(j) Removal. An Appointed Judge shall preside over all matters throughout the duration of the appointment unless the Appointed Judge recuses, is removed pursuant to C.R.C.P. 97, dies or becomes incapacitated. In any such circumstance, the case proceedings shall immediately revert to the originating court.

(k) Immunity. An Appointed Judge shall have immunity in the same manner and to the same extent as any other judge in the state of Colorado.

This Rule is hereby enacted and adopted by the Court, En Banc, this 23rd day of June, 2005 and shall be effective with regard to all cases pending in courts as of July 1, 2005 or filed in courts on or after July 1, 2005.

By paying that fee, the attorney may remain a certified pro bono counsel under this rule.

(2) Law Student or Recent Graduate Externs.

(a) Practice by Eligible Extern.

(i) An eligible law student or recent graduate extern, as specified in subsection (2)(b), may appear and participate:

(A) In any of the following proceedings in Colorado as if licensed to practice law under circumstances specified in subsections (2)(a)(i)(B)-(E):

(I) civil proceedings (including domestic relations proceedings) in any municipal, county, district court, or Court of Appeals; or

(II) proceedings before any administrative tribunal; or

(III) criminal proceedings in any county or municipal court, except when an adult defendant has been charged with a felony; or

(IV) juvenile proceedings in any municipal, county, district court, or Court of Appeals; or

(V) any juvenile or other proceedings before any magistrate; or

(B) If the person on whose behalf the extern is appearing has provided written consent to that appearance and the extern is under the supervision of a supervising lawyer, as specified in subsection (2)(d).

(C) When representing the office of the state public defender and its clients, if the person on whose behalf the extern is appearing has provided written consent to that appearance and the extern is under the supervision of the public defender or one of their deputies. In such case, the record must reflect the name of a supervising lawyer, and a supervising lawyer must be available, but not necessarily physically present in the courtroom, if the person wants to consult with a supervising lawyer. However, a supervising lawyer must be physically present in the courtroom if the proceeding is a testimonial motions hearing or trial.

(D) On behalf of the state or any of its departments, agencies, or institutions, a county, a city, or a municipality, with the written approval and under the supervision of the attorney general, attorney for the state, county attorney, district attorney, city attorney, or municipal attorney. A general approval for the extern to appear, executed by the appropriate supervising attorney pursuant to this paragraph (D), must be filed with the clerk of the applicable court/administrative tribunal and brought to the attention of the judge/presiding officer thereof.

(E) On behalf of a nonprofit legal services organization where poor or legally underserved persons receive legal advice and services if the person on whose behalf the extern is appearing has provided written consent to that appearance and the extern is under the supervision of a supervising lawyer, as specified in subsection (2)(d).

(A) Engage in other activities under the supervision of a supervising lawyer, including but not limited to the preparation of pleadings, briefs, and other legal documents, which must be approved and signed by the supervising lawyer. However, acknowledgments and advisements relating to pleas in criminal cases may be signed by the extern alone.

(B) Assist indigent inmates of correctional institutions who have no attorney of record and who request such assistance in preparing applications and supporting documents for post-conviction relief, under the supervision of a supervising lawyer.

(C) Present an oral argument in the Court of Appeals under the following circumstances:

(I) A request for the extern to present an oral argument must be submitted by motion to the Division that will hear the case within the time permitted under the Colorado Appellate Rules. The motion must be served on all counsel of record in the case. No response to the motion will be permitted.

(II) The extern may not appear in a case in the Court of Appeals without the approval of a majority of the judges assigned to hear the case. The Division assigned to hear the case may grant or deny the request in its sole discretion or establish restrictions or other parameters for the representation on a case-by-case basis.

For purposes of this rule, the extern's eligibility continues after graduation from law school and until the announcement of the results of the first qualifying bar examination following the extern's graduation, or the results of the second qualifying bar examination following the extern's graduation if the extern does not pass or does not sit for the first exam, provided that for anyone who passes the examination, eligibility shall continue in effect through the date of the first swearing-in ceremony following the examination;

(B) Have completed a minimum of two years of legal studies;

(C) Have the certification of the dean of such law school that the dean has no personal knowledge of and knows of nothing of record indicating that the law student or recent graduate is not of good moral character; and that the law student has completed the requirements specified in subsection (2)(b)(i)(B) and is a student in good standing, or recently graduated. The dean of such law school has no continuing duty to certify the student's good moral character after the student has graduated from law school, at which point the recent graduate/applicant to the Colorado Bar has obligations to maintain the integrity of the profession pursuant to Colo. RPC 8.1;

(D) Be introduced to the court or administrative tribunal in which the extern is appearing as an extern by an attorney authorized to practice law in Colorado;

(E) Neither ask for nor receive any compensation or remuneration of any kind for the extern's services from the person on whose behalf the extern renders services; but such limitation shall not prevent the extern from receiving credit for participation in the law school externship program upon prior approval of the law school, nor shall it prevent the law school, a nonprofit organization, the state, a county, a city, a municipality, or the office of the district attorney or the public defender from paying compensation to the extern nor shall it prevent any agency from making such charges for its services as it may otherwise properly require; and

(F) State that the extern has read, is familiar with, and will be governed in the conduct of the extern's activities under subsection (2)(a) by the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct.

(c) Certification of Law Student or Recent Graduate Extern by Law School Dean; Filing; Effective Period; Withdrawal by Dean or Termination.

(B) May be withdrawn by the dean at any time by mailing a notice to that effect to the Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration, and such withdrawal may be without notice or hearing and without any showing of cause; and

(C) May be terminated by the Supreme Court at any time without notice or hearing and without any showing of cause.

(d) Qualifications and Requirements of Supervising Lawyer.

(i) A supervising lawyer, under whose supervision an eligible extern appears and participates pursuant to subsection (2)(a), must be authorized to practice law in the state and:

(A) Must be a lawyer working for or on behalf of an organization identified in subsection (2)(a)(i)(C)-(E);

(B) Must assume personal professional responsibility for the conduct of the extern;

(C) Must assist the extern in the extern's preparation to the extent the supervising lawyer considers it necessary; and

(D) Must directly supervise an extern permitted to appear in the Court of Appeals, examine and sign all pleadings filed in the Court of Appeals, and attend oral argument.

ANNOTATION

It is a violation of this rule for the supervising lawyer not to be present during critical stages of a criminal case; such a violation constitutes structural error. People v. McGlaughlin, 2018 COA 114, 428 P.3d 691.

The sixth amendment requires that a licensed lawyer be present in the courtroom when a law student represents a criminal defendant during a critical stage of a criminal case. If the supervising lawyer is not in the courtroom during those critical stages, no licensed lawyer is present, and the defendant is denied his or her constitutional right to counsel guaranteed by the sixth amendment. Such a complete deprivation of counsel is a structural error, requiring reversal without regard to any showing of prejudice. People v. McGlaughlin, 2018 COA 114, 428 P.3d 691.

Issues of adequacy of representation involving violations of the rules governing student practice, other than the supervising attorney's presence, are properly analyzed under the test for ineffective assistance of counsel announced in Strickland. People v. McGlaughlin, 2018 COA 114, 428 P.3d 691.

Rule 205.8. Emergency Rule Concerning Certification for Limited Practice as a Graduate Before Admission By Examination*(a) Effective Dates.

(1) This Rule shall take effect August 1, 2020 for applicants for admission who meet all eligibility requirements under this Rule and who notify the Office of Attorney Admissions in writing by July 20, 2020 that they are transferring their July 2020 Colorado bar examination registration to the February 2021 Colorado bar examination. Applicants who notify the Office of Attorney Admissions in writing after July 20, 2020 but no later than July 31, 2020 that they are disqualified from sitting for the July 2020 Colorado bar examination under the Office's examination protocols and medical screening questionnaire will be deemed to have met the notification deadline in this subsection. For applicants under this paragraph (a)(1), this Rule expires seven days after the last scheduled swearing-in ceremony corresponding with the Colorado bar examination held in February 2021.

(2) All other applicants who registered for the July 2020 Colorado bar examination are ineligible for certification under this Rule unless the July 2020 examination is postponed. If the July 2020 examination is postponed, this Rule shall take effect on August 1, 2020 and, for applicants registered for the July 2020 examination, expires seven days after the last scheduled swearing-in ceremony corresponding with the first Colorado bar examination that is held after the effective date of this Rule.

(3) In its discretion, the Supreme Court may extend the time limits set forth in this Rule.

(b) General Statement. In its discretion, the Supreme Court may certify an applicant for admission by the Colorado bar examination to be a certified limited practice graduate under the conditions and requirements of this Rule.

(c) Eligibility. An applicant for admission by the Colorado bar examination under C.R.C.P. 203.4 may apply to become a certified limited practice graduate under the procedures set forth in this Rule. Applicants who are eligible for temporary practice under C.R.C.P. 205.7(2)(b)(i)(A) may, but are not required to, be certified as a limited practice graduate under this Rule. To be eligible as a certified limited practice graduate, an applicant must demonstrate through a form, affidavit and any other evidence required by this Rule that the applicant:

(1) has submitted an application to the Office of Attorney Admissions pursuant to C.R.C.P. 203.4;

(2) has never been licensed to practice law in another state in the United States, the District of Columbia, or U.S. Territories;

(3) has graduated with a J.D. or LL.B. from a law school accredited by the Council of the Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar of the American Bar Association;

(4) affirms an intent to practice law in Colorado under the supervision of a licensed attorney who meets the requirements of this Rule;

(5) has not yet taken the Colorado bar examination; and,

(6) has satisfied all other requirements for admission as a Colorado-licensed attorney, or the Office of Attorney Admissions has determined that the applicant may reasonably be expected to satisfy all such requirements prior to admission, except for obtaining a passing score of the Colorado bar examination.

(d) Filing Requirements and Effect of Registration.

(1) In order to perform the services set forth in this Rule, the applicant must request certification as a limited practice graduate through a form provided by the Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration, with all the information requested on the form, together with a fee of $50. The Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration shall send a copy of all applications for graduate limited practice certification to the Office of Attorney Admissions to determine eligibility to provide services under this Rule.

(2) Upon being notified that the Office of Attorney Admissions has determined the applicant is eligible to be certified as a limited practice graduate, the applicant may register with the Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration for supervised practice.

(A) The applicant shall affirm that the applicant has read, is familiar with, and will be governed by the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct.

(B) The applicant must include with the registration the identity of the applicant's supervising attorney and an affidavit from the supervising attorney sufficient to establish that the attorney agrees to undertake the supervision of the applicant in accordance with this Rule.

(C) The applicant must include with the registration an attestation from the dean of the law school where the applicant was enrolled on graduation that the applicant meets the graduation requirements of this Rule, and, to the best of the dean's knowledge, is qualified by ability, training, and character to provide the services permitted by this Rule.

(3) The applicant must advise the Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration immediately of any change in circumstances that renders the applicant ineligible for certification as a limited practice graduate.

(4) Nothing herein shall relieve an applicant of the continuing duty to inform the Office of Attorney Admissions of supplementary information and developments, including those relating to character and fitness, affecting the applicant's pending application for admission as a licensed attorney.

(5) Certification as a limited practice graduate confers no rights or presumptions bearing on the applicant's pending application for admission as a licensed attorney, and in no way restricts the Supreme Court's authority to determine an applicant's admission to the practice of law in Colorado.

(e) Supervision.

(1) An applicant may be certified as a limited practice graduate only if a supervising attorney who meets the requirements of this Rule, as determined by the Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration and Attorney Regulation Counsel, has agreed to supervise the applicant. Under no circumstances may a certified limited practice graduate engage in the practice of law as a sole practitioner.

(2) The supervising attorney must through affidavit show that he or she:

(A) is admitted and in good standing in Colorado;

(B) has been engaged in the active practice of law for at least three of the past five years;

(C) is not the subject of any pending formal disciplinary or disability matters in any jurisdiction at the time of the applicant's registration under this Rule;

(D) expressly agrees to: assume all professional responsibility for the direct supervision for the professional work of the applicant, including the applicant's compliance with the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct; provide any necessary assistance to the applicant to ensure the protection of the clients for whom the applicant provides services; either directly or through the services of another Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the supervising attorney's firm or organization, review, sign and file pleadings, briefs, and other legal documents that the applicant has prepared; and either directly or through the services of another Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the supervising attorney's firm or organization, be present for designated court appearances as required by this Rule or by order of any court or tribunal; and

(E) expressly agrees to notify the Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration within seven days if the supervising attorney has terminated supervision of the applicant or if the supervising attorney becomes aware that the applicant no longer meets the requirements of a certified limited practice graduate.

(f) Termination of Certification. The privilege to engage in supervised practice through certification as a limited practice graduate under this Rule may be terminated by the Supreme Court at any time without notice or hearing and without any showing of cause, and also expires without action by the Court upon any of the following circumstances:

(1) the applicant's withdrawal of the application for admission under C.R.C.P. 203.4;

(2) the supervising attorney's withdrawal of an agreement to supervise the applicant, unless a substitute supervising attorney meeting the requirements of this Rule has filed an affidavit reflecting an agreement to supervise the applicant;

(3) the applicant's admission to practice law in any state, the District of Columbia, or U.S. Territory; or

(4) seven days after the Office of Attorney Admissions notifies, through publication or otherwise, the applicant that he or she did not achieve a passing score on the Colorado bar examination.

(g) Services Permitted. Under the supervision of and with the approval of the supervising attorney, and with the written consent of the person or entity on whose behalf the certified limited practice graduate is acting, a certified limited practice graduate may render the following services:

(1) A certified limited practice graduate may counsel and advise clients, negotiate in the settlement of claims and charges, represent clients in mediation and other non-litigation matters, and engage in the preparation and drafting of pleadings, briefs, memoranda, instruments, and other legal documents. Any communication, other than internal communications signed by the applicant, must include the designation "Certified Limited Practice

Graduate” and also must be signed by the supervising attorney or another Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the same firm or organization as the supervising attorney.

(2) A certified limited practice graduate may provide short-term limited legal services to a client as contemplated by Colo. RPC 6.5 by disclosing to both the legal services program and any individual participating in the program with whom the graduate makes contact that the graduate is a “Certified Limited Practice Graduate” and not a licensed attorney. A Colorado-licensed attorney must be available to assist the certified limited practice graduate in the provision of such services.

(3) A certified limited practice graduate may appear in the courts and administrative tribunals of this state, including court-sponsored mediation, subject to the following qualifications and limitations:

(A) All required consents to the certified limited practice graduate’s appearance in a matter shall be brought to the attention of the judge or presiding officer;

(B) Appearances, pleadings, motions, briefs and other documents to be filed with a court prepared by the applicant must include the designation “Certified Limited Practice Graduate,” and also must be signed and filed by the supervising attorney or another Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the same firm or organization as the supervising attorney;

(C) In criminal cases in which the defendant has not been charged with a felony, and in civil or criminal contempt proceedings, all prior to appeal: the certified limited practice graduate may participate as long as the supervising attorney or another Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the same firm or organization as the supervising attorney is available, but not necessarily physically present in the courtroom, in the event that the client in question wants to consult with a licensed attorney. However, a supervising attorney or other Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the same firm or organization as the supervising attorney must be physically present in the courtroom if the proceeding is a testimonial motions hearing or trial;

(D) In all other civil cases, the certified limited practice graduate may conduct all pretrial, trial, and post-trial proceedings, other than appellate proceedings, with the supervising attorney or other Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the same firm or organization as the supervising attorney physically present, unless the judge or presiding officer orders that the certified limited practice graduate may participate without the presence of a licensed attorney and the client consents to the absence of a licensed attorney;

(E) In matters before appellate courts, the certified limited practice graduate may prepare briefs and other appellate filings, subject to the signature and filing requirements of this section. Upon motion by the supervising attorney or other attorney associated with the same firm or organization as the supervising attorney, the certified limited practice graduate may request authorization to argue the matter before the appellate court but, in all cases, the moving attorney must be present at the argument.

(F) A court or presiding officer may at any time and in any proceeding require the supervising attorney or other Colorado-licensed attorney associated with the same firm or organization as the supervising attorney to be physically present in a proceeding with a certified limited practice graduate.

(h) Compensation. A certified limited practice graduate rendering services authorized by this Rule shall not request or accept any compensation from the person for whom the certified limited practice graduate renders the services. The certified limited practice graduate may be compensated as an employee of a firm or other organization, and may request such compensation consistent with other law.

(i) Disciplinary Complaints.

(1) Any disciplinary complaint or request for investigation concerning a certified limited practice graduate should be directed to the Attorney Regulation Counsel. The Attorney Regulation Counsel may pursue immediate suspension of the certification of the limited practice graduate on a discipline or disability basis through petition to the Supreme Court, in exercise of its plenary authority. The Court in its discretion may request that the Presiding Disciplinary Judge serve as a special master for purposes of conducting any evidentiary hearing that the Court deems necessary. Nothing herein shall limit the authority of the Supreme Court to suspend or revoke certification of the limited practice graduate pursuant to subsection (f) of this Rule.

(2) The Attorney Regulation Counsel shall have jurisdiction over any requests for investigation against both the certified limited practice graduate and the supervising attorney, and may also refer all information pertaining to the certified limited practice graduate to the Office of Attorney Admissions and the Character and Fitness Committee. The Attorney Regulation Counsel may disclose to the supervising attorney any requests for investigation pertaining to the certified limited practice graduate.

(j) Public Information. The Clerk of the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration may disclose the identity and registered business contact information of both a certified limited practice graduate and that person's supervising attorney, and disclose the dates such certification was effective and is terminated.

(1) A certified limited practice graduate may use the title "Certified Limited Practice Graduate" only in connection with services performed pursuant to this Rule.

(2) A certified limited practice graduate shall not hold himself or herself out to anyone as a licensed attorney.

(3) Nothing in this Rule prohibits a certified limited practice graduate from describing his or her participation in this program on a resume, biographical summary, or application seeking employment as long as the description is not false, deceptive, or misleading.

Nothing herein is deemed a limitation on the Supreme Court's plenary jurisdiction set forth in C.R.C.P. 202.1 and C.R.C.P. 212.

(2) Requirements for and Content of Petition. The petitioner must file a petition setting forth the relief sought, the specific admissions eligibility requirements or restrictions at issue with citations to applicable rules, and the grounds for relief. (3) Docketing of Petition, Caption and Fees. Petitions under this rule must be filed with the Supreme Court. This subsection does not apply to exceptions filed by an applicant under C.R.C.P. 209.5.

(6) Request for Protection of Other Confidential Information. A petition filed under this rule is not deemed an application for a license to practice law and is not confidential under C.R.C.P. 203.1. Instead, such a petition is presumed to be publicly available unless it is a petition filed under subsection (5) of this rule. A petitioner may request protection of confidential information contained in supporting documentation by filing a motion requesting that specific exhibits to the petition that contain confidential information not be made publicly available.

Rule 207. Licensed Legal Paraprofessionals

Rule 207.1. Licensed Legal Paraprofessionals' Scope of Authority to Practice

(1) Licensed Legal Paraprofessionals ("LLPs") are individuals licensed by the Supreme Court pursuant to this rule to perform certain types of legal services only under the conditions set forth by the Court. They do not include individuals with a general license to practice law in Colorado.

(2) An LLP's scope of licensure is limited as follows:

(a) An LLP may represent a client to perform tasks and services identified under section (2)(g) of this rule in a legal separation, declaration of invalidity of marriage, or dissolution of a marriage or civil union.

(b) An LLP may represent a client to perform tasks and services identified under section (2)(g) of this rule in an initial allocation of parental responsibility ("APR") matter, including parentage determinations, that is not part of a dissolution of a marriage or civil union.

(c) An LLP may represent a client to perform tasks and services identified under section (2)(g) of this rule in a matter involving modification of APR regardless of whether the initial APR was part of a dissolution of a marriage or civil union, or modification of child support and/or maintenance.

(d) An LLP may represent a client to perform tasks and services identified under section (2)(g) of this rule in any of the following matters: protection orders, name changes, and adult gender designation changes.

(e) An LLP's authority to practice law under any section of this rule includes filing and responding to motions for remedial contempt citations under C.R.C.P. 107.

(f) Even if an LLP is authorized to represent a client pursuant to sections (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(c), (2)(d) and (2)(e), an LLP is not authorized to represent a client in any of the following:

- (i) the registration of foreign orders;
- (ii) motions for or orders regarding punitive contempt citations under C.R.C.P. 107;
- (iii) matters involving an allegation of common law marriage;
- (iv) matters involving disputed parentage where there are more than two persons asserting or denying legal parentage;
- (v) matters in which a non-parent's request for APR is contested by at least one parent;
- (vi) preparation of or litigation regarding pre- or post-nuptial agreements;
- (vii) matters in which a party is a beneficiary of a trust and information about the trust will be relevant to resolution of the matter;
- (viii) matters in which a party intends to contest jurisdiction of the court over the matter;

(ix) the preparation by the LLP of a qualified domestic relations order (“QDRO”) or other document allocating retirement assets that are not liquid at the time of the matter;

(x) the preparation by the LLP of documents needed to effectuate the sale or distribution of assets of a business entity or commercial property;

(xi) matters in which an expert report or testimony is required to value an asset or determine income due to the inherent complexity of the asset or income at issue; or

(xii) issues collateral to, but directly affecting, a matter which falls within the LLP’s scope of practice when such issues require analysis and advice outside that scope of practice, such as immigration, criminal, and bankruptcy issues that could directly affect the resolution of the matter.

(g) Within the types of matters and authorizations to practice law identified in section (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(c), (2)(d) and (2)(e) of this rule, an LLP who is in good standing may represent the interests of a client by:

(i) establishing a contractual relationship with the client;

(ii) interviewing the client to understand the client’s objectives and obtaining information relevant to achieving that objective;

(iii) informing, counseling, advising, and assisting the client in determining which form (among those approved by the Judicial Department or the Supreme Court) to use as the basis for a document in a matter, and advising the client on how to complete a form or provide information for a document;

(iv) preparing and completing documents using forms approved by the Judicial Department or the Supreme Court, including proposed parenting plans, separation agreements, motions or stipulations for child support modification, child support worksheets, proposed orders, nonappearance affidavits, discovery requests and answers to discovery requests, trial management certificates, pretrial submissions, and exhibit and witness lists;

(v) obtaining, explaining, and filing any document or necessary information in support of a form or other document, including sworn financial statements and certificates of compliance;

(vi) signing, filing, and completing service of documents;

(vii) reviewing documents of another party or documents and forms prepared by a pension or retirement plan which allocate pension or retirement benefits pursuant to a decree of dissolution, and explaining them to the client;

(viii) informing, counseling, assisting and advocating for a client in negotiations with another party or that party’s representative and in mediations;

(ix) filling in, signing, filing, and completing service of a written settlement agreement in conformity with the negotiated agreement;

(x) communicating with another party or the party’s representative regarding documents prepared for or filed in a case and matters reasonably related thereto;

(xi) communicating with the client regarding the matter and related issues;

(xii) explaining a court order that affects the client’s rights and obligations;

(xiii) standing or sitting at counsel table with the client during a court proceeding to provide emotional support, communicating with the client during the proceeding, answering questions posed by the court, addressing the court upon the court’s request, taking notes, and assisting the client in understanding the proceeding and relevant orders;

(xiv) providing clients with information about additional resources or requirements, such as parenting education classes, and filing certificates of completion with the court; and

(xv) advising clients regarding the need for a lawyer to review complex issues that may arise in a matter.

(h) An LLP is not authorized to conduct an examination of a witness. The LLP may only address the court pursuant to section (2)(g)(xiii) of this rule.

(i) Limits on the activities that can be performed or matters that can be undertaken by an LLP under this rule do not, by themselves, require the LLP to withdraw from the representation of a client if the LLP can provide authorized services to that client. Nothing in this rule precludes a client of an LLP from retaining a lawyer or acting pro se in the same matter in which the client has retained an LLP when an activity, task or issue is outside the LLP’s authorized scope of practice.

As of 2024, the fees set by the court are as follows: the fee for active LLPs is $325.00; the fee of any LLP whose first admission to practice is within the preceding three years is $190.00; the fee for LLPs on inactive status is $130.00. All persons first becoming subject to this rule must file a statement required by this rule at the time of admission, but no annual fee shall be payable until the first day of January following such admission. The Supreme Court will authorize periodic increases to the annual fee for every Colorado LLP as necessary.

(b) Collection of Fee. The annual fee will be collected by the Clerk of the Supreme Court of Colorado, who will send and receive the notices and statements provided for hereafter.

(c) Application of Fees. The fee will be divided. Twenty dollars shall be used to maintain an Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection. The remaining portion of the fee, and the entire fee of those on inactive status, shall be used only to defray the costs of licensing and regulating LLPs within the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel, as well as other functions within the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel (admissions, registration, mandatory continuing legal and judicial education, attorney diversion and discipline, unauthorized practice of law and inventory counsel functions), the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the Colorado Lawyers Assistance Program, the Colorado Attorney Mentoring Program, the Advisory and other regulatory committees and any other practice of law function deemed appropriate by the Supreme Court.

(2) Statement.

(a) Contents. The annual registration statement must be on a form prescribed by the Clerk, setting forth:

- (1) date of admission as an LLP by the Colorado Supreme Court;
- (2) registration number;
- (3) current residence and office addresses and, if applicable, a preferred mailing address for the Colorado Courts, along with current telephone numbers and email addresses;
- (4) certification as to (a) whether the LLP has been ordered to pay child support and, if so, whether the LLP is in compliance with any child support order, (b) whether the LLP or the LLP's law firm has established one or more interest-bearing accounts for client funds as provided in Colo. RPC 1.15B or Colo. LLP RPC 1.15B and if so, the name of the financial institution, account number and location of the financial institution, or, if not, the reason for the exemption, and (c) whether the LLP is currently covered by professional liability insurance and, if so, whether the LLP intends to maintain insurance during the time the LLP is engaged in the private practice of law; and
- (5) certification that the LLP agrees to confine the LLP's practice of law to all limitations set forth in applicable rules, statutes, and other law.

(6) such other information as the Clerk may from time to time direct.

(b) Notification of Change. Every LLP shall file a supplemental statement of change in the information previously submitted, including home and business addresses, within 28 days of such change. Such change shall include, without limitation, the lapse or termination of professional liability insurance without continuous coverage.

(c) Availability of Information. The information provided by the LLP regarding professional liability insurance shall be available to the public through the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration and on the Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration website.

(3) Compliance.

(a) Late Fee. Any LLP who pays the annual fee or files the annual registration statement after February 28 but on or before March 31 must pay a late fee of $50.00 in addition to the registration fee. Any LLP who pays the annual fee or files the annual registration statement after March 31 must pay a late fee of $150.00 for each such year, in addition to the registration fee.

(b) Initial Pleading Must Contain Registration Number. Whenever an initial pleading is signed by an LLP, it shall also include thereon the LLP's registration number. Whenever an initial appearance is made in court without a written pleading, the LLP shall advise the court of the registration number. The number need not be on any subsequent pleadings.

(4) Suspension.

(a) Failure to Pay Fee or File Statement — Notice of Delinquency. An LLP will be summarily suspended if the LLP either fails to pay the fee or fails to file a complete statement or supplement thereto as required by this rule prior to May 1, provided a notice of delinquency has been issued by the Clerk and mailed to the LLP addressed to the LLP's last known mailing address at least 28 days prior to such suspension, unless an excuse has been granted on grounds of financial hardship. Orders suspending an LLP for failure to comply with rules governing LLP registration take effect on entry of the order, unless otherwise ordered.

(b) Duties to Notify Clients and Duties in Litigation Matters. An LLP who has been suspended under the rules governing LLP registration need not comply with the requirements of C.R.C.P. 242.32(c) or C.R.C.P. 242.32(d) if the LLP has sought reinstatement under the rules governing LLP registration and reasonably believes that reinstatement will occur within 14 days of the date of the order of suspension. If the LLP is not reinstated within those 14 days, then the LLP must comply with the requirements of C.R.C.P. 242.32(c) and C.R.C.P. 242.32(d).

(5) Reinstatement.

(a) Application — Reinstatement Fee. Any LLP suspended under the provisions of section (4)(a) above will not be reinstated until application for reinstatement is made in writing and the Clerk acts favorably on the application. Each application for reinstatement shall be accompanied by a reinstatement fee of $100.00 and payment of all arrearages and late fees to the date of the request for reinstatement.

(6) Inactive Status.

(a) Notice. An LLP who has retired or is not engaged in practice shall file a notice in writing with the Clerk that they desire to transfer to inactive status and discontinue the practice of law.

(b) Payment of Fee — Filing of Statement. Upon the filing of the notice to transfer to inactive status, the LLP shall no longer be eligible to practice law but shall continue to pay the fee required under section (1)(a) above and file the statements and supplements thereto required by this rule on an annual basis.

(c) Exemption — Age 65. Any registered inactive LLP over the age of 65 is exempt from payment of the annual fee.

(7) Transfer to Active Status. Upon the filing of a notice to transfer to inactive status and payment of the fee required under section (1)(a) above and any arrearages, if owed, an LLP will be removed from the roll of those classified as active until and unless a request for transfer to active status is made and granted. Transfer to active status will be granted, unless the LLP is subject to an outstanding order of suspension or disbarment, upon the payment of any assessment in effect for the year the request is made and any accumulated arrearages for non-payment of inactive fees.

(8) Resignation.

(a) Criteria. The supreme court may permit an LLP to resign from the practice of law in Colorado. The Regulation Counsel must inform the supreme court whether any disciplinary or disability matter involving the LLP should preclude the LLP's resignation and whether any precomplaint proceeding pending against the LLP under C.R.C.P. 242 should be dismissed. An LLP may not resign if a complaint under C.R.C.P. 242.25 is pending against the LLP.

(b) Procedure. An LLP who wishes to resign must request permission of the Supreme Court under this section by submitting a request to the Office of Attorney Registration, and must tender the LLP's certificate of admission along with a certification as to whether the LLP is subject to disciplinary proceedings in any other jurisdiction. A request to resign and an order of resignation are public information.

(c) Effect. An LLP who has been permitted to resign:

(1) Must comply with the duties listed in C.R.C.P. 242.32;

(2) Is excused from paying the annual registration fee;

(3) Is not eligible for reinstatement or transfer to active or inactive status and may be admitted to the practice of law in Colorado only by complying with the rules governing admission to the practice of law;

(4) May not hold themselves out as a Colorado LLP; and

(5) Remains subject to the supreme court's jurisdiction as set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.1(a) as to the LLPs prior practice of law in Colorado.

COMMENT

The Supreme Court sets the annual registration fee for LLPs to be used for the purposes set forth in the rule. Those fees, together with other fees collected through the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel, will help defray the cost of admitting, registering and regulating LLPs.

Rule 208. Character and Fitness DeterminationRule 208.1. Character and Fitness Investigation

(1) Purpose. The purpose of a character and fitness investigation conducted before an individual is admitted to practice law in Colorado is to protect the public and safeguard the system of justice.

(2) Burden of Proof. The applicant shall bear the burden of proving the character and fitness necessary to practice law in Colorado.

(3) Expectations of A Lawyer's Responsibilities. Applicants should understand that a lawyer's professional responsibilities include the following minimum expectations set forth in the Preamble to the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct:

(a) A lawyer, as a member of the legal profession, is a representative of clients, an officer of the legal system and a public citizen having special responsibility for the quality of justice;

(b) A lawyer should be competent, prompt and diligent in all professional functions;

(c) A lawyer should maintain communication with a client concerning the representation;

(d) A lawyer should keep in confidence information relating to the representation of a client except when disclosure is required or permitted by the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;

(e) A lawyer's conduct should conform to the requirements of the law, both in professional services to clients and in the lawyer's business and personal affairs;

(f) A lawyer should use the law's procedures only for legitimate purposes and not to harass or intimidate others;

(g) A lawyer should demonstrate respect for the legal system and for those who serve it, including judges, other lawyers and public officials; and

(4) Standard of Character and Fitness. A Colorado lawyer should possess record of conduct that justifies the trust of clients, adversaries, courts and others with respect to the professional responsibilities owed to them. A basis for denial of an application arising from lack of character may exist when the applicant's record tends to show a deficiency in honesty, integrity, judgment, trustworthiness, diligence, reliability or capacity to practice law. A basis for denial of an application may exist where the applicant's record reveals a history of deceptiveness, criminality, fraud, negligence, irrational behavior, drug or alcohol dependence or abuse, emotional or mental instability, financial irresponsibility or violence.

(5) Essential Eligibility Requirements. Applicants must meet all of the following essential eligibility requirements for the practice of law:

- (a) Honesty and candor with clients, lawyers, courts, regulatory authorities and others;
- (b) The ability to reason logically, recall complex factual information, and accurately analyze legal problems;

- (i) The ability to be honest and use good judgment in financial dealings on behalf of oneself, clients, and others; and
- (j) The ability to comply with deadlines and time constraints.

(6) Relevant Conduct. The following shall be treated as cause for scrutiny of whether the applicant possesses the character and fitness necessary to practice law in Colorado:

- (a) Unlawful conduct;
- (b) Academic misconduct;
- (c) Misconduct in employment;
- (d) Acts involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation;
- (e) Acts that demonstrate disregard for the rights or welfare of others;
- (f) Abuse of legal process, including the filing of vexatious or frivolous lawsuits or the raising of vexatious or frivolous defenses;
- (g) Neglect of financial responsibilities;
- (h) Neglect of professional obligations;
- (i) Violation of a court order, including a child support order;
- (j) Conduct evidencing current mental or emotional instability that may interfere with the ability to practice law;
- (k) Conduct evidencing current drug or alcohol dependence or abuse that may interfere with the ability to practice law;
- (l) Denial of admission to the bar in another jurisdiction on character and fitness grounds;
- (m) Disciplinary action by a lawyer disciplinary agency or other professional disciplinary agency of any jurisdiction;
- (n) Making false statements, including material omissions, on law school admission applications; or
- (o) Making false statements, including material omissions, on bar applications in this state or any other jurisdiction.

The above is not an exhaustive list, but is instead illustrative of common causes for scrutiny of whether an applicant possesses the character and fitness necessary to practice law in Colorado.

(7) Considerations. The Character and Fitness Committee shall determine whether the applicant possesses the character and fitness necessary to practice law in Colorado. The factors the Committee may consider in assigning weight and significance to the applicant's prior conduct include, but are not limited to:

- (a) The applicant's age at the time of the conduct;
 - (b) The recency of the conduct;
 - (c) The reliability of the information concerning the conduct;
 - (d) The seriousness of the conduct;
 - (e) The underlying circumstances of the conduct;
 - (f) The cumulative effect of the conduct, including its impact on others;
 - (g) Evidence of rehabilitation documented pursuant to subsection (8);
 - (h) Any positive social contributions the applicant has made after the conduct occurred;
 - (i) The applicant's candor in the admissions process;
 - (j) The materiality of any omissions or misrepresentations; and
 - (k) Evidence of mental or emotional instability.
- (8) Rehabilitation. An applicant who affirmatively asserts rehabilitation from past conduct may provide evidence of rehabilitation by submitting one or more of the following:
- (a) Evidence that the applicant has acknowledged the conduct was wrong and has accepted responsibility for the conduct;
 - (b) Evidence of strict compliance with the conditions of any disciplinary, judicial, administrative, or other order, where applicable;
 - (c) Evidence of lack of malice toward those whose duty compelled bringing disciplinary, judicial, administrative, or other proceedings against the applicant;
 - (d) Evidence of cooperation with the Office of Attorney Admissions investigation;

 - (f) Evidence of restitution of funds or property, where applicable;

 - (j) Evidence that the applicant has changed in ways that will reduce the likelihood of future misconduct; or
 - (k) Other evidence that supports an assertion of rehabilitation, including medical or psychological testimony or opinion.

Rule 208.4. Inquiry Panel Review

(1) Review by Separate Inquiry Panels. The chair of the Character and Fitness Committee shall assign at least three members of the Character and Fitness Committee to one or more inquiry panels.

(2) Assignment of Inquiry Panel. If, after investigation conducted pursuant to these rules, the Office of Attorney Admissions recommends that an inquiry panel be assigned to determine whether the applicant has met his or her burden of establishing that the applicant possesses the character and fitness necessary for admission to the practice of law in Colorado, the chair of the Character and Fitness Committee shall assign an inquiry panel and designate one of the inquiry panel members as panel chair. (5) Formal Rules of Evidence Do Not Apply. The inquiry panel is not bound by formal rules of evidence during the interview and may consider all documents, verified written statements or other matters brought to its attention.

(6) Determination by Inquiry Panel. The inquiry panel shall make a finding whether the applicant has established that he or she possesses the character and fitness necessary to practice law in Colorado. The applicant may be admitted, admitted with conditions, denied admission, or the inquiry panel may in its discretion postpone a determination to allow the applicant an opportunity to submit further documentation or undergo an independent medical examination. Rule 209.4. Hearing

(1) Issues. The issues under review at the hearing shall be limited to those in the inquiry panel findings and challenged in the applicant's request for a hearing, unless the parties otherwise stipulate or the findings were amended pursuant to the procedure described in C.R.C.P. 209.3(1).

(ii) Designation of the Record; Costs. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, the designation of the record on appeal shall be in accordance with C.A.R. 10. Within fourteen days after filing the written exceptions, the excepting party shall file a designation of

The designation of record shall either: (1) indicate that all the items enumerated in section (b)(i) are desired; or (2) contain a more limited detailed list, arrived through stipulation of the parties, describing the specific items to be included in the record. The excepting party shall serve a copy of the designation of record on the opposing party and on the court reporter who reported the proceedings before the hearing board. Service on any court reporter of the excepting party's designation of record shall constitute a request for transcription of the specified proceedings. Each such court reporter shall provide the written notifications required by C.A.R. 10(b), and the designating party shall pay for the requested transcript(s) in accordance with that rule.

(iii) Certification of the Record. The records and files of the hearing board shall be certified by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(iv) Transmission of the Record. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, the transmission of the record on appeal shall be in accordance with C.A.R. 11. The excepting party shall take any actions necessary to enable the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge to assemble and transmit the record. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge shall assemble and transmit the record in accordance with C.A.R. 10(a)(4) and (5), and C.A.R. 11(b).

The brief of the excepting party shall be entitled "opening brief," the brief of the opposing party shall be entitled "answer brief," and the brief of the excepting party's reply brief, if any, shall be entitled "reply brief." The content, form, and length of the briefs shall comply with C.A.R. 28 and 32, except that neither party may seek an award of attorney fees.

(ii) Time for Serving and Filing Briefs. The excepting party shall serve and file the opening brief within twenty-eight days after the date on which the record is filed. The objecting party shall serve and file the answer brief within twenty-eight days after service of the opening brief. The excepting party may serve and file a reply brief within fourteen days after service of the answer brief.

(d) Review. The Supreme Court, after reviewing the report of the hearing board, any exceptions filed thereto, the record, and the parties' briefs, may adopt, modify, or reject the report in whole or in part, or may receive further evidence prior to its decision to admit or decline to admit the applicant. The Supreme Court reserves the authority to review any determination made in the course of an admission proceeding and to enter any order with respect thereto, including an order that the Character and Fitness Committee, inquiry panel, and/or hearing board conduct further proceedings.

Source: Entire rule added and effective September 1, 2014.

Rule 210.2. Revocation Proceedings

(1) Petition for Revocation. If, after an applicant has been admitted to practice law in Colorado, the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel learns that during the admissions process the applicant knowingly made a false statement of material fact, knowingly failed to disclose a fact necessary to correct a misapprehension known by the applicant to have arisen in the matter, knowingly failed to supplement the application with details of any material changes in the information provided in the application, or engaged in knowing dishonest conduct during the application process in an attempt to induce the Office of Attorney Admissions, the Board of Law Examiners and/or the Supreme Court to grant a law license, or otherwise engaged in pre-admission conduct that if disclosed could have precluded the applicant from being admitted to the practice of law in Colorado, the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel may file a petition with the Supreme Court within three (3) years that specifies the conduct and seeks an order requiring the attorney to show cause why the Colorado license to practice law should not be revoked. Such petition and any subsequent pleadings may be e-filed in accordance with C.A.R. 30. Such revocation proceedings shall be public.

(2) Caption. Revocation proceedings shall be commenced in the name of The People of the State of Colorado.

(3) Show Cause Order. The Supreme Court, on consideration of the petition filed, may issue an order directed to the attorney respondent commanding the respondent to show cause why the respondent's law license should not be revoked, and further requiring that the respondent file with the Supreme Court, within twenty-one days after service of the petition and show cause order, a written answer admitting or denying the matters stated in the petition. The show cause order, together with a copy of the petition, shall be served on the respondent and the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel. Service shall be sufficient when made either personally upon the respondent or by certified mail sent to the respondent's registered or last known address.

(4) Supreme Court Order Based on Pleadings. If a response to the show cause order is not timely filed, the Supreme Court upon its own motion or the motion of any party shall decide the case, granting such relief and issuing such other orders as may be appropriate.

(5) Judgment on Pleadings. If the response to the show cause order raises no genuine issue of material fact, any party by motion may request a judgment on the pleadings and the Supreme Court may decide the case as a matter of law, granting such relief and issuing such other orders as may be appropriate.

(6) Referral to Hearing Board. Upon the Supreme Court's order or upon motion of any party, questions of fact raised in proceedings under this rule may be referred to a hearing board consisting of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge and two members of the Character and Fitness Committee for findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommendations for final disposition of the case. The two Character and Fitness Committee members, at least one of whom shall be an attorney, shall be randomly selected by the clerk for the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge has been disqualified, an attorney on the Character and Fitness Committee shall be selected by the clerk to serve as the presiding officer.

(a) Burden of Proof. The Attorney Regulation Counsel has the burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that the respondent engaged in any of the conduct set forth in section (1) of this rule.

(b) Procurement of Evidence. The parties may procure the attendance of witnesses before the hearing board by issuance of subpoenas which shall be in the name of the Supreme Court and may be issued by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or his or her clerk upon the request of a party. All such subpoenas shall be subject to the provisions of C.R.C.P. 45. Failure or refusal, without adequate excuse, to comply with any such subpoena shall constitute contempt of the Supreme Court and may be punished accordingly.

(c) Hearing Procedures. The Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure shall apply when not inconsistent with these rules. Subject to any limitations in the order of reference, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or presiding officer shall have the powers generally reposed in a district court under the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge or presiding officer shall rule on all motions, objections and other matters of law presented during the course of proceedings conducted pursuant to the order of reference. At all hearings before a hearing board, witnesses shall be sworn in and a complete record made of all proceedings had and testimony taken.

(d) Findings. After the hearing, the hearing board shall report in writing to the Supreme Court in accordance with the order of reference, setting forth findings of fact, conclusions of law and recommendations for final disposition of the case.

(e) Exceptions. Exceptions to the report of the hearing board may be filed with the Supreme Court by any party within twenty-eight days after copies of the report have been mailed to the parties. If no exceptions are timely filed, the case shall stand submitted upon the hearing board's report.

(f) Record on Appeal.

(i) Composition of the Record. Unless the parties stipulate to a more limited record, the record shall consist of all pleadings, documents, and other materials filed or submitted in the proceedings before the hearing board; all written findings, orders, and judgments entered by the hearing board; all evidence presented to the hearing board, including depositions and exhibits; and a complete transcript of all hearings conducted by the hearing board.

(ii) Designation of the Record; Costs. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, the designation of the record on appeal shall be in accordance with C.A.R. 10. Within fourteen days after filing the written exceptions, the excepting party shall file a designation of record with the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge and the clerk of the Supreme Court. The designation of record shall either: (1) indicate that all the items enumerated in section (f)(i) are desired; or (2) contain a more limited detailed list, arrived through stipulation of the parties, describing the specific items to be included in the record. The excepting party shall serve a copy of the designation of record on the opposing party and on the court reporter(s) who reported the proceedings before the hearing board. Service on any court reporter of the excepting party's designation of record shall constitute a request for transcription of the specified proceedings. Each such court reporter shall provide the written notifications required by C.A.R. 10(b), and the designating party shall pay for the requested transcript(s) in accordance with that rule.

(iii) Certification of the Record. The records and files of the hearing board shall be certified by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(iv) Transmission of the Record. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, the transmission of the record on appeal shall be in accordance with C.A.R. 11. The record on appeal, including the transcript and exhibits necessary for the determination of the appeal, shall be transmitted to the clerk of the Supreme Court within sixty-three days (nine weeks) after the filing of the written exceptions, unless the time is shortened or extended by an order entered under C.A.R. 11(d). The excepting party shall take any action necessary to enable the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge to assemble and transmit the record. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge shall assemble and transmit the record in accordance with C.A.R. 10(a)(4) and (5), and C.A.R. 11(b).

(g) Briefs. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, the form, filing, and service of briefs shall be in accordance with C.A.R. 28, 31, and 32.

(i) Titles, Content, Form, and Length of Briefs. No Requests for Attorney Fees Allowed. The brief of the excepting party shall be entitled "opening brief," the brief of the opposing party shall be entitled "answer brief," and the excepting party's reply brief, if any, shall be entitled "reply brief." The content, form, and length of the briefs shall comply with C.A.R. 28 and 32, except that neither party may seek an award of attorney fees.

(ii) Time for Serving and Filing Briefs. The excepting party shall serve and file the opening brief within twenty-eight days after the date on which the record is filed. The objecting party shall serve and file the answer brief within twenty-eight days after service of the opening brief. The excepting party may serve and file a reply brief within fourteen days after service of the answer brief.

(h) Order of Revocation. After review of the report of the hearing board, together with any exceptions, briefs, and the record, the Supreme Court may adopt, modify, or reject the report in whole or in part and shall determine as a matter of law whether the respondent engaged in any of the conduct set forth in section (1) of this rule. If the Supreme Court finds that the respondent did engage in any of the conduct set forth in section (1) of this rule, the Supreme Court may enter an order revoking the respondent's license to practice law in Colorado and may issue such further orders as it deems appropriate, including orders for restitution to any affected agency or client, and the assessment of costs.

(7) Immediate Suspension. Nothing in this rule shall be construed to limit the power of the Supreme Court, upon proper application, to immediately suspend an attorney at any stage of the revocation proceeding in order to prevent public harm.

(8) Not Exclusive Remedy. In addition to or in lieu of initiating revocation proceedings, the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel may in its discretion choose to institute disciplinary proceedings against the respondent for conduct described in subparagraph (1) of this rule, and a C.R.C.P. 242 hearing board may order revocation of the law license as an alternative to discipline. Nothing in this rule precludes the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel from pursuing disciplinary proceedings against the respondent attorney if the Supreme Court does not order revocation of the attorney's law license pursuant to this rule.

Rule 224. Provision of Legal Services Following Determination of a Major Disaster

(1) Determination of Major Disaster. Solely for purposes of this rule, the Supreme Court shall determine when an emergency affecting the justice system, as a result of a natural or other major disaster, has occurred in:

(a) The state of Colorado, and whether the emergency caused by the major disaster affects the entirety or only a part of this state, or

(b) Another jurisdiction in the United States, but only after such a determination and its geographical scope have been made by the highest court of that jurisdiction.

(2) Temporary Practice in Colorado Following a Major Disaster in Colorado. Following the determination of an emergency in Colorado pursuant to paragraph (1) of this rule, an out-of-state attorney who meets the conditions of C.R.C.P. 205.1(a) and (b) may be allowed to establish a place for the temporary practice of law from which the attorney may provide legal services not otherwise authorized by Rule 205.1. The terms and conditions of such temporary practice will be set forth in the Supreme Court's emergency order, and will depend upon the nature and extent of the emergency affecting the justice system, and the needs for legal services resulting from such emergency.

(3) Temporary Practice in Colorado Following a Major Disaster in Another Jurisdiction. Following the determination of a major disaster in another jurisdiction in the United States, pursuant to paragraph (1) of this rule, an out-of-state attorney who meets the conditions of C.R.C.P. 205.1(a) and (b) may establish a place for the temporary practice of law in Colorado not otherwise authorized by C.R.C.P. 205.1, from which such attorney may provide legal services related to that attorney's practice of law in the licensing jurisdiction or the area of such licensing jurisdiction where the major disaster occurred.

(4) Duration of Authority for Temporary Practice. The authority for an out-of-state attorney to maintain a place for the practice of law in Colorado as described in paragraphs (2) and (3) shall end when the Supreme Court determines that the conditions caused by the major disaster have ended. The Supreme Court may allow a winding down period for such temporary practice offices.

(5) Court Appearances. The authority granted by this rule does not include appearances in Colorado state courts of record or administrative tribunals, except:

(a) When the out-of-state attorney files a motion for pro hac vice admission pursuant to C.R.C.P. 205.3 and 205.4, and obtains permission from the trial court for such appearance (the Supreme Court may waive pro hac vice admission fees at the time of the determination of the major disaster as described in paragraph (1) or at any time thereafter while the determination remains in effect); or

(b) When the Supreme Court, in any determination made under paragraph (1), grants blanket permission to attorneys providing legal services pursuant to paragraph (2) to appear in all or designated Colorado courts or administrative tribunals, thereby suspending the pro hac vice application and fee requirements set forth in C.R.C.P. 205.3 and 205.4.

(6) Disciplinary Authority and Registration Requirement. Out-of-state attorneys who establish a place for the temporary practice of law in Colorado pursuant to paragraphs (2) or (3) are subject to this Supreme Court's disciplinary authority and the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct as provided in C.R.C.P. 205.1(3) and Colo. RPC 8.5. Prior to opening such place for the temporary practice of law in Colorado, these out-of-state attorneys shall file a registration statement with the Colorado Supreme Court Office of Attorney Registration. The registration statement shall be in a form prescribed by the Supreme Court. Any out-of-state attorney who provides legal services pursuant to this rule shall not be considered to be engaged in the unauthorized practice of law in Colorado, and shall be deemed, for the purposes of Colorado Revised Statutes, Title 12, Article 5, Sections 101, 112 and 115, to have obtained a license for the limited scope of practice specified in this rule.

(7) Notification to Clients. Out-of-state attorneys who establish a place for the temporary practice of law in Colorado pursuant to paragraph (2) shall inform Colorado clients in writing, at the time the relationship commences, of the jurisdiction(s) in which the attorney is licensed or otherwise authorized to practice law, any limits on that authorization, and that the attorney is not authorized to practice law in Colorado except as permitted by this rule and the Court's emergency order.

(c) Exemption - Age 65. Any registered inactive attorney over the age of 65 is exempt from payment of the annual fee.

(7) Transfer to Active Status.

Upon the filing of a notice to transfer to inactive status and payment of the fee required under section (1)(a) above and any arrearages, if owed, an attorney shall be removed from the roll of those classified as active until and unless a request for transfer to active status is made and granted. Transfer to active status shall be granted, unless the attorney is subject to an outstanding order of suspension or disbarment, upon the payment of any assessment in effect for the year the request is made and any accumulated arrearages for non-payment of inactive fees.

(8) Resignation.

(a) Criteria. The supreme court may permit an attorney to resign from the practice of law in Colorado. The Regulation Counsel must inform the supreme court whether any disciplinary or disability matter involving the attorney should preclude the attorney's resignation and whether any pre-complaint proceeding pending against the attorney under C.R.C.P. 242 should be dismissed. An attorney may not resign if a complaint under C.R.C.P. 242.25 is pending against the attorney.

(b) Procedure. An attorney who wishes to resign must request permission of the supreme court under this section by submitting a request to the Office of Attorney Registration, and must tender the attorney's certificate of admission along with a certification as to whether the attorney is subject to disciplinary proceedings in any other jurisdiction. A request to resign and an order of resignation are public information.

(c) Effect. An attorney who has been permitted to resign:

- (1) Must comply with the duties listed in C.R.C.P. 242.32;
- (2) Is excused from paying the annual registration fee;
- (3) Is not eligible for reinstatement or transfer to active or inactive status and may be admitted to the practice of law in Colorado only by complying with the rules governing admission to the practice of law;
- (4) May not hold herself or himself out as a Colorado attorney; and
- (5) Remains subject to the supreme court's jurisdiction as set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.1 as to the attorney's practice of law in Colorado.

B. Registration Fee of Non-Attorney Judges

(1) Every non-attorney judge who is subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission on Judicial Discipline shall pay an annual fee of $10.00. The annual fee shall be collected by the Clerk of the Supreme Court of Colorado, who shall send and receive, or cause to be sent and received, the notices and fees provided for hereafter. The ten-dollar fee shall be used to pay the costs of establishing and administering the mandatory continuing legal education requirement. The clerk shall account for and forward these receipts to the Office of Continuing Legal and Judicial Education.

(2) Any non-attorney judge who fails to timely pay the fee required under subparagraph (1) above shall be reported to the Commission on Judicial Discipline, provided a notice of delinquency has been issued by the Clerk and mailed to the non-attorney judge by certified mail addressed to the county court in the respective county seat at least 28 days prior to such reporting, unless an excuse has been granted on grounds of financial hardship.

(3) If any non-attorney judge who is reported to the Commission on Judicial Discipline under the provisions of subparagraph (2) above subsequently makes payment of arrearages, such payment shall be reported to the Commission by the Clerk.

(4) On or before January 31 of each year, all non-attorney judges shall file any affidavit required by Rule 250.7 and shall pay the annual fee required by this rule.

(5) Within 21 days after the receipt of each fee in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (4) above, receipt thereof shall be acknowledged on a form prescribed by the Clerk.

COMMENT

The Supreme Court sets the annual attorney registration fee. The annual attorney registration fee includes both attorneys on active status and attorneys on inactive status. Attorneys admitted under C.R.C.P. 204 annually pay the active attorney fee as required by C.R.C.P. 204.1 through 204.6. The Supreme Court apportions the active attorney fee to the various attorney regulation and registration offices; the continuing legal education office; the Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection; and the Colorado Attorney Assistance Program.

To cover the operating costs of the various programs the court increased the annual attorney registration fee every six to eight years. In 2006, the court increased the active attorney registration fee fifteen percent. In 1998, to fund major changes to the attorney regulation system the court increased the fee seventy percent. The infrequent increases resulted in a surplus in the attorney registration/regulation fund for a period of years. In an effort to reduce the impact of a substantial fee increase every six to eight years the court adopted a more modest and consistent way of determining attorney registration fees. The court will authorize smaller but more frequent fee increases as necessary to cover operating expenses related to the costs of the Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection, attorney regulation, unauthorized practice of law matters, and administration of this rule.

Constitutionality. The difference in treatment accorded lawyers who pay the fee under this rule and those who do not pay the fee does not constitute invidious discrimination against those who do not pay the fee as it is not in violation of due process or equal protection of the law. May v. Supreme Court of Colo., 508 F.2d 136 (10th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1008, 95 S. Ct. 2631, 45 L. Ed. 2d 671 (1975).

Attorney currently under suspension for failure to comply with registration requirements is still subject to jurisdiction of the court for additional violations of Colorado rules of civil procedure and failure to comply with the code of professional responsibility. People v. Richards, 748 P.2d 341 (Colo. 1987).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Smith, 757 P.2d 628 (Colo. 1988); People v. Newman, 925 P.2d 783 (Colo. 1996).

Disbarment is warranted for driving while impaired, marihuana possession, improperly executing agreement without permission, and failing to perform certain professional duties, despite the lack of a prior record. People v. Gerdes, 891 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1995).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Woodrum, 911 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Greene, 773 P.2d 528 (Colo. 1989).

Facts supported finding of direct contempt when defendant admittedly made offensive statement during the course of proceedings even though obscenity was directed toward counsel for the People and merely overheard by the court. There was no abuse of discretion by the trial court given the fact that the defendant admitted it was inappropriate and an affront to the dignity of the court and its proceedings, and given the fact that defendant was an attorney admitted to the Bar. People v. Holmes, 967 P.2d 192 (Colo. App. 1998).

Rule 232. Rules Governing Unauthorized Practice of Law Proceedings

Preamble

In prohibiting the unauthorized practice of law in Colorado in the public interest, the supreme court's regulatory and policy objectives include:

- (1) Protecting the public by ensuring that persons who assist others in their legal affairs have sufficient competence to avoid harming the liberty interests and property rights of those they assist;
- (2) Safeguarding the system of justice and avoiding the waste of limited judicial resources by ensuring that only qualified persons assist others before tribunals;
- (3) Educating the public about the activities that constitute the unauthorized practice of law; and
- (4) Providing the public with access to the justice system at a reasonable cost by permitting nonlawyers to provide legal representation of limited scope in certain circumstances.

Part I. Terminology and Jurisdiction

Rule 232.1. Terminology

For purposes of this rule, the following definitions and abbreviations apply:

“Advisory Committee” refers to the Supreme Court Advisory Committee on the Practice of Law, as identified in C.R.C.P. 232.4.

“Civil injunction” and derivatives of that term generally refer to a proceeding brought under C.R.C.P. 232.14 through C.R.C.P. 232.20 to enjoin a respondent from the unauthorized practice of law.

“Complaining witness” means a person who submits a request for investigation to the Regulation Counsel under C.R.C.P. 232.9(a)(1).

“Contempt” refers to a proceeding brought under C.R.C.P. 232.22 through C.R.C.P. 232.24 to hold in contempt a respondent who is alleged to have engaged in the unauthorized practice of law in contravention of a previous injunction.

“Costs” are those costs made available in civil cases and may include travel expenses incurred by witnesses, fees for court reporters, and fees for expert witnesses. “Costs” may also include expenses incurred during an investigation.

“Exercise of legal judgment” and derivatives of that phrase mean the application of actual or purported knowledge or understanding of the law, beyond that of the ordinary citizen, to a particular set of facts.

“Expunge” and “expungement” refer to the destruction of all files, records, and other items of any type in a given proceeding.

“Including” means including but not limited to.

“Injunction,” “enjoin,” and derivatives of those terms refer to a court order prohibiting a nonlawyer from engaging in the unauthorized practice of law.

“Mail” and “mailing” means the sending of a document or other item through the U.S. Postal Service, through a commercial delivery service, or by electronic means.

“Notice,” “notify,” and derivatives of those terms are addressed in C.R.C.P. 232.29.

“Nonlawyer” means a person who is not licensed, authorized, or otherwise certified to practice law in any jurisdiction in the United States, including a disbarred lawyer.

“Person” includes an individual, a trust, or an entity, which includes a firm, association, corporation, partnership, or limited liability company.

“Tribunal” means a court, an arbitrator in a binding arbitration proceeding, or a legislative body, administrative agency, or other body acting in an adjudicative capacity. “UPL” means “unauthorized practice of law,” as set forth in C.R.C.P. 232.2(b)-(c).

Source: Entire rule adopted and effective December 15, 2022 (Rule Change 2022(17)).

Rule 232.2. Jurisdiction and Prohibited UPL Activities

(a) Jurisdiction. Jurisdiction exists under this rule over any nonlawyer who engages or attempts to engage in the practice of law in Colorado. The practice of law occurs “in Colorado” if the nonlawyer takes the actions at issue within the geographic boundaries of Colorado, if the recipient of legal services was in Colorado at the time of the actions, or if the actions involve a tribunal located in Colorado.

(b) Prohibition on the Unauthorized Practice of Law. Unless authorized by supreme court case law, federal law, tribal law, or other valid law, a nonlawyer may not engage in the practice of law. “Practice of law” includes the following:

- (1) Protecting, defending, or enforcing the legal rights or duties of another person;
- (2) Representing another person before any tribunal or, on behalf of another person, drafting pleadings or other papers for any proceeding before any tribunal;

(3) Counseling, advising, or assisting another person in connection with that person's legal rights or duties;

(4) Exercising legal judgment in preparing legal documents for another person; and

(5) Any other activity the supreme court determines to constitute the practice of law.

(c) Prohibited Activities. The unauthorized practice of law by a nonlawyer includes the following:

(1) Exercising legal judgment to advise another person about the legal effect of a proposed action or decision;

(2) Exercising legal judgment to advise another person about legal remedies or possible courses of legal action available to that person;

(3) Exercising legal judgment to select a legal document for another person or to prepare a legal document for another person, other than solely as a typist or scrivener;

(4) Exercising legal judgment to represent or advocate for another person in a negotiation, settlement conference, mediation, or alternative dispute resolution proceeding;

(5) Exercising legal judgment to represent or advocate for another person in a hearing, trial, or other legal proceeding before a tribunal;

(6) Advertising or holding oneself out, either directly or impliedly, as an attorney, a lawyer, "Esquire," a legal consultant, or a legal advocate, or in any other manner that conveys capability or authorization to provide unsupervised services involving the exercise of legal judgment;

(7) Owning or controlling a for-profit entity that is not authorized under C.R.C.P. 265 and that provides services involving the exercise of legal judgment;

(8) Soliciting any fees for services involving the exercise of legal judgment;

(9) Owning or controlling a website, application, software, bot, or other technology that interactively offers or provides services involving the exercise of legal judgment; and

(10) Performing any other activity that constitutes the practice of law as set forth in subsection (b) above.

(d) Invalid Defenses. Invalid defenses to civil injunctive or contempt claims under this rule include:

(1) That the respondent was acting pursuant to a power of attorney;

(2) That the respondent did not charge or receive a fee; and

(3) That the respondent, in the course of engaging in an activity prohibited under subsections (c)(1)-(5) or (7)-(10) above, did not hold herself or himself out as authorized to practice law.

(e) No Implied Limitation on Authority or Jurisdiction. Nothing in this rule shall be construed as a limitation on the authority or jurisdiction of any tribunal to punish for contempt a nonlawyer who engages or attempts to engage in the practice of law in Colorado in a matter within the jurisdiction of that tribunal. Nor shall this rule be construed as a limitation on any civil remedy or criminal proceeding that may otherwise exist.

COMMENT

[1] Paraprofessionals, secretaries, investigators, law student interns, bookkeepers, suspended lawyers, and other nonlawyers may properly act under the supervision of lawyers, in accordance with applicable legal authorities. See Colo. RPC 5.3 cmt. [2]. In assisting a lawyer to render services requiring the exercise of legal judgment, nonlawyers must act under the direct supervision and control of the lawyer.

[2] Disbarred lawyers are subject to the jurisdiction set forth in both this rule and C.R.C.P. 242.

Part II. Entities

Rule 232.3. Supreme Court

The Colorado Supreme Court (supreme court) exercises exclusive jurisdiction over all matters in Colorado involving the unauthorized practice of law. The supreme court has plenary power to review any determination made in a proceeding under this rule and to enter any order in such a proceeding.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Proposed Amendments to C.R.C.P. 228 and the Cross-Border Practice of Law", see 31 Colo. 21 (January 2002).

Granting person permission to practice law is sole prerogative of supreme court of Colorado. People v. Belfor, 200 Colo. 44, 611 P.2d 979 (1980).

Purpose of the bar and the admission requirements is to protect the public from unqualified individuals who charge fees for providing incompetent legal advice. Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Grimes, 654 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1982); Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Prog, 761 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1988).

The court cannot permit an unlicensed person to commit acts which it would condemn if done by a lawyer. Unauthorized Practice of Law Comm. v. Grimes, 654 P.2d 822 (Colo. 1982).

The counseling and sale of living trusts by nonlawyers constitutes the unauthorized practice of law. People v. Cassidy, 884 P.2d 309 (Colo. 1994).

Assignee's action in filing adversary proceedings contesting discharge of debts assigned to him by various subcontractors constitutes the unauthorized practice of law. As long as the subcontractors are not selling their claims for present consideration but instead are retaining an interest in the proceeds of the claims, assignee is acting partially on their behalf in a representative capacity. By pursuing litigation to recover on the claims, assignee is arguably taking actions amounting to the practice of law. In re Thomas, 387 B.R. 808 (D. Colo. 2008).

Suspended attorney must demonstrate rehabilitation for readmittance to bar. Actions of a suspended attorney who took part in a complex real estate transaction and engaged in the practice of law by representing, counseling, advising, and assisting a former client warranted suspension until he demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that: (1) He has been rehabilitated; (2) he has complied with and will continue to comply with all applicable disciplinary orders and rules; and (3) he is competent and fit to practice law. People v. Belfor, 200 Colo. 44, 611 P.2d 979 (1980).

Rule 232.4. Advisory Committee

The Supreme Court Advisory Committee on the Practice of Law (Advisory Committee) is a permanent committee of the supreme court. See C.R.C.P. 242.3. The Advisory Committee oversees administrative matters under the Rules Governing the Practice of Law, including UPL matters under this rule. The Advisory Committee assists the supreme court in its review of the productivity, effectiveness, and efficiency of the investigation and prosecution of UPL matters. The Advisory Committee recommends to the supreme court proposed changes to this rule.

Rule 232.5. Legal Regulation Committee

(a) Legal Regulation Committee. The Legal Regulation Committee (Regulation Committee) is a permanent committee of the supreme court. See C.R.C.P. 242.4.

(b) Powers and Duties. In addition to the powers and duties set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.4, the Regulation Committee is authorized and empowered to act in accordance with this rule by:

- (1) Requesting investigations under C.R.C.P. 232.9(a);
- (2) Determining under C.R.C.P. 232.12(a) whether to authorize filing petitions for injunction or contempt, to authorize stipulations with respondents, to place proceedings in abeyance, to direct further investigation, or to dismiss proceedings with or without conditions;
- (3) Reviewing dismissals by the Regulation Counsel under C.R.C.P. 232.11(b); and
- (4) Recommending to the Advisory Committee proposed changes to C.R.C.P. 232.

(c) Disqualification. Regulation Committee members must refrain from taking part in a proceeding under this rule in which a judge, similarly situated, would be required to disqualify. A Regulation Committee member must also refrain from making determinations under C.R.C.P. 232.12 where a lawyer associated with the member's law firm is in any way connected with the matter pending before the Regulation Committee.

(d) Special Counsel. If the Regulation Counsel has been disqualified or if other circumstances so warrant, the Regulation Committee or its Chair may appoint special counsel to conduct or to assist with investigations and prosecutions in accordance with C.R.C.P. 232.6(c).

Editor's note: Former Rule 232.5, last amended in 2012 and relating to investigations, procedure, and subpoenas, was replaced by Rule Change 2022(17), effective December 15, 2022.

Rule 232.6. Attorney Regulation Counsel

(a) Attorney Regulation Counsel. The supreme court appoints an Attorney Regulation Counsel (Regulation Counsel). See C.R.C.P. 242.5.

(b) Powers and Duties. In addition to the powers and duties set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.5, the Regulation Counsel is authorized and empowered to act in accordance with this rule, under a budget approved by the supreme court, by:

(1) Maintaining and supervising a permanent, central office for the filing and processing of requests for investigation under this rule;

(2) Conducting investigations, dismissing matters, and requesting that the Regulation Committee take action;

(3) Prosecuting civil injunction and contempt actions as provided by this rule;

(4) Negotiating stipulations of pending matters;

(5) Maintaining records of matters before the Regulation Committee under this rule; and

(6) Performing such other duties as the supreme court may direct.

(c) Special Counsel. Special counsel appointed under C.R.C.P. 232.5(d) must act in accordance with this rule. When a special counsel is appointed, the special counsel is empowered in that proceeding to take all actions that fall within the scope of the appointment and are normally entrusted to the Regulation Counsel.

(d) Former Regulation Counsel. Former Regulation Counsel or a former member of the Regulation Counsel's staff must not represent anyone in a proceeding that was pending under this rule during that person's term of service.

COMMENT

C.R.C.P. 232.6(d) is intended to have a broader reach than Colo. RPC 1.11(a).

Rule 232.7. Presiding Disciplinary Judge

(a) Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The supreme court appoints one or more Presiding Disciplinary Judges. See C.R.C.P. 242.6.

(b) Powers and Duties of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. In addition to the powers and duties set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.6, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge is authorized and empowered to act in accordance with this rule, under a budget approved by the supreme court, by:

(1) Presiding as a hearing master over proceedings referred by the supreme court under this rule, including by ruling on legal and other issues consistent with the general authority conferred upon courts under the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure; administering oaths and affirmations in proceedings; and making reports to the supreme court; and

(2) Performing such other duties as the supreme court may direct.

(c) Disqualification. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge must refrain from taking part in a proceeding in which a similarly situated judge would be required to disqualify. No lawyer currently affiliated by employment with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may represent anyone in a proceeding under this rule so long as the Presiding Disciplinary Judge is serving in that role. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge has been disqualified, the supreme court will appoint an alternate hearing master in the proceeding. The alternate hearing master is empowered in that proceeding to take all actions normally entrusted to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, through the office established by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(d) Former Presiding Disciplinary Judges. A former presiding disciplinary judge or a former member of that judge's staff is subject to Colo. RPC 1.12. For purposes of this subsection, a "matter" includes substantially related proceedings.

Rule 232.8. Immunity

(a) Prohibition Against Lawsuit Based on Proceeding Under this Rule. A respondent may not institute a civil lawsuit against any person based on a request for investigation, testimony in a proceeding under this rule, or other written or oral communications made in a proceeding under this rule to entities identified in C.R.C.P. 232.3 through C.R.C.P. 232.7 and C.R.C.P. 232.22 or to individuals working or volunteering on behalf of those entities.

(b) Immunity for Entities Described in this Rule. The entities identified in C.R.C.P. 232.3 through C.R.C.P. 232.7 and C.R.C.P. 232.22 and all individuals working or volunteering on behalf of those entities are immune from civil suit for conduct in the course of fulfilling their official duties under this rule.

Part III. Investigation of Injunctive and Contempt Matters

Rule 232.9. Request for Investigation

(a) Requesting an Investigation. Requests for investigation, which cannot be made anonymously, may be made:

(1) By any person and directed to the Regulation Counsel;

(2) By a judge of any court of record and directed to the Regulation Counsel;

(3) By the Regulation Committee on its own motion and directed to the Regulation Counsel; or

(4) By the Regulation Counsel.

(b) Preliminary Investigation.

(1) On receiving a request for investigation under subsection (a) above, the Regulation Counsel must conduct a preliminary investigation to decide:

(A) Whether jurisdiction exists under this rule and whether an allegation has been made that, if proved, would constitute grounds to find that the respondent engaged in the unauthorized practice of law; and

(B) Whether to formally investigate the matter under C.R.C.P. 232.10 or to dismiss the matter with or without an agreement that the respondent will abide by conditions.

(2) The Regulation Counsel's decision under this section 232.9 is an exercise of discretion that may take into account numerous factors, including the availability of admissible and credible evidence to support the allegation, the level of actual or potential injury caused by the alleged conduct, and the likelihood that the alleged conduct will reoccur. The Regulation Counsel's decision under this section 232.9 is final. The Regulation Counsel will inform the complaining witness of the decision. The complaining witness is not entitled to the Regulation Committee's review or appeal of that decision.

Rule 232.10. Formal Investigation of Allegations

(a) Commencement of Investigation.

(1) Initiation. A formal investigation may commence if a decision to investigate is made under C.R.C.P. 232.9(b).

(2) Notice and Response. When the Regulation Counsel commences a formal investigation under this section 232.10, the Regulation Counsel must give the respondent notice of the investigation, the allegations against the respondent, and the UPL rules that may be implicated by the allegations. If requested to do so, the respondent must submit to the Regulation Counsel a written response to the allegations within 21 days.

(b) Procedures for Investigation.

(1) Investigator. A member of the Regulation Counsel's staff, a member of the Regulation Committee, or a special counsel appointed under C.R.C.P. 232.5(d) may act as investigator. The investigator must promptly investigate the allegations, which may include conducting interviews and procuring evidence.

(2) Subpoenas.

(A) Issuance. During an investigation, the Regulation Counsel or the Chair of the Regulation Committee may issue subpoenas to compel the attendance of witnesses, including the respondent, and to compel the production of relevant documents and other evidence.

(B) Standards. Subpoenas issued under this section 232.10 and challenges thereto are subject to C.R.C.P. 45. Challenges to subpoenas must be directed to the supreme court, which may refer the matter to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(c) Results of Investigation. After an investigation by the Regulation Counsel's staff, the Regulation Counsel must make a determination under C.R.C.P. 232.11. After an investigation conducted by an investigator who is not a member of the Regulation Counsel's staff, the investigator will submit a written report of investigation and recommendation to the Regulation Committee for a determination under C.R.C.P. 232.12.

COMMENT

For purposes of C.R.C.P. 45 a respondent subject to an investigation is considered a party, but a complaining witness is not considered a party.

Rule 232.11. Determination by Regulation Counsel

(a) Conclusion of Investigation. At the end of a formal investigation, the Regulation Counsel, using discretion, will take one of the following actions:

(1) Request that the Regulation Committee authorize the Regulation Counsel to file a petition for injunction under C.R.C.P. 232.15;

(2) Request that the Regulation Committee authorize the Regulation Counsel to file a petition for contempt under C.R.C.P. 232.23, if a civil injunction has already been issued against the respondent;

(3) Request that the Regulation Committee authorize the Regulation Counsel to enter into a stipulation with the respondent under C.R.C.P. 232.17;

(4) Request that the Regulation Committee place the matter in abeyance; or

(5) Dismiss the matter with or without an agreement by the respondent to abide by conditions.

(b) Regulation Committee Review of Dismissal by Regulation Counsel. If the Regulation Counsel dismisses a matter at the end of a formal investigation, the Regulation

Counsel must promptly notify the complaining witness and the respondent. If the complaining witness submits a request within 35 days of the notice, the Regulation Committee must review the Regulation Counsel's decision. If the Regulation Committee finds in such a review that the Regulation Counsel's decision to dismiss the allegations was not an abuse of discretion, the Regulation Committee must sustain the dismissal and provide the complaining witness with a written explanation of its decision. If the Regulation Committee finds that the Regulation Counsel's decision was an abuse of discretion, the Regulation Committee must take action in accordance with C.R.C.P. 232.12(a)-(b).

Rule 232.12. Determination by Regulation Committee

(a) Action by Regulation Committee. On receiving a request from the Regulation Counsel under C.R.C.P. 232.11(a) or a recommendation from another investigator under C.R.C.P. 232.10(c), the Regulation Committee must determine whether there is reasonable cause to believe that the respondent engaged in the unauthorized practice of law and, using its discretion and evaluating the considerations listed in subsection (b) below, will take one of the following actions:

- (1) Authorize the Regulation Counsel to file a petition for injunction;
- (2) Authorize the Regulation Counsel to file a petition for contempt, if a civil injunction has already been issued against the respondent;
- (3) Authorize the Regulation Counsel to enter into a stipulation with the respondent under C.R.C.P. 232.17;
- (4) Place the matter in abeyance;
- (5) Direct further investigation;
- (6) Enter into an informal disposition of the matter consisting of a written agreement by the respondent to refrain from the conduct in question and, if applicable, to make restitution; or
- (7) Dismiss the matter, with or without the respondent's agreement to abide by conditions, and with or without a finding that the respondent engaged in the unauthorized practice of law.

(b) Considerations in Taking Action. In making a determination under subsection (a) above, considerations for the Regulation Committee include:

- (1) Whether it is reasonable to believe that the Regulation Counsel can prove the respondent engaged in the unauthorized practice of law or contemptuous conduct, as applicable;
- (2) The level of actual or potential injury caused by the alleged conduct; and
- (3) Whether the conduct is part of a sustained pattern or is likely to reoccur.

(c) Notice to Complaining Witness. Within 28 days after the Regulation Committee's decision to authorize the filing of a petition, to authorize a stipulation, or to dismiss a matter, the Regulation Counsel must notify the complaining witness of the decision.

COMMENT

Stipulations under C.R.C.P. 232.12(a)(3), informal dispositions under C.R.C.P. 232.12(a)(6), and dismissals with the respondent's agreement to abide by conditions under C.R.C.P. 232.12(a)(7) are encouraged.

Rule 232.13. Interim Injunction

(a) Overview. Although respondents can be permanently enjoined from the unauthorized practice of law only under the civil injunction procedures set forth in C.R.C.P. 232.14 through C.R.C.P. 232.20, the supreme court may temporarily enjoin a respondent from the unauthorized practice of law while a civil injunction proceeding is pending against the respondent if there is reasonable cause to believe that the respondent is causing substantial public or private harm by engaging in a sustained pattern of UPL activities.

(b) Procedure.

(1) Initiation. To initiate a proceeding under this section 232.13, the Regulation Counsel, with the concurrence of the Chair or Vice-Chair of the Regulation Committee, must file a petition with the supreme court alleging that a respondent is engaging in a sustained pattern of the unauthorized practice of law that is causing substantial public or private harm. The petition must be supported by an affidavit setting forth facts sufficient to give rise to reasonable cause to believe that the alleged conduct occurred. The Regulation Counsel must serve a copy of the petition and affidavit on the respondent. Service of process is sufficient when made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4. Proof of service must be made as provided in C.R.C.P. 4(h).

(2) Response. The respondent must file a response within 14 days after service.

(3) Hearing. If the respondent responds to the petition, either party may request a hearing. The supreme court may refer the matter to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for resolution of contested factual matters and a hearing, for which subpoenas may be issued under C.R.C.P. 45. A hearing will take place within 14 days of the order of referral.

(4) Report. Within 7 days after any hearing, or as soon as practicable if no hearing is held, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will submit to the supreme court a report setting forth findings of fact, conclusions of law, and a recommendation as to an interim injunction.

(5) Decision. After considering the petition, any response, and any report from the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the supreme court may issue an interim injunction; deny the petition; or issue any other appropriate order.

(6) Subsequent Civil Injunction Proceeding.

(i) Filing of Petition. When the supreme court issues an interim injunction and a petition has not already been filed under C.R.C.P. 232.15 based on the same conduct, the Regulation Counsel must promptly file a petition against the respondent under C.R.C.P. 232.15. C.R.C.P. 232.12 does not apply to such proceedings. The proceeding will then go forward as otherwise provided in this rule.

(ii) Accelerated Disposition. A respondent subject to an interim injunction under this section 232.13 may exercise the right to an accelerated disposition of the civil injunction proceeding by filing a notice to that effect with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The matter then must proceed without appreciable delay.

(iii) Termination of Interim Injunction. An interim injunction under this section 232.13 terminates on resolution of a civil injunctive proceeding based on the same underlying conduct, or as the supreme court otherwise may order.

Part IV. Civil Injunction Proceedings

Rule 232.14. Overview of Civil Injunction Proceedings

Civil injunction proceedings are brought by the Regulation Counsel to enjoin a respondent from the unauthorized practice of law. The Regulation Counsel files a petition for a civil injunction with the supreme court, which may refer the matter to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge to serve as a hearing master. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will prepare a report to the supreme court. A respondent found to have engaged in the unauthorized practice of law may be enjoined from the unauthorized practice of law; ordered to pay restitution; assessed costs of the proceeding; and fined between $250 and $1500 for each incident of the unauthorized practice of law.

Source: Entire rule adopted and effective December 15, 2022 (Rule Change 2022(17)).

Rule 232.15. Initiation of Civil Injunction Proceeding(a) Petition.

(1) Filing. If the Regulation Committee authorizes a civil injunction proceeding against a respondent, the Regulation Counsel must file a petition with the supreme court in the name of the People of the State of Colorado, unless a stipulation to injunction is filed with the supreme court under C.R.C.P. 232.17.

(2) Contents. The petition must set forth the factual allegations and the charges with sufficient particularity to identify the alleged activities that may constitute the unauthorized practice of law. The petition must request specific relief, including an order of injunction and an order and entry of judgment as to restitution, costs of the proceeding, and a fine between $250 and $1500 for each incident of the unauthorized practice of law.

(b) Show Cause. On receiving the petition, the supreme court may order the respondent to show cause why the respondent should not be enjoined from the unauthorized practice of law by filing an answer to the petition. The Regulation Counsel must serve on the respondent the order and a copy of the petition. Service of process must be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4. Proof of service must be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4(h).

(c) Answer to Petition. The respondent must file an answer to the petition with the supreme court within 21 days after service of the show cause order. The answer must specifically admit or deny each allegation in the petition as provided in C.R.C.P. 8(b).

(d) Referral. After an answer is filed or the time for filing an answer has passed, the supreme court may refer the matter to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge as hearing master for findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations. Subject to any limitations in the order of reference, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may exercise in the proceeding the powers generally reposed in a court under the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

Rule 232.16. Initiation of Case Before Presiding Disciplinary Judge(a) Procedure When Answer Is Filed.

(1) Scheduling Conference. On receiving a referral from the supreme court in a case in which the respondent has filed an answer to the petition, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will set a scheduling conference, which normally should be held within 28 days of the referral. At the conference, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will schedule the hearing, set prehearing deadlines, and address matters relevant to the hearing. If the parties waive the conference, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may exercise discretion to schedule the hearing and set prehearing deadlines without an in-person scheduling conference.

(2) Notice. After the hearing is scheduled, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will issue to the parties a notice designating the date, time, and place of the hearing. The notice also must state that the respondent is entitled to be represented by counsel at the respondent's own expense, to present evidence and testimony, and to cross-examine witnesses.

(b) Procedure When No Answer Is Filed.

(1) Order Directing Answer. On receiving a referral from the supreme court in a case in which the respondent has not filed an answer to the petition, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will direct the respondent to file an answer.

(2) Entry of Default. If the respondent does not timely file an answer, the Regulation Counsel will move for entry of default under C.R.C.P. 55(a). If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge enters default, the allegations and charges in the petition will be deemed admitted.

(3) Default Judgment. After entry of default, the Regulation Counsel will move for default judgment under C.R.C.P. 55(b). If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge grants default judgment, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will submit a report to the supreme court under C.R.C.P. 232.20.

Rule 232.17. Stipulation to Injunction

(a) Overview. The Regulation Counsel and a respondent may, any time before a civil injunction hearing is held, enter into a public stipulation to injunction.

(b) Contents. A stipulation to injunction must be sworn or affirmed by the respondent, notarized, and contain:

(1) An admission that the respondent engaged in the unauthorized practice of law and the factual basis for that admission;

(2) A statement that the admission is freely and voluntarily made, that it is not the product of coercion or duress, and that the respondent is fully aware of the implications of the admission;

(3) The respondent's agreement to entry of an injunction prohibiting the respondent from engaging in the unauthorized practice of law, including the prohibited activities set forth in C.R.C.P. 232.2(c);

(4) A recitation of the prohibited activities set forth in C.R.C.P. 232.2; and

(5) A statement whether the respondent must make restitution or pay costs, and in what amount.

(c) Exemption from Fine. A respondent who stipulates to an injunction under this section 232.17 is exempt from a fine.

(d) Procedure. If the UPL matter has been referred to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the stipulation to injunction must be submitted to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. If the UPL matter has not been referred to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the stipulation to injunction must be submitted to the supreme court, which may refer the stipulation to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. On receiving a stipulation that meets the requirements set forth in subsection (b) above, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will submit the stipulation and a report to the supreme court under C.R.C.P. 232.20.

Source: Entire rule adopted and effective December 15, 2022 (Rule Change 2022(17)).

Rule 232.18. Prehearing Matters

(a) Dispositive Motions. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may decide dispositive motions, including those filed under C.R.C.P. 12 and 56. The decision is subject to supreme court review when the Presiding Disciplinary Judge submits a report to the supreme court under C.R.C.P. 232.20.

(b) Discovery.

(1) Scope. C.R.C.P. 26 applies where not inconsistent with this rule. C.R.C.P. 16 does not apply to proceedings under this rule.

(2) Disclosures. Disclosures are due no later than 28 days after the answer is filed.

(A) Each party must disclose:

(i) The name and, if known, the address, telephone number, and email address of each individual likely to have discoverable information relevant to the claims and defenses of any party and a brief description of the specific information that each such individual is known or believed to possess;

(ii) A listing, together with a copy or a description by category, of the subject matter and location of all documents, data compilations, and tangible things in the possession, custody, or control of the party that are relevant to the claims and defenses of any party; and

(iii) A statement as to whether the party plans to use expert witnesses and, if so, the experts' fields of expertise.

(B) The Regulation Counsel must disclose fines requested and a computation of any restitution sought.

(3) Expert Witnesses. The parties must exchange expert witness reports, if any, at least 56 days (8 weeks) before the hearing, or as otherwise ordered by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. A report must contain the elements required by the applicable Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(4) Limitations. Except by order of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for good cause shown, and subject to the proportionality factors in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1), discovery is limited as follows:

(A) The Regulation Counsel may take one deposition of the respondent and of two other persons in addition to depositions of experts as provided in C.R.C.P. 26. The respondent may take three depositions in addition to depositions of experts as provided in

C.R.C.P. 26. Depositions are generally governed by C.R.C.P. 26, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 45, unless otherwise inconsistent with this rule. A record must be made of depositions.

(B) Written interrogatories, requests for production of documents, and requests for admission are governed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2), 33, 34, and 36, unless otherwise inconsistent with this rule.

(C) Interview notes created as part of the preliminary investigation under C.R.C.P. 232.9 are deemed to be prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial under the work product doctrine.

(5) Modifying the Scope of Discovery. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may modify discovery limitations in accordance with C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(F).

(6) Supplementation of Discovery. A party must supplement disclosures, responses, and expert reports and statements in accordance with C.R.C.P. 26(e).

(7) Sanctions. Under C.R.C.P. 37, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may compel discovery and impose sanctions for failure to comply with discovery obligations.

(c) Subpoenas. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must issue a subpoena under C.R.C.P. 45(a)(2), signed but otherwise in blank, to a party who requests it. That party must complete it before service. A lawyer who has entered an appearance in the case also may issue, complete, and sign a subpoena as an officer of the court. Challenges to subpoenas must be directed to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may hold in contempt under C.R.C.P. 45(f) any person who fails or refuses, without adequate excuse, to comply with a subpoena.

COMMENT

Although C.R.C.P. 232.18 allows for discovery consistent with civil practice under C.R.C.P. 26, the supreme court adopts this provision with the expectation that in many UPL cases the parties will not need to make use of the full scope of allowable discovery.

Rule 232.19. Civil Injunction Hearings

(a) Location. Civil injunction hearings are normally held in the courtroom of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may exercise discretion to hold a hearing in another location that is convenient for the parties and witnesses.

(b) Admissibility of Evidence. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may receive any evidence with probative value regardless of its admissibility under the rules of evidence if the respondent has a fair opportunity to rebut hearsay evidence.

(c) No Jury Trial. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge presides over civil injunction hearings and is the sole factfinder. Hearings are not held before a jury.

(d) Burden of Proof. The Regulation Counsel bears the burden of proof in civil injunction proceedings by a preponderance of the evidence.

(e) Record. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge must make a record of all hearings.

Source: Entire rule adopted and effective December 15, 2022 (Rule Change 2022(17)).

Rule 232.20. Report to Supreme Court, Objections, and Decision

(a) Report of Presiding Disciplinary Judge. After a hearing or as otherwise provided in this rule, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must report in writing to the supreme court, setting forth findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations for a final disposition of the case. When submitting a report to the supreme court, the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must transmit the record of the entire proceeding to the supreme court and mail a copy of the report to each party.

(b) When No Objections Are Filed. If neither party files a notice of objections, the case will stand submitted upon the filed report.

(c) When Objections Are Filed.

(1) Notice of Objections. Any notice of objections to the report must be filed with the supreme court no more than 28 days after copies of the report were mailed to the parties.

(2) Content. Except as otherwise provided by this rule and to the extent practicable, the notice of objections must summarize the factual and legal bases of the objections.

(3) Transcript.

(A) Objecting Party's Request for Transcript. If a notice of objections is filed, the objecting party may request that the court reporter or a transcriber, if the proceeding was recorded by mechanical or electronic means, prepare a full transcript of the proceeding or any portion that the objecting party deems necessary for the consideration of the case. The objecting party must submit its request for a transcript no more than 14 days after filing the notice of objections. Within the same timeframe, the objecting party must file with the supreme court and serve on the opposing party under C.R.C.P. 5 either a designation of those portions of the transcript that the party wishes added to the record before the supreme court or a statement that the party does not wish to designate any portions of the transcript.

(B) Opposing Party's Request for Transcript. The opposing party must, within 14 days after service of the designation or statement under subsection (A) above, file with the supreme court, submit to the court reporter or transcriber, and serve under C.R.C.P. 5 either a cross-designation of any portions of the transcript the party deems necessary for proper consideration of the case or a statement that the party does not wish to designate any portions of the transcript.

(C) Expense of Preparing Transcript. The objecting party is responsible for the expense of preparing a transcript if the objecting party designates any portion of the transcript. If the objecting party does not designate any portion of the transcript but the opposing party designates at least some portion thereof, the opposing party is responsible for the expense of preparing the transcript.

(D) Preparation and Filing of Transcript. Unless the requesting party has failed to adequately arrange to pay for the transcript, the reporter or transcriber must prepare the transcript and file it, properly certified, with the supreme court within 63 days (9 weeks) after the filing of the notice of objections.

(4) Briefs. An objecting party must file an opening brief no more than 28 days after the later of the filing of the transcript or the filing of the opposing party's statement declining to designate portions of the transcript. The opposing party must file an answer brief no more than 28 days after the filing of the objecting party's opening brief. The objecting party must file a reply brief, if any, no more than 14 days after the filing of the answer brief.

(d) Amicus Curiae Brief. A brief of an amicus curiae may be filed only by leave of the supreme court or at the request of the supreme court. The brief may be conditionally filed with the motion for leave. A motion for leave must identify the interest of the amicus curiae and must state the reasons why an amicus curiae brief is desirable. An amicus curiae must file its brief within the time allowed the party whose position the amicus brief supports unless the supreme court for good cause shown grants leave for later filing, in which event the supreme court will specify when an opposing party may answer.

(e) Supreme Court Decision. The supreme court may adopt, modify, or reject the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's report and will determine as a matter of law whether the respondent engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. If the supreme court finds that the respondent engaged in the unauthorized practice of law, the supreme court may enjoin the respondent from further unauthorized practice of law and make further appropriate orders including orders of restitution, costs, and fines. The clerk of the supreme court must mail a copy of the order to each party.

(f) No Limitation on Authority to Issue Injunction. Nothing in this rule shall be construed to limit the power of the supreme court, upon proper application, to issue an injunction at any stage of a proceeding in order to prevent public harm.

Rule 232.21. Collection of Restitution

(a) Notice of Intent and Withdrawal of Notice. A person in whose name a restitution order has been entered under this rule has the right to pursue collection of the amount of restitution owed to that person. A person who wishes to collect restitution under this section must first deliver to the clerk of the supreme court a notice of intent to pursue collection. On receiving such a notice, the supreme court and the Regulation Counsel will cease all attempts to collect the restitution amounts due to that person. A person may withdraw a notice of intent to pursue collection of restitution by filing a notice of withdrawal with the clerk of the supreme court. The notice must state the amount, if any, of restitution collected. On receiving a notice of withdrawal, the supreme court and the Regulation Counsel may resume pursuing collection of restitution under this section.

(b) Procedure. A person who has filed a notice of intent to pursue collection of restitution may request that the supreme court issue any of the following without cost:

- (1) One or more certified copies of the transcript for the order for restitution, which may be recorded with a clerk and recorder or with the secretary of state;
- (2) An order that a portion of the respondent's earnings be withheld under C.R.S. section 16-18.5-105(3)(b); and
- (3) A writ of execution, writ of attachment, or other civil process to collect on a judgment under article 52 of title 13, C.R.S.

Part V. Contempt Proceedings

Rule 232.22. Overview of Contempt Proceedings

Contempt proceedings are brought by the Regulation Counsel to hold in contempt a respondent who is alleged to have violated an existing injunction prohibiting the respondent from engaging in the unauthorized practice of law. The Regulation Counsel files a petition for contempt with the supreme court, which may refer the matter to a special master to preside over the contempt proceeding. The special master will conduct an indirect contempt proceeding under C.R.C.P. 107 unless otherwise provided in this rule. The special master will then prepare a report to the supreme court. A respondent found to have acted in contempt of an injunction may be subject to a sentence of imprisonment not to exceed six months, restitution, a fine of $2,000 to $10,000 per incident, and assessment of costs as allowed by law. A respondent found to have also failed to pay ordered fines, costs, or restitution may be subject to remedial sanctions within a contempt proceeding.

Source: Entire rule adopted and effective December 15, 2022 (Rule Change 2022(17)).

Rule 232.23. Petition for Contempt

(a) Petition.

(1) Filing. If the Regulation Committee authorizes an indirect contempt proceeding against a respondent, the Regulation Counsel must file a petition with the supreme court in the name of the People of the State of Colorado.

(2) Contents. The petition must set forth the factual allegations and charges in plain language and with sufficient particularity to identify the alleged activities that constitute contempt. The petition must request specific relief and request issuance of a contempt citation and an order to show cause why the respondent should not be held in contempt. The petition must be supported by an affidavit that gives rise to reasonable cause to believe that indirect contempt has been committed.

(b) Determination. On receiving the petition, the supreme court may:

(1) Appoint a special master and refer the matter to the special master to preside over the contempt proceeding in a county convenient to the participants. The special master must be an active or senior judge of a court of record, must not have any conflicts of interest, and must be able to serve diligently and impartially. If the supreme court refers the matter to a special master, the supreme court will instruct the special master to issue an order to show cause and a citation for contempt and will direct the special master to prepare a report at the conclusion of the proceeding containing findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations.

(2) Issue under C.R.C.P. 232.15(b) a show cause order in a civil injunctive proceeding to be governed by C.R.C.P. 232.14 through C.R.C.P. 232.20; or

(3) Dismiss the petition.

(c) Issuance of Citation. On receiving the referral from the supreme court, the special master will issue a citation ordering the respondent to appear at a designated date, time, and place to show cause why the respondent should not be held in indirect contempt for the unauthorized practice of law. The special master also may direct the respondent to respond in writing to the show cause order by filing an answer to the petition. Depending on the requested relief in the petition, the citation must state that a fixed sentence of imprisonment not to exceed six months, restitution, an unconditional fine of $2,000 to $10,000 per incident, and assessment of allowable costs may be imposed. The Regulation Counsel must serve on the respondent the order, the citation, and a copy of the petition. Service of process must be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4. Proof of service must be made in accordance with C.R.C.P. 4(h).

(d) Procedure If Respondent Fails to Appear.

(1) Issuance of Warrant. If the respondent has been served with the citation and fails to appear before the special master at the time and place designated in the citation or at any time thereafter that the special master directs, the special master may make appropriate findings and issue a warrant for the respondent's arrest.

(2) Contents of Warrant. The warrant must fix the time and place for the respondent's production before the special master. The warrant must also state the amount of bail required.

(3) Bond. If the respondent fails to make bond, the sheriff must keep the respondent in custody and produce the respondent before the special master at the time and place fixed by the warrant. The respondent must be discharged if the sheriff or a clerk for the judicial district in which the contempt proceeding is held receives and approves of a bond directing the respondent to appear at the date, time, and place designated in the warrant, and at any time thereafter that the special master directs, or pay the sum specified. If the respondent fails to appear at the time designated in the warrant, or at any time thereafter that the special master directs, the bond may be forfeited on proper notice to the surety, if any. To the extent the aggrieved party has suffered damages because of the contempt, the bond may be paid to the aggrieved party.

Rule 232.24. Contempt Proceeding, Report, Objections, and Collections

(a) Prosecuting Authority. The Regulation Counsel will prosecute the contempt proceeding.

(b) Contempt Procedures. A respondent in a contempt proceeding must be afforded all procedural protections set forth in C.R.C.P. 107 and applicable law.

(1) First Appearance. The respondent must attend a first appearance. At the first appearance, the special master must advise the respondent of the respondent's rights under C.R.C.P. 107(d) and set the matter for a contempt hearing.

(2) Contempt Hearing. The contempt hearing will go forward under C.R.C.P. 107. Subject to any limitations in the order of reference, the special master may exercise in the proceeding the powers generally reposed in a court under the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, including C.R.C.P. 107.

(c) Report to Supreme Court, Objections, and Decision.

(1) Report of the Special Master. After a hearing the special master must report in writing to the supreme court, setting forth findings of fact, conclusions of law, and recommendations for remedial and/or punitive sanctions and the terms of those sanctions, including whether the sanctions should be bifurcated. If the special master recommends a sanction, the special master must, before issuing a report, afford the respondent the right to make a statement in mitigation under C.R.C.P. 107(b) or C.R.C.P. 107(d)(1), as applicable. Under C.R.C.P. 107(e), if the special master recommends both remedial and punitive sanctions, appropriate procedures must be followed as to each type of sanction, and findings must be made to support the adjudication of both types of sanctions. When submitting a report to the supreme court, the special master must transmit the record of the entire proceeding to the supreme court and mail a copy of the report to each party.

(2) Objections. Objections to the special master's report are governed by C.R.C.P. 232.20(b)-(d).

(3) Supreme Court Decision. The supreme court may adopt, modify, or reject the special master's report and will determine as a matter of law whether the respondent engaged in contemptuous conduct that was offensive to the authority and the dignity of the supreme court. If the supreme court finds that the respondent engaged in contemptuous conduct, the supreme court may impose a fixed sentence of imprisonment not to exceed six months, restitution, an unconditional fine of $2,000 to $10,000 per incident, or assessment of costs as allowed by law, or any combination thereof under C.R.C.P. 107(e). If the supreme court finds contemptuous conduct but does not impose imprisonment, the supreme court will impose a fine between $2,000 and $10,000 for each incident of contempt, payable to the supreme court, and may order restitution or assessment of costs as allowed by law. The supreme court may also order related remedial sanctions. The clerk of the supreme court must mail a copy of the order to each party and to the special master.

(4) Remand to Special Master. If the supreme court finds that the respondent engaged in contemptuous conduct and concludes that a sentence of imprisonment is appropriate, the supreme court will remand the matter to the special master with instructions to issue the mittimus and to take the respondent into custody in accordance with the procedures of that court of record.

(d) Collection of Restitution.

(1) Notice of Intent and Withdrawal of Notice. A person in whose name a restitution order has been entered under this rule has the right to pursue collection of the amount of restitution owed to that person. A person who wishes to collect restitution under this subsection must first deliver to the clerk of the supreme court a notice of intent to pursue collection. On receiving such a notice, the supreme court and the Regulation Counsel will cease all attempts to collect the restitution amounts due to that person. A person may withdraw a notice of intent to pursue collection of restitution by filing a notice of withdrawal with the clerk of the supreme court. The notice must state the amount, if any, of restitution collected. On receiving a notice of withdrawal, the supreme court and the Regulation Counsel may resume pursuing collection of restitution under this section.

(2) Procedure. A person who has filed a notice of intent to pursue collection of restitution may request that the supreme court issue any of the following without cost:

(A) One or more certified copies of the transcript for the order for restitution, which may be recorded with a clerk and recorder or with the secretary of state;

(B) An order that a portion of the respondent's earnings be withheld under C.R.S. section 16-18.5-105(3)(b); and

(C) A writ of execution, writ of attachment, or other civil process to collect on a judgment under article 52 of title 13, C.R.S.

(e) Enforcement of Punitive Sanctions. The Regulation Counsel may pursue a subsequent contempt citation with the supreme court if the respondent fails to pay the fine imposed as a punitive sanction. In such instances, the Regulation Counsel may pursue the contempt citation without authorization of the Regulation Committee.

Rule 232.28. Access to Information

(a) Public Information. Unless otherwise provided in this rule, all files and records relating to any phase of a civil injunction or contempt proceeding are available to the public after:

- (6) Information otherwise made confidential under this rule.

(c) Subpoenaed Records. If the Regulation Counsel is served with a valid subpoena, the Regulation Counsel shall not permit access to files or records or furnish documents that are confidential as provided by this rule unless the supreme court orders otherwise.

(d) Protective Orders. On motion of any person and on a showing of good cause, a protective order may be entered restricting the disclosure of specific information to protect a complaining witness, another witness, a third party, or a respondent from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. A protective order may direct that a proceeding, including a hearing, be conducted so as to preserve the confidentiality of certain information.

(e) Exceptions to Confidentiality During an Investigation.

- (1) Before the filing of a petition, the Regulation Counsel may, to conduct the investigation, disclose information to a complaining witness or to another third party.

(2) Release Without Notice.

(A) The Regulation Counsel may release confidential information without notifying the respondent if an agency listed in subsection (f)(1)(A) above requests the information and certifies that:

(i) The request is made in furtherance of an ongoing investigation of the respondent;

(ii) The information is essential to that investigation; and

(iii) Disclosing to the respondent the existence of the investigation would seriously prejudice that investigation.

(B) A certification made under subsection (f)(2)(A) above will be deemed confidential.

(g) Response to False or Misleading Statement and Defense to Civil Suit. The Regulation Counsel may disclose any information reasonably necessary either to correct false or misleading public statements made during a proceeding under this rule or to defend against litigation in which the Regulation Counsel is a named defendant.

(h) Disclosure by Persons and Entities Other Than Entities Defined in This Rule. Unless otherwise ordered, nothing in this rule prohibits the complaining witness, any other witness, or the respondent from disclosing the existence of a proceeding under this rule, from disclosing any documents or correspondence provided to those persons, or from providing testimony related to a proceeding under this rule.

(i) Duty of Officials and Employees. All officials, employees, and volunteers within the supreme court, the Advisory Committee, the Regulation Committee, the Office of the Attorney Regulation Counsel, the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, and courts of record from which a special master has been appointed have an ongoing duty to maintain the confidentiality mandated by this rule.

(b) Effect of Expungement. The Regulation Committee and the Regulation Counsel must respond to any general or specific inquiry concerning the existence of a proceeding the records of which have been expunged by stating that no record of a proceeding exists.

(c) Extension of Time to Retain Records. The Regulation Counsel may apply in writing to the Regulation Committee for permission to retain files and records that would otherwise be expunged under this section 232.30 for an additional period of time not to exceed three years. After giving the respondent in question notice and an opportunity to respond in writing, the Regulation Committee may grant the request on a finding of good cause. Through the same procedure, the Regulation Committee may grant additional extensions.

Rule 241. Terminology

For purposes of C.R.C.P. 242 through C.R.C.P. 244, the following definitions apply:

"Administrative fee" is an amount equal to the civil filing fee in Colorado district courts, which is assessed to defray the costs of proceedings under C.R.C.P. 242.

"Advisory Committee" refers to the Supreme Court Advisory Committee on the Practice of Law, as identified in C.R.C.P. 242.3.

"Complaining witness" means a person who submits a request for investigation to the Regulation Counsel under C.R.C.P. 242.13(a)(1).

"Conviction" refers to any determination in a criminal matter, including at a federal, state, municipal, or other level, that a person is guilty, whether the determination rests on a verdict of guilty, a judicial finding of guilt, a plea of guilty, an Alford plea, or a plea of nolo contendere, irrespective of (1) whether entry of judgment or imposition of the sentence is suspended or deferred by the court, (2) whether the person is appealing the determination, and (3) whether sentencing has occurred.

"Costs" are those costs made available in civil cases, and may include travel expenses incurred by Hearing Board members and witnesses, fees for court reporters, fees for expert witnesses, and fees for independent medical examinations. "Costs" may also include expenses incurred during an investigation.

"Crime" refers to any offense that is punishable by imprisonment.

Rule 242. Rules Governing Lawyer Disciplinary Proceedings

Preamble

The supreme court regulates the practice of law to promote the public interest as stated in the Preamble to the Rules Governing the Practice of Law. The following rules establish the procedures to determine, in the public interest, the appropriate resolution when a lawyer is alleged to have violated the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct or engaged in other conduct that constitutes grounds for discipline.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Part I. Jurisdiction

Rule 242.1. Jurisdiction and Standards of Conduct

(1) A lawyer admitted, certified, or otherwise authorized to practice law in Colorado, regardless of where the lawyer's conduct occurs or where the lawyer resides; and

(2) A lawyer not admitted to practice law in Colorado who provides or offers to provide any legal services in Colorado, including a lawyer who practices in Colorado pursuant to federal or tribal law.

(b) Applicable Rules and Standards of Conduct. The persons identified in subsection (a) above are governed by the Rules Governing the Practice of Law, including the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct.

COMMENT

C.R.C.P. 242.1(a)(2) is intended to confer regulatory jurisdiction over lawyers who are domiciled in Colorado, who maintain a law office in Colorado, or who hold themselves out as practicing law in Colorado by virtue of using a Colorado address. The phrase "any legal services in Colorado" is intended to refer broadly to the place where the legal services are rendered or where their effects are felt.

Part II. Entities Within the Legal Regulation System

Rule 242.2. Supreme Court

The Colorado Supreme Court (supreme court) exercises jurisdiction over all matters arising under the Rules Governing the Practice of Law. The supreme court has plenary power to review any determination made in a proceeding under this rule and to enter any order in such a proceeding. The supreme court also has appellate jurisdiction as set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.33.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 242.3. Advisory Committee

(a) Permanent Committee. The Supreme Court Advisory Committee on the Practice of Law (Advisory Committee) is a permanent committee of the supreme court.

(b) Membership and Meeting Provisions.

(1) Members and Liaison Justices. Two supreme court justices serve as non-voting liaisons to the Advisory Committee. The Advisory Committee comprises up to 13 volunteer members, including a Chair and Vice-Chair. Members other than the Chair and Vice-Chair serve one term of up to seven years. The supreme court appoints the members. Diversity must be a consideration in making appointments. At least nine of the members must be lawyers admitted to practice in Colorado and at least two of the members must be nonlawyers. Members' terms should be staggered to provide, so far as possible, for the expiration each year of the term of at least one member. Members must include:

(A) The Chairs (or the annual designees) of the following committees: the Regulation Committee, the Law Committee, the Character and Fitness Committee, the Continuing Legal and Judicial Education Committee, the Licensed Legal Paraprofessional Committee, and the Board of Trustees for the Colorado Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection;

(B) A member of the Colorado Bar Association's Ethics Committee;

(C) A member of the Standing Committee on the Rules of Professional Conduct; and

(D) A Colorado lawyer who has represented respondents in proceedings under this rule.

(2) Dismissal, Resignation, and Vacancy. Advisory Committee members serve at the pleasure of the supreme court, and the supreme court may dismiss them at any time. An Advisory Committee member may resign at any time. The supreme court will fill any vacancies.

(3) Chair and Vice-Chair. The supreme court appoints members of the Advisory Committee to serve as Chair and Vice-Chair. The Chair and Vice-Chair may serve in their respective roles for up to an additional seven years after their initial membership term, such that each may serve a total of 14 years on the Advisory Committee. The Chair and Vice-Chair must not represent a party in a proceeding under this rule during the Chair's or Vice-Chair's term of service. The Chair and Vice-Chair serve at the pleasure of the supreme court.

(4) Quorum. A majority of the members of the Advisory Committee constitutes a quorum, and the action of a majority of those present and comprising a quorum constitutes the official action of the Advisory Committee.

(5) Reimbursement. Advisory Committee members are entitled to reimbursement for reasonable travel, lodging, and other expenses incurred in performing their official duties.

(c) Powers and Duties. The Advisory Committee is authorized and empowered to act in accordance with this rule, including by:

(1) Assisting the supreme court to make appointments under this rule, including appointments to the supreme court's permanent committees under the Rules Governing the Practice of Law and to the pool of Hearing Board members;

(2) Reviewing the productivity, effectiveness, efficiency, and resources of the legal regulation system, including the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the Office of the Attorney Regulation Counsel, the Colorado Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection, the Colorado Lawyer Assistance Program, and the Colorado Attorney Mentoring Program, and to report findings and recommendations to the supreme court;

COMMENT

The Advisory Committee's powers and duties do not include making inquiries or providing oversight as to specific cases or matters. The Advisory Committee may develop protocols to govern other aspects of the legal regulation system. For example, the Advisory Committee has protocols to govern the handling of complaints about the conduct of the Regulation Counsel and staff of the Regulation Counsel. The Advisory Committee's protocols may be found at the Regulation Counsel's website.

So far as possible, appointments should be made to ensure an odd number of members.

(2) Dismissal, Resignation, and Vacancy. Regulation Committee members serve at the pleasure of the supreme court, and the supreme court may dismiss them at any time. A Regulation Committee member may resign at any time. The supreme court will fill any vacancies.

(3) Chair and Vice-Chair. With the assistance of the Advisory Committee, the supreme court appoints the Chair and Vice-Chair from the membership of the Regulation Committee. The Chair and Vice-Chair serve at the pleasure of the supreme court.

(2) Adopting practices needed to govern the internal operation of the Regulation Committee, subject to the supreme court's approval;

(3) Periodically reporting to the Advisory Committee on the operation of the Regulation Committee; and

(4) Recommending to the Advisory Committee proposed changes to C.R.C.P. 242.

(d) Disqualification. A Regulation Committee member must refrain from making determinations under C.R.C.P. 242.16 or otherwise taking part in a disciplinary proceeding in which a judge, similarly situated, would be required to disqualify. A Regulation Committee member must also refrain from making determinations under C.R.C.P. 242.16 or otherwise taking part in a disciplinary proceeding in which a lawyer associated with the member's law firm is in any way connected with the matter pending before the Regulation Committee.

(e) Special Counsel. If the Regulation Counsel has been disqualified or if other circumstances so warrant, the Regulation Committee or its Chair may appoint special counsel to conduct or assist with investigations and prosecutions in accordance with C.R.C.P. 242.5(d).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Standards of Discipline for Attorneys in Colorado and the Significance of the Code of Professional Responsibility", see 50 Den. L.J. 207 (1973).

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Rule held constitutional. Rule provides sufficient guidelines to impose attorney discipline and is not, therefore, unconstitutionally vague in violation of due process of law. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Grievance committee is committee of supreme court, not bar association. The grievance committee, functioning in disciplinary proceedings under the rules on the discipline of attorneys, ceases to be a representative of the bar association and becomes a committee of the supreme court, and as such is responsible solely to the court. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

It has no greater power than the court. The grievance committee acting as the investigating agent for the supreme court has no greater power or authority than the court. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

Confidential matters cannot be used for any other purpose than that of disciplinary action. No committee serving in the confidential capacity called for under the rules for discipline of attorneys can conduct hearing as the representative of the supreme court and thereafter make use of any confidential matters coming to its attention for any purpose other than that of disciplinary action if such action is warranted; and if such action is not warranted, it cannot use the data obtained as the basis for the publication of an opinion on ethics in which the identity of the original subject is divulged. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

The data gathered by the grievance committee are not public records and are not to be released unless by vote of the committee with the approval of the supreme court. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

Committee cannot escape responsibility for releasing information of intended investigations. Where a grievance committee functioning in the capacity of an agent and representative of the supreme court, or persons identified with it, releases information that it intends to investigate certain persons in connection with particular conduct in violation of the applicable rules, such committee cannot escape responsibility for the advance press publication of its intentions. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

The committee occupies a position of trust and confidence. When the supreme court calls upon a committee of the bar to conduct investigations in disciplinary proceedings, the members of that committee occupy a position of trust and confidence, and they must function under applicable rules. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

Any such committee acting for the court should not be charged with duties as members of another committee of the bar association, a private organization, which might require the individual members to disregard the confidential nature of the duties they have assumed as an agent of the court. In re Petition of Colo. Bar Ass'n, 137 Colo. 357, 325 P.2d 932 (1958).

Rule 242.5. Regulation Counsel

(a) Regulation Counsel. The supreme court appoints an Attorney Regulation Counsel (Regulation Counsel) who serves at the pleasure of the supreme court and who represents the People of the State of Colorado in proceedings under this rule.

(1) Maintaining and supervising a permanent, central office for the filing and processing of requests for investigation in disciplinary matters and claims in Colorado Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection matters;

(2) Hiring and supervising a staff to carry out the duties of the Regulation Counsel;

(3) Adopting practices needed to govern the internal operation of the Office of the Regulation Counsel;

(4) Periodically reporting to the supreme court on the operation of the Office of the Regulation Counsel;

(6) Prosecuting disciplinary actions, including reciprocal discipline actions, as provided in this rule;

(7) Negotiating dispositions of proceedings as provided in this rule;

(8) Prosecuting interim and nondisciplinary suspension proceedings as provided in this rule;

(9) Prosecuting contempt proceedings for violations of orders directing lawyers to cease practicing law and prosecuting other contempt proceedings under this rule;

(10) Participating in and presenting recommendations reflecting the public interest in reinstatement and readmission proceedings under this rule;

(11) Maintaining records of matters before the Regulation Committee;

(12) Recommending to the Advisory Committee any proposed changes to the Rules Governing the Practice of Law; and

(13) Performing such other duties as the supreme court may direct.

(d) Special Counsel. Special counsel appointed under C.R.C.P. 242.4(e) must act in accordance with this rule. When a special counsel is appointed, the special counsel is empowered in that proceeding to take all actions that fall within the scope of the appointment and that are normally entrusted to the Regulation Counsel.

(e) Former Regulation Counsel. Former Regulation Counsel or a former member of the Regulation Counsel's staff must not represent anyone in a proceeding that was pending under the Rules Governing the Practice of Law during that person's term of service.

(f) Disqualification of Attorney Regulation Counsel. Regulation Counsel shall disqualify themselves or other staff from conducting an investigation or prosecuting a matter under these rules when a similarly situated prosecutor would be required to disqualify. Regulation Counsel may employ appropriate internal screening devices in such circumstances or request that the Legal Regulation Committee appoint special counsel pursuant to C.R.C.P. 242.4(e).

COMMENT

C.R.C.P. 242.5(e) is intended to have a broader reach than Colo. RPC 1.11(a).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Rule held constitutional. Rule provides sufficient guidelines to impose attorney discipline and is not, therefore, unconstitutionally vague in violation of due process of law. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Supreme court regulation counsel and office of attorney regulation counsel are part of the judicial branch of state government because they are subject to the direction of the supreme court pursuant to this rule and participate in the process of regulating attorneys. Gleason v. Judicial Watch, Inc., 2012 COA 76, 292 P.3d 1044.

Colorado Supreme Court disciplinary counsel is an "arm of the state" and not a "person" for the purposes of a suit for damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Bannister v. Colo. Supreme Court Disciplinary Counsel, 856 P.2d 79 (Colo. App. 1993).

Disciplinary prosecutor, acting in an official capacity, is an "arm of the state" and not a "person" for the purposes of a suit for damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Bannister v. Colo. Supreme Court Disciplinary Counsel, 856 P.2d 79 (Colo. App. 1993).

Disciplinary prosecutors, in their individual capacity, are absolutely immune from liability for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 when acting within the scope of their prosecutorial duties. Bannister v. Colo. Supreme Court Disciplinary Counsel, 856 P.2d 79 (Colo. App. 1993).

Rule 242.6. Presiding Disciplinary Judge

(a) Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The supreme court appoints one or more Presiding Disciplinary Judges to serve at the pleasure of the supreme court.

- (1) Maintaining and supervising a permanent, central office;
- (2) Hiring and supervising a staff to carry out the duties of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge;
- (3) Presiding over disciplinary and other proceedings as provided in Chapters 18-20, including by ruling on legal and other issues consistent with the general authority conferred upon courts under the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure, administering oaths and affirmations in proceedings, imposing disciplinary sanctions on lawyers as provided in this rule, and reinstating or readmitting lawyers to the practice of law;
- (4) Adopting practices needed to govern the internal operation of the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge;
- (5) Periodically reporting to the Advisory Committee on the operation of the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge;

- (9) Performing such other duties as the supreme court may direct.

(d) Disqualification. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge must refrain from taking part in a proceeding in which a similarly situated judge would be required to disqualify. No lawyer currently affiliated by employment with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may represent anyone in a proceeding under the Rules Governing the Practice of Law so long as the Presiding Disciplinary Judge is serving in that role. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge has been disqualified, the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will select a presiding officer from among the available Colorado lawyers in the Hearing Board pool. The presiding officer must act in accordance with this rule. When a presiding officer is selected to serve in a proceeding under this rule, the presiding officer is empowered in that proceeding to take all actions normally entrusted to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(e) Former Presiding Disciplinary Judges. A former presiding disciplinary judge or a former member of that judge's staff is subject to Colo. RPC 1.12. For purposes of this subsection, a "matter" includes substantially related proceedings.

(b) Membership Provisions.

(1) Members. The supreme court, with the assistance of the Advisory Committee, will appoint a diverse pool of Colorado lawyers and nonlawyers to the Hearing Board pool. Appointees serve terms of six years. Terms should be staggered to provide, so far as possible, for the regular expiration of the terms of an equal number of members. Appointees may serve no more than two consecutive terms.

(2) Dismissal, Resignation, and Vacancy. Members of the Hearing Board pool serve at the pleasure of the supreme court. Members of the Hearing Board pool may resign at any time. The supreme court may fill any vacancies.

(c) Hearings Before Hearing Boards. A Hearing Board in a disciplinary proceeding comprises the Presiding Disciplinary Judge and two other members, one of whom must be a Colorado lawyer, who are selected at random by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge from among the available members of the Hearing Board pool. (d) Disqualification. Members of Hearing Boards must refrain from taking part in a disciplinary proceeding in which a judge, similarly situated, would be required to disqualify. Hearing Board members must also refrain from taking part in a disciplinary proceeding where a lawyer associated with the member's law firm is in any way connected with the proceeding pending before the Hearing Board. Members of Hearing Boards must not represent a respondent in a proceeding under this rule during their term of service in the Hearing Board pool.

Annotator’s note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Constitutionality upheld. This rule is not unconstitutionally vague on its face or as applied. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Standards used in determining constitutional challenges to rule. Same standards used in determining a constitutional challenge to a statute are used in determining constitutional challenge to this rule or a disciplinary rule under the code of professional responsibility. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Presumption of constitutionality attaches to such enactment, and the burden is on the party challenging an enactment to demonstrate its unconstitutionality beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Since a disciplinary rule is promulgated for the purpose of guiding lawyers in their professional conduct, and is not directed to the public at large, the central consideration in resolving a vagueness challenge should be whether the nature of the proscribed conduct encompassed by the rule is readily understandable to a licensed lawyer. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

II. GROUNDS.

A. In General.

Violation of election laws sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Casias, 646 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1982).

Actions taken by attorney contrary to court order violate this rule and justify suspension. People v. Awenius, 653 P.2d 740 (Colo. 1982).

Demonstration of rehabilitation required for readmittance to bar. Where a practicing attorney breached fiduciary duties to his client in misrepresenting his dealings and in handling of funds given to him in trust, his conduct warranted disbarment, and before he may seek readmittance to the state bar association, he must first demonstrate to the grievance committee that rehabilitation has occurred and that he is entitled to a new start. People ex rel. Buckley v. Beck, 199 Colo. 482, 610 P.2d 1069 (1980).

Actions of a suspended attorney who took part in a complex real estate transaction and engaged in the practice of law by representing, counseling, advising, and assisting a former client warranted suspension until he demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that (1) he has been rehabilitated; (2) he has complied with and will continue to comply with all applicable disciplinary orders and rules; and (3) he is competent and fit to practice law. People v. Belfor, 200 Colo. 44, 611 P.2d 979 (1980).

Maximum suspension of three years rather than disbarment appropriate for attorney who violated a number of disciplinary rules including filing a false claim for loss of unemployment damages; failure to prepare case for trial over two-year period; failure to file affidavit required under grandparent visitation statute; arriving at settlement conference in intoxicated state; failure to file complaint and representing to client that case was close to being settled; and failure to notify disciplinary counsel of conviction of driving while ability impaired. People v. Anderson, 828 P.2d 228 (Colo. 1992).

Aggravating factors present in case include attorney's substantial experience in the practice of law, attorney's prior disciplinary record, attorney's pattern of misconduct taking place over several years and involving multiple offenses, the practice of deceit by attorney to mislead clients concerning the status of their cases, the obstruction of disciplinary proceedings by attorney's intentional failure to respond to requests for investigation, and the display of indifference to making restitution by the failure to repay a retainer after promising to do so. People v. Fahrney, 791 P.2d 1116 (Colo. 1990).

Aggravating factors present in case were: (1) A dishonest and selfish motive on the part of the respondent; (2) a pattern of misconduct; (3) multiple offenses; and (4) substantial experience in the practice of law. People v. Finesilver, 826 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1992).

Aggravating factors present in case include: (1) The attorney's prior disciplinary record; (2) a dishonest or selfish attitude on the part of the attorney; (3) a pattern of misconduct; (4) the attorney's refusal to acknowledge the wrongfulness of his conduct; (5) the vulnerability of the client's wife and her children during the attorney's representation of them; and (6) the attorney's substantial experience in the practice of law. In re Quiat, 979 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1999).

Aggravating factors present in case include: (1) Attorney's history of prior discipline; (2) the vulnerable status of the attorney's victims; and (3) the attorney's obstruction of the disciplinary process. In re Meyers, 981 P.2d 143 (Colo. 1999).

Aggravating factors present in case include the respondent attorney's dishonest and selfish motive, pattern of misconduct and multiple offenses, refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of the conduct, the vulnerability of the victims, the respondent's substantial experience with the law, and the respondent's indifference to making restitution. People v. Sweetman, 218 P.3d 1123 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Mitigating factors present in case included the respondent's full and free disclosure to the grievance committee and the hearing board, good character and reputation, and the respondent's remorse for wrongdoing. People v. Finesilver, 826 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1992).

Insofar as respondent's addiction to illegal drugs was a symptom of more deeply seated psychological and emotional problems, the respondent established the existence of these allegedly mitigating factors. However, even though the respondent testified that none of the converted funds were used to purchase illegal drugs, the supreme court is inclined to view the respondent's drug use itself as an aggravating factor rather than mitigating factor. People v. Finesilver, 826 P.2d 1256 (Colo. 1992).

Several significant aggravating factors are that the respondent engaged in multiple offenses and in a pattern of misconduct, failed to cooperate with the grievance committee in the attorney discipline proceedings, and submitted false statements and false evidence to the court in a related proceeding. People v. Hellewell, 827 P.2d 527 (Colo. 1992).

Aggravating factors in case where three-year suspension rather than disbarment imposed include prior disciplinary offenses, pattern of misconduct, multiple offenses, submission of false evidence, false statements, or other deceptive practices during disciplinary process, refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of conduct, vulnerability of victim, and substantial experience in the practice of law. Mitigating factors include remoteness of prior offenses and gesture of restitution. People v. Anderson, 828 P.2d 228 (Colo. 1992).

Public censure was appropriate where attorney made false statements in the course of discovery in cases where the attorney was the plaintiff. Evidence showed that the attorney was suffering from a psychiatric condition at the time, and the assistant disciplinary counsel could not prove that the attorney's false statements were knowing, but only that they were negligent. People v. Dillings, 880 P.2d 1220 (Colo. 1994).

Mitigating factors present in case include: (1) At the time of the misconduct, the attorney was experiencing personal problems; (2) the attorney cooperated during the disciplinary proceedings; (3) the attorney has a good character and reputation in the community; and (4) there has been a substantial delay in these disciplinary proceedings. In re Quiat, 979 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1999).

Attorney's depression did not qualify as mitigating factor of mental disability where no testimony showed depression caused the misconduct. People v. Reynolds, 933 P.2d 1295 (Colo. 1997).

The Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 did not prevent the Colorado supreme court from disciplining attorney who suffered from depression in light of finding that the depression had not been shown to have directly caused his misconduct. People v. Reynolds, 933 P.2d 1295 (Colo. 1997).

Demonstration of drug rehabilitation and of improved business practices required for reinstatement. Where attorney was suspended for misuse of client funds due to confusion and inattention resulting from cocaine addiction, he would be required to demonstrate a history of negative drug screening tests and that he had educated himself about the business aspects of practicing law, including the handling of trust accounts, to qualify for reinstatement following three-year suspension. People v. Schubert, 799 P.2d 388 (Colo. 1990).

Demonstration of participation in a course of therapy for clinical depression required for reinstatement where attorney was suspended for inattention resulting from such depression. People v. Barr, 855 P.2d 1386 (Colo. 1993).

Demonstration of four conditions required for attorney publicly censured after conviction of driving while ability impaired: Continue psychotherapy, remain on antabuse, submit monthly reports regarding progress on antabuse, and execute written authorization to therapist to release medical information regarding status on antabuse. People v. Rotenberg, 911 P.2d 642 (Colo. 1996).

Pattern of misconduct involving failure to render services, multiple offenses, and conversion of client's property sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Vermillion, 814 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1991).

Conduct found to violate this rule. People v. Bugg, 635 P.2d 881 (Colo. 1981).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Barnthouse, 941 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Bollinger, 648 P.2d 620 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bergmann, 716 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1986); People v. Mayer, 716 P.2d 1094 (Colo. 1986); People v. Carpenter, 731 P.2d 726 (Colo. 1987); People v. Horn, 738 P.2d 1186 (Colo. 1987); People v. Stauffer, 745 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1987); *People v. B. Violation of Code of Professional Responsibility.

Law reviews. For article, "Punishing Ethical Violations: Aggravating and Mitigating Factors", see 20 Colo. Law. 243 (1991).

Annotator's note. For additional annotations, see the annotations under the disciplinary rules for the canons included in the Code of Professional Responsibility.

Disbarment is warranted where attorney converted client funds and where factors in mitigation, although present, were not sufficient to justify a lesser sanction. People v. Ogborn, 887 P.2d 21 (Colo. 1994).

District attorney's failure to prosecute personal friend for possession of marijuana violates code of professional responsibility and warrants three-year suspension. People v. Larsen, 808 P.2d 1265 (Colo. 1991).

Suspension is generally appropriate when a lawyer knows of a conflict of interest and fails to disclose to a client the possible effect of that conflict. Respondent admittedly and knowingly failed to fully disclose to a client the possible effect of a conflict of interest and was therefore suspended from the practice of law for ninety days, stayed upon the successful completion of a one-year period of probation. People v. Fischer, 237 P.3d 645 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2010).

Suspension for one year and one day was warranted for attorney who violated C.R.P.C. 1.1 and C.R.P.C. 8.4 by preparing and filing child support worksheets that failed to properly reflect the new stipulation concerning custody and where aggravating factors included a previous disciplinary history and failure to appear in the grievance proceedings in violation of section (7) of this rule. People v. Davies, 926 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1996).

One-year suspension warranted when attorney's behavior constituted nine separate violations of the Colorado rules of professional conduct by challenging a final judgment repeatedly in state, federal, and water courts and pursuing a frivolous federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act lawsuit without a rudimentary analysis of the facts, while disregarding a judge's order to cease collateral attacks. People v. Maynard, 238 P.3d 672 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Smith, 819 P.2d 497 (Colo. 1991).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Moya, 793 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1990); *People v. C. Violation of Legal Ethics.

Where misconduct is grievous and demonstrates insensitivity to the professional obligations of a lawyer, it necessitates a severe sanction to reflect the gravity of the breach of ethical standards and to protect the public from future unprofessional conduct. People v. Razatos, 636 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed, 455 U.S. 930, 102 S. Ct. 1415, 71 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1982).

Total disregard of obligation to protect a client's rights and interests over an extended period of time in conjunction with the violation of a number of disciplinary rules and an extended prior record of discipline requires most severe sanction of disbarment. People v. O'Leary, 783 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1989).

The severity of the ethical violations may be balanced by lack of prior discipline, absence of injury to clients, compliance with court ordered treatment plan, and dismissal of criminal charges in felony prosecution. People v. Abelman, 744 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1987).

Continued representation of clients with conflicting interests violates this rule and warrants discipline. People v. Awenius, 653 P.2d 740 (Colo. 1982).

Where there is a great weight of mitigating evidence, even when an attorney has engaged in serious criminal conduct which would ordinarily justify disbarment, a three-year suspension and the requirement to pay costs of the disciplinary proceeding may be appropriate in lieu of disbarment. People v. Robinson, 839 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1992).

Guilty pleas of deputy district attorney for acting as an accessory to a crime and for official misconduct relating to the disposal of drug paraphernalia warrants six-month suspension. Respondent's status as a deputy district attorney at the time she committed the offenses is an aggravating factor because public officials engaged in law enforcement have assumed an even greater responsibility to the public than have other lawyers. People v. Freeman, 885 P.2d 205 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension of one year and one day appropriate for experienced attorney and judicial officer who pled guilty to unlawful use of a controlled substance. People v. Stevens, 866 P.2d 1378 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension for one year and one day, all but six months stayed upon the successful completion of a three-year period of probation subject to conditions, warranted for attorney who verbally threatened his wife while wielding a baseball bat. People v. Hill, 439 P.3d 1244 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2019).

Attorney who was not charged or convicted of a substance abuse related crime was suspended. The attorney's drug problem was self-reported, he had voluntarily hospitalized himself and undergone an after-care program, and he had over one year of sustained recovery. People v. Ebbert, 873 P.2d 731 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension of three years was appropriate for attorney who drove a vehicle on at least four occasions after his driver's license was revoked and who also failed to appear in two cases involving his illegal driving. People v. Hughes, 966 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney offered money to two police officers in the context of releasing his client from custody. The attorney alleged such action was a joke intended to teach his client that the police would not release the client from custody. Such activity was determined to be bribery even though the attorney was not charged by the police and sufficient for a three-year suspension. In re Elinoff, 22 P.3d 60 (Colo. 2001).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted where attorney failed to appear in county court on a charge of driving under the influence. People v. Myers, 969 P.2d 701 (Colo. 1998).

Entering guilty pleas to multiple counts of bank fraud evidences serious criminal conduct warranting disbarment. People v. Vidakovich, 810 P.2d 1071 (Colo. 1991).

Pleading guilty to a single count of bank fraud evidences serious criminal conduct warranting disbarment. People v. Terborg, 848 P.2d 346 (Colo. 1993).

Entering guilty plea to committing mail fraud evidences serious criminal conduct warranting disbarment. People v. Bollinger, 859 P.2d 901 (Colo. 1993).

When a lawyer knowingly converts client funds, disbarment is virtually automatic, at least in the absence of significant factors in mitigation. People v. McDonnell, 897 P.2d 829 (Colo. 1995).

Convictions for conspiring to commit fraud against the United States and impeding an officer of a United States court justify disbarment. People v. Pilgrim, 802 P.2d 1084 (Colo. 1990).

Conviction for bankruptcy fraud warrants disbarment. People v. Brown, 841 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1992).

Disbarment is warranted where attorney was convicted of felony offense of forging a federal bankruptcy judge's signature and had engaged in multiple types of other dishonest conduct and where there was an insufficient showing of mental disability. People v. Goldstein, 887 P.2d 634 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension justified where respondent violated federal and state laws by failing to file personal income tax returns, failing to pay withholding taxes, using cocaine, and using marijuana. People v. Holt, 832 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1992).

The fact that no specific client of the respondent was actually harmed by the respondent's misconduct misses the point in proceeding for suspension of an attorney. While the primary purpose of attorney discipline is the protection of the public and not to mete punishment to the offending lawyer, lawyers are, nonetheless, charged with obedience to the law, and intentional violation of those laws subjects an attorney to the severest discipline. People v. Holt, 832 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1992).

Lack of prior disciplinary record insufficient to call for sanction less than disbarment where attorney convicted of bankruptcy fraud, conspiracy to commit bankruptcy fraud and other federal offenses. People v. Schwartz, 814 P.2d 793 (Colo. 1991).

Although attorney had not previously been disciplined, sanction of disbarment was warranted where attorney's felony conviction for possession of a firearm occurred while he was still on probation for a felony conviction for possession of marijuana. People v. Laquey, 862 P.2d 278 (Colo. 1993).

Lack of prior disciplinary record insufficient to call for sanction less than disbarment where attorney pleaded guilty to bribery. People v. Viar, 848 P.2d 934 (Colo. 1993).

Conviction for aiding fugitive to flee warrants disbarment despite lack of a prior disciplinary record. People v. Bullock, 882 P.2d 1390 (Colo. 1994).

Respondent given two-year suspension for aiding and abetting aliens' entry into the United States and by advising clients to make misrepresentations for such entry. Such an act generally warrants disbarment, but respondent's full disclosure during proceedings, expression of remorse, and the fact that a prior offense was remote in time were mitigating factors. Respondent also required to discontinue the representation of clients before INS and the Department of Labor. People v. Boyle, 942 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1997).

Six-month suspension justified for attorney pleading guilty to making and altering a false and forged prescription for a controlled substance and of criminal attempt to obtain a controlled substance by forgery and alteration, where mitigating factors included: (1) No prior disciplinary history; (2) personal or emotional problems at time of misconduct; (3) full and free disclosure by attorney to grievance committee; (4) imposition of other penalties and sanctions resulting from criminal proceeding; (5) demonstration of genuine remorse; and (6) relative inexperience in the practice of law. People v. Moore, 849 P.2d 40 (Colo. 1993).

Six-month suspension appropriate for respondent convicted of drunken driving offense and assault. People v. Shipman, 943 P.2d 458 (Colo. 1997); People v. Reaves, 943 P.2d 460 (Colo. 1997).

Chief deputy district attorney's theft of less than $50 constitutes conduct warranting public censure where significant mitigating factors exist. People v. Buckley, 848 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1993).

Attorney's failure to file personal state and federal income tax returns and to pay withholding taxes for federal income taxes and FICA, and use of cocaine and marijuana constitute conduct warranting suspension for one year and one day. People v. Holt, 832 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1992).

Failure to file federal income tax returns in combination with mitigating factors of no prior discipline and significant personal problems at the time of the misconduct warrants public censure. People v. Tauger, 893 P.2d 121 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure was appropriate where significant mitigating factors were present. Attorney was convicted of vehicular assault, a class 4 felony, and two counts of driving under the influence of alcohol. The crimes are strict liability offenses for which attorney must serve three years in the custody of the department of corrections, followed by a two-year mandatory period of parole. Section 18-1-105(3) provides that, while he is serving his sentence, attorney is disqualified from practicing as an attorney in any state courts. The sentence and disqualification from practicing law are a significant "other penalty[]" or sanction[]" and therefore a mitigating factor in determining the level of discipline. In re Kearns, 991 P.2d 824 (Colo. 1999) (decided under former C.R.C.P. 241.6(5)).

Public censure is appropriate for driving under the influence with mitigating factor of candidness and cooperativeness. This was attorney's first conviction, and he was truthful, candid, and cooperative. He also underwent alcohol evaluation by a doctor. People v. Miller, 409 P.3d 667 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2017).

Public censure was warranted where attorney twice requested arresting officers in driving under the influence cases not to appear at license revocation hearings before the department of motor vehicles. People v. Carey, 938 P.2d 1166 (Colo. 1997).

Public censure was appropriate where an already suspended attorney was the subject of prior discipline for misdemeanor convictions of assault and driving while impaired and where an additional period of suspension would have little, if any, practical effect and would not have afforded a meaningful measure of protection for the public. People v. Flores, 871 P.2d 1182 (Colo. 1994).

Public censure warranted for attorney's solicitation of prostitution during telephone conversation with wife of client whom he was representing in a dissolution of marriage proceeding. People v. Bauder, 941 P.2d 282 (Colo. 1997).

Suspension for 180 days is warranted based upon conviction of third degree assault charges. People v. Knight, 883 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1994).

The conduct of an attorney who is convicted of domestic violence and who fails to report the conviction substantially reflects adversely on the attorney's fitness to practice. The aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating factors; accordingly, the proper form of discipline is six months' suspension. In re Hickox, 57 P.3d 403 (Colo. 2002).

Disbarment is warranted for driving while impaired, marijuana possession, improperly executing agreement without authority, and failing to perform certain professional duties, despite the lack of a prior record. People v. Gerdes, 891 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1995).

Attorney's admitted initiation of sexual contact and sexual intrusion on a client violate sections (2), (3), and (5) of this rule. People v. Dawson, 894 P.2d 756 (Colo. 1995).

Disbarment warranted where attorney was convicted of two separate sexual assaults on a client and a former client and attorney's previous dishonest conduct was an aggravating factor as well as findings of the attorney's selfish motive in engaging in the sexual misconduct, the two clients' vulnerability, the attorney's more than 20 years practicing law, and the attorney's failure to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct. People v. Bertagnolli, 922 P.2d 935 (Colo. 1996).

Notwithstanding the entry of attorney's "Alford" plea in sexual assault proceedings, for purpose of disciplinary proceeding the attorney was held to have actually committed the acts necessary to accomplish third degree sexual assault and therefore the attorney knowingly had sexual contact with a former client and with a current client without either woman's consent. People v. Bertagnolli, 922 P.2d 935 (Colo. 1996).

Disbarment warranted for attorney convicted of criminal attempt to commit sexual exploitation of a child, a class 4 felony. People v. Damkar, 908 P.2d 1113 (Colo. 1996).

Disbarment warranted for attorney convicted of one count of sexual assault on a child, notwithstanding lack of a prior record of discipline. People v. Espe, 967 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1998).

Disbarment warranted for attorney convicted in Hawaii of second-degree murder. People v. Draizen, 941 P.2d 280 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment appropriate sanction for attorney who intentionally killed another person. Despite a lack of prior discipline in this state, giving full faith and credit to another state's law and its jury finding that attorney intentionally took her husband's life by shooting him 10 times with a firearm, disbarment is an appropriate sanction. People v. Sims, 190 P.3d 188 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Disbarment warranted for writing nonsufficient funds checks while practicing law during a period of suspension and committing several other disciplinary rules violations. People v. Fager, 938 P.2d 138 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment justified in a reciprocal discipline proceeding where attorney convicted of knowingly making false statements to obtain a loan from a federal savings and loan institution. Attorney was also disbarred by the United States court of federal claims and had his license revoked by the Virginia state bar for the same offense. Unless certain exceptions exist, the same discipline that was imposed in the federal jurisdiction is generally imposed in a reciprocal discipline proceeding. People v. Kiely, 968 P.2d 110 (Colo. 1998).

Disbarment warranted for knowingly abandoning clients, converting their funds, and causing actual financial and emotional harm to them. Attorney violated duty to preserve clients' property, to diligently perform services on their behalf, to be candid with them during the course of the professional relationship, and to abide by the legal rules of substance and procedure that affect the administration of justice. People v. Martin, 223 P.3d 728 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Disbarment warranted for attorney convicted of conspiracy to commit tax fraud, tax evasion, and aiding and assisting in the preparation of a false income tax return. People v. Evanson, 223 P.3d 735 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Allbrandt, 913 P.2d 532 (Colo. 1996); In re Tolley, 975 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1999) (decided under former rule 241.6); People v. Dalmy, 452 P.3d 265 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2019).

G. Violation of Other Rules.

Disbarment in another state violates this rule and warrants disbarment. People v. Montano, 744 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1987); People v. Brunn, 764 P.2d 1165 (Colo. 1988).

Disbarment from practice in federal court violates this rule and warrants discipline. People v. Awenius, 653 P.2d 740 (Colo. 1982).

Suspension from practice in federal tax court violates this rule and warrants discipline. People v. Hartman, 744 P.2d 482 (Colo. 1987).

Pattern of neglect which has not been corrected despite lesser sanctions requires imposition of suspension for protection of public. People v. Mayer, 744 P.2d 509 (Colo. 1987).

Repeated neglect and delay in handling legal matters and failure to comply with the directions contained in a letter of admonition and to answer letter of complaint from the grievance committee constitute a violation of this rule and, with other offenses of the code of professional responsibility, are sufficient to justify suspension for three years. People v. Hebenstreit, 764 P.2d 51 (Colo. 1988).

Repeated misconduct charges warranted suspension of licenses. Where respondent had been disciplined three times previously, once by private censure and twice by letters of admonition and where two of the matters involved delay and the respondent's failure to inform his clients of the status of their cases, subsequent misconduct warranted that respondent's license to practice law be suspended for six months. People ex rel. Silverman v. Anderson, 200 Colo. 76, 612 P.2d 94 (1980).

Two-year suspension was not excessively harsh where previous suspension and vulnerability of young, unsophisticated client in current matter are properly considered as aggravating factors in fixing punishment. People v. Yaklich, 744 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1987).

Continuing to represent client and failing to comply with disciplinary rule after initial suspension from practice of law warrants suspension for additional year. People v. Underhill, 708 P.2d 790 (Colo. 1985).

Continuing to practice while suspended is conduct justifying disbarment. People v. James, 731 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1987).

Conduct violating this rule, in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, sufficient to justify disbarment where the attorney continued to practice law while on suspension, repeatedly neglecting his clients and failing to take reasonable steps to protect clients' interests. People v. Fager, 938 P.2d 138 (Colo. 1997).

Multiple criminal and traffic convictions demonstrate a pattern of misconduct, and the presence of multiple offenses warrants suspension for six months with the requirement of reinstatement proceedings. People v. Van Buskirk, 962 P.2d 975 (Colo. 1998).

H. Failure to Respond to Grievance Committee.

Failure to answer a disciplinary complaint is itself a violation of the disciplinary rules. People v. Richards, 748 P.2d 341 (Colo. 1987).

Because an attorney has a duty to cooperate with disciplinary proceedings under this rule, default judgments are not subject to being set aside easily. In re Weisbard, 25 P.3d 24 (Colo. 2001).

Continued pattern of conduct involving neglect and misrepresentation. Attorney disbarred for continued pattern of conduct involving neglect and misrepresentation, and for failure to cooperate in investigation by grievance committee. People v. Young, 673 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1984); People v. Johnston, 759 P.2d 10 (Colo. 1988).

Stipulation of deputy public defender that he failed to communicate with a client for seven months and failed to answer in a timely manner either the request for investigation or the formal complaint in the disciplinary matter, and his neglect of six separate professional matters over a three-year period warrant a 30-day suspension where substantial mitigating factors exist, including the absence of a prior disciplinary history, the absence of a selfish or dishonest motive, the presence of serious personal and emotional problems, a cooperative attitude throughout the disciplinary proceedings, a good character and professional reputation, the imposition of other penalties or sanctions, and the presence of remorse. People v. Bobbitt, 859 P.2d 902 (Colo. 1993).

Depositing personal funds into COLTAF account, paying personal bills from that account, and then knowingly failing to respond to the investigation into the use of the account justifies 60-day suspension with conditions of reinstatement. People v. Herrick, 191 P.3d 172 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

Failure to respond to informal complaints constitutes failure to respond to a request by the grievance committee without good cause. People v. Quick, 716 P.2d 1082 (Colo. 1986).

Neglect of client matters, use of cocaine, and failure to respond to complaint and client correspondence warrant public censure in light of participation in comprehensive rehabilitation programs. People v. Driscoll, 716 P.2d 1086 (Colo. 1986).

Failure to take action on behalf of client in civil action, failure to advise client of claim, attempt to place property beyond the reach of creditors, and failure to cooperate in disciplinary proceedings justifies three-year suspension of attorney. People v. Baptie, 796 P.2d 978 (Colo. 1990).

Suspension for three years is appropriate where lawyer failed to respond to motions or appear at hearing, resulting in dismissal of clients' bankruptcy proceeding, thereby increasing clients' debts tenfold. The hearing board further found that the attorney engaged in bad faith obstruction of the disciplinary proceedings and refused to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct or the vulnerability of his clients. People v. Farrant, 883 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1994).

Fabrication of administrative decision and settlement discussions to conceal respondent's failure to prosecute client's wage claim unnecessarily wasted grievance committee's time and resources, warranting increased period of suspension and relatively high assessment of costs. People v. Gaimara, 810 P.2d 1076 (Colo. 1991).

Disbarment appropriate remedy for attorney who neglected client's legal matter, failed to return retainer after being requested to do so, abandoned law practice, evaded process, and failed to respond to request of grievance committee. People v. Williams, 845 P.2d 1150 (Colo. 1993).

Disbarment appropriate remedy for attorney who neglected a legal matter, misappropriated funds and property, abandoned client, engaged in fraud, evaded process, and failed to cooperate in disciplinary investigation. People v. Hindman, 958 P.2d 463 (Colo. 1998).

Disbarment warranted for attorney who abandoned her law practice, disregarded court orders, made misrepresentations to her clients, and failed to respond or appear, with aggravating factors. People v. Valley, 960 P.2d 141 (Colo. 1998).

Failure to respond to request for investigation from grievance committee is a violation of former section (7). People v. Taylor, 799 P.2d 930 (Colo. 1990); People v. Dash, 811 P.2d 36 (Colo. 1991); People v. Creasey, 811 P.2d 40 (Colo. 1991); People v. Ashley, 817 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1991); People v. Kramer, 819 P.2d 77 (Colo. 1991); People v. Hebenstreit, 823 P.2d 125 (Colo. 1992); People v. Raubolt, 831 P.2d 462 (Colo. 1992); People v. Honaker, 847 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1993); People v. Honaker, 863 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1993); People v. Thomas, 925 P.2d 1081 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Titoni, 893 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1995).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension when attorney currently on disability inactive status. People v. Moya, 793 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1990).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Taylor, 799 P.2d 930 (Colo. 1990); People v. Raubolt, 831 P.2d 462 (Colo. 1992); People v. Scott, 936 P.2d 573 (Colo. 1997); People v. Swarts, 239 P.3d 441 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2010); People v. Staab, 287 P.3d 122 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2012); People v. Fagan, 423 P.3d 412 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2018).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Whitcomb, 819 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1991); People v. Fritsche, 897 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1995); People v. Marsh, 908 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1996); People v. Mannix, 936 P.2d 1285 (Colo. 1997); People v. Fager, 938 P.2d 138 (Colo. 1997); People v. Holmes, 955 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1998).

Rule 242.10. Forms of Discipline and Other Dispositions

(a) Forms of Discipline. When grounds for discipline against a lawyer have been established, one of the following sanctions will be imposed in accordance with the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions, unless inconsistent with this rule:

(1) Disbarment. Disbarment is the revocation of a lawyer's license or authority to practice law in Colorado. A disbarred lawyer may not petition for readmission under C.R.C.P. 242.39 for at least eight years after the disbarment takes effect.

(2) Suspension. Suspension is the temporary removal of a lawyer's authority to practice law in Colorado, subject to the lawyer's reinstatement under C.R.C.P. 242.38 or C.R.C.P. 242.39. Suspension is imposed for a definite period of time not to exceed three years. A suspension may be stayed in whole or in part.

(3) Public Censure. Public censure is a published reprimand that declares a lawyer's conduct is grounds for discipline but that does not prohibit the lawyer from practicing law. Conditions may be attached to a public censure. Failure to comply with conditions constitutes grounds for discipline against the lawyer.

(4) Private Admonition. A private admonition is an unpublished reprimand that declares a lawyer's conduct is grounds for discipline but that does not prohibit the lawyer from practicing law. Conditions may be attached to a private admonition. Failure to comply with conditions constitutes grounds for discipline against the lawyer. Nothing in this rule precludes consideration and disclosure of the private admonition in a future disciplinary proceeding. A private admonition may be imposed in one of three ways:

(A) Admonition by Regulation Committee. The Regulation Committee may issue a letter privately admonishing a respondent under C.R.C.P. 242.16(a). When such a letter is issued, the proceeding, including the admonition, will remain confidential except as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.16(f).

(B) Admonition by Presiding Disciplinary Judge on Stipulation. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may impose private admonition by approving a stipulation under C.R.C.P. 242.19. The stipulation is confidential. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge's order approving the stipulation and imposing the admonition is confidential. All other files and records relating to any phase of the proceeding are public, including the notice that the respondent was admonished, which must indicate whether any claims against the respondent were dismissed.

(C) Admonition in Opinion by Presiding Disciplinary Judge or Hearing Board. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge or a Hearing Board may impose private admonition by opinion after a hearing has been held. The opinion itself is confidential. All other files and records relating to any phase of the proceeding are public, including the notice that the respondent was admonished, which must indicate whether any claims against the respondent were dismissed.

(b) Other Dispositions Under this Rule. Other types of dispositions and orders under this rule include:

(1) Probation. A lawyer may be placed on probation in conjunction with a stayed suspension as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.18.

(2) Diversion. A lawyer may agree to participate in a diversion program under C.R.C.P. 242.17.

(3) Interim and Nondisciplinary Suspensions. A lawyer's license to practice law in Colorado may be suspended on a temporary basis as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.22 through C.R.C.P. 242.24.

(4) Restitution and Costs. A lawyer may be ordered to pay restitution and costs in conjunction with a disciplinary proceeding or a protective appointment of counsel proceeding.

(5) Readmission and Reinstatement. A lawyer may be readmitted from disbarment or reinstated from suspension as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.38 and C.R.C.P. 242.39.

(6) Contempt. A lawyer may be held in contempt as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.40.

(c) Disposition Under C.R.C.P. 232. A disbarred lawyer who is alleged to have violated a disbarment order may also be subject to a contempt proceeding under C.R.C.P. 232 (Rules Governing Unauthorized Practice of Law Proceedings).

Source: Entire rule and comment added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

COMMENT

A stayed suspension under this rule is imposed in conjunction with a period of probation. A lawyer is permitted to practice law during the "stayed" portion of a suspension. As an example, if a lawyer's license is suspended for one year, with three months served and nine months stayed upon completion of a two-year period of probation, the lawyer initially will be suspended for three months, then the lawyer normally will be reinstated subject to the conditions imposed for the two-year period of probation. If the lawyer is found to have violated a condition of probation during the two-year period of probation, the lawyer's license normally will be suspended for the additional nine months under C.R.C.P. 242.18(f). A stayed suspension is an appropriate form of discipline only when the lawyer is eligible for probation under C.R.C.P. 242.18(b).

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Constitutionality upheld. This rule provides sufficient guidelines to impose discipline to comply with due process of law. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986); People v. Varallo, 913 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1996).

Standards used in determining constitutional challenges. Same standards used in determining a constitutional challenge to a statute are used in determining constitutional challenge to this rule. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

A statute passes constitutional muster for the purposes of imposing professional discipline if it prescribes the possible penalties that can be imposed for a violation of a statutory provision. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Suspension of a license to practice law is not criminal punishment for purposes of the double jeopardy clause of the fifth amendment. In re Cardwell, 50 P.3d 897 (Colo. 2002).

An attorney-at-law is an officer of court exercising a privilege or franchise to the enjoyment of which he has been admitted not as a matter of right, but upon proof of fitness through evidence of his possession of satisfactory legal attainments and fair private character. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819 (1962).

An attorney is continually accountable to the court. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819 (1962).

The privilege to practice law may at any time be declared forfeited for misconduct, whether professional or nonprofessional, as shows him to be an unfit or unsafe person to manage the business of others in the capacity of an attorney. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819 (1962).

The power to declare a forfeiture of the privilege to practice is a summary one inherent in the courts and exists not to mete out punishment to an offender, but rather so that the administration of justice may be safeguarded and the courts and the public protected from the misconduct or unfitness of those who are licensed to perform the important functions of the legal profession. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819 (1962).

It is not an adversary proceeding. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819 (1962).

A hearing board always has discretion in determining the appropriate sanction for attorney misconduct and may impose any of the forms of discipline listed in this rule, which range from private admonition to disbarment. In re Attorney F, 2012 CO 57, 285 P.3d 322.

Hearing board erred, therefore, in concluding that it was compelled by case law to impose a public censure instead of private admonition. In re Attorney F, 2012 CO 57, 285 P.3d 322.

Where complaints are resolved against an attorney, the committee may recommend public censure. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

Disbarment is generally appropriate when a lawyer in an official or governmental position knowingly misuses the position with the intent to obtain a significant benefit or advantage for himself or another. People v. Brown, 726 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1986).

Disbarment held not to be excessive. Use of a license to practice law for the purpose of bringing into being an illegal prostitution enterprise renders disbarment the only possible form of discipline. Any lesser sanction would unduly depreciate such misconduct in the eyes of the public and the legal profession. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Disbarment may be recommended when attorney found guilty of crime. Where the committee finds that the nature of a crime of which an attorney has been found guilty is such as to render him an unfit person to be licensed to practice law, he therefore should be disbarred, and the committee recommend such disbarment. People v. Wilson, 176 Colo. 389, 490 P.2d 954 (1971).

Disciplinary recommendation of grievance committee is advisory only and is not binding on the supreme court. People v. Smith, 773 P.2d 528 Colo. (1989).

Disbarment was the only available remedy to protect the interest of the public where attorney had been afforded multiple opportunities including two suspensions and court ordered rehabilitation, and where attorney's conduct demonstrated (a) neglect of legal matters entrusted to him; (b) misrepresentation to his client and the grievance committee; and (c) a pattern of neglect followed by the respondent that had the potential of causing serious injury to his clients. People v. Susman, 787 P.2d 1119 (Colo. 1990).

Disbarment proper when attorney failed to timely answer complaint, put on evidence at hearing on amount of damages, answer amended complaint which included punitive damages that the court awarded and respond to grievance committee. The attorney had history of prior discipline for seriously neglecting client matters. Additional aggravating factors included the presence of multiple offenses, failing to cooperate in the disciplinary proceedings, and having substantial experience in the practice of law. There were no mitigating factors. In the Matter of Scott, 979 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1999).

Disbarment is appropriate, in the absence of aggravating or mitigating factors, where lawyer knowingly converts client property and deceives client with the intent to benefit the lawyer or another and causes serious injury to a client. People v. Mulligan, 817 P.2d 1028 (Colo. 1991).

Disbarment is the presumptive sanction for conversion of client funds. Where attorney knowingly converted, used, and failed to return client funds, disbarment was warranted. The attorney's failure to participate in disciplinary proceedings or present significant factors in mitigation further precluded any deviation from the presumptive sanction. People v. Young, 201 P.3d 1273 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

In the absence of aggravating or mitigating circumstances, disbarment is generally appropriate when (a) a lawyer abandons the practice and causes serious or potentially serious injury to a client; or (b) a lawyer knowingly fails to perform services for a client and causes serious or potentially serious injury to a client; or (c) a lawyer engages in a pattern of neglect with respect to client matters and causes serious or potentially serious injury to a client. People v. Southern, 832 P.2d 946 (Colo. 1992).

The ultimate sanction for multiple charges of misconduct generally should be greater than the sanction for the most serious conduct. People v. Schubert, 799 P.2d 388 (Colo. 1990).

Court makes 90-day suspension consecutive to previously imposed one year and a day suspension where existing suspension imposed for unrelated conduct. In re Meyers, 981 P.2d 143 (Colo. 1999).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to warrant suspension. People v. Smith, 828 P.2d 249 (Colo. 1992).

Maximum period of suspension was warranted in light of multiple instances of misconduct and necessity for respondent to complete drug rehabilitation program. People v. Schubert, 799 P.2d 388 (Colo. 1990); People v. Driscoll, 830 P.2d 1019 (Colo. 1992).

Established facts demonstrating that attorney knowingly practiced law after he had been administratively suspended by Colorado supreme court for failing to comply with his CLE and attorney fee registration requirements merited short suspension of attorney from practice of law. Upon consideration of the nature of attorney's misconduct, his mental state, the potential harm he caused, the aggravating factors, and the absence of significant mitigating factors, the ABA standards for imposing lawyer sanctions and Colorado supreme court case law both support short suspension. Of particular salience here was attorney's failure to participate in disciplinary proceedings. People v. Swarts, 239 P.3d 441 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2010).

Attorney received suspension for charging excessive fee in another state. The action taken in the other state had resulted in the attorney's receipt of a one-year conditional suspension. Usually the court will impose the same discipline as that which was imposed in the foreign jurisdiction, but because Colorado does not provide for conditional suspensions public censure was deemed appropriate. People v. Nash, 873 P.2d 764 (Colo. 1994).

Applied in People v. Barbary, 164 Colo. 588, 437 P.2d 57 (1968); People v. Creasey, 811 P.2d 40 (Colo. 1991).

Rule 242.11. Duties to Report Misconduct and Convictions

(a) Judges' Reporting Duties. Judges' duties to report professional misconduct by a lawyer are governed by Rule 2.15 of the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct. The clerk of any Colorado court in which a conviction was entered against a lawyer should transmit a certificate thereof to the Regulation Counsel within 14 days after the date of the conviction.

(b) Lawyers' Reporting Duties. Lawyers' duties to report professional misconduct by another lawyer or a judge are governed by Colo. RPC 8.3.

(c) Duty to Self-Report Charges and Convictions.

(1) Self-Reporting. A lawyer who is charged with a serious crime must notify the Regulation Counsel of the charges in writing within 14 days thereof. A lawyer who is convicted of a crime must notify the Regulation Counsel in writing of the conviction in writing within 14 days thereof.

(2) Traffic Offenses. The requirement to report convictions in subsection (c)(1) above does not apply to misdemeanor traffic offenses that do not involve the use of alcohol or drugs, or to traffic ordinance violations that do not involve the use of alcohol or drugs.

(d) Duty to Self-Report Discipline or Resignation in Another Jurisdiction. A lawyer subject to this rule who has been publicly disciplined in another jurisdiction, or who has resigned or otherwise voluntarily surrendered the lawyer's license to practice law in connection with a disciplinary proceeding in another jurisdiction, must notify the Regulation Counsel in writing of such action within 14 days of the order imposing public discipline or the resignation or surrender of license.

COMMENT

All judges who are lawyers, even those not subject to the Code of Judicial Conduct, have duties to report convictions under this rule, in addition to any duty set forth in the Colorado Rules of Judicial Discipline. See also CJC 1.1

with respect to judges. C.R.C.P. 242.11(d) is not intended to require reporting of reciprocal discipline by a lawyer who was reciprocally disciplined in another jurisdiction based on discipline originating in Colorado.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Rule held constitutional. Rule provides sufficient guidelines to impose attorney discipline and is not, therefore, unconstitutionally vague in violation of due process of law. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

A most sacred duty is to maintain the integrity of the law profession by disciplining lawyers who indulge in practices which are designed to perpetrate a fraud on the courts. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

Where the court specifically noted that the issue of contempt was not properly before the court, the trial court lacked authority to impose disciplinary sanctions against an attorney, along with client, for failing to disclose at the settlement conference that funds were never paid into the directory. Mulei v. Jet Courier Serv., Inc., 860 P.2d 569 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in Coerber v. Rath, 164 Colo. 294, 435 P.2d 228 (1967); People ex rel. Aisenberg v. Young, 198 Colo. 26, 599 P.2d 257 (1979).

Rule 242.12. Rule of Limitation

Disciplinary sanctions or diversions may not be based on conduct reported more than five years after the date the conduct is discovered or reasonably should have been discovered. But there is no rule of limitation where the allegations involve fraud, conversion, or conviction of a serious crime, or where the lawyer is alleged to have concealed the conduct.

Part IV. Investigation and Pre-Complaint Resolutions

Rule 242.13. Request for Investigation

(a) Requesting an Investigation. Requests for investigation, which cannot be made anonymously, may be made:

- (1) By any person and directed to the Regulation Counsel;
- (2) By a judge of any court of record and directed to the Regulation Counsel;
- (3) By the Regulation Committee on its own motion and directed to the Regulation Counsel; or

(4) By the Regulation Counsel with the concurrence of the Chair or Vice-Chair of the Regulation Committee.

(b) Preliminary Investigation.

(1) On receiving a request for investigation under subsection (a) above, the Regulation Counsel must conduct a preliminary investigation to decide:

(A) Whether the lawyer is subject to C.R.C.P. 242.1(a) and whether an allegation has been made that, if proved, would constitute grounds for discipline; and if so,

(B) Whether to formally investigate the matter under C.R.C.P. 242.14 or to address the matter by means of a diversion program under C.R.C.P. 242.17.

(2) If requested to do so, the lawyer must submit to the Regulation Counsel a written response to the allegations within 21 days. The Regulation Counsel may require the lawyer to provide a copy of the written response to the complaining witness, except when a protective order entered under C.R.C.P. 242.41(e) restricts the disclosure of information or when the Regulation Counsel otherwise determines that certain information should not be disclosed to the complaining witness.

(3) The Regulation Counsel's decision under subsection (b)(1) above is an exercise of discretion that may take into account numerous factors, including the availability of admissible and credible evidence to support the allegation, the presumptive form of discipline provided by the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions if the allegation is proven, and the likelihood that additional education of the lawyer will address any concerns of future misconduct. The Regulation Counsel's decision under subsection (b)(1) above is final. The Regulation Counsel will inform the complaining witness of the decision. The complaining witness is not entitled to review or appeal of that decision.

Rule 242.14. Formal Investigation of Allegations

(a) Commencement of Investigation.

(1) Initiation. A formal investigation may commence if the Regulation Counsel decides to investigate under C.R.C.P. 242.13(b)(1)(B) or if the Regulation Counsel receives notice that a lawyer has been convicted of a crime, other than serious crimes (which are addressed in C.R.C.P. 242.15(c)).

(2) Notice. When the Regulation Counsel commences a formal investigation under this section 242.14, the Regulation Counsel must give the respondent notice of the investigation and the allegations against the respondent.

(3) Response. If requested to do so, the respondent must submit to the Regulation Counsel a written response to the allegations within 21 days. The Regulation Counsel may require the respondent to provide a copy of the written response to the complaining witness, except when a protective order entered under C.R.C.P. 242.41(e) restricts the disclosure of information or when the Regulation Counsel otherwise determines that certain information should not be disclosed to the complaining witness.

(b) Procedures for Investigation.

(1) Investigator. A member of the Regulation Counsel's staff, a member of the Regulation Committee, or a special counsel appointed under C.R.C.P. 242.4(e) may act as investigator. The investigator must promptly investigate the allegations, which may include conducting interviews and procuring evidence.

(2) Subpoenas.

(A) Issuance. During an investigation, the Regulation Counsel or the Chair of the Regulation Committee may issue subpoenas to compel the attendance of witnesses, including the respondent, and to compel the production of relevant documents and other evidence.

(B) Production of Required Records. A respondent must produce records required to be kept under Colo. RPC 1.15D in response to a subpoena duces tecum that is issued under this section 242.14 and that requests such records.

(C) Standards. Subpoenas issued under this section 242.14 and challenges thereto are subject to C.R.C.P. 45. Challenges to subpoenas must be directed to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(c) Stipulation to Discipline or Diversion During Investigation. While a matter is under formal investigation, the respondent and the Regulation Counsel may enter into a stipulation to discipline as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.19 or to diversion as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.17. If a stipulation provides for diversion or private admonition, the parties must submit the stipulation to the Regulation Committee for approval. If a stipulation provides for public discipline, the parties must submit the stipulation to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for approval. When a stipulation has been submitted and approved under this section 242.14, no determination or written report under subsection (d) below is required.

(d) Results of Investigation. After an investigation by the Regulation Counsel's staff, the Regulation Counsel must make a determination under C.R.C.P. 242.15. After an investigation conducted by an investigator who is not a member of the Regulation Counsel's staff, the investigator will submit a written report of investigation and recommendation to the Regulation Committee for a determination under C.R.C.P. 242.16.

COMMENT

For purposes of C.R.C.P. 45 a respondent subject to an investigation is considered a party, but a complaining witness is not considered a party.

ANNOTATION

Attorney under investigation is a “party” to the investigative proceedings and, therefore, entitled, as required by the specific discovery provisions of the rules of civil procedure, to notice of the investigative subpoena and subpoena documents. Given the plain language of the rules, present and historic interpretation by attorney regulation counsel (ARC) of the rules, and the implications of a contrary interpretation that would render other rules in attorney discipline system moot and create a secretive system that discourages informal resolution of discipline claims, Attorney E was a “party” in his own investigation. Accordingly, ARC appropriately followed the specific provisions of C.R.C.P. 45, 26(a)(1)(B), and 30 by providing the attorney with notice of its subpoena and the documents produced from that subpoena. In re Attorney E, 78 P.3d 300 (Colo. 2003) (decided under former rule 251.10).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Williamson, 470 P.3d 745 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016) (decided under former rule 251.10).

Rule 242.15. Determination by Regulation Counsel

(a) Conclusion of Investigation. At the end of a formal investigation, the Regulation Counsel, using discretion, will take one of the following actions:

(1) Request that the Regulation Committee authorize the Regulation Counsel to file a complaint;

(2) Request that the Regulation Committee impose private admonition;

(3) Request that the Regulation Committee direct the matter to a diversion program;

(4) Request that the Regulation Committee place the matter in abeyance; or

(5) Dismiss the matter.

(b) Regulation Committee Review of Dismissal by Regulation Counsel. If the Regulation Counsel dismisses a matter at the end of a formal investigation, the Regulation Counsel must promptly notify the complaining witness and the respondent. If the complaining witness submits a request to the Regulation Counsel within 35 days of the notice, the Regulation Committee must review the Regulation Counsel’s decision. If the Regulation Committee finds in such a review that the Regulation Counsel’s decision to dismiss the matter was not an abuse of discretion, the Regulation Committee must sustain the dismissal and provide the complaining witness with a written explanation of its decision. If the Regulation Committee finds that the Regulation Counsel’s decision was an abuse of discretion, the Regulation Committee must take action in accordance with C.R.C.P. 242.16(a)-(b).

(c) Direct Filing of Complaint. If the Regulation Counsel receives notice that a lawyer has been publicly disciplined in another jurisdiction or that a lawyer has been convicted of a serious crime, the Regulation Counsel may directly file a complaint against the lawyer as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.21 and C.R.C.P. 242.25(c), as applicable. Such proceedings are not governed by C.R.C.P. 242.13, C.R.C.P. 242.14, or subsection (a) above.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 242.16. Determination by Regulation Committee

(a) Action By Regulation Committee. On receiving a request from the Regulation Counsel under C.R.C.P. 242.15 or a recommendation from another investigator under C.R.C.P. 242.14(d), the Regulation Committee must determine whether there is reasonable cause to believe that grounds for discipline exist and, using its discretion and evaluating the considerations listed in subsection (b) below, will take one of the following actions:

(1) Authorize the Regulation Counsel to file a complaint;

(2) Impose private admonition;

(3) Direct the Regulation Counsel to offer the respondent an opportunity to participate in a diversion program;

(4) Place the matter in abeyance;

- (5) Direct further investigation; or
- (6) Dismiss the matter.
- (b) Considerations in Taking Action. In making a determination under subsection (a) above, considerations for the Regulation Committee include:
 - (1) Whether it is reasonable to believe that misconduct warranting discipline can be proved by clear and convincing evidence;
 - (2) The level of injury or potential injury caused by the alleged misconduct;
 - (3) Whether the respondent previously has been disciplined; and
 - (4) Whether the alleged misconduct may warrant public discipline.
- (c) Private Admonition by Regulation Committee.
 - (1) Contents. When the Regulation Committee privately admonishes a respondent, it must admonish the respondent in writing, state the basis for the admonition, and promptly notify the respondent of the admonition.
 - (2) Costs. On issuing a private admonition, the Regulation Committee must assess against the respondent the administrative fee and may assess against the respondent all or any part of the costs of the proceeding.
 - (3) Challenges. To challenge a private admonition by the Regulation Committee, a respondent must, within 21 days after notice of the admonition, submit a written demand that the Regulation Committee vacate the admonition. When the admonition is vacated, the Regulation Counsel may file a complaint against the lawyer. If a complaint is filed, a public disciplinary proceeding will go forward as otherwise provided in this rule.
 - (d) Notice to Respondent. After the Regulation Committee's decision to authorize the filing of a complaint, to direct the Regulation Counsel to offer the respondent an opportunity to participate in a diversion program, to place a matter in abeyance, to direct further investigation, or to dismiss a matter, the Regulation Counsel must promptly notify the respondent of the decision.
 - (e) Respondent's Duty to Disclose to Law Firm. Within 14 days of receiving notice under subsection (d) above of the Regulation Committee's authorization to file a complaint, the respondent must disclose in writing that authorization to the respondent's current law firm as defined in C.R.C.P. 241 and, if different, to the respondent's law firm at the time of the alleged misconduct.
 - (f) Notice to Complaining Witness. Within 28 days after the Regulation Committee's decision to authorize the filing of a complaint, to direct the Regulation Counsel to offer the respondent an opportunity to participate in a diversion program, or to dismiss a matter, the Regulation Counsel must notify the complaining witness of the decision. If the admonition has not been vacated at the end of the 21-day period provided in subsection (c)(3) above, the Regulation Counsel must notify the complaining witness that the respondent has been privately admonished. The contents of the private admonition may not be disclosed to the complaining witness.

ANNOTATION

The rule does not require that the attorney regulation committee's authorization for a complaint set forth, with particularity or otherwise, the grounds for discipline with which the respondent is to be charged. People v. Kanwal, 2014 CO 20, 321 P.3d 494 (decided under former rule 251.12).

Part V. Diversion, Probation, Stipulations, Resignation, and Reciprocal Discipline

Rule 242.17. Diversion

- (a) Overview. Diversion is not a form of discipline. Diversion is designed to address lesser misconduct when a lawyer may benefit from guidance to improve the lawyer's skills or ethical infrastructure or to manage a behavioral health issue, including a mental health or substance use issue.

(b) Eligibility. A lawyer is eligible to participate in a diversion program only if it is unlikely that the lawyer will harm the public during the program, the Regulation Counsel can adequately supervise the terms of diversion, and the lawyer's participation in the program is likely to benefit the lawyer and serve the public interest. A matter generally will not be diverted under this section when:

(1) The presumptive form of discipline is greater than public censure under the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions;

(2) The conduct involves dishonesty, deceit, fraud, or misrepresentation, including misappropriation of funds or property of a client or another person;

(3) The conduct involves a serious crime;

(4) The conduct involves domestic violence, elder abuse, or child abuse;

(5) The conduct resulted in or is likely to result in a client's or another person's loss of money, legal rights, or property rights, unless restitution is made a term of diversion;

(6) The lawyer has been publicly disciplined in the last three years;

(7) The conduct is of the same nature as misconduct for which the lawyer has been disciplined in the last five years; or

(8) The conduct involves a pattern of similar misconduct.

(c) Diversion Agreement.

(1) Contents. If a lawyer agrees to an offer of diversion, the terms of the diversion must be set forth in a written agreement between the lawyer and the Regulation Counsel. The agreement must specify the general purpose of the diversion, the requirements of the diversion, how compliance will be monitored, the length of the diversion period, required payment of costs, and any required payment of restitution. Terms may include one or more of the following: mediation, fee arbitration, law office management assistance, continuing legal education courses, trust account school, ethics school, passing the multistate professional responsibility examination, referral to the Colorado Lawyer Assistance Program, assessment of and treatment for medical or behavioral health issues including mental health and substance use issues, and monitoring of the lawyer's practice or accounting procedures. The Regulation Counsel will monitor the lawyer's compliance with the diversion agreement.

(2) Procedure.

(A) When the Regulation Counsel decides under C.R.C.P. 242.13 not to formally investigate a matter, the Regulation Counsel has discretion to offer the lawyer the opportunity to participate in a diversion program.

(B) After the Regulation Counsel has decided under C.R.C.P. 242.13 to formally investigate a matter but before the Regulation Counsel has filed a complaint, a diversion agreement must be submitted to the Regulation Committee for approval. If the Regulation Committee rejects the diversion agreement, the disciplinary proceeding will go forward as otherwise provided in this rule.

(C) In reviewing a matter presented by the Regulation Counsel under C.R.C.P. 242.16(a), the Regulation Committee may direct the Regulation Counsel to offer the respondent the opportunity to participate in a diversion program.

(D) After the Regulation Counsel has filed a complaint but before a hearing has been held, a diversion agreement must be submitted to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for approval. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge rejects a diversion agreement, the disciplinary proceeding will go forward as otherwise provided in this rule.

(3) Effect of Diversion. When a diversion agreement is approved, the underlying disciplinary proceeding is placed in abeyance pending successful completion of the diversion program.

(d) Costs and Administrative Fee. The respondent must pay the administrative fee and all costs incurred in connection with participating in a diversion program. If the Regulation Counsel prevails in a hearing before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge involving allegations that a respondent breached a diversion agreement, the respondent may be required to pay all or any part of the reasonable costs of the proceeding.

(e) Effect of Successful Completion of Diversion.

(1) Pre-complaint Matters. If the Regulation Counsel finds that the respondent successfully completed a diversion program in a matter in which a complaint was not filed, the Regulation Counsel must dismiss the matter and expunge the files and records thereof under C.R.C.P. 242.43.

(2) Post-complaint Matters. If the Regulation Counsel finds that the respondent successfully completed a diversion program in a matter in which a complaint was filed, the Regulation Counsel must promptly notify the Presiding Disciplinary Judge of the successful completion.

The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will dismiss the matter. The files and records of the matter will not be expunged.

(f) Breach of Diversion Agreement. Whether a diversion agreement has been breached is determined as follows:

(1) Diversion Agreement Entered After Preliminary Investigation. If the Regulation Counsel believes that a lawyer breached a diversion agreement that the Regulation Counsel offered at the conclusion of a preliminary investigation under C.R.C.P. 242.13, the Regulation Counsel must notify the lawyer and give the lawyer an opportunity to respond. The Regulation Counsel then may decide that the original agreement should remain in effect; offer to modify the diversion requirements; or terminate the diversion agreement, remove the proceeding from abeyance, and proceed with the disciplinary proceeding as otherwise provided in this rule.

(2) Diversion Agreement Approved by Regulation Committee. If the Regulation Counsel believes that a respondent breached a diversion agreement that was approved by the Regulation Committee under C.R.C.P. 242.16(a)(3), the Regulation Counsel must notify the Regulation Committee of the alleged breach and request relief. The Regulation Counsel must also notify the respondent, who must be afforded an opportunity to respond. Either party may request a hearing before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(A) Hearings and Burden of Proof. At a hearing before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the Regulation Counsel has the burden by a preponderance of the evidence to establish a material breach of the diversion agreement and to justify the relief requested. The respondent has the same burden to establish that the breach was justified. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45.

(B) Report. After a hearing, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will prepare a report setting forth findings of fact and recommendations for the Regulation Committee.

(C) Relief. The Regulation Committee may direct that the original agreement remain in effect; direct the Regulation Counsel to offer the respondent an opportunity to participate in a diversion program with modified requirements; terminate the diversion agreement, remove the disciplinary proceeding from abeyance, and impose a private admonition; or terminate the diversion agreement, remove the disciplinary proceeding from abeyance, and authorize the Regulation Counsel to file a complaint.

(3) Diversion Agreement Approved by Presiding Disciplinary Judge. If the Regulation Counsel believes that a respondent breached a diversion agreement that was approved by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge under C.R.C.P. 242.17(c)(2)(D), the Regulation Counsel must notify the Presiding Disciplinary Judge of the alleged breach and request relief. The Regulation Counsel must also notify the respondent, who must be afforded an opportunity to respond. Either party may request a hearing before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(A) Hearings and Burden of Proof. At a hearing before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the Regulation Counsel has the burden by a preponderance of the evidence to establish a material breach and to justify the relief requested. The respondent has the same burden to establish that a breach was justified. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45.

(B) Decision. After a hearing, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will prepare findings of fact and render a decision. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may terminate the diversion agreement and remove the disciplinary proceeding from abeyance or direct that the original agreement remain in effect.

(g) Confidentiality.

(1) Files and Records.

(A) Pre-complaint Matters. Files and records relating to a matter in which diversion is entered before a complaint is filed are not available to the public.

(B) Post-complaint Matters. Files and records relating to a matter in which diversion is entered after a complaint is filed, including an order dismissing the underlying case, are available to the public. But the diversion agreement itself and any order approving the diversion agreement are not available to the public.

(C) Publishing. For educational purposes, the Regulation Counsel or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may publish anonymous summaries of matters in which diversion has been entered in pre-complaint or post-complaint matters so long as there is no reasonable likelihood that a reader will be able to ascertain the identity of the lawyer.

(2) Admissions of Misconduct. A lawyer's admissions of misconduct to a treatment provider or a practice monitor while in a diversion program are confidential, but only if the misconduct occurred before the lawyer entered the diversion program.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 242.18. Probation

(a) Overview. Probation is a form of discipline that allows a respondent who has been found to have committed misconduct to continue practicing law subject to supervision when the respondent would benefit from conditions designed to improve the respondent's skills or ethical infrastructure or to manage a behavioral health issue, including a mental health or substance use issue. An order of probation must specify the conditions of probation. Probation must be imposed for a specified period of time in conjunction with a suspension, which may be stayed in whole or in part. A period of probation must not exceed three years, unless the Presiding Disciplinary Judge grants an extension on motion by either party.

(b) Eligibility. Probation may be imposed only when a respondent:

(1) Is unlikely to harm the public during the period of probation and can be adequately supervised;

(2) Is able to practice law without undermining public confidence in the legal system; and

(3) Has not committed misconduct for which the presumptive form of discipline is disbarment.

(c) Conditions. Conditions must take into consideration the nature and circumstances of the respondent's misconduct and the respondent's history and health status. A mandatory condition of probation is that the respondent must not commit further violations of the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct during the period of probation. Other conditions may include one or more of the following:

(1) Periodic reporting to the Regulation Counsel;

(2) Monitoring of the respondent's law practice or accounting procedures;

(3) Establishing a relationship with a lawyer-mentor;

(4) Satisfactory completion of a course of study;

(5) Achieving a passing score on the multistate professional responsibility examination;

(6) Payment of restitution;

(7) Evaluation or treatment of medical or behavioral health issues, including mental health or substance use issues;

(8) Evaluation or treatment in a program for disorders related to sexual misconduct;

(9) Evaluation or treatment in a program for addressing matters relating to family violence, including domestic partner, elder, and child abuse;

(10) Compliance with civil or criminal court orders;

(11) Abstinence from or limitations on the use of alcohol or drugs; and

(12) Payment of expenses associated with probationary conditions.

(d) Monitoring. The Regulation Counsel must monitor the respondent's compliance with the conditions of probation.

(e) Termination. Probation does not terminate until the Presiding Disciplinary Judge enters an order of termination. To seek timely termination of probation, a respondent must file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, no earlier than 28 days before the date probation is scheduled to terminate, an affidavit attesting to whether the respondent has complied with each term of probation. Within 14 days of that filing, unless otherwise ordered, the Regulation Counsel must file either a notice that the Regulation Counsel does not object to the termination of probation or a motion to revoke probation. On receiving notice that the Regulation Counsel does not object to termination of probation, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will enter an order terminating probation. An order of termination takes effect no earlier than the date probation is scheduled to terminate.

(f) Violations.

(1) Initiation of Revocation Proceeding. If, while a respondent is on probation, the Regulation Counsel receives information that the respondent may have violated a condition of probation, the Regulation Counsel may move that the Presiding Disciplinary Judge order the respondent to show cause why the stay on the respondent[92]s suspension should not be lifted.

(2) Continued Compliance. During a revocation proceeding, the respondent must continue to comply with the probationary conditions unless otherwise ordered.

(3) Hearing. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may hold a revocation hearing on motion of either party or on the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's own initiative. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45. At the hearing, the Regulation Counsel has the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondent violated a condition of probation and to justify the relief requested. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may receive any evidence with probative value regardless of its admissibility under the rules of evidence if the respondent has a fair opportunity to rebut hearsay evidence. When the alleged violation is the respondent[92]s failure to pay restitution or costs, evidence of the failure to pay constitutes prima facie evidence of a violation.

(4) Order. After a hearing or after briefing if no hearing is held, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will enter an order revoking probation, modifying the conditions or length of probation, or directing that probation remain in effect.

(5) Costs. If probation is revoked or modified, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may assess against the respondent all or any part of the reasonable costs of the revocation proceeding.

(g) Independent Charges. The filing or the granting of a motion under subsection (f) above does not preclude the Regulation Counsel from filing independent disciplinary charges based on the same underlying conduct.

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

The expiration of a specific period of probation imposed on an attorney does not alone entitle that attorney to reinstatement to the unconditional practice of law. While the rule does not expressly state that the probationer remains on probation until an order of successful completion has issued, that is not only a probable, but in fact the necessary, implication of the requirement. In re Bass, 2013 CO 40, 307 P.3d 1052.

Rule 242.19. Stipulation to Discipline

(a) Overview. After the Regulation Committee has approved the filing of a complaint but before a disciplinary hearing, the Regulation Counsel and a respondent may enter into a stipulation to discipline whereby the respondent conditionally admits to misconduct in exchange for a stipulated form of discipline.

(b) Contents. A stipulation to discipline must be sworn or affirmed by the respondent and notarized and must contain:

(1) The factual basis for the stipulation;

(2) An admission of misconduct that constitutes grounds for discipline;

(3) A statement that the admission is freely and voluntarily made, that it is not the product of coercion or duress, and that the respondent is fully aware of the implications of the admission;

(4) An agreement that the respondent will pay the costs and the administrative fee of the proceeding; and

(5) A statement whether the respondent will pay restitution and in what amount.

(c) Procedure. A stipulation must be submitted to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for review. Using discretion and in accordance with the considerations governing imposition of disciplinary sanctions, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may either reject the stipulation and order that the disciplinary proceeding go forward as otherwise provided in this rule or approve the stipulation and enter an appropriate order.

(d) Rejected Stipulation. If a stipulation to discipline is rejected, the stipulation and any related motions, briefs, and orders will not be available to the public and will not be admissible in any disciplinary proceeding.

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

The supreme court will deny attorney's application to voluntarily surrender his license to practice law in the state of Colorado where the gravity of the attorney's wrongful conduct necessitates disbarment. People v. Murphy, 174 Colo. 182, 483 P.2d 224 (1971).

Surrender of a license pursuant to this rule is not confidential and will be made known to the National Disciplinary Data Bank for dissemination on a national basis to other agencies who license attorneys. People v. Culpepper, 645 P.2d 5 (Colo. 1982).

Stipulation to 18-month suspension is reasonable and warranted, given the number and seriousness of the charges balanced against the mitigating factors. People v. Taylor, 799 P.2d 930 (Colo. 1990).

Stipulation to disbarment is appropriate where attorney pleaded guilty to felony menacing and had history of discipline. People v. Littlefield, 893 P.2d 773 (Colo. 1995).

Mitigating factors warranting suspension for three years. Conviction for distribution of cocaine is "serious crime" as defined in C.R.C.P. 241.16(e). However, mitigating factors including personal and emotional problems, full disclosure and cooperation with the grievance committee and the office of disciplinary counsel, and participation in interim rehabilitation warrant suspension from practice for three years. People v. Wilson, 953 P.2d 1292 (Colo. 1998).

Rule 242.20. Resignation

As provided in C.R.C.P. 227(A)(8), the supreme court may permit a lawyer to resign from the practice of law in Colorado. The Regulation Counsel must inform the supreme court whether any disciplinary or disability matter involving the lawyer should preclude the lawyer's resignation and whether any pre-complaint proceeding pending against the lawyer under this rule should be dismissed. A lawyer may not resign if a complaint under C.R.C.P. 242.25 is pending against the lawyer. A lawyer who has been permitted to resign remains subject to the supreme court's jurisdiction as set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.1 as to the lawyer's previous or authorized practice of law in Colorado. Resignation under C.R.C.P. 227(A)(8) is not a form of discipline.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 242.21. Reciprocal Discipline

(a) Standards. A final adjudication of misconduct constituting grounds for discipline issued in another jurisdiction conclusively establishes such misconduct for purposes of this rule and conclusively establishes that the same discipline should be imposed in Colorado, unless a party challenging imposition of that discipline establishes by clear and convincing evidence that:

(1) The procedure followed in the other jurisdiction did not comport with Colorado's requirements of due process of law;

(2) The proof upon which the other jurisdiction based its determination of misconduct is so infirm that the determination cannot be accepted;

(3) The imposition of the same discipline as was imposed in the other jurisdiction would result in grave injustice; or

(4) The misconduct proved warrants a substantially different form of discipline in Colorado.

(b) Procedures.

(1) Complaint. If a complaint is based on the respondent's public discipline in another jurisdiction, the Regulation Counsel must attach to the complaint a copy of the disciplinary order entered in the other jurisdiction. If the Regulation Counsel intends either to claim that substantially different discipline is warranted or to present additional evidence, notice of that intent must be given in the complaint.

(2) Answer. If the respondent intends to raise a defense listed in subsection (a) above, the respondent must file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, within 28 days after service of the complaint, an answer and a full copy of the record of the disciplinary proceeding in the other jurisdiction.

(3) Decision by Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may, without a hearing or a Hearing Board, issue a decision imposing the same discipline as was imposed by the other jurisdiction if:

(A) The Regulation Counsel does not seek substantially different discipline and the respondent does not challenge the order based on any of the defenses listed in subsection (a) above; or

(B) The matter can be resolved on a dispositive motion, such as a motion filed under C.R.C.P. 12, 55, or 56.

(4) Hearing and Decision by Hearing Board. A hearing before a Hearing Board must be conducted in accordance with the procedures set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.29 through C.R.C.P. 242.31. After the hearing, the Hearing Board must issue a decision imposing the same discipline as was imposed by the other jurisdiction unless the respondent establishes by clear and convincing evidence one or more of the four defenses listed in subsection (a) above or the Regulation Counsel establishes by clear and convincing evidence that substantially different discipline is warranted.

(5) Costs and Administrative Fee. If reciprocal discipline is imposed, the respondent must pay the administrative fee and may be ordered to pay all or any part of the reasonable costs of the proceeding.

(6) Effect of Stay in Other Jurisdiction. If the discipline imposed in the other jurisdiction has been stayed pending appeal there, reciprocal discipline cannot take effect in Colorado unless and until the stay in the other jurisdiction is lifted.

(c) Reinstatement and Readmission.

(1) Costs and Restitution Awarded in Originating Jurisdiction. A respondent who is reciprocally disciplined in Colorado must pay all costs and restitution ordered in the originating jurisdiction before petitioning for reinstatement or readmission to practice law in Colorado.

(2) Reinstatement or Readmission in Originating Jurisdiction. A respondent who is reciprocally disciplined in Colorado must be reinstated or readmitted in the originating jurisdiction before petitioning for reinstatement or readmission to practice law in Colorado under C.R.C.P. 242.39 unless the respondent shows good cause for not seeking reinstatement or readmission in the originating jurisdiction.

Part VI. Interim and Nondisciplinary Suspension

Rule 242.22. Interim Suspension for Alleged Serious Disciplinary Violations

(a) Overview. Interim suspension is the temporary suspension by the supreme court of a respondent's license to practice law while a disciplinary proceeding is pending against the respondent.

(b) Applicability. Although a respondent's license to practice law is not ordinarily suspended while a disciplinary proceeding is pending, the supreme court may suspend a respondent's license on an interim basis if there is reasonable cause to believe that:

- (1) The respondent is causing or has caused substantial public or private harm; and
- (2) The respondent has:
 - (A) Been convicted of a serious crime;
 - (B) Knowingly converted property or funds;
 - (C) Abandoned a client; or
 - (D) Engaged in conduct that poses a substantial threat to the administration of justice.
- (c) Procedure.

(1) Initiation. To initiate an interim suspension proceeding under this section 242.22, the Regulation Counsel must file a petition with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The petition must be supported by an affidavit setting forth facts giving rise to reasonable cause to believe that the alleged conduct occurred. The Regulation Counsel must serve a copy of the petition and affidavit on the respondent.

(2) Order to Show Cause. On receiving a properly supported petition for interim suspension, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will order the respondent to show cause within 14 days why the petition should not be granted.

(3) Subpoenas. During a proceeding under this section 242.22, either party may request that the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45. Challenges to subpoenas must be directed to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(4) Hearing. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will hold a hearing if requested by either party or if the Presiding Disciplinary Judge deems one necessary. A hearing will take place within 14 days of the respondent's response to the show cause order. A record must be made of the hearing.

(5) Report. Within 7 days after any hearing, or as soon as practicable if no hearing is held, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will submit to the supreme court a report setting forth findings of fact and a recommendation as to interim suspension.

(6) Supreme Court Decision. On receiving the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's report, the supreme court may suspend the respondent's license to practice law on an interim basis or discharge the show cause order. An order of interim suspension takes effect immediately, unless otherwise provided.

(d) Disclosure to Law Firms. In addition to a respondent's duties under C.R.C.P. 242.32, a respondent whose license is suspended on an interim basis under this section 242.22 must disclose in writing the interim suspension order to the respondent's current law firm as defined in C.R.C.P. 241 and, if different, to the respondent's law firm at the time of the misconduct giving rise to the matter. The disclosure must be made within 7 days of the supreme court's order.

(e) Related Disciplinary Proceeding.

(1) Direct Filing of Complaint. When the supreme court suspends a respondent's license on an interim basis and a complaint has not already been filed alleging the same misconduct, the Regulation Counsel must promptly file a complaint under C.R.C.P. 242.25. The disciplinary proceeding then will go forward as otherwise provided in this rule. In such proceedings, C.R.C.P. 242.14 through C.R.C.P. 242.16 do not apply.

(2) Accelerated Disposition. A respondent whose license has been suspended on an interim basis under this section 242.22 may exercise the right to an accelerated disposition of the disciplinary proceeding by filing a notice to that effect with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The matter then must proceed without appreciable delay.

(3) Termination of Interim Suspension. The interim suspension of a respondent's license under this section 242.22 terminates on resolution of a disciplinary proceeding alleging the same misconduct.

(f) Access to Information. Pre-complaint proceedings under this section 242.22 are confidential if the supreme court has not yet issued a final decision under this section or if the supreme court does not impose an interim suspension. But the files and records of the matter become public if the supreme court suspends a respondent's license under this section, if a complaint is filed alleging the same misconduct, or if C.R.C.P. 242.41 otherwise so provides.

(g) Automatic Reinstatement from Interim Suspension When Conviction Vacated. If a respondent subject to an interim suspension files a certificate showing that the criminal conviction on which the interim suspension was based has since been vacated, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will terminate the interim suspension order. An order of termination under this subsection (g) does not affect any disciplinary proceeding pending against the respondent or any discipline that has been imposed against the respondent based on the same underlying conduct.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 242.23. Nondisciplinary Suspension for Noncompliance with Child Support or Paternity Orders

(a) Overview. Suspension under this section 242.23 is a temporary form of suspension designed to address certain types of lawyer noncompliance in child support and paternity proceedings. Suspension under this section is not a form of discipline and does not bar disciplinary action based on the same underlying conduct. A lawyer whose license has been suspended under this section may be reinstated when the lawyer demonstrates compliance in such proceedings. Suspension under this section terminates on reinstatement under this section or on resolution of a disciplinary proceeding based on the same underlying misconduct.

(b) Applicability. This section 242.23 applies to a lawyer who:

(1) Is not in compliance with any child support order, including any administrative or court order requiring the payment of child support, child support arrears, child support debt, retroactive support, or medical support, whether or not such order is combined with an order for maintenance; or

(2) Is not in compliance with a subpoena or warrant relating to a paternity or child support proceeding.

(c) Procedure.

(1) Initiation. To initiate a proceeding under this section 242.23, the Regulation Counsel must file a petition for suspension with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The petition must be supported by an affidavit setting forth facts giving rise to reasonable cause to believe that one or more of the circumstances set forth in subsection (b) above exists. The Regulation Counsel must serve a copy of the petition and affidavit on the lawyer.

(2) Order to Show Cause. On receiving a properly supported petition for suspension, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will order the lawyer to show cause within 21 days why the petition should not be granted.

(3) Subpoenas. During a proceeding under this section 242.23, either party may request that the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45. Challenges to subpoenas must be directed to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(4) Hearing. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will hold a hearing if requested by either party or if the Presiding Disciplinary Judge deems one necessary. A hearing will take place within 14 days of the lawyer's response to the show cause order.

(5) Decision.

(A) Issuance. Within 7 days after any hearing, or as soon as practicable if no hearing is held, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will issue an order setting forth findings of fact and a decision. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will suspend the lawyer's license if the Regulation Counsel proves the allegations of the petition by a preponderance of the evidence, unless the lawyer establishes one of the defenses listed in subsection (B) below by a preponderance of the evidence. An order of suspension under this section 242.23 takes effect immediately, unless otherwise provided.

(B) Defenses.

(i) The following are valid defenses:

- (a) The lawyer has paid the past-due obligation;
 - (b) The lawyer has negotiated a payment plan approved by the court or the state child support enforcement agency or other agency with jurisdiction over the child support order;
 - (c) A bona fide disagreement is currently before a trial court or an agency concerning the amount of the child support debt, arrearage balance, retroactive support due, or amount of the past-due child support when combined with maintenance;
 - (d) The lawyer has complied with the subpoena or warrant;
 - (e) The lawyer was not served with the subpoena or warrant; or
 - (f) The subpoena or warrant had a technical defect.
- (ii) The inappropriateness of an underlying child support order and the lawyer's inability to comply with such an order are not valid defenses.

(d) Disclosure to Law Firm. In addition to a lawyer's duties under C.R.C.P. 242.32, a lawyer whose license is suspended under this section 242.23 must disclose in writing the suspension order to the lawyer's current law firm as defined in C.R.C.P. 241. The disclosure must be made within 14 days of the order.

(e) Access to Information. Proceedings under this section 242.23 are confidential if the Presiding Disciplinary Judge has not yet issued a final decision under this section or does not suspend a lawyer's license. But the files and records of the matter become public if the Presiding Disciplinary Judge suspends a lawyer's license under this section, if a complaint is filed based on the same underlying allegations, or if C.R.C.P. 242.41 otherwise so provides.

(f) Reinstatement.

(1) Petition. A lawyer whose license has been suspended under this section 242.23 is eligible for reinstatement if, as applicable, the lawyer pays the past-due obligations; enters into a payment plan approved by the court, the state child support enforcement agency, or other agency with jurisdiction over the child support order; complies with the warrant or subpoena; or is no longer subject to subsection (b) above as a result of an appellate decision in the lawyer's favor. To seek reinstatement, the lawyer must file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a verified petition containing evidence of compliance.

(2) Procedure. After receiving a petition for reinstatement, the Regulation Counsel has 21 days to conduct an investigation, unless the Presiding Disciplinary Judge grants the Regulation Counsel additional time. The lawyer must cooperate in the investigation. At the end of the investigation period, the Regulation Counsel must file an answer. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will hold a hearing if requested by either party or if the Presiding Disciplinary Judge deems one necessary. The lawyer bears the burden of establishing the right to be reinstated by a preponderance of the evidence. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may order reinstatement or deny reinstatement. Reinstatement under this subsection (f) does not affect any disciplinary proceeding pending against the respondent or any disciplinary sanction imposed for the respondent's conduct.

(g) Appeal. A decision of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge under subsection (c)(5) or subsection (f)(2) above is final, and an appeal may be initiated under C.R.C.P. 242.34.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 242.24. Nondisciplinary Suspension for Failure to Cooperate

(a) Overview. Suspension under this section 242.24 is a temporary form of suspension designed to address noncooperation by a respondent in a disciplinary investigation. A respondent whose license is suspended under this section may be reinstated when the respondent rectifies the conduct at issue. Suspension under this section is not a form of discipline, does not bar disciplinary action based on the respondent's noncooperation, and is distinct from any disciplinary suspension that may be imposed based on the same underlying conduct.

(b) Applicability. Although a respondent's license to practice law is not ordinarily suspended during a disciplinary investigation, a respondent's license may be suspended during an investigation of alleged serious misconduct if there is reasonable cause to believe that the respondent has not cooperated, as described in subsection (c)(1)(A) below.

(c) Procedure.

(1) Initiation.

(A) To initiate a proceeding under this section 242.24, the Regulation Counsel must file a petition for suspension with the supreme court alleging that the respondent:

(i) Has failed to respond to a lawful demand for information relating to a disciplinary investigation and has not interposed a good-faith objection to responding; or

(ii) Has not produced information or records subpoenaed by the investigator and has not interposed a good-faith objection to producing the information or records.

(B) The petition must be supported by an affidavit setting forth facts giving rise to reasonable cause to believe that the alleged serious misconduct under investigation occurred and that the respondent has failed to cooperate as set forth in subsection (c)(1)(A) above. The affidavit must also describe the investigator's efforts to obtain the respondent's cooperation.

(C) The Regulation Counsel must serve a copy of the petition and affidavit on the respondent.

(2) Order to Show Cause. On receiving a properly supported petition for suspension, the supreme court may order the respondent to show cause within 14 days why the petition should not be granted.

(3) Hearing. If the respondent responds to the show cause order, either party may request a hearing. The supreme court may refer the matter to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for resolution of contested factual matters and a hearing, for which subpoenas may be issued. A hearing will take place within 14 days of the supreme court's order of referral.

(4) Report. Within 7 days after any hearing, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will submit to the supreme court a report setting forth findings of fact and a recommendation. The report must make findings as to the allegations and the applicability of any defenses, including inability to comply or a good-faith objection to response or production.

(5) Decision. After considering the petition, any response to the show cause order, and any report from the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the supreme court may suspend the respondent's license to practice law until further order of the supreme court or entry of a final order in the underlying disciplinary proceeding, whichever occurs earlier; deny the petition; or enter any other appropriate order. An order of suspension under this section 242.24 takes effect immediately, unless otherwise provided.

(d) Disclosure to Law Firm. In addition to a respondent's duties under C.R.C.P. 242.32, a respondent whose license is suspended under this section 242.24 must disclose in writing the suspension order to the respondent's current law firm as defined in C.R.C.P. 241. The disclosure must be made within 14 days of the supreme court's order.

(e) Access to Information. Pre-complaint proceedings under this section 242.24 are confidential if the supreme court has not yet issued a final decision under this section or does not suspend a respondent's license. But the files and records of the matter become public if the supreme court suspends a respondent's license under this section, if a complaint is filed based on the allegations underlying the petition filed under this section, or if C.R.C.P. 242.41 otherwise so provides.

(f) Reinstatement. A respondent whose license was suspended under this section 242.24 may petition the supreme court for reinstatement. The respondent's petition must show that the respondent has rectified the conduct alleged in the petition or that the respondent has otherwise complied with any directions issued by the supreme court. The respondent must provide a copy of the petition to the Regulation Counsel, who must respond within 7 days. The supreme court may reinstate the respondent's license to practice law, deny the petition, or enter any other appropriate order. Reinstatement under this subsection (f) does not affect any disciplinary proceeding pending against the respondent or any disciplinary sanction imposed for the respondent's noncooperation.

COMMENT

C.R.C.P. 242.24 addresses problems caused by the relatively few lawyers who fail to cooperate in a disciplinary investigation. The intent of this rule is to ensure that lawyers comply with the rules governing the legal profession, in this case the duty to cooperate in a disciplinary investigation. See Colo. RPC 8.1(b); Colo. RPC 8.4(d). This section is intended to promote communication between the lawyer and the investigator. The rule is not designed to threaten or punish lawyers who have a good reason for not complying with investigative requests, such as an inability to comply or a good-faith objection to production. For example, a lawyer will not be suspended under this section merely because the lawyer is out of the office on vacation when a disciplinary investigation is initiated.

Part VII. Procedure for Formal Disciplinary Proceedings

Rule 242.25. Complaint

(a) Contents and Filing of Complaint and Citation.

(1) To initiate a formal disciplinary proceeding, the Regulation Counsel must file a complaint and citation with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. Complaints are filed in the name of the People of the State of Colorado.

(2) The complaint must set forth clearly and with particularity the alleged rule violations and the conduct giving rise to those claims.

(3) The citation must direct the respondent to file an answer to the complaint within 28 days after service.

(b) Service of Complaint. The Regulation Counsel must promptly serve on the respondent a copy of the complaint and citation as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.42(b). The Regulation Counsel must promptly file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge proof of service of the complaint and citation.

(c) Complaints Involving Criminal Conduct. If a complaint is based on the respondent's conviction of a crime, the Regulation Counsel must present proof of the conviction with the complaint. A conviction is not a prerequisite to filing a disciplinary proceeding based on alleged criminal conduct.

Law reviews. For article, "Statutes and Cases Concerning Unauthorized Practice of Law in Colorado", see 24 Dicta 257 (1947). For note, "Standards of Discipline for Attorneys in Colorado and the Significance of the Code of Professional Responsibility", see 50 Den. L.J. 207 (1973).

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Consideration of charges not made in formal complaint against an attorney constitutes a violation of the respondent's rights to procedural due process of law. People v. Emeson, 638 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1981).

The rule does not require that a complaint limit the sanctions to which a person may be exposed or the precise elements upon which particular sanctions may depend. The rule could not require this given both the diverse nature of possible grounds for discipline and the multiplicity of considerations upon which particular discipline may ultimately depend. People v. Kanwal, 2014 CO 20, 321 P.3d 494.

Board's findings that attorney engaged in dishonest conduct in collection matter contravened requirement that the grounds for discipline be set forth “clearly and with particularity.” The complaint and the issues identified for hearing did not adequately place the attorney on notice that he had violated the disciplinary rules prohibiting dishonest conduct. A proper charge of dishonesty would have identified conduct constituting violation of C.R.P.C. 4.1(a) (making a false statement of material fact or law to a third person) or 8.4(c) (engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, deceit, fraud, or misrepresentation); not 8.4(g) (engaging in conduct violating accepted standards of legal ethics). In re Quiat, 979 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1999).

Rule 242.26. Answer

A respondent must file an answer or a motion under C.R.C.P. 12(b) with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, and provide a copy to the Regulation Counsel, within 28 days after service of the complaint and citation. The answer must either admit or deny each allegation in the complaint as provided in C.R.C.P. 8(b). In addition, the answer must set forth any affirmative defenses. If a respondent files a motion under C.R.C.P. 12(b), the Regulation Counsel must file a response thereto within 14 days. The respondent must file any reply within 7 days thereafter. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge denies a motion under C.R.C.P. 12(b), the respondent must file an answer within 14 days of the denial.

Rule 242.27. Failure to Answer and Default

(a) Motion for and Entry of Default. If a respondent does not timely file an answer, the Regulation Counsel will move for entry of default. For good cause shown, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may grant the respondent leave to file an untimely answer. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge enters default, the properly pleaded allegations and claims in the complaint will be deemed admitted.

(b) Sanctions Hearing. After default is entered, a sanctions hearing will be held under C.R.C.P. 242.30 to determine the appropriate sanction. If, 14 days after entry of default, neither the respondent nor the Regulation Counsel has requested a sanctions hearing before a Hearing Board, then the sanctions hearing will be held solely before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. At the sanctions hearing, the respondent may appear and present evidence and arguments about the appropriate sanction.

(c) Notice. The respondent and the complaining witness must be given at least 28 days' notice of the sanctions hearing in accordance with C.R.C.P. 242.29(b).

(d) Opinion. After the sanctions hearing, an opinion will be issued under C.R.C.P. 242.31.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Both the charges and the well-pleaded facts are deemed admitted by the entry of a default judgment. People v. Richards, 748 P.2d 341 (Colo. 1987); People v. Young, 201 P.3d 1273 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2008).

The allegations of fact were deemed admitted where attorney did not answer the complaint filed in the case and the hearing board entered a default against him. People v. Davies, 926 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1996); In re Demaray, 8 P.3d 427 (Colo. 1999).

A motion to set aside a default because the respondent failed to file a timely answer under this rule can be analogized to a motion under C.R.C.P. 60 (b)(1). The decision to grant relief is entrusted to the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed on appeal unless there is an abuse of discretion. In re Weisbard, 25 P.3d 24 (Colo. 2001).

In a motion to set aside a default judgment, the movant bears the burden of proving the grounds for relief by clear, strong, and satisfactory proof. In re Weisbard, 25 P.3d 24 (Colo. 2001).

Because an attorney has a duty to cooperate with disciplinary proceedings, default judgments are not subject to being set aside easily. In re Weisbard, 25 P.3d 24 (Colo. 2001).

In setting aside a default judgment on the grounds of excusable neglect, the court must determine: Whether the neglect causing the default was excusable; whether the movant has alleged a meritorious defense; and whether relief from the order would be equitable. In re Weisbard, 25 P.3d 24 (Colo. 2001).

Failure to act because of carelessness and negligence is not excusable neglect. In re Weisbard, 25 P.3d 24 (Colo. 2001).

Dohe, 800 P.2d 71 (Colo. 1990); People v. Ashley, 817 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1991); People v. Rouse, 817 P.2d 967 (Colo. 1991); People v. Barr, 855 P.2d 1386 (Colo. 1993); In the Matter of Scott, 979 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1999).

Rule 242.28. Alleged Inability to Defend Proceeding

During a disciplinary proceeding under C.R.C.P. 242, the respondent, the respondent's counsel, the Regulation Counsel, or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may raise an issue as to the respondent's ability to defend the proceeding. In that event, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may under this section 242.28 issue an interim stay of the disciplinary proceeding in accordance with the disability procedures set forth in C.R.C.P. 243.7. After following those procedures, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may under this section 242.28 place the disciplinary proceeding in abeyance, lift the interim stay, or take other actions in accordance with C.R.C.P. 243.7. An interim stay or abeyance governs all phases of a disciplinary proceeding, including the respondent's response to a request for investigation, investigative interviews of the respondent, and investigative activities that implicate the respondent's rights under C.R.C.P. 45 or other rules.

Rule 242.29. Prehearing Matters

(a) Applicability and Overview. This section 242.29 governs prehearing procedures in disciplinary proceedings under part VII of this rule and in reinstatement and readmission proceedings under C.R.C.P. 242.39. This section also governs prehearing procedures after entry of default under C.R.C.P. 242.27 unless inconsistent with that section. Except as otherwise provided in this rule or by court order, all proceedings governed by this section must be conducted in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(b) Notice. Other than for sanctions hearings under C.R.C.P. 242.27(b) and reinstatement and readmission matters, notice must be given no fewer than 56 days (8 weeks) before a hearing. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge has discretion to establish a different timeframe for notice.

(1) Notice to Respondent. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge must notify the respondent of the place, date, and time of the hearing and of the respondent's rights to be represented by counsel at the respondent's own expense, to cross-examine witnesses, and to present argument and evidence.

(2) Notice to Complaining Witness. The Regulation Counsel must give a complaining witness notice of the place, date, and time of the hearing. The notice must state that the complaining witness has a right to attend the hearing, subject to a sequestration order or protective order.

(c) Subpoenas. Either party to a disciplinary proceeding may request that the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45. Challenges to subpoenas must be directed to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(d) Discovery.

(1) Scope. C.R.C.P. 26 applies where not inconsistent with this rule. C.R.C.P. 16 does not apply to disciplinary proceedings.

(2) Meeting. No later than 14 days after an answer is filed, the parties must confer in person or remotely about the nature and basis of the claims and defenses and discuss the matters to be disclosed.

(3) Disclosures. No later than 28 days after an answer is filed, each party must disclose:

(A) The name and, if known, the address, telephone number, and email address of each individual likely to have discoverable information relevant to the claims and defenses of any party and a brief description of the specific information that each such individual is known or believed to possess;

(B) A listing, together with a copy or a description by category, of the subject matter and location of all documents, data compilations, and tangible things in the possession, custody, or control of the party that are relevant to the claims and defenses of any party; and

(C) A statement as to whether the party plans to use expert witnesses and, if so, the experts' fields of expertise.

(4) Expert Witnesses. The parties must exchange any expert witness reports at least 56 days (8 weeks) before the hearing, or as otherwise ordered by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. A report must contain the elements required by the applicable Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(5) Limitations. Except by order of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for good cause shown, and subject to the proportionality factors in C.R.C.P. 26(b)(1), discovery is limited as follows:

(A) The Regulation Counsel may take one deposition of the respondent (or the petitioner, as applicable) and of two other persons in addition to depositions of experts as provided in C.R.C.P. 26. The respondent (or the petitioner, as applicable) may take three depositions in addition to depositions of experts as provided in C.R.C.P. 26. Depositions are generally governed by C.R.C.P. 26, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, and 45, unless otherwise inconsistent with this rule. A record must be made of depositions.

(B) Written interrogatories, requests for production of documents, and requests for admission are governed by C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2), 33, 34, and 36, unless otherwise inconsistent with this rule.

(C) Interview notes created as part of a preliminary investigation under C.R.C.P. 242.13 are deemed to be prepared in anticipation of litigation or for trial under the work product doctrine.

(6) Modifying the Scope of Discovery. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may modify discovery limitations in accordance with C.R.C.P. 26(b)(2)(F).

(7) Supplementation of Discovery. The parties must supplement disclosures, discovery responses, and expert reports and statements in accordance with C.R.C.P. 26(e).

(e) Dispositive Motions. Proceedings governed by this section 242.29 may be resolved on dispositive motions, such as motions filed under C.R.C.P. 12, 55, or 56.

(f) Order for Independent Medical Examination. When a physical or behavioral health condition or disorder of the respondent becomes an issue in a disciplinary proceeding, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, on motion of the Regulation Counsel or on the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's own initiative, may order the respondent to submit to a physical or mental examination by a suitable examiner. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may order the examination only after finding that reasonable cause exists for the examination and after notice to the respondent. The respondent will be provided the opportunity to respond to the Regulation Counsel's motion or to request reconsideration of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's order, and either party may request a hearing on the limited issue of whether reasonable cause exists for an examination. Any hearing must be held within 14 days of the request. The cost of an examination must initially be paid by the Regulation Counsel if the Regulation Counsel requests the order for the examination, or by the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge if the examination is ordered on the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's own initiative. Either party may request that the Presiding Disciplinary Judge enter a protective order to preserve the confidentiality of results of the examination. If discipline is imposed against a respondent in the proceeding, the respondent may be assessed the cost of the examination as part of the costs ordered under C.R.C.P. 242.31(a)(3).

Rule 242.30. Disciplinary Hearings

(a) Overview. Disciplinary hearings take place before a Hearing Board or before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as provided in this part VII. Disciplinary hearings are public unless subject to a protective order.

(b) Standards Governing Hearings.

(1) Procedure. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, hearings must be conducted in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure and civil trial practice in Colorado.

(2) Evidence. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, hearings must be conducted in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Evidence. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, orders entered by other tribunals are admissible but do not serve as conclusive proof of any disputed fact.

(3) Burden of Proof. Proof as to rule violations, affirmative defenses, and eligibility for reinstatement or readmission must be by clear and convincing evidence. The Regulation Counsel has the burden to prove aggravating factors in disciplinary hearings, while the respondent has the burden to prove mitigating factors.

(4) Privilege Against Self-Incrimination. A respondent cannot be required to testify or to produce records over the respondent's objection if doing so would violate the respondent's constitutional privilege against self-incrimination.

(5) Adverse Inferences.

(A) Invocation of Privilege Against Self-Incrimination. If a respondent refuses to testify or to produce records based on invocation of the privilege against self-incrimination, an adverse inference in favor of the Regulation Counsel may be drawn as to related disciplinary claims.

(B) Failure to Produce Records Subject to Colo. RPC 1.15D. If a respondent does not produce records that are required to be kept under Colo. RPC 1.15D, an adverse inference in favor of the Regulation Counsel may be drawn as to disciplinary claims related to those records.

(c) Complaining Witnesses. The complaining witness in a disciplinary proceeding has the right to attend the hearing, subject to a sequestration order or protective order. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may, in the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's discretion, permit the complaining witness to testify about injury caused by the alleged misconduct.

(d) Record of Hearing. A record must be made of hearings under this section 242.30.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Procedural due process does not include criminal defendant's rights. In every disciplinary proceeding a lawyer is entitled to procedural due process, but those rights do not extend so far as to guarantee the full panoply of rights afforded to an accused in a criminal case. People v. Harfmann, 638 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1981);

People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986); People v. Varallo, 913 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1996); People v. Smith, 937 P.2d 724 (Colo. 1997).

Sixth amendment rights to jury trial and speedy trial do not attach in discipline cases, since by its terms the sixth amendment only applies in criminal cases. People v. Smith, 937 P.2d 724 (Colo. 1997).

Fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination did not operate to preclude respondent from being compelled to attend his own deposition. People v. Smith, 937 P.2d 724 (Colo. 1997).

No due-process violation where presiding officer of the board also served on the hearing panel that reviews the board's action. People v. Fitzgibbons, 909 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1996); People v. Smith, 937 P.2d 724 (Colo. 1997).

Consideration of charges not made in formal complaint against an attorney constitutes a violation of the respondent's rights to procedural due process of law. People v. Emeson, 638 P.2d 293 (Colo. 1981).

Right to call witnesses is a basic tenet of due process and applies to an attorney facing disciplinary charges. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

This right, however, is not absolute. Due process does not vest a respondent in a disciplinary proceeding with a right to call any and all witnesses or elicit any testimony whatever; so long as the respondent is accorded a full and fair opportunity to present a defense to a charge, the tribunal hearing the case is entitled to exercise a sound discretion in limiting the type of evidence and the number of witnesses offered at a hearing. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Standard of proof in disciplinary proceeding. The disciplinary prosecutor has to prove allegations of misconduct by clear, convincing and substantial evidence. People v. Bugg, 635 P.2d 881 (Colo. 1981) (decided under former Rule 249, C.R.C.P.).

Clear and convincing evidence is proof which persuades the trier of fact that the truth contention is highly probable. It is evidence stronger than a preponderance by less than beyond reasonable doubt. People v. Distel, 759 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1988).

Evidence which clearly and unequivocally establishes unlawful conduct of a lawyer should be admissible in a disciplinary proceeding if the official misconduct does not shock the conscience of the court or is not in bad faith. People v. Harfmann, 638 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1981).

Unlike the rule applicable to a criminal proceeding, evidence of professional misconduct obtained by law enforcement officers should be admissible at a disciplinary proceeding unless the officers themselves engaged in outrageous misconduct or acted in bad faith in obtaining the challenged evidence. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

If governmental officials act outrageously or in bad faith in obtaining challenged evidence, due process of law requires the exclusion of such evidence or perhaps the even more drastic remedy of dismissal. There is no "bright line" or "per se" rule in this area of the law and each case must be decided on the basis of its own peculiar facts. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Evidence of attorney's disciplinary record may be properly admitted to the extent allowed under the Colorado rules of evidence in order to refute claim that he regularly attended to client matters. People v. Yaklich, 744 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1987).

Such evidence may be introduced to impeach respondent's credibility. People v. Distel, 759 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1988).

When acting as fact finder in attorney disciplinary proceedings, grievance committee has duty to assess credibility of all evidence before it, both controverted and uncontroverted. People v. Distel, 759 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1988).

Presiding disciplinary judge (PDJ) has exclusive authority under section (b) of this rule to hear respondent's motion for sanctions under C.R.C.P. 11(a). The plain language of the rules, their context, and the design of the attorney regulation system support conclusion that PDJ has exclusive authority to consider and rule on a C.R.C.P. 11(a) motion for sanctions. People v. Trupp, 51 P.3d 985 (Colo. 2002).

Abuse of discretion for presiding disciplinary judge to hold that assistant attorney regulation counsel violated rule when she advanced claim that attorney had violated C.R.P.C. 8.4(c). No evidence that assistant attorney regulation counsel failed to investigate either the facts or the law and she did not misrepresent them in the complaint. People v. Trupp, 92 P.3d 923 (Colo. 2004).

Applied in People ex rel. Goldberg v. Gordon, 199 Colo. 296, 607 P.2d 995 (1980).

Rule 242.31. Findings of Fact and Decision

(a) Opinion of the Hearing Board.

(1) Opinion. After a hearing, the Hearing Board will first determine whether the Regulation Counsel has proved any claims of misconduct. If the Hearing Board finds that the respondent committed misconduct, the Hearing Board will determine the sanction to be imposed. The Hearing Board will issue an opinion setting forth its findings of fact, conclusions of law, and decision.

(2) Disposition of Case. In its opinion, the Hearing Board may:

- (A) Dismiss the complaint if no claims of misconduct have been proved; or
- (B) Impose private admonition, public censure, suspension, or disbarment.

(3) Other Orders. Where the Hearing Board finds that the respondent committed misconduct, the Hearing Board must order the respondent to pay the administrative fee. The Hearing Board may also enter other appropriate orders, including requiring the respondent to comply with conditions of probation, to make restitution, to pay attorney's fees or costs incurred in related protective appointment of counsel proceedings, or to pay all or any part of the reasonable costs of the disciplinary proceeding. If the Hearing Board suspends the respondent from the practice of law for one year or less, the Hearing Board may require that the respondent seek reinstatement, if at all, by petition under C.R.C.P. 242.39 rather than by affidavit under C.R.C.P. 242.38.

(4) Participation of Hearing Board Members. Two members of the Hearing Board are required to issue an opinion. The opinion must be signed. Members of the Hearing Board may append to the opinion a dissent or concurrence.

(5) Timing. The Hearing Board generally will issue its opinion within 56 days (8 weeks) after the hearing.

(6) Effective Date. Disciplinary sanctions take effect upon entry of an order and notice of discipline, which generally enters 35 days after issuance of the opinion, unless applicable rules provide otherwise.

(7) Post-hearing Relief. Within 14 days after the opinion issues, a party may move the Hearing Board for post-hearing relief under C.R.C.P. 59. If the Hearing Board members consent, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may sign the order ruling on post-hearing relief on the members' behalf.

(8) Finality. For purposes of this section 242.31, a Hearing Board's opinion is a final decision, and the time for filing a notice of appeal begins as set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.34. Unless the supreme court stays, vacates, reverses, or modifies a Hearing Board's opinion, the opinion is considered an order of the supreme court.

(b) Opinion of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The provisions governing a Hearing Board's opinion in subsection (a) above also govern an opinion or other final decision entered by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge without a Hearing Board.

COMMENT

Disciplinary sanctions are based on consideration of the American Bar Association Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions. Opinions issued under section 242.31 do not serve as binding precedent but may have persuasive value and provide guidance in future decisions.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

A disciplinary proceeding is an investigation by the court into the conduct of one of its officers and is neither a civil action nor a criminal proceeding, but a proceeding "sui generis", the object of which is not to punish the offender but to protect the court. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819, 82 S. Ct. 830, 7 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1962).

The grievance committee of the supreme court conducts the formal hearing on a complaint and makes a report, which sets forth its findings, conclusions, and recommendations. People v. Van Nocker, 176 Colo. 354, 490 P.2d 697 (1971).

Report and recommendation of grievance committee in disciplinary proceedings against lawyers is advisory, and the supreme court has the duty to review the recommendations and to increase or decrease the sanction imposed by the committee in a proper case. People v. Susman, 196 Colo. 458, 587 P.2d 782 (1978); People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986); People v. Jacobson, 747 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1987); People v. Shipp, 793 P.2d 574 (Colo. 1990); People v. Abelman, 804 P.2d 859 (Colo. 1991); People v. Larsen, 808 P.2d 1265 (Colo. 1991); People v. Gaimara, 810 P.2d 1076 (Colo. 1991); People v. Raubolt, 831 P.2d 462 (Colo. 1992).

While supreme court has always given the recommendation for discipline by the grievance committee great weight, the court reserves the right to exercise our independent judgment in arriving at the proper level of discipline. People v. Brown, 726 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1986); People v. Anderson, 817 P.2d 1035 (Colo. 1991); Colo. Supreme Ct. v. District Court, 850 P.2d 150 (Colo. 1993).

The supreme court's rule is to make an independent decision regarding the appropriate form of discipline, suited to the facts and circumstances of the particular case. People v. Grenemyer, 745 P.2d 1027 (Colo. 1987).

To warrant a finding of misconduct, the charges must be established by substantial, clear, convincing, and satisfactory evidence. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819, 82 S. Ct. 830, 7 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1962).

Proof of all elements of a criminal offense is necessary to establish misconduct on the basis of commission of a criminal act. Where one element of attempted theft was not proven by clear and convincing evidence, the attorney was not subject to sanction under C.R.P.C. 8.4(b). People v. Rosen, 199 P.3d 1241 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2007).

This does not mean that strict rules of evidence apply in disbarment proceedings, although they are frequently invoked to insure a fair hearing. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819, 82 S. Ct. 830, 7 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1962).

Evidence taken at civil action that an attorney has been guilty of conduct justifying disbarment is admissible in disbarment proceeding. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819, 82 S. Ct. 830, 7 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1962).

The finding is not conclusive on the same question. The finding in a civil action that an attorney at law has been guilty of conduct justifying disbarment is not conclusive on the same question when presented for determination in an action for disbarment. Notwithstanding the finding in the civil action, the culpability of the attorney must be established in the disbarment action by a clear preponderance of the evidence. People v. Howard, 147 Colo. 501, 364 P.2d 380 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 819, 82 S. Ct. 830, 7 L. Ed. 2d 784 (1962).

Factual findings of grievance committee are binding on the supreme court, unless the supreme court, after considering the record as a whole, concludes that the findings are clearly erroneous and unsupported by substantial evidence. People v. Garnett, 725 P.2d 1149 (Colo. 1986) (apparently overruling People v. Mattox, 639 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982)); People v. Susman, 747 P.2d 667 (Colo. 1987).

Letter of admonition concerning conduct which occurred after the events giving rise to the complaint in the instant case, but received prior to the time the hearing board held its hearing in the instant case, is part of the prior disciplinary record and may be properly considered. People v. Wolfe, 748 P.2d 789 (Colo. 1988).

Where an attorney fails to comply with condition pertaining to private censure, such failure provides basis for withdrawal of private censure and issuance of public censure. People v. Moore, 681 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1984).

Conduct found to violate disciplinary rules. People v. Razatos, 636 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed, 455 U.S. 930, 102 S. Ct. 1415, 71 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1982).

Hearing panel may modify recommendations of hearing board. People v. Shields, 905 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1995).

Modification by hearing panel of board's recommendation of discipline after it concluded a six-month suspension was insufficient in light of the attorney's prior discipline complied with this rule. People v. Brenner, 852 P.2d 456 (Colo. 1993).

Form of discipline imposed by hearing board for respondent's proven violations not unreasonable. Following ABA standards for imposing lawyer sanctions, violation of duty owed the public, even one involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation, as long as it is short of actual criminality, should generally be sanctioned by reprimand or censure. When dishonesty relates to practice of law, ABA standards recognize appropriateness of probation as a sanction if it will adequately protect the public. In re Rosen, 198 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2008).

The assessment of the entire amount of the complainant's expert witness fees against a respondent is appropriate even where the complainant's expert testified to matters other than the injury the respondent's misconduct caused if such testimony was relevant. In re Cimino, 3 P.3d 398 (Colo. 2000).

Rule 242.32. Lawyer's Required Actions After Disbarment, Disciplinary or Nondisciplinary Suspension, or Resignation

(a) Applicability.

(1) Lawyers Subject. The duties listed in this section 242.32 apply to lawyers when they become subject to:

(A) A final decision assigning a sanction of disbarment or suspension, unless fully stayed, under C.R.C.P. 242.31 or C.R.C.P. 242.21;

(B) An order approving a stipulation to disbarment or suspension, unless fully stayed, under C.R.C.P. 242.19;

(C) An order imposing an interim or a nondisciplinary suspension under C.R.C.P. 242.22 through C.R.C.P. 242.24; or

(D) An order permitting a lawyer to resign under C.R.C.P. 227(A)(8).

(2) Effect of Pending Appeals and Motions for Stay. A lawyer is not normally exempted from the duties listed in this section 242.32 during an appeal of a final decision or order. But the period for the lawyer to comply with the duties listed in this section stops running upon the filing of a motion for post-hearing relief under C.R.C.P. 59 or the filing of a motion for stay pending appeal under C.R.C.P. 242.35. If a motion for post-hearing relief is denied, the lawyer must complete the duties set forth in this section within 14 days of the denial. If a motion for stay is denied, the lawyer must complete the duties within 14 days of the denial unless, during that 14-day period, the lawyer files a motion for stay with the supreme court, in which case the period for the lawyer to comply with the duties listed in this section stops running while the motion is pending. If the supreme court denies the motion for stay, the lawyer must complete the duties within 14 days of the denial.

(b) Winding Up Affairs. After the entry of a final decision or other order listed in subsection (a)(1) above, the lawyer may not accept any new case, legal matter, or offer of employment as a lawyer. During any period between the entry of such a decision or order and the date the sanction takes effect, the lawyer may wind up or conclude any matters that were pending as of the decision's or order's entry, provided that the lawyer complies with Colo. RPC 1.4. On or before the date the sanction takes effect, the lawyer must surrender to each client any documents and property to which the client is entitled.

(c) Notice to Current Clients.

(1) A lawyer subject to this section 242.32 must, no later than 14 days after entry of the final decision or order identified in subsection (a)(1) above, send to each client whom the lawyer represents in a matter pending as of the entry of the final decision or order the following:

(A) A copy of the final decision or order identified in subsection (a)(1) above;

(B) Notice of the sanction imposed and the lawyer's inability to continue the representation after the date the sanction takes effect; and

(C) Notice of the client's need to seek any desired legal services from another lawyer and any right to seek appointment of counsel.

(2) The lawyer must maintain records showing that the lawyer sent the notices required under subsection (c)(1) above and written confirmation that each client received notice. If the lawyer is unable to obtain written confirmation that a client received notice, the lawyer must maintain proof that the lawyer sent notice by certified mail to the client's last-known mailing address.

(d) Additional Duties in Litigation Matters.

(1) A lawyer subject to this section 242.32 who represents a client before a tribunal in a pending matter, where there is no active co-counsel and where no substitution of counsel has been filed, must further state in the notice provided under subsection (c) above the following:

(A) That the client bears the responsibility to keep the tribunal and the parties informed where service may be effected;

(B) The possible adverse consequences if the client refuses to comply with all rules and orders of the tribunal;

(C) Any pending deadlines or court dates; and

(D) If the client is not a natural person, that it must be represented by counsel in any court proceeding unless it is a closely held entity and first complies with C.R.S. section 13-1-127.

(2) A lawyer subject to this section 242.32 who represents a client before a tribunal in a pending matter must, no later than 14 days after sending a notice under subsection (1) above, notify in writing any opposing counsel of:

(A) The final decision or order identified in subsection (a)(1), including any sanction imposed;

(B) The lawyer's inability to continue the representation after the date the sanction takes effect; and

(C) Where there is no active co-counsel and where no substitution of counsel has been filed, the client's address and, if known, the client's telephone number and email address.

(3) If substitute counsel does not enter an appearance before the date the sanction takes effect, the lawyer must notify the tribunal in which the proceeding is pending of the lawyer's withdrawal.

(e) Notification of Other Jurisdictions. A lawyer subject to this section 242.32 must, no later than 14 days after entry of the final decision or order identified in subsection (a)(1) above, notify every other jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted, certified, or otherwise authorized to practice law of the final decision or order in question and provide to the other jurisdiction a copy thereof.

(f) Affidavit Filed With the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. Unless otherwise ordered, within 14 days after the date the sanction takes effect the lawyer must file an affidavit with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge and provide a copy to the Regulation Counsel. The lawyer must file an affidavit even if the lawyer does not have an active practice. The affidavit must list all pending matters in which the lawyer serves as counsel, list all clients notified under subsection (c) above, attach a copy of each such notice, and:

(1) Attest whether the lawyer is in full compliance with the final decision or order in question and this section 242.32;

(2) Attest whether the lawyer has notified every other jurisdiction in which the lawyer is admitted, certified, or otherwise authorized to practice law of the final decision or order in question; and

(3) In the case only of lawyers subject to an order of disbarment or an order permitting a lawyer to resign under C.R.C.P. 227(A)(8), provide the lawyer's mailing address and any email address to which communications may be sent.

(g) Registration Statements and Fees During Suspension. Lawyers subject to a final decision imposing a sanction of suspension unless fully stayed, an order approving a stipulation to suspension unless fully stayed, or an order imposing an interim or a nondisciplinary suspension under C.R.C.P. 242.22 through C.R.C.P. 242.24 must file a registration statement under C.R.C.P. 227 for five years after the date the sanction takes effect, or until the lawyer is reinstated. The statement must provide the lawyer's mailing address and any email address to which communications may be sent. But the lawyer need not pay the annual registration fee unless and until the lawyer is reinstated.

(h) Duty to Maintain Records. A lawyer subject to this section 242.32 must maintain records of the lawyer's compliance with this section.

(i) Noncompliance. Noncompliance with this section 242.32 may be grounds for additional discipline or denial of reinstatement or readmission.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

It is not necessary that an attorney give notice pursuant to section (b) if he has not practiced law and has no clients. People v. Culpepper, 645 P.2d 5 (Colo. 1982).

Technical violations of the disciplinary orders and rules will not always preclude reinstatement, rather the most important consideration is the nature of the violations. In re Price, 18 P.3d 185 (Colo. 2001); People v. Dirkmaat, 470 P.3d 811 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016).

But denial of reinstatement is justified where attorney's failure to provide required notice of suspension to each client has potential to cause harm and such failure adversely affects the protections afforded the public by the disciplinary orders and rules. In re Price, 18 P.3d 185 (Colo. 2001).

Continuing to practice while suspended is conduct justifying disbarment. People v. James, 731 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1987).

Total disregard of obligation to protect a client's rights and interests over an extended period of time in conjunction with the violation of a number of disciplinary rules, the continuation of the practice of law after suspension, and an extended prior record of discipline requires most severe sanction of disbarment. People v. O'Leary, 783 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1989).

Suspension of one year and one day imposed for failing to abide by notification procedures of this section in conjunction with violation of other disciplinary rules where attorney who was suspended from practice of law for failure to pay registration fee and subsequently failed to notify client in pending bankruptcy matter, failed to withdraw from bankruptcy matter before trial date, failed to take action to secure substitute counsel, move for continuance, or otherwise protect his client's interest, and who failed to inform court or opposing counsel. People v. Smith, 828 P.2d 249 (Colo. 1992).

Attorney's continued practice of law while under an order of suspension, with no efforts to wind up the legal practice, and the failure to take action to protect the legal interests of the attorney's clients warrants disbarment. People v. Wilson, 832 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1992).

An attorney who is suspended for failure to comply with CLE requirements is barred from practicing law under this rule and rule 5.5 of the Colorado rules of professional conduct, the same as if the attorney had been suspended following a disciplinary proceeding. Continuing to practice law after such an administrative suspension warranted an additional 18-month suspension. People v. Johnson, 946 P.2d 469 (Colo. 1997).

Winding up affairs unnecessary. Where an attorney is presently suspended from the practice of law, it is not necessary that he be granted time to wind up his legal affairs. Disbarment is therefore effective on the date that the opinion was announced. People v. Susman, 787 P.2d 1119 (Colo. 1990).

Accepting a retainer while suspended from the practice of law is sufficient, in conjunction with the violation of other disciplinary rules, to justify further suspension. People v. Redman, 819 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1991).

A lawyer's continued practice of law while under an order of suspension, with no efforts to wind up the legal practice, and failure to take action to protect the legal interests of the lawyer's clients, warrants disbarment. People v. Wilson, 832 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1992).

Suspension of one year and one day appropriate for admitted solicitation of sexual favors when extensive mitigating factors were present. The instances of misconduct occurred over a short period of time during which respondent was undergoing emotional and personal problems, respondent voluntarily underwent psychological counseling, the psychologist indicated in writing that a reoccurrence of the offenses was seen as unlikely, and respondent had already received the sanction of a criminal conviction as a result of pleading guilty to harassment. Respondent was also the subject of several newspaper articles that reported his misconduct. People v. Crossman, 850 P.2d 708 (Colo. 1993).

An attorney's appearance as counsel of record in numerous court proceedings following an order of suspension warrants further suspension for one year and one day. People v. Kargol, 854 P.2d 1267 (Colo. 1993).

Suspension for one year and one day is warranted where attorney mishandled client funds but where the court found several factors in mitigation such as the absence of a prior record, a reputation for honesty, and a demonstration of remorse. People v. Galindo, 884 P.2d 1109 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension for one year and one day appropriate when attorney terminated representation without reasonable notice, failed to provide client with accounting and refund, and failed to meet continuing education requirements. Restitution required as condition of reinstatement. People v. Rivers, 933 P.2d 6 (Colo. 1997).

Suspension for three years is warranted where attorney, in conjunction with violating numerous rules of professional conduct, violated this rule by failing to notify client by certified mail of order of suspension and attorney's inability to represent client. People v. Hohertz, 926 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1996).

Disbarment appropriate when attorney took no steps to protect the legal interests of his clients when he was placed under a suspension order. Attorney also had an extensive history of similar discipline. People v. Dolan, 873 P.2d 766 (Colo. 1994).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other violations is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Ebbert, 925 P.2d 274 (Colo. 1996); People v. Mannix, 936 P.2d 1285 (Colo. 1997); People v. Fager, 938 P.2d 138 (Colo. 1997); People v. Swan, 938 P.2d 1164 (Colo. 1997); People v. Holmes, 955 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1998); People v. Zimmermann, 960 P.2d 85 (Colo. 1998); People v. Alexander, 281 P.3d 496 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2012).

An attorney's continued practice of law while under suspension is negligent where there is evidence that the attorney incorrectly believed that he had been reinstated and where there is no evidence that misconduct caused any actual harm. People v. Dieters, 883 P.2d 1050 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension for 90 days is warranted for attorney's continued practice of law during a period of suspension in view of prior record and substantial experience in practice of law even if attorney incorrectly believed that he had been reinstated. People v. Dieters, 883 P.2d 1050 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension for 18 months is warranted where attorney failed to notify opposing counsel and trial court of suspension and where the attorney had extensive record of previous discipline. People v. Watson, 883 P.2d 1053 (Colo. 1994).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other violations is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Bernal, 452 P.3d 270 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2019).

Public censure is warranted where, although the attorney failed to notify opposing counsel and appeared in one hearing after imposition of the suspension, the attorney's involvement was minimal, it occurred only upon request by the client, it did not result in any harm to the client, and the attorney did not receive any benefit from the appearance. People v. Pittam, 917 P.2d 710 (Colo. 1996).

Public censure warranted where, although respondent did not notify his clients and opposing counsel of his suspension, he did not notify the court early in proceedings and did not go forward with court proceedings while on suspension and no actual harm was demonstrated to any of his clients. People v. Dover, 944 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule is sufficient to warrant public censure. People v. Williams, 936 P.2d 1289 (Colo. 1997).

Orders affecting disbarment or suspension are effective 30 days after the entry of the order or at such other time as the court may order. People v. Goldstein, 887 P.2d 634 (Colo. 1994).

Applied in People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Harthun, 195 Colo. 38, 581 P.2d 716 (1978); People v. Pacheco, 198 Colo. 455, 608 P.2d 333 (1979); People v. Gifford, 199 Colo. 205, 610 P.2d 485 (1980); People v. Dixon, 621 P.2d 322 (Colo. 1981); People v. Southern, 638 P.2d 787 (Colo. 1982); People v. Dwyer, 652 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982); People v. Roehl, 655 P.2d 1381 (Colo. 1983).

Part VIII. Appeals to Supreme Court

Rule 242.33. Overview of Appeals

(a) Appellate Jurisdiction. A party may seek appellate review by the supreme court of any final decision as defined in C.R.C.P. 241.

(b) Governing Provisions. Except as otherwise provided in this part VIII, and to the extent practicable, appeals will be conducted in accordance with the general provisions in C.A.R. 25 (filing and service), 26 (computation and extension of time), 27 (motions), 28 (briefs), 28.1 (briefs in cases involving cross-appeals), 29 (brief of an amicus curiae), 30 (e-filing), 31 (serving and filing briefs), 32 (form of briefs and appellate documents), 34 (oral argument), 36 (entry and service of judgment), 38 (sanctions), 39 (costs), and 42 (voluntary dismissal).

(c) Standard of Review. The supreme court reviews conclusions of law de novo and findings of fact for clear error. The supreme court reviews a sanction to determine whether it bears no relation to the misconduct, is manifestly excessive or insufficient in relation to the needs of the public, or is otherwise unreasonable.

(d) Regulation Counsel. Appeals on behalf of the People of the State of Colorado under this part VIII are prosecuted or defended, as applicable, by the Regulation Counsel.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Recommendation of grievance committee's hearing panel is advisory only, and it is incumbent upon the supreme court to exercise its independent judgment, taking into consideration the facts, circumstances, and background of the lawyer, to increase or decrease the recommended sanction. People v. Mattox, 639 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982).

While the supreme court has always given the recommendation for discipline by the grievance committee great weight, the court reserves the right to exercise our independent judgment in arriving at the proper level of discipline. People v. Brown, 726 P.2d 638 (Colo. 1986).

Under this rule, the supreme court may accept the recommendation of the grievance committee or may impose such other discipline as may be proper under the circumstances. People v. Radinsky, 176 Colo. 357, 490 P.2d 951 (1971).

The selection of discipline to be imposed is ultimately a decision to be made by the supreme court after considering the appropriate factors and the purposes to be served by disciplinary sanctions. People v. Vigil, 779 P.2d 372 (Colo. 1989).

As part of its constitutional and inherent powers, the supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction over lawyers, and possesses the plenary authority to regulate and supervise the practice of law in Colorado. In re Caldwell, 50 P.3d 897 (Colo. 2002); Matter of Greene, 2013 CO 29, 302 P.3d 690.

This rule does not specifically authorize the appellate review of an order granting summary judgment, but that authority is reserved in C.R.C.P. 251.1(d). Matter of Greene, 2013 CO 29, 302 P.3d 690.

The primary purpose of lawyer regulation proceedings is to protect the public, not to punish the offending lawyer. In re Caldwell, 50 P.3d 897 (Colo. 2002).

Factual findings of grievance committee are binding on the supreme court, unless the supreme court, after considering the record as a whole, concludes that the findings are clearly erroneous and unsupported by substantial evidence. People v. Garnett, 725 P.2d 1149 (Colo. 1986) (apparently overruling People v. Mattox, 639 P.2d 397 (Colo. 1982)).

Supreme court is bound by the factual findings of the hearing board unless those findings are clearly erroneous and not supported by substantial evidence in the record. Court reviews questions of law de novo as in any appeal. In re Quiat, 979 P.2d 1029 (Colo. 1999); In re Rosen, 198 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2008).

Where hearing board determined that an allegation of the complaint was not proven by clear and convincing evidence because it believed respondent's explanation of his actions rather than attorney regulation counsel's allegations, supreme court could not conclude, as a matter of law, that no reasonable fact finder could have made that determination. In re Rosen, 198 P.3d 116 (Colo. 2008).

An attorney may file exceptions to the findings of the grievance committee. People v. Wilson, 176 Colo. 389, 490 P.2d 954 (1971).

Exceptions to the report of the grievance committee will be ordered stricken where the attorney fails to support them by a reporter's transcript or such portions thereof as would be necessary to enable the court to pass upon the exceptions. People v. Van Nocker, 176 Colo. 354, 490 P.2d 697 (1971).

If an attorney files exceptions, he should also provide a reporter's transcript to enable the supreme court to pass on the exceptions. People v. Murphy, 174 Colo. 182, 483 P.2d 224 (1971).

Respondent's exceptions stricken for failure to designate record as required by subsection (b)(4) of this rule. People v. Lutz, 897 P.2d 807 (Colo. 1995).

There is no evaluation of evidence on review. In determining whether the board's findings are supported by substantial evidence, it is not within the province of the supreme court to measure the weight of the evidence or to resolve the credibility of witnesses. People v. Distel, 759 P.2d 654 (Colo. 1988).

Rule 242.34. Initiation of Appeal

(a) Overview. To initiate an appeal, a party must timely file a notice of appeal with the supreme court and serve an advisory copy on the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. After that filing, the supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction over the appeal except as otherwise provided in this rule.

(b) Contents of Notice of Appeal. Except as otherwise provided in this part VIII, the notice of appeal and any notice of cross-appeal should conform to the requirements set forth in C.A.R. 3(d). A notice of cross-appeal also must identify the party initiating the cross-appeal and all cross-appellees. Content of the notice of appeal is not jurisdictional.

(c) Timing.

(1) Validity of Appeal. An appellant's failure to timely file a notice of appeal affects the appeal's validity. An appellant's failure to timely take any other step does not affect the appeal's validity, though it is a basis for other action by the supreme court, including dismissing the appeal.

(2) Initial Deadline. The notice of appeal must be filed with the supreme court within 21 days of entry of the final decision from which the party appeals. If a timely notice of appeal is filed, the appellee may file a notice of cross-appeal within 14 days of the filing of the initial notice of appeal, or within the time otherwise provided in this subsection (c), whichever period last expires.

(3) Motions Under C.R.C.P. 59.

(A) The Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, continues to have jurisdiction to decide a motion under C.R.C.P. 59 even if a notice of appeal has been filed, provided the C.R.C.P. 59 motion is timely filed under C.R.C.P. 59(a) and determined within 49 days (7 weeks) of the filing. During that time, all proceedings in the supreme court are stayed, and the effect of the final decision is also stayed.

(B) The running of the time for filing a notice of appeal is terminated as to both parties by a timely motion filed by either party under C.R.C.P. 59.

(C) The full time for filing a notice of appeal begins to run and is to be computed from the entry of any of the following orders made on a timely motion:

(i) Granting or denying a motion under C.R.C.P. 59 to amend or make additional findings of fact, whether or not an alteration of the final decision would be required if the motion were granted;

(ii) Granting or denying a motion under C.R.C.P. 59 to alter or amend the final decision;

(iii) Denying a motion for a new hearing under C.R.C.P. 59; or

(iv) Expiration of an extension of time granted by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge to file a motion for post-hearing relief under C.R.C.P. 59, when no motion is filed.

(4) Extensions. On a showing of excusable neglect, the supreme court may extend a party's time for filing a notice of appeal for a period not to exceed 28 days from the expiration of the time otherwise provided in this subsection (c). Such an extension may be granted before or after the time otherwise provided in this subsection (c) has expired. But if a request for an extension is made after the prescribed time has expired, it must be made by motion with such notice as the supreme court deems appropriate.

(d) Filing and Docketing.

(1) Fee. The appellant must pay the clerk of the supreme court the applicable docket fee for civil proceedings when filing the notice of appeal or when filing any documents with the supreme court, if those documents are filed before the notice of appeal. The applicable docket fee for an appellee in civil proceedings must be paid on entry of appearance for the appellee.

(2) Docketing. The clerk of the supreme court will docket the appeal on receiving the appellant's docket fee or, if the appellant is authorized to proceed in forma pauperis, at the written request of that party. The matter will be docketed as:

SUPREME COURT, STATE OF COLORADO

Case No.

ORIGINAL PROCEEDING IN DISCIPLINE [OR DISABILITY]

IN THE MATTER OF [the name of the LAWYER]

(e) Leave to Proceed In Forma Pauperis. A party may file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a motion for leave to proceed on appeal in forma pauperis. The motion must be accompanied by an affidavit showing the party's inability to pay costs. If the motion is granted, the party may proceed without prepaying fees or costs or giving security. The party may file briefs and other papers in typewritten form, and may request that the appeal be heard on the original record without the necessity of reproducing parts thereof in any form.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 242.35. Stay Pending Appeal

(a) Procedure. A party may move the Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, to stay the operation of a final decision pending appeal. The entity that issued the final decision is the entity with authority to decide the motion. The motion must be filed on or before the date on which the notice of appeal is due under C.R.C.P. 242.34.

(b) Applicability. It is within the discretion of the Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, to grant a motion for stay pending appeal. The Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, must make findings of fact and determine whether to grant the stay, with or without conditions. In making the findings and determination, the Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, will consider the parties' submissions, the final decision's findings of fact, and evidence adduced at any applicable hearing. A respondent subject to disbarment is presumed ineligible for a stay. A respondent who is required to petition for reinstatement under C.R.C.P. 242.39 will not be granted a stay unless the Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, finds that the respondent's practice of law during the appeal is unlikely to harm the public and that the granting of a stay would not undermine public confidence in the legal system. A respondent who is not required to petition for reinstatement under C.R.C.P. 242.39 will be granted a stay unless the Regulation Counsel establishes that the respondent's practice of law during the appeal would pose an unreasonable risk of harm to the public.

(c) Seeking Relief from Supreme Court. Either party may move the supreme court for relief from an order entered under subsection (b) above within 14 days thereof. The motion must state the reasons for the relief requested and the facts relied upon, and must be accompanied by a copy of the final decision and the order entered under subsection (b). The supreme court will review the motion under an abuse of discretion standard.

(d) Jurisdiction Over Motion to Lift Stay. Although the supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction over an appeal, the Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, retains jurisdiction to issue, modify, or lift a stay pending appeal that was issued under subsection (b) above. The Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, may lift a stay if conditions attached to the stay no longer protect the public or if the respondent has failed to comply with the conditions imposed. If the Hearing Board that issued the final decision subject to appeal is unavailable, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may decide the matter.

Rule 242.36. Record on Appeal

(a) Composition of the Record on Appeal. The record on appeal in all cases must consist of:

(1) All documents filed with and orders entered by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or Hearing Board as of the filing of a notice of appeal or any amended notice of appeal; and

(A) Any transcripts designated by a party as set forth in subsection (d) below;

(B) Any tendered, non-admitted exhibits designated by a party; and

(C) In limited circumstances, such as when the transcript is unavailable, a statement of the evidence or proceedings certified by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge as set forth in subsection (e) below.

(2) If a timely motion under C.R.C.P. 59 has been filed, the record must also include that motion, any response, and any resulting order.

(b) Format of the Record on Appeal.

(1) Electronic Record. If all or part of the record is maintained in electronic format by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the clerk is authorized to transmit the record electronically in accordance with procedures established by the supreme court.

(2) Paper Record. If all or part of the record is transmitted in paper format, the original papers in the record must be submitted. The paper-filed portion of the record must be properly paginated and fully indexed and must be prepared and bound in accordance with procedures established by the supreme court.

(3) Certification by Clerk. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will certify the records of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Hearing Board, as applicable.

(c) Transmission.

(1) Complete Record. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must transmit the record to the clerk of the supreme court when the record is complete. If the record will include any transcripts, the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will not transmit the record until transcripts are available.

(2) Time. The record on appeal must be transmitted to the supreme court within 63 days (9 weeks) after the date of filing of the notice of appeal unless the time is shortened or extended by order of the supreme court.

(A) For good cause shown, the supreme court may extend the time for transmitting the record. A request for extension must be made by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge within the time originally prescribed or as previously extended.

(B) A request for an extension based on a court reporter's inability to complete the transcript must be supported by an affidavit of the reporter specifying why the transcript has not yet been prepared and the date by which the transcript will be completed. If the reason stated in the affidavit for the reporter's inability to complete the record is the failure of the designating party to adequately arrange for payment of the transcripts, the designating party must file a response to the affidavit with the supreme court within 7 days.

(C) The supreme court may direct the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge to expedite the preparation and transmittal of the record on appeal and may, on motion or on its own initiative, take other appropriate action regarding preparation and completion of the record.

(3) Oversized Exhibits. Documents of unusual bulk or weight and physical exhibits will not be transmitted by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge unless directed to do so by the supreme court.

(4) Sexually Exploitative Material. Transmission of sexually exploitative material will be in accordance with Chief Justice Directive 16-03.

(d) Designation of Transcripts.

(1) Timing. If the appellant intends to include hearing transcripts in the record on appeal, the appellant must file a designation of transcripts with the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge and an advisory copy with the supreme court within 7 days of the date of filing the appellant's notice of appeal.

(2) Form. Form 8 must be used to file a designation of transcripts. A party designating transcripts must comply with the policies adopted by the supreme court and the Presiding Disciplinary Judge for designating transcripts.

(3) Contents Designated. The appellant must include in the record transcripts of all proceedings necessary for considering and deciding the issues on appeal. Unless the entire transcript is to be included, the appellant must include in the designation of transcript a description of the part of the transcript that the appellant intends to include in the record and a statement of the issues to be presented on appeal. The appellee may, within 14 days after filing the notice of appeal, file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, and provide an advisory copy to the supreme court, its own designation of transcripts if the appellee deems additional transcripts or parts thereof necessary.

(e) Statement of the Evidence or Proceedings. If the parties agree, or in cases where a transcript of the evidence or proceedings at a hearing is unavailable, the parties may file with the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a statement of the evidence or proceedings in lieu of designating transcripts, and the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must certify a statement of the evidence or proceedings in lieu of a transcript.

(f) Supplementing the Record on Appeal.

(1) Before Record is Transmitted. If any material part is omitted or missing from the record prepared by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or is misstated therein by error or accident before the record is transmitted to the supreme court, the parties may stipulate or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may direct that the omission or misstatement be corrected.

(2) After Record is Transmitted. If any material part is omitted or missing from the record prepared by the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge by error or accident or is misstated therein after the record is transmitted to the supreme court, the supreme court, on motion or on its own initiative, may order that a supplemental record be certified and transmitted. Form 9 must be used by a party requesting to supplement the record after the record has been filed in the supreme court.

(g) Settling the Record on Appeal.

(1) If any difference arises as to whether the record truly discloses what occurred before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Hearing Board, as applicable, or a portion of the record is not in the possession of the clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, the difference must be submitted to and settled by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The party moving to settle the record must file a motion with the supreme court to stay the appellate proceedings while the Presiding Disciplinary Judge considers the motion to settle the record.

(2) All other questions as to the form and content of the record must be presented to the supreme court.

(h) Filing of the Record. After timely receiving the record, the clerk of the supreme court will file the record. The clerk must immediately notify all parties of the record's filing date.

ANNOTATION

This rule does not constitute a denial of due process even though the final arbiters of fact, the justices of the Colorado supreme court, do not personally hear the testimony of the accused attorney or other witnesses. Razatos v. Colo. Supreme Court, 549 F. Supp. 798 (D. Colo.), appeal dismissed, 455 U.S. 930 (1982) (decided under former rule 252).

Rule 242.37.5. Proceedings Requiring a Special Tribunal

(a) When Required. A special tribunal shall replace the Supreme Court in the following circumstances in disciplinary proceedings under C.R.C.P. 242 and disability proceedings governed by part VIII of C.R.C.P. 242: (1) When the proceeding involves a complaint against a current or former Supreme Court justice; (2) When a current or former Supreme Court justice is a complainant or material witness in the proceeding; (3) When a staff member to a current Supreme Court justice is a complainant or material witness in the proceeding; (4) When a family member of a current Supreme Court justice is a complainant or material witness in the proceeding; (5) When any other circumstances exist due to which more than two Supreme Court justices have recused themselves from the proceeding.

(b) How Comprised. In any proceeding in which any of the circumstances described in part (a) of this rule are present, the entire Supreme Court shall recuse itself, and a special tribunal composed of seven Colorado Court of Appeals judges shall replace the Supreme Court for the limited purpose of exercising any authority conferred by law to the Supreme Court as to the proceeding giving rise to recusal. The State Court Administrator, or the Administrator's designee, shall randomly select members of the tribunal from among all active, non-senior-status Court of Appeals judges who are not the subject of a current disciplinary investigation or proceeding pending before the Commission on Judicial Discipline; have not received a disciplinary sanction from the Commission or Supreme Court; and are not otherwise required by law, court rule, or judicial canon to recuse themselves from the tribunal. The random selection of tribunal members is a purely administrative function.

Part IX. Reinstatement and Readmission

Rule 242.38. Reinstatement on Affidavit

(a) Overview. A lawyer who has been suspended from the practice of law for a period of one year or less may be reinstated by order of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, without following the procedures set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.39, unless the lawyer's order of suspension provides otherwise. A suspension does not terminate until the Presiding Disciplinary Judge enters an order of reinstatement.

(b) Procedure.

(1) Motion and Affidavit by Respondent. To seek reinstatement, a respondent must, no earlier than 28 days before the period of suspension is set to terminate, file a motion and an affidavit with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge under the case number used in the underlying disciplinary proceeding. The affidavit must state whether and how the respondent has fully complied with the order of suspension and with all applicable provisions of Chapter 20, including the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct, during the period of suspension. The respondent must submit a copy of the motion and affidavit to the Regulation Counsel.

(2) Procedure Where Regulation Counsel Does Not Oppose Reinstatement. If the Regulation Counsel does not oppose the respondent's reinstatement, the Regulation Counsel must so notify the Presiding Disciplinary Judge within 14 days after the respondent files the motion and affidavit. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will then reinstate the respondent.

(3) Procedure Where Regulation Counsel Opposes Reinstatement.

(A) Requested Relief. If the Regulation Counsel has reason to believe that the respondent failed to comply with the order of suspension or an applicable provision of Chapter 20, the Regulation Counsel may oppose reinstatement by filing a response with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge within 14 days after the respondent files the motion and affidavit, requesting either:

(i) That the respondent's motion for reinstatement be denied with leave to refile on a showing that the respondent has cured the noncompliance; or

(ii) That the respondent's current order of suspension be continued pending a final decision in a new disciplinary proceeding.

(B) Reply. If the respondent opposes the requested relief, the respondent must file a reply within 7 days.

(C) Decision by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. As soon as practicable after considering the parties' filings, and after holding any hearing the Presiding Disciplinary Judge deems necessary, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will issue a decision, determining whether the Regulation Counsel has justified the relief requested.

(i) Denial with Leave to Refile. If the Regulation Counsel shows by a preponderance of the evidence that during the period of suspension the respondent failed to comply with the order of suspension or with any applicable provisions of Chapter 20, including the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct, it is within the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's discretion to deny the respondent's motion with leave to refile on a showing that the respondent has cured the noncompliance. The respondent may file a renewed motion and affidavit under subsection (b)(1) above.

(ii) Continuation of Suspension.

(a) If the Regulation Counsel shows by a preponderance of the evidence that during the period of suspension the respondent failed to comply with the order of suspension or with any applicable provisions of Chapter 20, including the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may continue the respondent's current order of suspension pending a final decision in a new disciplinary proceeding brought to address that conduct if:

- (1) The respondent is causing or has caused substantial public or private harm; and
 - (2) The respondent has, during the period of suspension:
 - (A) Been convicted of a serious crime based on conduct that occurred during the period of suspension, regardless of whether the respondent is appealing the conviction;
 - (B) Knowingly converted property or funds;
 - (C) Engaged in conduct that poses a substantial threat to the administration of justice;
- or
- (D) Practiced law in violation of the order of suspension.
 - (b) If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge continues the respondent's current order of suspension, the respondent may request an accelerated disposition of the new disciplinary proceeding. The proceeding then must proceed without appreciable delay.
 - (c) Independent Charges. Regardless of the relief requested or granted under this rule, the Regulation Counsel may file independent disciplinary charges based on conduct that occurred during the period of the respondent's suspension.
 - (d) Failure to Timely File. A respondent who files an untimely motion and affidavit but whose suspension has been in effect for one year or less may be reinstated under the procedures outlined in subsection (b) above. A respondent who remains suspended for more than one year as a result of an untimely filing or a denial of reinstatement under subsection (b)(3)(C) above must seek reinstatement, if at all, under C.R.C.P. 242.39, unless on a showing of good cause the Presiding Disciplinary Judge grants a motion for extension of time to seek reinstatement under this section 242.38.
 - (e) Running of Time. If a respondent files a motion and affidavit under this section 242.38 within one year of the effective date of the respondent's suspension, the one-year period addressed in this section stops running until the Presiding Disciplinary Judge rules on the motion under subsection (b)(3)(C) above.

Rule 242.39. Petition for Readmission or Reinstatement After Discipline

- (a) Overview.
 - (1) Readmission After Disbarment. A lawyer who has been disbarred may be eligible for readmission under this section 242.39 no less than eight years after the disbarment takes effect. To petition for readmission, the lawyer must have satisfied the supreme court's bar examination and MPRE requirements within the preceding eighteen months.
 - (2) Reinstatement After Suspension. Except as otherwise provided in C.R.C.P. 242.38, a lawyer must seek reinstatement under this section 242.39 if the lawyer was suspended in a disciplinary proceeding for more than one year or if the Hearing Board or Presiding Disciplinary Judge otherwise required that the lawyer seek reinstatement by petition under this section.
- (b) Petition for Readmission or Reinstatement.
 - (1) Timing. A lawyer may not file a petition under this section 242.39 earlier than 91 days (13 weeks) before, as applicable, (A) the period of suspension is set to terminate or (B) eight years from the effective date of the lawyer's disbarment. A lawyer may not be reinstated or readmitted until the full disciplinary period has been served.
 - (2) Filing. A lawyer must file a verified petition with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge and provide a copy to the Regulation Counsel. The lawyer will be designated as the petitioner and the Regulation Counsel as the respondent. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will assign the proceeding a new case number.
 - (3) Contents. A petition must set forth:
 - (A) The date the order of discipline was entered and the effective date of the discipline;
 - (B) The date on which the petitioner filed any prior petitions for readmission or reinstatement and the disposition of the prior petitions;

(C) If applicable, a statement showing the amount and source of funds the petitioner used to pay restitution to any persons or to the Colorado Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection, and a statement showing the amount and source of funds the petitioner used to pay attorney's fees or costs related to protective appointment of counsel proceedings; and

(D) The evidence the petitioner intends to rely on to show that the petitioner meets the requirements set forth in subsection (d)(2) below.

(4) Lawyer Suspended for Five Years or Longer. Regardless of the length of the disciplinary suspension originally imposed, a lawyer who has remained suspended for five years or longer may not file a petition under this section 242.39 unless the lawyer has satisfied the supreme court's bar examination and MPRE requirements within the preceding eighteen months. But if a lawyer files a petition for reinstatement within five years of the effective date of the lawyer's suspension, the five-year period addressed in this subsection stops running until a final decision is issued on the petition and any appeal has been decided.

(5) Reinstatement or Readmission from Reciprocal Discipline. A lawyer subject to reciprocal discipline who wishes to seek reinstatement or readmission in Colorado must comply with the requirements of C.R.C.P. 242.21(c).

(c) Answer. After receiving a petition for reinstatement or readmission, the Regulation Counsel will conduct an investigation. The petitioner must cooperate in the investigation. The Regulation Counsel must file an answer to the petition within 21 days after receiving the petition. The answer must state any grounds for opposing the petition.

(d) Reinstatement and Readmission Proceedings.

(1) Procedures. Reinstatement and readmission proceedings are conducted in accordance with the procedures set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.29, and petitions are considered by a Hearing Board in accordance with the procedures set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.30.

(2) Requirements. The petitioner must prove by clear and convincing evidence that the petitioner:

(A) Has been rehabilitated, as measured by considerations including the circumstances and seriousness of the original misconduct, conduct since being disbarred or suspended, remorse and acceptance of responsibility, how much time has elapsed, restitution for any financial injury, and evidence that the petitioner has changed in ways that reduce the likelihood of future misconduct;

(B) Has complied with all applicable disciplinary orders and with all provisions of Chapter 20, including the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct; and

(C) Is fit to practice law, as measured by the petitioner's satisfaction of the following eligibility requirements for the practice of law, as applicable:

(i) Honesty and candor with clients, lawyers, courts, regulatory authorities, and others;

(ii) The ability to reason logically, recall complex factual information, and accurately analyze legal problems;

(iii) The ability to use a high degree of organization and clarity in communicating with clients, lawyers, judicial officers, and others;

(iv) The ability to use good judgment on behalf of clients and in conducting professional business;

(v) The ability to act with respect for and in accordance with the law;

(vi) The ability to exhibit regard for the rights and welfare of others;

(vii) The ability to comply with the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct; state, local, and federal laws; regulations, statutes, and rules; and orders of tribunals;

(viii) The ability to act diligently and reliably in fulfilling obligations to clients, lawyers, courts, and others;

(ix) The ability to be honest and use good judgment in personal financial dealings and on behalf of clients and others; and

(x) The ability to comply with deadlines and time constraints.

(e) Hearing Board Opinion.

(1) Opinion. After a hearing, the Hearing Board will determine whether to grant or deny the petition for reinstatement or readmission. The Hearing Board will issue an opinion setting forth its findings of fact and decision.

(2) Participation of Hearing Board Members. Two members of the Hearing Board are required to issue an opinion. The opinion must be signed. Members of the Hearing Board may append to the opinion a dissent or concurrence.

(3) Timing. The Hearing Board generally will issue its opinion within 56 days (8 weeks) after the hearing.

(4) Effective Date. Reinstatement or readmission takes effect immediately on issuance of the opinion, unless otherwise ordered.

(5) Post-hearing Relief. Within 14 days of issuance of the Hearing Board's opinion, a party may move the Hearing Board for post-hearing relief under C.R.C.P. 59.

(6) Finality. For purposes of this section 242.39, a Hearing Board's opinion is a final decision, and the time for filing a notice of appeal begins as set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.34. Unless the supreme court stays, vacates, reverses, or modifies the Hearing Board's opinion, the opinion is considered an order of the supreme court.

(f) Successive Petitions. No petition for reinstatement or readmission under this section 242.39 may be filed within two years after issuance of a final decision denying a previous petition for reinstatement or readmission. But this subsection does not bar a petitioner from filing a new petition if the petitioner withdrew a previous petition before the hearing on that petition began.

(g) Costs and Deposit.

(1) Costs. The petitioner bears all reasonable costs of the proceeding and must also pay the administrative fee.

(2) Deposit. When filing a petition for readmission or reinstatement, the petitioner must tender to the Regulation Counsel a deposit of $500 to be used to pay the administrative fee and costs. If the administrative fee and costs exceed $500, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may order the petitioner to provide an additional deposit. After a proceeding, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will order the Regulation Counsel to render an accounting and to return to the petitioner any unexpended portion of the deposit.

(h) Reinstatement on Stipulation. If the petitioner and the Regulation Counsel agree to reinstatement, the parties may file a stipulation with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The stipulation must contain an agreement that the respondent will pay the administrative fee and any agreed-upon costs of the proceeding. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may either approve the stipulation or reject it and order that a hearing be held before a Hearing Board under subsection (d) above. Parties are not permitted to stipulate to readmission. A readmission hearing must be held before a Hearing Board under subsection (d) above.

COMMENT

Under C.R.C.P. 242.39(a)(2), the requirement to petition for reinstatement applies: (1) when a lawyer has remained suspended for more than one year due to the lawyer's failure to timely seek reinstatement by affidavit under C.R.C.P. 242.38, even if the lawyer's ordered period of suspension was for less than one year and one day; (2) when, in connection with a single disciplinary proceeding, a lawyer serves a suspension that cumulatively totals more than one year due to revocation of the lawyer's probation, even if the lawyer does not serve the period of suspension continuously; and (3) when, in connection with separate disciplinary proceedings, a lawyer serves consecutive suspensions that cumulatively total more than one year. Interim suspensions and nondisciplinary suspensions that are contiguously served with a disciplinary suspension are not used to calculate the duration of the served disciplinary suspension for purposes of determining whether a lawyer must petition for reinstatement under C.R.C.P. 242.39(a)(2).

Part X. Contempt

Rule 242.40. Contempt During Proceeding

(a) Applicability. If, during a proceeding under this rule, a person knowingly obstructs an investigation, fails to comply with a subpoena, refuses to answer a proper question when testifying, or disrupts through misbehavior the Hearing Board or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge in the performance of authorized duties, the person may be held in contempt and sanctioned. Authority conferred under this section 242.40 is in addition to any other authority to issue sanctions. C.R.C.P. 107 does not govern contempt proceedings under this section.

(b) Procedure for Direct Contempt. If a person commits contemptuous conduct that the Presiding Disciplinary Judge sees or hears and that is so extreme no warning is necessary, or that has been repeated despite a warning to desist, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may summarily punish the conduct by imposing reasonable sanctions, including a fine. In such a case, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will enter an order on the record reciting the facts constituting the contempt, including a description of the conduct, and finding that the conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the tribunal. Before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge imposes sanctions, the person held in contempt has the right to respond to the charge of contempt, including making a statement in mitigation.

(c) Procedure for Indirect Contempt.

(1) Motion. A party may file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a motion for an order to show cause alleging that a person has, outside of the direct sight or hearing of the Hearing Board or Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, engaged in any of the conduct identified in subsection (a) above. The party must also serve the motion on the person alleged to be in contempt.

(2) Order to Show Cause. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may enter an order to show cause directing the person alleged to be in contempt to appear at a specified time and place and to show cause why the person should not be held in contempt.

(3) Determination. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge finds that the person has engaged in any of the conduct described in subsection (a) above, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may hold the person in contempt and impose reasonable sanctions. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge also may order costs and reasonable attorney's fees.

(d) Independent Charges. An allegation or a finding of contempt does not preclude the Regulation Counsel from filing independent disciplinary charges based on the same underlying conduct.

(e) Referral to Other Court. Nothing herein precludes the Regulation Counsel from referring a matter to another court of competent jurisdiction to commence other proceedings or to address other appropriate sanctions or remedies.

(f) Appeal. For the purposes of appeal, an order deciding the issue of contempt and sanctions is final.

Part XI. Information, Expungement, and General Provisions

Rule 242.41. Access to Information

(a) Public Information. Unless otherwise provided in this section, all files and records of the Regulation Counsel, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, and the supreme court that relate to any phase of a disciplinary proceeding are available to the public after:

(1) A complaint is filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge;

(2) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge approves a stipulation to discipline that is submitted before the filing of a complaint;

(3) A petition for reinstatement or readmission is filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge;

(4) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge approves a stipulation to reinstatement that is submitted before the filing of a petition; or

(5) An interim or a nondisciplinary suspension is imposed before the filing of a complaint.

(b) Confidential Information. The following types of information are confidential and are not available to the public:

(1) Files and records of a proceeding in which none of the five events set forth in subsection (a) above has occurred, unless the respondent has waived confidentiality;

(2) Files and records of any proceeding that was dismissed before a complaint was filed, unless the respondent has waived confidentiality;

(3) Interview notes made during a preliminary investigation under C.R.C.P. 242.13;

(4) The work product, deliberations, privileged communications, and internal communications of the Office of the Regulation Counsel, the Advisory Committee, the Regulation Committee, the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, Hearing Boards, and the supreme court;

(5) Lists of pending matters, lists of clients, and copies of client notices referred to in C.R.C.P. 242.32(f);

(6) Information subject to a protective order under subsection (e) below; and

(7) Information otherwise made confidential under this rule.

(c) Subpoenaed Records. If the Regulation Counsel is served with a valid subpoena, the Regulation Counsel shall not permit access to files or records or furnish documents that are confidential under this rule unless the supreme court orders otherwise.

(d) Private Admonitions. Access to information in proceedings resulting in private admonition is governed by C.R.C.P. 242.10(a)(4).

(e) Protective Orders. On motion of any person and on a showing of good cause, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may enter a protective order restricting the disclosure of specific information to protect a complaining witness, another witness, a third party, a respondent, or a petitioner from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense. A protective order may direct that a proceeding, including a hearing, be conducted so as to preserve the confidentiality of certain information.

(f) Exceptions to Confidentiality During Investigation.

(1) Before the filing of a complaint, the Regulation Counsel may, to conduct an investigation, disclose information to a complaining witness or to another third party.

(2) Before the filing of a complaint, the Regulation Counsel may disclose the existence, subject matter, status, and resolution, if any, of an investigation if:

(A) The respondent has waived confidentiality;

(B) The investigation is based on the respondent's conviction of a crime or discipline by another jurisdiction;

(C) The investigation is based on allegations that have become generally known to the public;

(D) The disclosure is made solely to a confidential supreme court program, such as the Colorado Attorneys' Fund for Client Protection or the Colorado Lawyer Assistance Program;

(E) The disclosure is necessary to protect the public, the administration of justice, or the legal profession; or

(F) A petition for interim suspension based on the investigation has been filed under C.R.C.P. 242.22.

(g) Request for Confidential Information.

(1) Release With Notice.

(A) The Regulation Counsel may, on request, release information that is confidential under subsection (b) above to the following types of agencies:

(i) An agency authorized to investigate the qualifications of persons for admission to practice law;

(ii) An agency authorized to investigate the qualifications of persons for government employment;

(iii) A lawyer or judicial discipline enforcement agency;

(iv) An agency authorized to investigate criminal conduct; or

(v) An agency authorized to investigate the qualifications of judicial candidates.

(B) When the Regulation Counsel releases confidential information under this subsection (g)(1), the Regulation Counsel must send to the lawyer's registered address or other last-known address contemporaneous notice and a copy of the information released.

(2) Release Without Notice.

(A) The Regulation Counsel may release confidential information without notifying the lawyer if an agency listed in subsection (g)(1)(A) above requests the information and certifies that:

(i) The request is made in furtherance of an ongoing investigation of the lawyer;

(ii) The information is essential to that investigation; and

(iii) Disclosing to the lawyer the existence of the investigation would seriously prejudice that investigation.

(B) A certification made under subsection (g)(2)(A) above is deemed confidential.

(h) Release to Commission on Judicial Discipline. The Regulation Counsel may, on request, release to the Colorado Commission on Judicial Discipline information concerning a Colorado judge that is confidential under subsection (b) above without obtaining a waiver from the judge or notifying the judge.

(i) Response to False or Misleading Statement and Defense to Civil Suit. The Regulation Counsel may disclose any information reasonably necessary either to correct false or misleading public statements made during a disciplinary proceeding or to defend against litigation in which the Regulation Counsel is a named defendant.

(j) Confidential Matters Involving Allegations of Sexual Harassment. For matters that are confidential under this section 242.41 and that involve allegations of sexual harassment, the Regulation Counsel's investigation records regarding the sexual harassment allegations, not otherwise privileged or protected by court rule or court order, are available to the complaining witness and respondent, subject to the provisions of C.R.C.P. 242.43.

(k) Disclosure by Persons and Entities Other Than Disciplinary Entities. Unless otherwise ordered, nothing in this rule prohibits the complaining witness, any other witness, or the respondent from disclosing the existence of a proceeding under this section 242.41, from disclosing any documents or correspondence provided to those persons, or from providing testimony related to a proceeding under this rule.

(l) Duty of Officials and Employees. All officials, employees, and volunteers within the supreme court, the Advisory Committee, the Regulation Committee, the Office of the Regulation Counsel, the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, and the Hearing Board pool have an ongoing duty to maintain the confidentiality mandated by this rule.

(m) Publication of Opinions. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must release for publication opinions imposing public discipline, orders revoking probation, and opinions granting or denying reinstatement or readmission.

(n) Notice of Order to the Courts. The clerk of the supreme court must promptly notify all courts within the supreme court's jurisdiction of orders of disbarment, suspension, or interim or nondisciplinary suspension.

(o) Notice to ABA National Lawyer Regulatory Data Bank. The Regulation Counsel must promptly transmit notice of all public discipline imposed and reinstatements and readmissions to the National Lawyer Regulatory Data Bank maintained by the American Bar Association.

COMMENT

C.R.C.P. 242.41 seeks to strike a balance between protecting lawyers against publicity predicated upon unfounded accusations and protecting clients, prospective clients, and the effective administration of justice from harm caused by lawyers who do not fulfill their professional obligations. C.R.C.P. 242.41 also recognizes that restrictions on confidentiality no longer serve a purpose when allegations that ordinarily would be confidential have become generally known through publicity, disclosure in the public record, or otherwise.

The Regulation Counsel frequently receives inquiries from judges, clients, prospective clients, and the media asking if a lawyer is the subject of a pending disciplinary investigation. Ordinarily, C.R.C.P. 242.41 prohibits the Regulation Counsel from providing information about a pending investigation or even confirming that an investigation is pending. C.R.C.P. 242.41(f)(2), however, sets forth several exceptions when the Regulation Counsel may reveal the existence, subject matter, status, and any resolution of an investigation.

Two such exceptions warrant further explanation. C.R.C.P. 242.41(f)(2)(C) requires the Regulation Counsel to determine whether otherwise confidential allegations against a lawyer have become generally known. Factors that the Regulation Counsel should consider in these circumstances include the nature and extent of media coverage, the nature and extent of inquiries from the media and the public, the nature and status of any related judicial proceedings, the number of people believed to have knowledge of the allegations, and the seriousness of the allegations.

Another exception is C.R.C.P. 242.41(f)(2)(E), which allows disclosure when necessary to protect the public, the administration of justice, or the legal profession. In determining whether a need to notify exists, the Regulation Counsel should consider factors including the nature and seriousness of the conduct under investigation, the lawyer's prior disciplinary history, whether prior discipline was premised on conduct similar to the alleged conduct under investigation, and the potential harm to a client, a prospective client, the public, or the judicial system. In those instances in which the Regulation Counsel determines that disclosure is permitted under C.R.C.P. 242.41(f)(2)(E), the Regulation Counsel is authorized not only to disclose the existence, subject matter, status, and any resolution of an investigation in response to an inquiry, but also to disclose this information affirmatively to those persons having a need to know the information in order to avoid potential harm.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Protective order issued by presiding disciplinary judge (PDJ) for "good cause" shown under section (e) does not offend the first amendment. First, section (e) furthers substantial government interest unrelated to the suppression of speech. Specifically, the government has substantial interests in preventing attorney from further abusing the discovery processes and in protecting the judge's privacy. Second, the protective order did not limit attorney's first amendment freedoms to an extent greater than necessary to protect the judge's privacy interests. The protective order prevented attorney, as a party to the investigative proceedings, from disseminating information obtained from federal bureau of investigation (FBI) documents only during attorney regulation counsel's pre-complaint stage. In re Attorney E, 78 P.3d 300 (Colo. 2003).

Protective order issued by PDJ under section (e) must be modified because it unduly hinders both attorney regulation counsel's and attorney's ability to further their cases. Both parties to the investigative proceedings, attorney regulation counsel and attorney, must be able to use the documents in a limited way to prosecute and defend their respective cases even though good cause exists to protect the pertinent privacy interests. Given the implications of a privacy order that prevents both parties from making any use of the relevant documents, PDJ must modify protective order to allow limited use of FBI documents by both parties. In re Attorney E, 78 P.3d 300 (Colo. 2003).

Under this rule, the fact that a hearing board has imposed a particular sanction after a public hearing is a matter of public record. In re Attorney F, 2012 CO 57, 285 P.3d 322.

Suppressing a hearing board's disposition in a case pending resolution of an appeal would impair the transparency and public accountability in the disciplinary system. In re Attorney F, 2012 CO 57, 285 P.3d 322.

PDJ did not err in denying attorney's motion to compel removal of disciplinary information from website. PDJ did not err by denying attorney's motion to compel the office of attorney regulation counsel to remove from its website information disclosing hearing board's determination that a public censure was warranted in attorney's case. In re Attorney F, 2012 CO 57, 285 P.3d 322.

District attorney may obtain access to grievance committee's files provided that following requirements are met: first, the district attorney's request must be made pursuant to an ongoing criminal investigation; and second, the prosecution's request must set forth the evidence or information required which must relate to the charges being investigated. People v. Pacheco, 199 Colo. 470, 618 P.2d 1102 (1980); People v. Smith, 773 P.2d 522 (Colo. 1989).

Disbarment warranted where attorney filed false pleadings and disciplinary complaints, disclosed information concerning the filing of the disciplinary complaints, offered to withdraw a disciplinary complaint filed against a judge in exchange for a favorable ruling, failed to serve copies of pleadings on opposing counsel, revealed client confidences and material considered derogatory and harmful to the client aggravated by a repeated failure to cooperate with the investigation of misconduct, disruption of disciplinary proceedings, and a record of prior discipline. People v. Bannister, 814 P.2d 801 (Colo. 1991).

Reference to confidential disciplinary proceedings in civil action constituted violation and, in conjunction with violation of other disciplinary rules, warranted suspension. People v. Smith, 830 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1992).

Applied in People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Harthun, 195 Colo. 38, 581 P.2d 716 (1978); People v. Kendrick, 646 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1982); People v. Smith, 830 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1992).

Rule 242.42. General Provisions

(a) Notice. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, notice must be in writing. Notice must be sent to the last-known mailing address of the recipient, unless the recipient consents to receiving notice by email. Notice is deemed effective the date notice is placed in the mail; placed in the custody of a delivery service; or emailed, if the recipient has consented to notice by email.

(b) Service of Process. When a pleading commencing a proceeding requiring service is filed under this rule, a lawyer may be served with process by personal service; by mail or email using the information provided by the lawyer under C.R.C.P. 227; by mail to any other address the lawyer has provided to the Regulation Counsel; or, if the lawyer is not admitted in Colorado, by mail or email to the lawyer's address of registration in any jurisdiction where the lawyer's registration is active. Service is deemed effective on the date that the lawyer is personally served, that the pleading is placed in the mail, or that the email is sent.

(c) Application of Civil Rules of Procedure. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, proceedings before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or a Hearing Board are governed by the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

(d) Proof of Conviction. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, a court-certified copy of the judgment of conviction or order showing that a lawyer has been convicted in that court of a crime, as defined in C.R.C.P. 241, conclusively establishes the conviction and proves the lawyer's commission of that crime for purposes of this rule.

(e) Related Litigation.

(1) Substantially Similar Criminal Cases. A disciplinary proceeding that involves material allegations substantially similar to the material allegations of a criminal prosecution pending against the respondent may, in the discretion of the Regulation Committee or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, be placed in abeyance until the criminal prosecution concludes.

(2) Substantially Similar Civil Cases. A disciplinary proceeding that involves material allegations substantially similar to the material allegations made against the respondent in pending civil litigation may, in the discretion of the Regulation Committee or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, be placed in abeyance until the civil litigation concludes. If the disciplinary proceeding is placed in abeyance and the respondent fails to make all reasonable efforts to obtain a prompt trial and final disposition of the pending litigation, the Regulation Counsel may request that the Regulation Committee or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, promptly resume the disciplinary proceeding.

(3) Effect of Favorable Criminal or Civil Disposition. A criminal or civil disposition favorable to the respondent does not bar disciplinary action against the respondent based on the same or substantially similar material allegations. Nothing in this section 242.42 precludes a respondent from seeking relief from a final decision under this rule based on a favorable disposition in a criminal or civil proceeding.

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Attorney licensed to practice law in state of Colorado is subject to discipline by Colorado supreme court in the event of his conviction of a criminal offense in a foreign jurisdiction. People v. Swope, 621 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1981).

Attorney's conduct while in office not only resulted in convictions of second degree official misconduct, § 18-8-405, and failure to disclose a conflict of interest, § 18-8-308, but also flagrantly violated minimal standards of candor and honesty required by attorneys and justified suspension. People v. Tucker, 676 P.2d 680 (Colo. 1983).

Attorney pleading guilty to cultivation of marijuana and unlawful possession of a controlled substance is subject to discipline.

While convicted felon was not trafficking or dealing in illegal substances and was instead engaged in horticultural preservation and storing substance for others, suspension for three years is appropriate penalty. People v. McPhee, 728 P.2d 1292 (Colo. 1986).

Accepting illegal drugs for legal services is serious criminal conduct warranting severe sanction even though it does not fit definition of serious crime provided in rule. People v. Davis, 768 P.2d 1227 (Colo. 1989).

Failure to report felony conviction in another state where crime involved conversion of client funds justifies disbarment. People v. Hedicke, 785 P.2d 918 (Colo. 1990).

Attorney's failure to report felony conviction including counts involving proof of intent to defraud is sufficient for disbarment. People v. Brunn, 764 P.2d 1165 (Colo. 1988); People v. Vidakovich, 810 P.2d 1071 (Colo. 1991).

Failure to report felony convictions in another state for two counts of failure to report income and two counts of filing false income tax returns warrants three-year suspension and payment of costs rather than disbarment in light of numerous mitigating factors. People v. Mandell, 813 P.2d 732 (Colo. 1991).

The conduct of an attorney who fails to report a domestic violence conviction substantially reflects adversely on the attorney's fitness to practice. Because there is no exception to the duty to report based upon mistake and because the aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating factors, the proper form of discipline is six months' suspension. In re Hickox, 57 P.3d 403 (Colo. 2002).

Failure to report felony conviction in another state for mail fraud warrants disbarment in absence of mitigating factors and where aggravating factor of a prior disciplinary record exists. People v. Bollinger, 859 P.2d 901 (Colo. 1993).

Lack of prior disciplinary record insufficient to call for sanction less than disbarment where attorney convicted of bank fraud. People v. Terborg, 848 P.2d 346 (Colo. 1993).

Guilty plea followed by deferred judgment was a "conviction" and failure to report warranted public censure even though the conviction occurred prior to the adoption of a specific definition for the term "conviction" in this section. People v. Barnthouse, 941 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1997).

Bar reinstatement required demonstration of possession of moral and professional qualifications. Where a state attorney had been convicted of failing to file his federal income tax return and making false representations to a special agent of the Internal Revenue Service regarding the filing of income tax returns, and where the attorney was later found to have made a false statement in his application to the Arizona State Bar by answering in the negative an inquiry as to whether he had ever been questioned regarding the violation of any law, he was suspended from the practice of law in Colorado for three years, and was required to demonstrate upon application for reinstatement that he possessed moral and professional qualifications for admission to the bar of this state. People v. Gifford, 199 Colo. 205, 610 P.2d 485 (1980).

Bankruptcy fraud is a serious crime as defined by rule. People v. Brown, 841 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1990).

Attorney's conviction of three counts of sexual assault on a child and three counts of aggravated incest conclusively established where the court notified him it intended to take judicial notice of the conviction and attorney neither responded to the substance of the notice nor denied the conviction occurred. Because of the nature and seriousness of the crimes for which the attorney was convicted, disbarment was appropriate. People v. Schwartz, 890 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1995).

Disbarment warranted for attorney convicted of criminal attempt to commit sexual exploitation of a child, a class 4 felony. People v. Damkar, 908 P.2d 1113 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney's violations constituted "serious crimes" as defined in section (e) of this rule where the attorney pleaded guilty to making and altering a false and forged prescription for Phentermine, a controlled substance, in violation of former § 12-22-315, a class 5 felony, and of criminal attempt to obtain a controlled substance by forgery and alteration in violation of § 18-2-101 and former § 12-22-315, a class 6 felony. People v. Moore, 849 P.2d 40 (Colo. 1993).

Lack of prior disciplinary record insufficient to call for sanction less than disbarment where attorney convicted of bankruptcy fraud and for conspiracy to commit bankruptcy fraud and other federal offenses. People v. Schwartz, 814 P.2d 793 (Colo. 1991).

Although attorney had not previously been disciplined, sanction of disbarment was warranted where attorney's felony conviction for possession of a firearm occurred while he was still on probation for a felony conviction for possession of marijuana. People v. Laquey, 862 P.2d 278 (Colo. 1993).

Conviction for aiding fugitive to flee warrants disbarment despite lack of a prior disciplinary record. People v. Bullock, 882 P.2d 1390 (Colo. 1994).

Respondent given two-year suspension for aiding and abetting aliens' entry into the United States and by advising clients to make misrepresentations for such entry. Such an act generally warrants disbarment, but respondent's full disclosure during proceedings, expression of remorse, and the fact that a prior offense was remote in time were mitigating factors. Respondent also required to discontinue the representation of clients before INS and the Department of Labor. People v. Boyle, 942 P.2d 1199 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment is warranted for driving while impaired, marijuana possession, improperly executing agreement without permission, and failing to perform certain professional duties, despite the lack of a prior record. People v. Gerdes, 891 P.2d 995 (Colo. 1995).

Conviction of attempt to commit sexual assault in the second degree on a 17-year-old high school student filing clerk working at attorney's law firm is a serious crime as defined by the rule. The conviction together with sexual conduct toward a client warrant disbarment. People v. Dawson, 894 P.2d 756 (Colo. 1995).

Disbarment warranted for attorney convicted in Hawaii of second-degree murder. People v. Draizen, 941 P.2d 280 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment warranted for writing nonsufficient funds checks while practicing law during a period of suspension and committing several other disciplinary rules violations. People v. Fager, 938 P.2d 138 (Colo. 1997).

Applied in People ex rel. MacFarlane v. Harthun, 195 Colo. 38, 581 P.2d 716 (1978);

People v. Harfmann, 638 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1981);

People v. Loseke, 698 P.2d 809 (Colo. 1985);

People v. Proffitt, 731 P.2d 1257 (Colo. 1987);

People v. Geller, 753 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1988);

People v. Cantor, 753 P.2d 238 (Colo. 1988).

Rule 242.43. Expungement of Records

(a) Records Subject to Expungement. Except for records of proceedings that have become public under C.R.C.P. 242.41, all records of proceedings that were dismissed must be expunged from the files of the Regulation Committee and the Regulation Counsel five years after the end of the calendar year in which the dismissal occurred. When a respondent successfully completes a diversion agreement in a disciplinary proceeding that did not result in the filing of a complaint, all files and records from that proceeding must be expunged five years after the end of the calendar year in which the diversion was completed. But if a new request for investigation is filed against the respondent before an existing diversion file is expunged, the Regulation Counsel may wait to expunge the file until the new proceeding has been resolved. Files and records that notify the Regulation Counsel of a lawyer's conviction of a crime need not be expunged.

(b) Effect of Expungement. The Regulation Committee and the Regulation Counsel must respond to any general or specific inquiry concerning the existence of a proceeding the records of which have been expunged by stating that no record of a proceeding exists.

(c) Extension of Time to Retain Records. The Regulation Counsel may apply in writing to the Regulation Committee for permission to retain files and records that would otherwise be expunged under this section 242.43 for an additional period of time not to exceed three years. After giving the lawyer in question notice and an opportunity to respond in writing, the Regulation Committee may grant the request on a finding of good cause. Through the same procedure, the Regulation Committee may grant additional extensions.

COMMENT

C.R.C.P. 242.43(b) governs only how the Regulation Committee and the Regulation Counsel should respond to an inquiry concerning the existence of proceedings the records of which have been expunged. That subsection does not address how lawyers should respond to such an inquiry. Other legal authorities or requirements may govern how a lawyer should respond depending on the context in which the inquiry arises.

(d) Presiding Disciplinary Judge. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge is authorized to act in disability proceedings in accordance with the powers and duties set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.6(c) and to perform the duties set forth in this rule.

(e) Hearing Boards. Hearing Boards are authorized to act in accordance with the powers and duties set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.7 as to consolidated disciplinary and disability reinstatement proceedings.

Rule 243.3. Immunity

(a) Prohibition Against Lawsuit Based on Proceeding Under this Rule. A lawyer may not institute a civil lawsuit against any person based on testimony in a proceeding under this rule or other written or oral communications made to relevant entities described in this rule, those entities' members or employees, or persons acting on their behalf, including monitors and health care professionals.

(b) Immunity for Entities. All entities described in this rule and all individuals working or volunteering on behalf of those entities are immune from civil suit for conduct in the course of fulfilling their official duties under this rule.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Immunity for persons seeking attorney discipline does not violate right to access court. Attorney disbarment for prosecution of individuals seeking discipline is appropriate and does not violate civil rights of attorney. In re Smith, 989 P.2d 165 (Colo. 1999).

Attorney who claimed costs and damages for complaint against him subject to public censure. Where attorney violated this rule by claiming costs and damages for defending grievance filed against him and violated other disciplinary rules, public censure is appropriate. People v. Dalton, 840 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1992).

Rule 243.4. Standard and Effect

(a) Standard. A lawyer is disabled under this rule and may be transferred to disability inactive status if the lawyer is unable to competently fulfill professional responsibilities as a result of a physical or behavioral health condition or disorder, including a mental, cognitive, emotional, substance use, or addictive issue.

(b) Effect. While a lawyer is on disability inactive status, the lawyer must not practice law. Disability inactive status is not a form of discipline. The pendency of a disability proceeding or a lawyer's transfer to disability inactive status does not stay a disciplinary proceeding against the lawyer, unless such an order is entered under C.R.C.P. 242.28 (governing alleged inability to defend disciplinary proceedings).

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 243.5. Judicial Duties to Report Lawyer Disability

A judge's duty to report a lawyer's disability is governed by Rule 2.14 of the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 243.6. Transfer to Disability Inactive Status

(a) Procedure and Determination.

(1) Petition Filed by Regulation Counsel.

(A) Petition. If the Regulation Counsel has reason to believe that a lawyer is disabled, the Regulation Counsel may file a petition with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge alleging that the lawyer is disabled and requesting an order requiring the lawyer to undergo an independent medical examination or an order transferring the lawyer to disability inactive status. The Regulation Counsel must promptly serve on the lawyer a copy of the petition and file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge proof of service.

(B) Show Cause Order. Unless the Regulation Counsel files an affidavit setting forth facts that clearly and convincingly show the lawyer is unable to respond, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must afford the lawyer an opportunity to show cause in writing why the requested relief should not be granted.

(C) Determination. After considering the lawyer's response, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may issue appropriate orders, such as ordering an independent medical examination of the lawyer by a qualified examiner designated by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge finds clear and convincing evidence that the lawyer is disabled, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will transfer the lawyer to disability inactive status.

(2) Petition Premised on Reciprocal Disability.

(A) Duty to Notify. A lawyer who is transferred to disability inactive status in another jurisdiction must promptly inform the Regulation Counsel of the transfer.

(B) Petition. On learning that a lawyer has been transferred to disability inactive status in another jurisdiction, the Regulation Counsel may file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a certified copy of the order, accompanied by a petition for the lawyer's transfer to disability inactive status. The Regulation Counsel must promptly serve on the lawyer a copy of the petition and file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge proof of service.

(C) Show Cause Order. Unless the Regulation Counsel files an affidavit setting forth facts that clearly and convincingly show the lawyer is unable to respond, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge must afford the lawyer an opportunity to show cause in writing why reciprocal transfer to disability inactive status should not be ordered.

(D) Answer. To contest transfer to disability inactive status, the lawyer must file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge an answer asserting at least one of the defenses in subsection (E) below and a full copy of the record of the disability proceeding in the other jurisdiction.

(E) Determination. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will order the lawyer's transfer to disability inactive status unless the lawyer demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that (i) the procedure followed in the other jurisdiction did not comport with Colorado's requirements of due process of law; (ii) the reason for the original transfer to disability inactive status no longer exists; or (iii) the proof upon which the other jurisdiction based its determination of disability is so infirm that the determination of the other jurisdiction cannot be accepted. In all other respects, a final adjudication in another jurisdiction that a lawyer, whether or not admitted in that jurisdiction, should be transferred to disability inactive status conclusively establishes the disability for purposes of this rule.

(3) Petition Premised on Order of Commitment, Guardianship, or Judicial Declaration of Incompetence. On learning that a lawyer is subject to a valid and current order of commitment, is under guardianship, or is subject to a judicial declaration of incompetence to stand trial, the Regulation Counsel may file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a petition seeking the lawyer's transfer to disability inactive status, accompanied by proof of the basis for the petition. On receiving a properly supported petition, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may transfer the lawyer to disability inactive status. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge must send notice of the transfer to the lawyer or, where applicable, to the lawyer's guardian or the director of the facility to which the lawyer has been committed.

(4) Verified Notice Filed By Lawyer. If a lawyer believes that she or he is disabled, the lawyer must, if able, file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a verified notice setting forth the basis for the assertion of disability accompanied by proof thereof. On receiving a properly supported notice, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will transfer the lawyer to disability inactive status.

(5) Allegation of Inability to Defend. After an allegation of inability to defend a disciplinary proceeding has been raised under C.R.C.P. 243.7, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may transfer a respondent to disability inactive status either:

(A) If the respondent has raised the issue of disability as provided in C.R.C.P. 243.7(d)(1); or

(B) If, subject to the procedures in C.R.C.P. 243.7(f), clear and convincing evidence shows that the respondent is disabled within the meaning of C.R.C.P. 243.4(a).

(b) Service of Process. When a petition is filed under this rule, a lawyer may be served with process by personal service; by mail or email using the information provided by the lawyer under C.R.C.P. 227; by mail to any other address the lawyer has provided to the Regulation Counsel; or, if the lawyer is not admitted in Colorado, by mail or email to the lawyer's address of registration in any jurisdiction where the lawyer's registration is active. Service is deemed effective on the date that the lawyer is personally served, that the petition is placed in the mail, or that the email is sent.

(c) Hearings. Either party may request a hearing on the issue of whether the lawyer should be transferred to disability inactive status. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge also has discretion to hold a hearing to address any issue in a disability proceeding. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45. Disability hearings are conducted by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, sitting without a Hearing Board. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, disability proceedings must be conducted in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure and civil trial practice in this state. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may receive any evidence with probative value regardless of its admissibility under the rules of evidence if the lawyer has a fair opportunity to rebut hearsay evidence.

(d) Privilege Against Self-Incrimination and Adverse Inferences. A lawyer cannot be required to testify or to produce records over the lawyer's objection if doing so would violate the lawyer's constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. But in proceedings under this rule, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may draw an adverse inference from a lawyer's failure to testify or to produce records. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may also draw an adverse inference from a lawyer's disregard of orders issued in a disability proceeding.

(e) Confidentiality. An order transferring a lawyer to disability inactive status is available to the public. Otherwise, disability proceedings, files, and records are confidential and are not available to the public, except by order of the supreme court or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. All entities described in this rule and all individuals working or volunteering on behalf of those entities have an ongoing duty to maintain the confidentiality mandated by this rule. But the Regulation Counsel may disclose any information reasonably necessary either to correct false or misleading public statements made during a disability proceeding or to defend against litigation in which the Regulation Counsel is a named defendant. A lawyer may release information arising from the lawyer's own disability proceeding or authorize the Regulation Counsel to release such information, unless the information is made confidential by rule or order.

(f) Costs. The Regulation Counsel bears the costs of petitioning for a lawyer's transfer to disability inactive status, including examination costs, unless the Presiding Disciplinary Judge exercises discretion to order otherwise.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former provisions similar to this rule.

Former section (a) is not unconstitutional. Requiring attorney to prove mental illness by clear and convincing evidence was not contrary to § 13-25-127 (1), which establishes a preponderance of the evidence as the quantum of proof in civil cases, because an attorney disciplinary proceeding is not strictly a civil proceeding. People v. Sullivan, 802 P.2d 1091 (Colo. 1990).

Supreme court affirms order of presiding disciplinary judge (PDJ) transferring attorney to disability inactive status. The office of attorney regulation counsel (OARC) adequately petitioned PDJ for a disability proceeding under section (c) of this rule by filing status report. Because the status report unquestionably put attorney on notice of the disability proceeding and gave him or her a meaningful opportunity to oppose the OARC's request for an independent medical examination (IME), the report satisfied the "petition" requirement of section (c). In addition, the law of the case doctrine did not preclude the PDJ from reconsidering his or her decision to disregard the report of the first medical expert retained to conduct an IME of the attorney. In light of testimony of this expert, PDJ acted "upon proper grounds" when her or she decided to reconsider earlier ruling disregarding expert's report. Even without medical report, adverse inference of disability drawn by PDJ on the basis of attorney's disregard of orders to cooperate in second IME process was by itself sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that the attorney suffers from a mental or emotional infirmity or illness and that such infirmity or illness prevents the attorney from both defending himself or herself in the consolidated disciplinary proceeding and fulfilling the responsibilities as an attorney, thereby requiring the attorney to petition for reinstatement under C.R.C.P. 251.30. In re Bass, 142 P.3d 1259 (Colo. 2006).

Applied in People v. Luxford, 626 P.2d 675 (Colo. 1981); People v. Southern, 638 P.2d 787 (Colo. 1982); People v. Barbour, 639 P.2d 1065 (Colo. 1982); People v. Dwyer, 652 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982); People v. Craig, 708 P.2d 787 (Colo. 1985).

Rule 243.7. Alleged Inability to Defend Disciplinary Proceeding

(a) Overview. This section 243.7 sets forth the standards and procedures that apply when an issue is raised under C.R.C.P. 242.28 as to whether a respondent is able to defend a pending disciplinary proceeding. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may initially direct the respondent to undergo an independent medical examination and may issue an interim stay of the disciplinary proceeding. Then, after considering all relevant information, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may place a disciplinary proceeding in abeyance as provided below.

(b) Standard. A respondent is deemed unable to defend a disciplinary proceeding if the respondent has a medical, mental, or cognitive condition that renders the respondent unable to prepare or present a defense.

(c) Initiation.

(1) Under C.R.C.P. 242.28, the respondent, the respondent's counsel, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, or the Regulation Counsel may raise an issue as to the respondent's ability to defend the proceeding.

(2) If the issue of inability to defend is raised as to a respondent who is unrepresented, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may, in the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's discretion, appoint counsel to represent the respondent in a proceeding under this section 243.7 to determine whether the respondent is able to defend the disciplinary proceeding.

(d) Procedure. Depending on the entity raising the issue, the following procedures apply, subject to the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's discretion to adopt a different procedure:

(1) By Respondent. If a respondent or respondent's counsel alleges that the respondent is unable to defend a disciplinary proceeding:

(A) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will direct the respondent to undergo an independent medical examination on the issues of whether the respondent is able to defend the disciplinary proceeding and to competently fulfill professional responsibilities;

(B) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will issue an interim stay of the disciplinary proceeding under C.R.C.P. 242.28, which the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may subsequently lift on a showing of good cause;

(C) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will treat a respondent's allegation of inability to defend as a waiver of the physician-patient and psychologist-client privileges under C.R.S. section 13-90-107(d) and (g) between the lawyer and any professional who has examined or treated the lawyer for any condition related to the alleged inability to defend; and

(D) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will treat the allegation as a stipulation to the respondent's transfer to disability inactive status and will transfer the respondent to disability inactive status under C.R.C.P. 243.6(a)(5)(A).

(2) By Presiding Disciplinary Judge. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge believes the respondent may be unable to defend a disciplinary proceeding, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will follow the procedures set forth in subsections (d)(1)(A)-(B) above.

(3) By Regulation Counsel. If the Regulation Counsel moves to place a disciplinary proceeding in abeyance due to the respondent's inability to defend the disciplinary proceeding, where the respondent has already been transferred to disability inactive status, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may grant the request without requiring the Regulation Counsel to provide proof or information about the disability in question.

(e) Hearings. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge has discretion to hold a hearing to address any issue in a proceeding under this section 243.7. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45. Hearings are conducted by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, sitting without a Hearing Board. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, proceedings under this section must be conducted in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure and civil trial practice in this state. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may receive any evidence with probative value regardless of its admissibility under the rules of evidence if the respondent has a fair opportunity to rebut hearsay evidence.

(f) Decision. After reviewing the report of an independent medical examination and any other relevant information, and after holding any hearing the Presiding Disciplinary Judge deems necessary, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will, in the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's discretion, take one or more of the following actions:

(1) Transfer the respondent to disability inactive status under C.R.C.P. 243.6(a)(5) and place the disciplinary proceeding in abeyance under C.R.C.P. 242.28, if the Presiding Disciplinary Judge finds it is more likely than not that the respondent is unable to defend the proceeding or finds that justice otherwise so requires;

(2) Lift the interim stay on the disciplinary proceeding and order under C.R.C.P. 242.28 that the proceeding go forward with or without also transferring the respondent to disability inactive status under C.R.C.P. 243.6(a)(5); or

(3) Enter any other appropriate order, including an order directing further examination of the respondent, an order continuing the disciplinary proceeding, or an order immediately reinstating the respondent from disability inactive status without following the procedures set forth in C.R.C.P. 243.10(b).

(g) Subsequent Removal of Proceeding from Abeyance.

(1) If the respondent is subsequently reinstated from disability inactive status under C.R.C.P. 243.10, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will remove the respondent's disciplinary proceeding from abeyance under C.R.C.P. 242.28.

(2) If the respondent has not been reinstated from disability inactive status under C.R.C.P. 243.10, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may, in the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's discretion, remove a disciplinary proceeding from abeyance under C.R.C.P. 242.28 if:

(A) A preponderance of the evidence establishes that the respondent is able to defend the proceeding; or

(B) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge otherwise determines that justice so requires.

(h) Confidentiality. An order transferring a lawyer to disability inactive status is available to the public. Otherwise, disability proceedings, files, and records are not public, except by order of the supreme court or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. All entities described in this rule and all individuals working or volunteering on behalf of those entities have an ongoing duty to maintain the confidentiality mandated by this rule. But the Regulation Counsel may disclose any information reasonably necessary either to correct false or misleading public statements made during a disability proceeding or to defend against litigation in which the Regulation Counsel is a named defendant. A lawyer may release information arising from the lawyer's own disability proceeding or authorize the Regulation Counsel to release such information, unless the information is made confidential by rule or order.

(i) Costs and Fees. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge, in the Presiding Disciplinary Judge's discretion, may order the respondent to pay all or any part of the costs arising under this section 243.7, including examination costs. Fees for appointed counsel may be paid by the Office of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, and the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may condition reinstatement from disability inactive status on reimbursement of all or any part of those fees. Fees for appointed counsel are subject to payment caps as established by judicial policy governing analogous proceedings.

(j) Automatic Abeyance and Removal of Proceeding from Abeyance. If a respondent in a pending disciplinary proceeding has been transferred to disability inactive status under C.R.C.P. 243.6(a)(3), the Regulation Counsel must request that the Presiding Disciplinary Judge place a pending disciplinary proceeding in abeyance under C.R.C.P. 242.28. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will grant a proper request. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge will remove the disciplinary proceeding from abeyance under C.R.C.P. 242.28 if the respondent is reinstated from disability inactive status.

Rule 243.8. Notices After Transfer to Disability Inactive Status

(a) Notice to Clients and Parties; Filing of Affidavit. A lawyer who is transferred to disability inactive status must, if able, comply with C.R.C.P. 242.32(b)-(i).

(b) Disclosure to Law Firm. A lawyer who is transferred to disability inactive status must, if able, disclose in writing the order to the lawyer's current law firm within 14 days of the order.

(c) Notice of Order to the Courts. The clerk of the supreme court must promptly notify all courts within the supreme court's jurisdiction of a final order transferring a lawyer to disability inactive status.

(d) Notice to ABA National Regulatory Data Bank. The Regulation Counsel must promptly transmit notice of a final order transferring a lawyer to disability inactive status to the National Regulatory Data Bank maintained by the American Bar Association.

Rule 243.9. Resignation

As provided in C.R.C.P. 227(A)(8), the supreme court may permit a lawyer to resign from the practice of law in Colorado. The Regulation Counsel must inform the supreme court whether any disciplinary or disability matter involving the lawyer should preclude the lawyer's resignation.

Source: Entire rule added and adopted May 20, 2021, effective for cases filed with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court on or after July 1, 2021, and, as to all other matters covered by these rules, effective July 1, 2021.

Rule 243.10. Reinstatement After Transfer to Disability Inactive Status

(a) Overview and Eligibility. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge considers petitions for reinstatement from disability inactive status under the standards set forth in subsection (b) below. If the lawyer has remained on disability inactive status for five years or longer, the lawyer must have satisfied the supreme court's bar examination and MPRE requirements within the eighteen months preceding the filing of the petition. But if a lawyer petitions for reinstatement within five years of the effective date of the lawyer's transfer to disability inactive status, the five-year period addressed in this subsection stops running until a final order is issued and any appeals have been decided.

(b) Procedure and Standards.

(1) Disability Cases Arising in Colorado.

(A) Standards. Unless a lawyer was transferred to disability inactive status based on reciprocal disability, a lawyer may be reinstated if the lawyer demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that the lawyer is competent to resume the practice of law and meets the following eligibility requirements, as may be applicable to the facts of the matter, for the practice of law:

- (i) Honesty and candor with clients, lawyers, courts, regulatory authorities, and others;
- (ii) The ability to reason logically, recall complex factual information, and accurately analyze legal problems;
- (iii) The ability to use a high degree of organization and clarity in communicating with clients, lawyers, judicial officers, and others;
- (iv) The ability to use good judgment on behalf of clients and in conducting professional business;
- (v) The ability to act with respect for and in accordance with the law;
- (vi) The ability to exhibit regard for the rights and welfare of others;
- (vii) The ability to comply with the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct; state, local, and federal laws; regulations, statutes, and rules; and orders of a tribunal;
- (viii) The ability to act diligently and reliably in fulfilling obligations to clients, lawyers, courts, and others;
- (ix) The ability to be honest and use good judgment in personal financial dealings and on behalf of clients and others; and
- (x) The ability to comply with deadlines and time constraints.

(B) Petition by Lawyer.

(i) A lawyer seeking reinstatement from disability inactive status must file a properly verified petition with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge and provide a copy to the Regulation Counsel. Within 14 days of receiving the petition, the Regulation Counsel must file a response indicating whether the Regulation Counsel objects to reinstatement, intends to stipulate to reinstatement, or believes further investigation is needed.

(ii) After receiving a petition and response, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may order the lawyer to undergo an independent medical examination by a qualified examiner designated by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge.

(iii) The Presiding Disciplinary Judge has discretion to order reinstatement proceedings procedurally analogous to those set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.39. But the Presiding Disciplinary Judge considers reinstatement petitions from disability inactive status without a Hearing Board.

(iv) After considering the relevant information and holding any hearing, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may grant or deny reinstatement.

(C) Stipulation to Reinstatement. Either before or after the filing of a petition, the parties may file a stipulated agreement that the lawyer should be reinstated from disability inactive status. After considering the relevant information and holding any hearing, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may approve or reject the stipulation.

(2) Reciprocal Disability.

(A) Summary Reinstatement Premised on Reinstatement in Originating Jurisdiction. If a lawyer was transferred to disability inactive status under C.R.C.P. 243.6(a)(2) and has since been reinstated to practice law in the jurisdiction in which the reciprocal disability proceeding originated, the lawyer may file a petition seeking reinstatement, accompanied by a certified copy of the order reinstating the lawyer in the originating jurisdiction. Provided that the lawyer has not remained on disability inactive status under this rule for more than five years, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may summarily reinstate the lawyer.

(B) No Reinstatement in Originating Jurisdiction. If a lawyer's petition demonstrates that good cause exists for not seeking reinstatement in the originating jurisdiction, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may allow a lawyer subject to reciprocal disability to seek reinstatement in Colorado under subsection (b)(1) above without having been reinstated in the originating jurisdiction. A lawyer seeking reinstatement under this provision must attach to the petition for reinstatement a complete record of the disability proceeding in the originating jurisdiction and must certify in the petition that the lawyer was not subject in the originating jurisdiction to any disciplinary proceedings, including a disciplinary investigation, at the time the lawyer was transferred to disability inactive status.

(c) Disability Reinstatement Hearings. Disability reinstatement hearings are conducted by the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, sitting without a Hearing Board, except as provided in subsection (d) below. The clerk of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may issue subpoenas under C.R.C.P. 45. Except as otherwise provided in this rule, reinstatement proceedings must be conducted in accordance with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure and civil trial practice in this state. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may receive any evidence with probative value regardless of its admissibility under the rules of evidence if the lawyer has a fair opportunity to rebut hearsay evidence.

(d) Consolidated Disability and Disciplinary Reinstatement Proceedings. If a lawyer concurrently petitions for reinstatement from disability inactive status and reinstatement or readmission in a disciplinary case, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may, if the lawyer consents, consolidate the proceedings. If so, a Hearing Board will consider both petitions together under C.R.C.P. 242.39, and the consolidated proceedings will be public.

(e) Costs. Unless the Presiding Disciplinary Judge orders otherwise, a lawyer may not file a petition for reinstatement under this section 243.10 until the lawyer has paid the costs incurred in the underlying disability proceeding, including the cost of any examinations ordered.

(f) Waiver of Privilege. For purposes of this rule, when a lawyer petitions for reinstatement from disability inactive status, the lawyer thereby waives the physician-patient and psychologist-client privileges under C.R.S. section 13-90-107(d) and (g) between the lawyer and any professional who has examined or treated the lawyer in connection with the disability. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may order the lawyer to identify professionals who have examined or treated the lawyer in connection with the disability. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may also order the lawyer to provide written consent for those professionals to disclose information and records pertaining to the lawyer's examination or treatment.

(g) Confidentiality. An order reinstating a lawyer from disability inactive status is available to the public. Otherwise, disability reinstatement proceedings, files, and records are confidential and are not available to the public, except by order of the supreme court or the Presiding Disciplinary Judge. All entities described in this rule and all individuals working or volunteering on behalf of those entities have an ongoing duty to maintain the confidentiality mandated by this rule. But the Regulation Counsel may disclose any information reasonably necessary either to correct false or misleading public statements made during a disability reinstatement proceeding or to defend against litigation in which the Regulation Counsel is a named defendant. A lawyer may release information arising from the lawyer's own disability reinstatement proceeding or authorize the Regulation Counsel to release such information, unless the information is made confidential by rule or order.

Rule 243.11. Notices After Reinstatement

(a) Notice of Order to the Courts. The clerk of the supreme court must promptly notify all courts within the supreme court's jurisdiction of a final order of reinstatement from disability inactive status.

(b) Notice to ABA National Regulatory Data Bank. The Regulation Counsel must transmit notice of reinstatement from disability inactive status to the National Regulatory Data Bank maintained by the American Bar Association.

Rule 243.12. Post-Hearing Relief and Appeals

(a) Post-hearing Relief. Within 14 days of entry of a final order in a disability proceeding under this rule, including a disability reinstatement proceeding, a party may move for post-hearing relief under C.R.C.P. 59.

(b) Appellate Review. A party may seek appellate review by the supreme court of a final decision in a proceeding under this rule. Part VIII of C.R.C.P. 242 governs appellate review.

(c) Stay Pending Appeal. If reinstatement is granted, the Regulation Counsel may at any time move the supreme court for a stay pending appeal. The supreme court should grant the stay if the Regulation Counsel demonstrates the stay is necessary to protect the public.

(d) Confidentiality. Proceedings under this section are confidential.

Rule 243.13. Contempt During Proceeding

(a) Applicability. If, during a proceeding under this rule, a person knowingly obstructs an investigation, fails to comply with a subpoena, refuses to answer a proper question when testifying, or disrupts through misbehavior the Presiding Disciplinary Judge in the performance of authorized duties, the person may be held in contempt and sanctioned. Authority conferred under this section 243.13 is in addition to any other authority to issue sanctions. C.R.C.P. 107 does not govern contempt proceedings under this section.

(b) Procedure for Direct Contempt. If a person commits contemptuous conduct that the Presiding Disciplinary Judge sees or hears and that is so extreme no warning is necessary, or that has been repeated despite a warning to desist, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may summarily punish the conduct by imposing reasonable sanctions, including a fine. In such a case, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge will enter an order on the record reciting the facts constituting the contempt, including a description of the conduct, and finding that the conduct is offensive to the authority and dignity of the tribunal. Before the Presiding Disciplinary Judge imposes sanctions, the person held in contempt has the right to respond to the charge of contempt, including making a statement in mitigation.

(c) Procedure for Indirect Contempt.

(1) Motion. A party may file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge a motion for an order to show cause alleging that a person has, outside of the direct sight or hearing of the Presiding Disciplinary Judge, as applicable, engaged in any of the conduct identified in subsection (a) above. The party must also serve the motion on the person alleged to be in contempt.

(2) Order to Show Cause. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge may enter an order to show cause directing the person alleged to be in contempt to appear at a specified time and place and to show cause why the person should not be held in contempt.

(3) Determination. If the Presiding Disciplinary Judge finds that the person has engaged in any of the conduct described in subsection (a) above, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge may hold the person in contempt and impose reasonable sanctions. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge also may order costs and reasonable attorney's fees.

(d) Disciplinary Charges. An allegation or a finding of contempt does not preclude the Regulation Counsel from filing disciplinary charges under C.R.C.P. 242 based on the same underlying conduct.

(e) Referral to Other Court. Nothing herein precludes the Regulation Counsel from referring a matter to another court of competent jurisdiction to commence other proceedings or to address other appropriate sanctions or remedies.

(f) Appeal. For the purposes of appeal, an order deciding the issue of contempt and sanctions is final.

Rule 250. Mandatory Continuing Legal and Judicial Education

PREAMBLE: Statement of Purpose

As society becomes more complex, the delivery of legal services likewise becomes more complex. The public rightly expects that lawyers, and licensed legal paraprofessionals (“LLPs”), in their practice of law, and judges, in the performance of their duties, will continue their professional development throughout their legal careers. The purpose of mandatory continuing legal and judicial education requirements is to promote and sustain competence and professionalism and to ensure that lawyers, LLPs, and judges remain current on the law, law practice management, and technology in our rapidly changing society.

Source: Amended and Adopted by the Court, En Banc, March 15, 2018, effective July 1, 2018; amended and adopted April 13, 2023, effective July 1, 2023 (Rule Change 2023(09)).

ANNOTATION

Constitutionality. A state supreme court may constitutionally require attorneys to meet continuing legal education requirements, so long as such requirements have a rational connection with the attorney’s fitness or capacity to practice law, which the requirements in Colorado have. Verner v. Colo., 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 960 (1984) (decided under former rule 260.1).

Rule 250.2. CLE Requirements

(1) CLE Credit Requirement for Registered Lawyers and Judges. Every registered lawyer and every judge must complete 45 credit hours of continuing legal education during each applicable CLE compliance period as provided in these rules. The 45 credit hours must include at least seven credit hours devoted to professional responsibility.

(a) Beginning January 1, 2023, the seven credit hours devoted to professional responsibility must include the following:

- i. At least two credit hours in the area of equity, diversity, and inclusivity, and
- ii. At least five credit hours in the areas of legal ethics or legal professionalism.

(b) Failure to comply with these requirements in a timely manner as set forth in these rules may subject the registered lawyer or judge to a fee, a penalty, and/or administrative suspension.

(2) CLE Credit Requirement for LLPs. Every LLP must complete 30 credit hours of continuing legal education during each applicable CLE compliance period as provided in these rules. The 30 credit hours must include at least five credit hours devoted to professional responsibility.

(a) Beginning January 1, 2023, the five credit hours devoted to professional responsibility must include the following:

- (i) At least one credit hour in the area of equity, diversity, and inclusivity, and
- (ii) At least four credit hours in the areas of legal ethics or legal professionalism.

(b) Failure to comply with these requirements in a timely manner as set forth in these rules may subject the LLP to a fee, a penalty, and/or administrative suspension.

(3) Compliance Period. All registered lawyers, LLPs and judges become subject to these rules on the date of their admission or certification to the bar or LLP rolls of the State of Colorado. The first compliance period begins on the date of admission or certification and ends on the 31st of December of the third full calendar year following the year of admission or certification to practice law in Colorado. For non-lawyer judges, the first CLE compliance period begins on the date of appointment as a judge and ends on the 31st of December of the third full calendar year following the year of appointment as a judge. Subsequent CLE compliance periods begin on the 1st of January immediately following a previous compliance period and end on the 31st of December of the third full calendar year thereafter. Compliance periods that commenced under the previous C.R.C.P. 260 will continue without interruption under these rules.

(4) Reporting. All registered lawyers, LLPs and judges must report compliance as set forth in C.R.C.P. 250.7.

(5) Lawyer Status and Compliance. Any registered lawyer who has been suspended under C.R.C.P. 227A(4), or who has elected to transfer to inactive status under C.R.C.P. 227A(6)(a), will, upon being reinstated pursuant to C.R.C.P. 227A(5) or (7), become subject to the minimum continuing legal educational requirements set forth in these rules on the date of reinstatement, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.2 and as set forth in paragraph (7) of this rule.

(6) LLP Status and Compliance. Any LLP who has been suspended under C.R.C.P. 207.14, or who has elected to transfer to inactive status under C.R.C.P. 207.14, will, upon being reinstated pursuant to C.R.C.P. 207.14, become subject to the minimum continuing legal educational requirements set forth in these rules on the date of reinstatement, pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.2 and as set forth in paragraph (7) of this rule. Any coursework or CLE activities undertaken by the LLP to prepare for reinstatement do not count toward the continuing legal educational requirements for active-status LLPs pursuant to this rule.

(7) Modification of Compliance Period. A registered lawyer's or LLP's obligation to comply with these rules during a compliance period will be deferred if the lawyer or LLP has been suspended for any reason other than noncompliance with these rules, has elected to transfer to inactive status, or has been placed on disability inactive status by Court order. However, upon reinstatement or return to active status, the compliance period will be calculated as follows:

(a) If the registered lawyer or LLP remains on suspension, inactive status, or disability inactive status for one year or longer, the start of the compliance period will begin on the date of reinstatement from suspension or disability inactive status, or date of transfer to active status, and will end on the 31st of December of the third full calendar year following the start of the compliance period.

(b) If the registered lawyer or LLP is suspended, on inactive status, or on disability inactive status for less than one year, the compliance period will not be recalculated. However, upon reinstatement or return to active status, the lawyer or LLP will have 91 days from the date of reinstatement or return to active status, or the remainder of the original compliance period, whichever is longer, to complete and report all deferred CLE requirements as otherwise set forth under C.R.C.P. 250.7, and to pay any penalties or fees that accrued before the suspension or transfer to inactive status. Failure to complete deferred CLE requirements or to pay related penalties or fees during this 91 day period will subject the lawyer to suspension pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.7(8).

(c) No registered lawyer or LLP will be permitted to change status to circumvent these rules.

(8) No Roll-Over Credits. CLE credit hours completed in excess of the required 45 credit hours for registered lawyers and judges or the required 30 credit hours for LLPs in any applicable compliance period may not be used to meet the minimum educational requirements in any subsequent compliance period.

(9) Exemptions.

(a) Inactive or Suspended Status. A lawyer or LLP who is on inactive status, disability inactive status, or under suspension during his or her entire CLE compliance period is excused from the CLE requirements for that compliance period.

(b) Age. A registered lawyer, LLP or judge will be exempt from the CLE requirements of these rules starting on the registered lawyer's, LLP's or judge's 72nd birthday. On the effective date of these rules, all registered lawyers and judges who were exempt from the educational requirements under the previous C.R.C.P. 260.5 (Exemptions), will again become subject to the requirements in these rules. For all previously exempt registered lawyers and judges, the compliance period will begin on the effective date of these rules and end on December 31, 2021 (the end of the third full calendar year following the start of the compliance period). For all registered lawyers and judges who reach their 65th birthday in 2018, the compliance period will be extended through December 31, 2021. For all registered lawyers and judges who reach their 65th birthday in 2019, and whose compliance period otherwise would have ended in 2019 or 2020, the compliance period will be extended through December 31, 2021. Subsequent compliance periods will begin on the 1st of January of the year immediately following the end of the previous compliance period.

(10) Deferral.

(a) Inability to Comply. In cases of inability to comply with these rules for good cause shown, the CLJE Office may, in its discretion, defer individual compliance with the CLE requirements set forth in these rules. Good cause may include, for example, a registered lawyer, LLP or judge serving on full-time active duty in the armed forces of the United States who is deployed to a location outside the United States, and who provides to the CLJE Office a copy of military orders or other official paperwork listing the date, location, and duration of the deployment.

(b) No Waiver. Deferral does not constitute a waiver of the CLE requirements.

Annotator’s note. The following annotations include a case decided under former rule 260.2, which was similar to this rule.

Deprivation of due process claim requires only minimal scrutiny. A person’s “right” or “privilege” in the practice of law, has never been among those held to be “fundamental”, so only minimal scrutiny under the rational basis test is required to evaluate claims of deprivation of such a “right” without due process. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983).

Rule does not violate prohibition against involuntary servitude. The requirement that attorneys attend education classes does not violate the thirteenth amendment prohibition against involuntary servitude. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983).

Rule does not violate first amendment.

This rule does not violate any alleged first amendment right “not to be forced to hear speeches or assemblies”. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983).

Strict requirements may be set. If states can set strict legal proficiency related requirements for admission to the bar, it follows that they may also set strict proficiency related requirements for continuing legal practice. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983).

A state may constitutionally exempt senior citizen attorneys from this rule’s requirements upon a showing of hardship. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983) (decided under former rule 260.5).

Rule 250.3. The Supreme Court Advisory Committee on the Practice of Law and the Continuing Legal and Judicial Education Committee

(1) Advisory Committee. The Supreme Court Advisory Committee on the Practice of Law (Advisory Committee) is a permanent committee of the Court. See C.R.C.P. 242.3. The Advisory Committee oversees the coordination of administrative matters for all programs of the lawyer and LLP regulation process, including the continuing legal and judicial education program set forth in these rules. The Advisory Committee reviews the productivity, effectiveness, and efficiency of the continuing legal and judicial education program, and recommends to the Court proposed changes or additions to these rules and the CLJE Committee's Regulations Governing Mandatory Continuing Legal and Judicial Education.

(2) The Continuing Legal and Judicial Education Committee. The Continuing Legal and Judicial Education Committee (CLJE Committee) serves as a permanent committee of the Supreme Court.

(a) Members. The CLJE Committee consists of nine members appointed by the Court, and is subject to oversight by the Advisory Committee. With the exceptions of the chair and the vice chair, members will be appointed for one term of seven years. Diversity will be a consideration in making the appointments. The terms of the members will be staggered to provide, so far as possible, for the expiration each year of the term of one member. At least six of the members must be volunteer lawyers or LLPs, at least one of whom must also be a judge, and at least two of the members must be volunteer citizen members who are not lawyers or LLPs. All members serve at the pleasure of and may be dismissed at any time by the Court. A member of the CLJE Committee may resign at any time. In the event of a vacancy, a successor will be appointed by the Court for the remainder of the unexpired term of the member whose office is vacated.

(b) Chair and Vice Chair. The Court will designate two members of the CLJE Committee to serve as its chair and vice-chair for unspecified terms. The chair will also be a member of the Advisory Committee. The chair and vice-chair serve at the pleasure of and may be dismissed at any time by the Court.

(c) Powers and Duties. The CLJE Committee will formulate regulations consistent with these rules, modify or amend the same from time to time, and perform CLJE Committee duties established by these rules. The CLJE Committee's Regulations Governing Mandatory Continuing Legal and Judicial Education will be submitted to the Advisory Committee for review and approval by the Court and will be published on the website of the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel.

(3) Reimbursement. The CLJE Committee members are entitled to reimbursement for reasonable travel, lodging and other expenses incurred in the performance of official duties.

Rule 250.5. Immunity members, the Attorney Regulation Counsel and staff, and other enlisted volunteers are immune from suit for all conduct performed in the course of their official duties.

Source: Amended and Adopted by the Court, En Banc, March 15, 2018, effective July 1, 2018.

Rule 250.6. Accreditation

(1) Objective. CLE must be an educational activity which has as its primary objective the promotion of professional competence of registered lawyers, LLPs and judges, and must deal with subject matter directly related to the practice of law or the performance of judicial duties. The CLJE Committee will develop criteria for the accreditation of CLE activities as set forth in the Regulations Governing Mandatory Continuing Legal and Judicial Education, and the CLJE Office will accredit a broad variety of educational activities that meet these requirements.

(2) Criteria. For an activity to be accredited, the following criteria must be met: (1) the subject matter must directly relate to legal subjects and the performance of judicial duties or the practice of law, including professionalism, leadership, equity, diversity, inclusivity, wellness, ethics, and law practice management, and (2) the activity must be directed to lawyers, LLPs and judges. The CLJE Office will consider, in accrediting educational activities, the contribution the activity will make to the competent and professional practice of law or administration of justice.

(3) Professional Responsibility. For an activity or portion of an activity to be accredited as professional responsibility it must address legal ethics, legal professionalism, or equity, diversity, and inclusivity as these terms are defined in CLJE Regulation 103.1.

(4) Non-accredited Activities. The CLJE Office will not accredit activities completed in the ordinary course of the practice of law, in the performance of regular employment, or in a lawyer's, LLP's or judge's service on a committee, section, or division of any bar-related organization except as provided in these rules.

(5) Assignment of Credit. The CLJE Office will assign an appropriate number of CLE credit hours to each educational activity it accredits.

(6) Provider Eligibility. The CLJE Committee may establish provider eligibility requirements consistent with these rules, as set forth in the Regulations Governing Mandatory Continuing Legal and Judicial Education.

(7) Published List. The CLJE Office will publish a list of all accredited programs, together with the approved CLE credit hours for each program on the website of the Office of the Attorney Regulation Counsel.

ANNOTATION

Constitutionality. Under any of the descriptions of "rationality" used by the United States supreme court, the requirements of this rule are rational and do not violate substantive due process guarantees. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff'd, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983) (decided under former rule 260.4).

Rule 250.7. Compliance

(1) Reporting Requirement. Each registered lawyer, LLP and judge must report compliance with these rules. CLE credit hours must be reported by the online affidavit on the CLJE Office's website or other form approved by the CLJE Committee within a reasonable amount of time after the credit hours are earned. A registered lawyer, LLP or judge who is exempt from compliance under C.R.C.P. 250.2(9)(b) may nevertheless report CLE credit hours on a voluntary basis.

(2) Verification Requirement. It is the responsibility of each registered lawyer, LLP and judge to verify CLE credit hours completed during a compliance period, and to confirm that their CLE transcript is accurate and complete by no later than the 31st of January following that compliance period. Failure to comply with these requirements in a timely manner as set forth in these rules may subject the registered lawyer, LLP or judge to a fee, a penalty, and/or administrative suspension.

(3) Make-up Plan. If a registered lawyer, LLP or judge fails to complete the required CLE credit hours by the end of the CLE compliance period, the registered lawyer, LLP or judge must do the following: (1) by the 31st of January following the end of the CLE compliance period, file a specific plan to make up the deficiency; and (2) complete the planned CLE credit hours no later than the 31st of May following the end of the CLE compliance period. The plan must be accompanied by a filing fee determined by the CLJE Committee. Such plan will be deemed accepted by the CLJE Office unless within 28 days after the receipt of the make-up plan the CLJE Office notifies the registered lawyer, LLP or judge to the contrary. Completion of the make-up plan must be reported by affidavit to the CLJE Office no later than the 14th of June following the end of the CLE compliance period. Failure of the registered lawyer, LLP or judge to complete the plan by the 31st of May or to file an affidavit demonstrating compliance constitutes grounds for imposing administrative remedies set forth in paragraph (8) of this rule.

(4) Statement of Noncompliance. If any registered lawyer, LLP or judge fails to comply with these rules, C.R.C.P. 203.1(8) or C.R.C.P. 207.8(10), the CLJE Office will promptly provide a statement of noncompliance to the registered lawyer, LLP or judge. The statement will advise the registered lawyer, LLP or judge that within 14 days of the date of the statement, either the noncompliance must be corrected, or the registered lawyer, LLP or judge must request a hearing before the CLJE Committee. Upon failure to do either, the CLJE Office will file the statement of noncompliance with the Court, which may impose the administrative remedies set forth in paragraph (8) of this rule.

(5) Failure to Correct Noncompliance. If the noncompliance is not corrected within 14 days, or if a hearing is not requested within 14 days, the CLJE Office will promptly forward the statement of noncompliance to the Court, which may impose the sanctions set forth in paragraph (8) of this rule.

(6) Hearing Before the CLJE Committee. If a hearing before the CLJE Committee is requested, the following apply:

(a) Notice of the time and place of the hearing will be given to the registered lawyer, LLP or judge by the CLJE Office at least 14 days prior thereto;

(b) The registered lawyer, LLP or judge may be represented by counsel;

(c) The hearing will be conducted in conformity with the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure and the Colorado Rules of Evidence;

(d) The Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel will prosecute the matter and bear the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence;

(e) The chair will preside at the hearing, or will appoint another lawyer member of the CLJE Committee to act as presiding officer, and will appoint at least two other CLJE Committee members to the hearing panel;

(f) Upon the request of any party to the hearing, the chair or vice chair may issue subpoenas for the use of a party to compel attendance of witnesses and production of pertinent books, papers, documents, or other evidence, and any such subpoenas will be subject to the provisions of C.R.C.P. 45;

(g) The presiding officer will rule on all motions, objections, and other matters presented in connection with the hearing; and,

(h) The hearing will be recorded and a transcript may be provided to the registered lawyer, LLP or judge upon request and payment of the cost of the transcript.

(7) Determination by the CLJE Committee. Within 28 days after the conclusion of the hearing, the Panel will issue a written decision on behalf of the CLJE Committee setting forth findings of fact and the determination as to whether the registered lawyer, LLP or judge has complied with the requirements of these rules. A copy of such findings and determination will be sent to the registered lawyer, LLP or judge involved.

(a) If the Panel determines that the registered lawyer, LLP or judge complied, the registered lawyer's, LLP's or judge's record will reflect compliance and any previously assessed fees may be rescinded.

(b) If the Panel determines the registered lawyer, LLP or judge was not in compliance, the written decision issued by the Panel will be promptly filed with the Court.

(8) Supreme Court Review.

(a) When the Court receives either a statement of noncompliance or the written decision of a CLJE Committee hearing, the Court will enter such order as it deems appropriate, which may include an order of administrative suspension from the practice of law in the case of registered lawyers and LLPs or referral of the matter to the Colorado Commission on Judicial Discipline or the Denver County Court Judicial Discipline Commission in the case of judges.

(b) Orders suspending a lawyer or LLP for failure to comply with rules governing continuing legal education take effect on entry of the order, unless otherwise ordered.

(c) A lawyer or LLP who has been suspended under the rules governing continuing legal education need not comply with the requirements of C.R.C.P. 242.32(c) or C.R.C.P. 242.32(d) if the lawyer or LLP has sought reinstatement under the rules governing continuing legal education and reasonably believes that reinstatement will occur 14 days of the date of the order of suspension. If the lawyer or LLP is not reinstated within those 14 days, then the lawyer or LLP must comply with the requirements of C.R.C.P. 242.32(c) and C.R.C.P. 242.32(d).

(9) Notice. All notices given pursuant to these rules may be sent to any address provided by the registered lawyer, LLP or judge pursuant to C.R.C.P. 227 and C.R.C.P. 207.14.

(10) Reinstatement. Any lawyer or LLP who has been suspended for noncompliance pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.7(8) may be reinstated by order of the Court upon a showing that the lawyer's or LLP's CLE deficiency has been corrected. The lawyer must file with the CLJE Office a petition seeking reinstatement by the Court. The petition must state with particularity the CLE activities that the lawyer has completed, including dates of completion, which correct the deficiency that caused the lawyer's suspension. The petition must be accompanied by a reinstatement filing fee as determined by the CLJE Committee. The CLJE Office will file a properly completed petition with its recommendation with the Clerk of the Court within 14 days after receipt.

(11) Jurisdiction. All suspended and inactive lawyers and LLPs remain subject to the jurisdiction of the Court as set forth in C.R.C.P. 242.1(a) and C.R.C.P. 243.1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. The following annotations include a case decided under former rule 260.6, which was similar to this rule.

Constitutionality. A state supreme court may constitutionally require attorneys to meet continuing legal education requirements, so long as such requirements have a rational connection with the attorney's fitness or capacity to practice law, which the requirements in Colorado have. Verner v. Colo., 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 960 (1984).

This rule does not violate procedural due process. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D.

Colo. 1982), aff'd, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 960 (1984).

This rule does not violate federal separation of powers doctrine. The claim that this rule violates the separation of powers principle embodied in the United States constitution fails, since the principle of separation of powers is not enforceable against the states as a matter of federal constitutional law. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff'd, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 960 (1984).

The rule does not violate sixth amendment. This rule does not violate sixth amendment rights by not providing for a jury trial and not permitting consideration of “mitigating factors”. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983).

Suspension not “cruel and unusual punishment”. The claim that suspension from practice for violation of this rule constitutes “cruel and unusual punishment” is without merit, since the eighth amendment does not apply where loss of a license is the full extent of possible punishment. Verner v. Colo., 533 F.

Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983).

Jurisdiction of federal courts limited. Federal district courts only have jurisdiction to consider challenges to the constitutionality of a state disciplinary rule. All claims that are addressed to particular conduct during the disciplinary proceedings are dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Verner v. Colo., 533 F. Supp. 1109 (D. Colo. 1982), aff’d, 716 F.2d 1352 (10th Cir. 1983).

Rule 250.8. Access to Information

(1) Compliance Information.

(a) CLE Transcript Maintenance. For each registered lawyer, LLP or judge, the CLJE Office will maintain CLE transcripts for the current and immediately preceding compliance periods as reported pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.7(1).

(b) Compliance Records — Confidential. Records maintained by the CLJE Office pertaining to a registered lawyer’s, LLP’s or judge’s compliance are confidential and will not be disclosed except upon written request or consent of the registered lawyer, LLP or judge affected or as directed by the Court.

(2) Accreditation Information — Public. All records submitted by a Provider to obtain accreditation pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.6 will be available to the public.

(3) Expunction of Records.

(a) Expunction — Self-Executing. All records maintained by the CLJE Office pursuant to these rules, in paper or electronic form, will be expunged from the files of the CLJE Office as follows:

(i) All records pertaining to accreditation of CLE activities by approved Providers pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.6 will be expunged one year after the end of the year in which the activity request was processed by the CLJE office;

(ii) All records pertaining to requests for accreditation of activities submitted by a registered lawyer, LLP or judge will be expunged three months following the date the submission was processed by the CLJE Office, including but not limited to activities under C.R.C.P. 250.9 and 250.10, self-study, graduate study, and teaching or writing accreditation requests;

(iii) Affidavits submitted in paper form to the CLJE Office by registered lawyers, LLP or judges relating to completion of an approved CLE activity will be expunged seven days after the claimed credits have been entered on the CLE Transcript by the CLJE Office;

(iv) All records pertaining to proceedings under C.R.C.P. 250.7(3)-(10) will be expunged three years after the expiration of the registered lawyer’s, LLP’s, or judge’s current compliance period or after reinstatement, whichever time period is longer; and,

(v) All records pertaining to requests for deferrals pursuant to C.R.C.P. 250.2(8) will be expunged three years after the expiration of the registered lawyer’s, LLP’s, or judge’s current compliance period.

ANNOTATION

Disciplinary rules are not designed to be a basis for civil liability, and they do not create a private cause of action. Weismann v. Kirkland and Ellis, 732 F. Supp. 1540 (D. Colo. 1990) (decided under former rule 260.7).

Rule 250.9. Representation in Pro Bono Legal Matters

(1) Maximum Credits. A registered lawyer may earn a maximum of nine CLE credit hours and an LLP may earn a maximum seven CLE credit hours during each three-year compliance period for providing uncompensated pro bono legal representation to indigent or near-indigent persons, or, for a registered lawyer, supervising a law student providing such representation. Professional responsibility credit may not be earned under this rule.

(2) Eligibility. To be eligible for CLE credit hours, the pro bono legal matter in which a registered lawyer or LLP provides representation must have been assigned to the registered lawyer or LLP by: a court; a bar association or Access to Justice Committee-sponsored program; a law school; or an organized, non-profit entity, such as Legal Services Corporation, Metro Volunteer Lawyers, or Colorado Lawyers Committee, whose purpose is or includes the provision of pro bono representation to indigent or near-indigent persons. Prior to assigning the matter, the assigning court, program, law school, or entity will determine that the client is financially eligible for pro bono legal representation because (a) the client qualifies for participation in programs funded by the Legal Services Corporation, or (b) the client's income and financial resources are slightly above the guidelines utilized by such programs, but the client nevertheless cannot afford counsel.

(3) Computation of Credits. Subject to the reporting and review requirements specified herein, (a) a registered lawyer or LLP providing uncompensated, pro bono legal representation may receive one unit of credit for every five billable-equivalent hours of representation provided to the indigent client; and (b) a registered lawyer who acts as a supervisor to a law student may be awarded three CLE credit hours per completed matter.

(4) Claiming Credits. A registered lawyer or LLP wishing to receive CLE credit hours under this rule must submit to the assigning court, program, law school, or entity a completed form as designated by the CLJE Committee. As to supervising a law student, the registered lawyer will submit the form when the matter is fully completed. As to pro bono representation, if the representation will be concluded during a single three-year compliance period, then the registered lawyer or LLP will complete and submit the form when the representation is fully completed. If the representation will continue into another three-year compliance period, then the applying registered lawyer or LLP may submit an interim form seeking such credit as the lawyer or LLP may be eligible to receive during the three-year compliance period that is coming to an end. Upon receipt of an interim or final form, the assigning court, program, law school, or entity must in turn report to the CLJE Office the number of CLE credit hours that it recommends be awarded to the reporting registered lawyer or LLP under the provisions of this rule. The CLJE Committee has final authority to issue or decline to issue CLE credit hours to the registered lawyer or LLP providing representation or mentoring, subject to the other provisions of these rules.

(5) Law Student Supervision. A registered lawyer who acts as a supervisor to a law student who is eligible to practice law under C.R.C.P. 205.7(2) may claim CLE credits consistent with (1) and (3) above. The matter must be assigned to the law student by a court, program, law school, or entity as described in C.R.C.P. 250.9(2), or an organized student law office program administered by his or her law school, after such court, program, entity, or student law office determines that the client is eligible for pro bono representation in accordance with C.R.C.P. 250.9(2). The registered lawyer must be available to the law student for information and advice on all aspects of the matter and must directly and actively supervise the law student while allowing the law student to provide representation to the client. The registered lawyer must file or enter an appearance along with the law student in any legal matter pursued or defended for the client in any court. Lawyers may be acting as full-time or adjunct professors at the law student's law school at the same time they serve as supervising lawyers so long as it is not a primary, paid responsibility of that professor to administer the student law office and supervise its law-student participants.

Rule 250.10. Participation in the Colorado Attorney Mentoring Program (CAMP)

(1) One-Year CAMP Program. A registered lawyer or judge may earn a maximum of nine CLE credit hours, two hours of which will count toward the legal ethics portion of the professional responsibility requirement of C.R.C.P. 250.2 (1), for successful completion of the one-year CAMP program curriculum (pursuant to C.R.C.P. 255) as either a mentor or as a mentee.

(2) Six-Month CAMP Program. A registered lawyer or judge may earn a maximum of four CLE credit hours, one hour of which will count toward the legal ethics portion of the professional responsibility requirement of C.R.C.P. 250.2 (1), for successful completion of the six-month CAMP program curriculum (pursuant to C.R.C.P. 255) as either a mentor or a mentee.

(3) CLE Credit Participation Criteria. To receive CLE credit hours as a mentor or mentee:

(a) The mentor must be a Colorado lawyer or judge in good standing with an active license or a Colorado lawyer or judge who retired from the practice of law in good standing. The mentor must be licensed for five years and must not be currently subject to lawyer discipline or the subject of a pending disciplinary matter in any jurisdiction, and must be current with all CLE requirements. The mentor must be approved by the CAMP Director.

(b) The mentee must be a licensed, active Colorado lawyer, who is either practicing or is intending to practice law in Colorado. The CAMP Director may accept and approve petitions to participate from new lawyers not otherwise eligible to participate in CAMP programs. The mentee must be registered in a CAMP program.

(c) Mentors may participate in a CAMP program, one mentor relationship at a time, as often as they wish, but may receive a maximum of nine total CLE credit hours, including a maximum of two legal ethics credit hours of the professional responsibility requirement of C.R.C.P. 250.2 (1), per compliance period.

(d) Mentees may receive CLE credits as a mentee only once in a CAMP program.

(e) The award of CLE credits will apply to the compliance period in which the CAMP program is completed.

(f) Any mentee or mentor who fails to complete the CAMP program will not receive CLE credit, partial or otherwise.

(g) Mentors and mentees who participate together in pro bono representation during or as a part of this program may not also receive CLE credit under C.R.C.P. 250.9 for the same representation.

(4) Verification by Director. All certificates and affidavits of completion of a CAMP program must be submitted to the CAMP Director for verification pursuant to C.R.C.P. 255. Following verification of substantial completion, the CAMP Director will recommend to the CLJE Office that the CLE hours be recorded as earned.

(b) Investigation Authority:

(1) The Board or an individual Trustee or counsel designated to act on behalf of the Board, upon determining that any person has knowledge or is in possession or custody of books, papers, documents or other objects relevant to the disposition of a Claim, may issue a subpoena requiring such person to appear and testify or to produce such books, papers, documents or other objects before the Board or counsel designated to act on behalf of the Trustees, at the time and place specified therein. Subpoenas are subject to the provisions of C.R.C.P. 45.

(2) If any person, without adequate excuse, fails to obey a subpoena, the Board or an individual Trustee or counsel designated to act on their behalf, may file with the Presiding Disciplinary Judge or the Supreme Court a verified statement setting forth the facts establishing such disobedience, and the Judge or Court may then, in its discretion, institute contempt proceedings. If such person is found guilty of contempt, the Judge or Court may compel payment of the costs of the contempt proceedings to be taxed by the Judge or Court.

(3) Regulation Counsel will allow the Board access to its records during and after an investigation of a Claim.

(4) The Board may request that testimony be presented to complete the record. Upon the Board's request, a Claimant or Respondent Attorney, or their representatives, may be given an opportunity to be heard before the Board.

Rule 252.13. Determination of Claims

(a) Eligibility Determination of Request for Claim: Upon receiving a report of investigation from Regulation Counsel, the Board will evaluate the Request for Claim as to the eligibility factors listed in Rule 252.10. The Board may deny a claim on the basis of eligibility without evaluating the amount of the Request for Claim.

(b) Board Review and Final Determination of Claims: Based on reports of investigation from Regulation Counsel, the Board will evaluate each eligible Claim and determine on the basis of all available evidence whether to reimburse a claim at all, in whole, or in part. The approval, partial approval, or denial of a claim requires a majority vote of the board members present at a meeting. The following provisions apply to the Board's consideration and determination:

(1) A final decision as defined in C.R.C.P. 241 disciplining a Respondent attorney for the same dishonest conduct alleged in a Claim, or a final judgment imposing civil or criminal liability for the same dishonest conduct alleged in a Claim, is conclusive evidence that the Respondent Attorney committed the dishonest conduct alleged in the Claim.

(2) Any proceeding upon a Claim need not be conducted according to rules relating to evidence, procedure and witnesses. Any relevant evidence may be admitted if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of the existence of any common law or statutory rule which might make improper the admission of such evidence over objection in court proceedings.

(3) The Board's determination is not a finding of dishonest conduct for purposes of professional discipline or other legal proceedings.

(c) Notice of Board Determination of a Claim: Both the Claimant and the Respondent Attorney will be advised of the status of the Board's consideration of the Request for Claim and Claim and must be informed of the final determination.

(d) Payment of Claims: With the assistance of Regulation Counsel, the Board will determine the order and manner of payment and pay all approved Claims, but unless the Board directs otherwise, no Claim should be approved during the pendency of a disciplinary proceeding involving the same act or conduct that is alleged in the Claim if the Respondent Attorney disputes the pertinent allegations. Payment of a Claim may be made in a lump sum or in installments in the discretion of the Board.

(e) Requests for Reconsideration: Either the Claimant or the Respondent Attorney may request in writing reconsideration of a Board determination within 35 days of the denial or determination of the amount of a Claim. If the Claimant or the Respondent Attorney fails to make a request or the request is denied, the decision of the Board is final.

Rule 252.14. Reimbursement from Fund is a Matter of Grace

Rule 252.15. Reimbursement and Fund Subrogation

(a) A Respondent Attorney whose dishonest conduct results in payment of a Claim is liable and obligated to the Fund for reimbursement and the Board may bring any action to enforce such obligation, including payment of costs. Reimbursement may be considered for purposes for readmission or reinstatement as stated in C.R.C.P. 252.3.

(b) As a condition of payment, a Claimant must provide the Fund with an assignment of the Claimant's rights up to the amount paid by the Fund against the Respondent Attorney, the attorney's legal representative, estate or assigns; and of the Claimant's rights against any third party or entity who may be liable for the Claimant's loss, and must execute a written agreement of the same. Such an agreement does not constitute legal advice or an attorney/client relationship, and a Claimant must be given opportunity to consult with their own counsel prior to entering the agreement.

(c) Upon commencement of an action by the Board as subrogee or assignee of a Claim, it must notify the Claimant, who may then join in such action to recover the Claimant's unpaid losses.

(d) In the event that the Claimant commences an action to recover unpaid losses against the Respondent Attorney or another entity who may be liable for the Claimant's loss, the Claimant must notify the Board of such action.

(e) The Claimant must cooperate in all efforts that the Board undertakes to achieve reimbursement for the Fund.

ANNOTATION

Ratification of unauthorized action. Claimant's acceptance of moneys from the fund does not constitute ratification of his attorney's unauthorized settlement with a third party if claim-

Rule 252.16. Confidentiality

(b) This section does not prohibit the Board and its agents from providing relevant and necessary information about the Request for Claim and Claimant to the Respondent Attorney for purposes of responding to the Request for Claim and investigation.

(c) Nothing in this Rule creates a legal right for the Claimant to obtain information from the Board, or for the Board to disclose information to the Claimant.

(d) With regard to all matters of disclosure under this Rule, upon a showing of cause, a court of competent jurisdiction may at any time order that a specified disclosure be restricted or deferred, or make such other protective orders as appropriate. The Presiding Disciplinary Judge is a court of competent jurisdiction, as provided in C.R.C.P. 242.6(c)(3).

(e) Consistent with C.R.C.P. 242.41, this rule is not to be construed to prohibit the release of relevant information by the Regulation Counsel or the Board, at their discretion, to other professional discipline agencies, other law enforcement authorities, or other entities or individuals.

Rule 256. The Colorado Lawyer Self-Assessment Program

(1) The Colorado Supreme Court Lawyer Self-Assessment Program. The Colorado Supreme Court hereby establishes the Colorado Lawyer Self-Assessment Program. The Colorado Lawyer Self-Assessment Program allows lawyers and law firms to evaluate confidentially and voluntarily the systems and procedures they have in place to promote compliance with professional obligations. The program gives lawyers and law firms the opportunity to improve the quality of legal services offered and to build greater client satisfaction through proactive practice review. This program also promotes access to justice, as well as inclusivity and well-being among lawyers and their staff.

Lawyer participation in this program furthers the objectives in the Preamble to Chapters 18-20 of the Colorado Rules of Civil Procedure.

The Colorado Supreme Court additionally finds that maintaining the confidentiality of information prepared, created, or communicated by a lawyer or by a law firm administrator, employee, or consultant acting under the direction of a lawyer, in connection with a lawyer self-assessment will enhance participation in the Colorado Lawyer Self-Assessment Program, which will further the objectives referenced above.

(2) Definitions. As used in this rule:

(a) “Confidential information” means any information, including, but not limited to, documents, notations, notes, records, writings, and responses prepared or created by a lawyer or by a law firm administrator, law firm employee, or consultant under the direction of a lawyer, in connection with a lawyer self-assessment. Confidential information includes any conclusions or evaluations made by a lawyer or by a law firm administrator, law firm employee, or consultant acting under the direction of a lawyer, in connection with a lawyer self-assessment. Confidential information also includes any oral, written, or electronic communication by or to a lawyer or law firm administrator, law firm employee, or consultant acting under the direction of a lawyer, in connection with a lawyer self-assessment. Confidential information further includes any information generated or communicated as part of a law practice review.

(b) “Lawyer self-assessment” means any lawyer self-assessment tool approved by the Colorado Supreme Court Advisory Committee. This includes both the online survey self-assessment tool and the downloadable and printable survey tool available at www.coloradosupremecourt.com.

(c) “Law practice review” means any oral, written, or electronic communications between a lawyer who has completed a lawyer self-assessment and one or more law practice reviewers for purposes of obtaining feedback and guidance on that lawyer’s practice.

(d) “Law practice reviewer” means a lawyer, and any consultant acting under the direction of a lawyer, who agrees to provide practice feedback and guidance to a lawyer following completion of a lawyer self-assessment.

(3) Program Administration. The Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel shall be responsible for the administration of the Colorado Lawyer Self-Assessment Program.

(4) Confidentiality.

(a) Confidential information shall not be utilized in any disciplinary or disability complaint or investigation, and shall be excluded as evidence in any disciplinary or disability proceeding before the Supreme Court Attorney Regulation Committee, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge of the Supreme Court, or the Colorado Supreme Court.

(b) Confidential information that lawyers or staff within a law firm communicate with other lawyers or staff in the same law firm and concerning a lawyer self-assessment shall be kept strictly confidential, shall not be utilized in any disciplinary or disability complaint or investigation, and shall be excluded as evidence in any disciplinary or disability proceeding before the Supreme Court Attorney Regulation Committee, the Presiding Disciplinary Judge of the Supreme Court, or the Colorado Supreme Court.

(c) The Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel shall not collect any personally-attributable answer data from lawyers who participate in the Colorado Lawyer Self-Assessment Program, nor shall any confidential information be used in any investigation or any disciplinary or disability proceeding initiated by the Office of Attorney Regulation Counsel.

(5) Immunity. Any law practice reviewer is immune from suit and liability for damages in any legal proceeding related to participation in law practice review, provided the law practice reviewer acted in good faith. Law practice reviewers shall be relieved of the duty of disclosure of information to authorities imposed by Colo. RPC 8.3(a).

COLORADO RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

PREAMBLE AND SCOPE

PREAMBLE: A LAWYER'S RESPONSIBILITIES

[1] A lawyer, as a member of the legal profession, is a representative of clients, an officer of the legal system and a public citizen having special responsibility for the quality of justice.

[2] As a representative of clients, a lawyer performs various functions. As advisor, a lawyer provides a client with an informed understanding of the client's legal rights and obligations and explains their practical implications. As advocate, a lawyer zealously asserts the client's position under the rules of the adversary system. As negotiator, a lawyer seeks a result advantageous to the client but consistent with requirements of honest dealings with others. As an evaluator, a lawyer acts by examining a client's legal affairs and reporting about them to the client or to others.

[3] In addition to these representational functions, a lawyer may serve as a third-party neutral, a nonrepresentational role helping the parties to resolve a dispute or other matter. Some of these Rules apply directly to lawyers who are or have served as third-party neutrals. See, e.g., Rules 1.12 and 2.4. In addition, there are Rules that apply to lawyers who are not active in the practice of law or to practicing lawyers even when they are acting in a nonprofessional capacity. For example, a lawyer who commits fraud in the conduct of a business is subject to discipline for engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation. See Rule 8.4.

[4] In all professional functions a lawyer should be competent, prompt and diligent. A lawyer should maintain communication with a client concerning the representation. A lawyer should keep in confidence information relating to representation of a client except so far as disclosure is required or permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.

[5] A lawyer's conduct should conform to the requirements of the law, both in professional service to clients and in the lawyer's business and personal affairs. A lawyer should use the law's procedures only for legitimate purposes and not to harass or intimidate others. A lawyer should demonstrate respect for the legal system and for those who serve it, including judges, other lawyers and public officials. While it is a lawyer's duty, when necessary, to challenge the rectitude of official action, it is also a lawyer's duty to uphold legal process.

[6] As a public citizen, a lawyer should seek improvement of the law, access to the legal system, the administration of justice and the quality of service rendered by the legal profession. As a member of a learned profession, a lawyer should cultivate knowledge of the law beyond its use for clients, employ that knowledge in reform of the law and work to strengthen legal education. In addition, a lawyer should further the public's understanding of and confidence in the rule of law and the justice system because legal institutions in a constitutional democracy depend on popular participation and support to maintain their authority. A lawyer should be mindful of deficiencies in the administration of justice and of the fact that the poor, and sometimes persons who are not poor, cannot afford adequate legal assistance. Therefore, all lawyers should devote professional time and resources and use civic influence to ensure equal access to our system of justice for all those who because of economic or social barriers cannot afford or secure adequate legal counsel. A lawyer should aid the legal profession in pursuing these objectives and should help the bar regulate itself in the public interest.

[7] Many of a lawyer's professional responsibilities are prescribed in the Rules of Professional Conduct, as well as substantive and procedural law. However, a lawyer is also guided by personal conscience and the approbation of professional peers. A lawyer should strive to attain the highest level of skill, to improve the law and the legal profession and to exemplify the legal profession's ideals of public service.

[8] A lawyer's responsibilities as a representative of clients, an officer of the legal system and a public citizen are usually harmonious. Thus, when an opposing party is well represented, a lawyer can be a zealous advocate on behalf of a client and at the same time assume that justice is being done. So also, a lawyer can be sure that preserving client confidences ordinarily serves the public interest because people are more likely to seek legal advice, and thereby heed their legal obligations, when they know their communications will be private.

[9] In the nature of law practice, however, conflicting responsibilities are encountered. Virtually all difficult ethical problems arise from conflict between a lawyer's responsibilities to clients, to the legal system and to the lawyer's own interest in remaining an ethical person while earning a satisfactory living. The Rules of Professional Conduct often prescribe terms for resolving such conflicts. Within the framework of these Rules, however, many difficult issues of professional discretion can arise. Such issues must be resolved through the exercise of sensitive professional and moral judgment guided by the basic principles underlying the Rules. These principles include the lawyer's obligation zealously to protect and pursue a client's legitimate interests, within the bounds of the law. Zealousness does not, under any circumstances, justify conduct that is unprofessional, discourteous or uncivil toward any person involved in the legal system.

[10] The legal profession is largely self-governing. Although other professions also have been granted powers of self-government, the legal profession is unique in this respect because of the close relationship between the profession and the processes of government and law enforcement. This connection is manifested in the fact that ultimate authority over the legal profession is vested largely in the courts.

[11] To the extent that lawyers meet the obligations of their professional calling, the occasion for government regulation is obviated. Self-regulation also helps maintain the legal profession's independence from government domination. An independent legal profession is an important force in preserving government under law, for abuse of legal authority is more readily challenged by a profession whose members are not dependent on government for the right to practice.

[12] The legal profession's relative autonomy carries with it special responsibilities of self-government. The profession has a responsibility to assure that its regulations are conceived in the public interest and not in furtherance of parochial or self-interested concerns of the bar. Every lawyer is responsible for observance of the Rules of Professional Conduct. A lawyer should also aid in securing their observance by other lawyers. Neglect of these responsibilities compromises the independence of the profession and the public interest which it serves.

[13] Lawyers play a vital role in the preservation of society. The fulfillment of this role requires an understanding by lawyers of their relationship to our legal system. The Rules of Professional Conduct, when properly applied, serve to define that relationship.

SCOPE

[14] The Rules of Professional Conduct are rules of reason. They should be interpreted with reference to the purposes of legal representation and of the law itself. Some of the Rules are imperatives, cast in the terms "shall" or "shall not." These define proper conduct for purposes of professional discipline. Others, generally cast in the term "may," are permissive and define areas under the Rules in which the lawyer has discretion to exercise professional judgment. No disciplinary action should be taken when the lawyer chooses not to act or acts within the bounds of such discretion. Other Rules define the nature of relationships between the lawyer and others. The Rules are thus partly obligatory and disciplinary and partly constructive and descriptive in that they define a lawyer's professional role. Many of the Comments use the term “should.” Comments do not add obligations to the Rules but provide guidance for practicing in compliance with the Rules.

[15] The Rules presuppose a larger legal context shaping the lawyer’s role. That context includes court rules and statutes relating to matters of licensure, laws defining specific obligations of lawyers and substantive and procedural law in general. The Comments are sometimes used to alert lawyers to their responsibilities under such other law.

[16] Compliance with the Rules, as with all law in an open society, depends primarily upon understanding and voluntary compliance, secondarily upon reinforcement by peer and public opinion and finally, when necessary, upon enforcement through disciplinary proceedings. The Rules do not, however, exhaust the moral and ethical considerations that should inform a lawyer, for no worthwhile human activity can be completely defined by legal rules. The Rules simply provide a framework for the ethical practice of law.

[17] Furthermore, for purposes of determining the lawyer’s authority and responsibility, principles of substantive law external to these Rules determine whether a client-lawyer relationship exists. Most of the duties flowing from the client-lawyer relationship attach only after the client has requested the lawyer to render legal services and the lawyer has agreed to do so. But there are some duties, such as that of confidentiality under Rule 1.6, that attach when the lawyer agrees to consider whether a client-lawyer relationship shall be established. See Rule 1.18. Whether a client-lawyer relationship exists for any specific purpose can depend on the circumstances and may be a question of fact.

[18] Under various legal provisions, including constitutional, statutory and common law, the responsibilities of government lawyers may include authority concerning legal matters that ordinarily reposes in the client in private client-lawyer relationships. For example, a lawyer for a government agency may have authority on behalf of the government to decide upon settlement or whether to appeal from an adverse judgment. Such authority in various respects is generally vested in the attorney general and the state’s attorney in state government, and their federal counterparts, and the same may be true of other government law officers. Also, lawyers under the supervision of these officers may be authorized to represent several government agencies in intragovernmental legal controversies in circumstances where a private lawyer could not represent multiple private clients. These Rules do not abrogate any such authority.

[19] Failure to comply with an obligation or prohibition imposed by a Rule is a basis for invoking the disciplinary process. The Rules presuppose that disciplinary assessment of a lawyer’s conduct will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances as they existed at the time of the conduct in question and in recognition of the fact that a lawyer often has to act upon uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation. Moreover, the Rules presuppose that whether or not discipline should be imposed for a violation, and the severity of a sanction, depend on all the circumstances, such as the willfulness and seriousness of the violation, extenuating factors and whether there have been previous violations.

[20] Violation of a Rule should not itself give rise to a cause of action against a lawyer nor should it create any presumption in such a case that a legal duty has been breached. In addition, violation of a Rule does not necessarily warrant any other nondisciplinary remedy, such as disqualification of a lawyer in pending litigation. The Rules are designed to provide guidance to lawyers and to provide a structure for regulating conduct through disciplinary agencies. They are not designed to be a basis for civil liability. Furthermore, the purpose of the Rules can be subverted when they are invoked by opposing parties as procedural weapons. The fact that a Rule is a just basis for a lawyer’s self-assessment, or for sanctioning a lawyer under the administration of a disciplinary authority, does not imply that an antagonist in a collateral proceeding or transaction has standing to seek enforcement of the Rule. Nevertheless, since the Rules do establish standards of conduct by lawyers, in appropriate cases, a lawyer’s violation of a Rule may be evidence of breach of the applicable standard of conduct.

[21] The Comment accompanying each Rule explains and illustrates the meaning and purpose of the Rule. The Preamble and this note on Scope provide general orientation. The Comments are intended as guides to interpretation, but the text of each Rule is authoritative.

ANNOTATION

The rules of professional conduct do not create a fiduciary duty, but they may evidence standards of care. The court may look to the rules to determine whether an attorney failed to adhere to a particular standard of care and thus breached his or her fiduciary duty to a client. Moye White LLP v. Beren, 2013 COA 89, 320 P.3d 373.

Rule 1.0. Terminology

(a) “Belief” or “believes” denotes that the person involved actually supposed the fact in question to be true. A person’s belief may be inferred from circumstances.

(b) “Confirmed in writing,” when used in reference to the informed consent of a person, denotes informed consent that is given in writing by the person or a writing that a lawyer promptly transmits to the person confirming an oral informed consent. See paragraph (e) for the definition of “informed consent.” If it is not feasible to obtain or transmit the writing at the time the person gives informed consent, then the lawyer must obtain or transmit it within a reasonable time thereafter.

(b-1) “Document” includes e-mail or other electronic modes of communication subject to being read or put into readable form.

(c) “Firm” or “law firm” denotes a partnership, professional company, or other entity or a sole proprietorship through which a lawyer or lawyers render legal services; or lawyers employed in a legal services organization or the legal department of a corporation or other organization.

(d) “Fraud” or “fraudulent” denotes conduct that is fraudulent under the substantive or procedural law of the applicable jurisdiction and has a purpose to deceive.

(e) “Informed consent” denotes the agreement by a person to a proposed course of conduct after the lawyer has communicated adequate information and explanation about the material risks of and reasonably available alternatives to the proposed course of conduct.

(f) “Knowingly,” “known,” or “knows” denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question. A person’s knowledge may be inferred from circumstances.

(g) “Partner” denotes a member of a partnership, an owner of a professional company, or a member of an association authorized to practice law.

(1) “Professional company” has the meaning ascribed to the term in C.R.C.P. 265.

(h) “Reasonable” or “reasonably” when used in relation to conduct by a lawyer denotes the conduct of a reasonably prudent and competent lawyer.

(i) “Reasonable belief” or “reasonably believes” when used in reference to a lawyer denotes that the lawyer believes the matter in question and that the circumstances are such that the belief is reasonable.

(j) “Reasonably should know” when used in reference to a lawyer denotes that a lawyer of reasonable prudence and competence would ascertain the matter in question.

(k) “Screened” denotes the isolation of a lawyer from any participation in a matter through the timely imposition of procedures within a firm that are reasonably adequate under the circumstances to protect information that the isolated lawyer is obligated to protect under these Rules or other law.

(l) “Substantial” when used in reference to degree or extent denotes a material matter of clear and weighty importance.

(m) “Tribunal” denotes a court, an arbitrator in a binding arbitration proceeding or a legislative body, administrative agency or other body acting in an adjudicative capacity. A legislative body, administrative agency or other body acts in an adjudicative capacity when a neutral official, after the presentation of evidence or legal argument by a party or parties, will render a binding legal judgment directly affecting a party’s interests in a particular matter.

(n) “Writing” or “written” denotes a tangible or electronic record of a communication or representation, including handwriting, typewriting, printing, photostating, photography, audio or videorecording, and electronic communications. A “signed” writing includes an electronic sound, symbol, or process attached to or logically associated with a writing and executed or adopted by a person with the intent to sign the writing.

COMMENT

Confirmed in Writing

[1] If it is not feasible to obtain or transmit a written confirmation at the time the client gives informed consent, then the lawyer must obtain or transmit it within a reasonable time thereafter. If a lawyer has obtained a client's informed consent, the lawyer may act in reliance on that consent so long as it is confirmed in writing within a reasonable time thereafter.

Firm

[2] Whether two or more lawyers constitute a firm within paragraph (c) can depend on the specific facts. For example, two practitioners who share office space and occasionally consult or assist each other ordinarily would not be regarded as constituting a firm. However, if they present themselves to the public in a way that suggests that they are a firm or conduct themselves as a firm, they should be regarded as a firm for purposes of the Rules. The terms of any formal agreement between associated lawyers are relevant in determining whether they are a firm, as is the fact that they have mutual access to information concerning the clients they serve. Furthermore, it is relevant in doubtful cases to consider the underlying purpose of the Rule that is involved. A group of lawyers could be regarded as a firm for purposes of the Rule that the same lawyer should not represent opposing parties in litigation, while it might not be so regarded for purposes of the Rule that information acquired by one lawyer is attributed to another.

[3] With respect to the law department of an organization, including the government, there is ordinarily no question that the members of the department constitute a firm within the meaning of the Rules of Professional Conduct. There can be uncertainty, however, as to the identity of the client. For example, it may not be clear whether the law department of a corporation represents a subsidiary or an affiliated corporation, as well as the corporation by which the members of the department are directly employed. A similar question can arise concerning an unincorporated association and its local affiliates.

[4] Similar questions can also arise with respect to lawyers in legal aid and legal services organizations. Depending upon the structure of the organization, the entire organization or different components of it may constitute a firm or firms for purposes of these Rules.

Fraud

[5] When used in these Rules, the terms "fraud" or "fraudulent" refer to conduct that is characterized as such under the substantive or procedural law of the applicable jurisdiction and has a purpose to deceive. This does not include merely negligent misrepresentation or negligent failure to apprise another of relevant information. For purposes of these Rules, it is not necessary that anyone has suffered damages or relied on the misrepresentation or failure to inform.

Informed Consent

[6] Many of the Rules of Professional Conduct require the lawyer to obtain the informed consent of a client or other person (e.g., a former client or, under certain circumstances, a prospective client) before accepting or continuing representation or pursuing a course of conduct. See, e.g., Rules 1.2(c), 1.6(a) and 1.7(b). The communication necessary to obtain such consent will vary according to the Rule involved and the circumstances giving rise to the need to obtain informed consent. The lawyer must make reasonable efforts to ensure that the client or other person possesses information reasonably adequate to make an informed decision. Ordinarily, this will require communication that includes a disclosure of the facts and circumstances giving rise to the situation, any explanation reasonably necessary to inform the client or other person of the material advantages and disadvantages of the proposed course of conduct and a discussion of the client's or other person's options and alternatives. In some circumstances it may be appropriate for a lawyer to advise a client or other person to seek the advice of other counsel. A lawyer need not inform a client or other person of facts or implications already known to the client or other person; nevertheless, a lawyer who does not personally inform the client or other person assumes the risk that the client or other person is inadequately informed and the consent is invalid. In determining whether the information and explanation provided are reasonably adequate, relevant factors include whether the client or other person is experienced in legal matters generally and in making decisions of the type involved, and whether the client or other person is independently represented by other counsel in giving the consent. Normally, such persons need less information and explanation than others, and generally a client or other person who is independently represented by other counsel in giving the consent should be assumed to have given informed consent.

[7] Obtaining informed consent will usually require an affirmative response by the client or other person. In general, a lawyer may not assume consent from a client's or other person's silence. Consent may be inferred, however, from the conduct of a client or other person who has reasonably adequate information about the matter. A number of Rules require that a person's consent be confirmed in writing. See Rules 1.7(b) and 1.9(a). For a definition of "writing" and "confirmed in writing," see paragraphs (n) and (b). Other Rules require that a client's consent be obtained in a writing signed by the client. See, e.g., Rules 1.8(a) and (g). For a definition of "signed," see paragraph (n).

Knowingly, Known or Knows

[7A] In considering the prior Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct, the Colorado Supreme Court has stated, "with one important exception [involving knowing misappropriation of property] we have considered a reckless state of mind, constituting scienter, as equivalent to 'knowing' for disciplinary purposes." In the Matter of Egbune, 971 P.2d 1065, 1069 (Colo.1999). See also People v. Rader, 822 P.2d 950 (Colo. 1992); People v. Small, 962 P.2d 258, 260 (Colo. 1998). For purposes of applying the ABA Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions, and in determining whether conduct is fraudulent, the Court will continue to apply the Egbune line of cases. However, where a Rule of Professional Conduct specifically requires the mental state of "knowledge," recklessness will not be sufficient to establish a violation of that Rule and to that extent, the Egbune line of cases will not be followed.

Screened

[8] This definition applies to situations where screening of a personally disqualified lawyer is permitted to remove imputation of a conflict of interest under Rules 1.10(e), 1.11, 1.12 or 1.18.

[9] The purpose of screening is to assure the affected parties that confidential information known by the personally disqualified lawyer remains protected. The personally disqualified lawyer should acknowledge the obligation not to communicate with any of the other lawyers in the firm with respect to the matter. Similarly, other lawyers in the firm who are working on the matter should be informed that the screening is in place and that they may not communicate with the personally disqualified lawyer with respect to the matter. Additional screening measures that are appropriate for the particular matter will depend on the circumstances. To implement, reinforce, and remind all affected lawyers of the presence of the screening, it may be appropriate for the firm to undertake such procedures as a written undertaking by the screened lawyer to avoid any communication with other firm personnel and any contact with any firm files or other information, including information in electronic form, relating to the matter, written notice and instructions to all other firm personnel forbidding any communication with the screened lawyer relating to the matter, denial of access by the screened lawyer to firm files or other information, including information in electronic form, relating to the matter, and periodic reminders of the screen to the screened lawyer and all other firm personnel.

[10] In order to be effective, screening measures must be implemented as soon as practical after a lawyer or law firm knows or reasonably should know that there is a need for screening.

Rule 1.1. Competence

A lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008; Comment [6] amended, and Comment [7] and [8] added, effective April 6, 2016; Comment [6] amended and adopted May 20, 2021, effective July 1, 2021.

COMMENT*Legal Knowledge and Skill*

[1] In determining whether a lawyer employs the requisite knowledge and skill in a particular matter, relevant factors include the relative complexity and specialized nature of the matter, the lawyer's general experience, the lawyer's training and experience in the field in question, the preparation and study the lawyer is able to give the matter and whether it is feasible to refer the matter to, or associate or consult with, a lawyer of established competence in the field in question. In many instances, the required proficiency is that of a general practitioner. Expertise in a particular field of law may be required in some circumstances.

[2] A lawyer need not necessarily have special training or prior experience to handle legal problems of a type with which the lawyer is unfamiliar. A newly admitted lawyer can be as competent as a practitioner with long experience. Some important legal skills, such as the analysis of precedent, the evaluation of evidence and legal drafting, are required in all legal problems. Perhaps the most fundamental legal skill consists of determining what kind of legal problems a situation may involve, a skill that necessarily transcends any particular specialized knowledge. A lawyer can provide adequate representation in a wholly novel field through necessary study. Competent representation can also be provided through the association of a lawyer of established competence in the field in question.

[3] In an emergency a lawyer may give advice or assistance in a matter in which the lawyer does not have the skill ordinarily required where referral to or consultation or association with another lawyer would be impractical. Even in an emergency, however, assistance should be limited to that reasonably necessary in the circumstances, for ill-considered action under emergency conditions can jeopardize the client's interest.

[4] A lawyer may accept representation where the requisite level of competence can be achieved by reasonable preparation. This applies as well to a lawyer who is appointed as counsel for an unrepresented person. See also Rule 6.2.

Thoroughness and Preparation

[5] Competent handling of a particular matter includes inquiry into and analysis of the factual and legal elements of the problem, and use of methods and procedures meeting the standards of competent practitioners. It also includes adequate preparation. The required attention and preparation are determined in part by what is at stake; major litigation and complex transactions ordinarily require more extensive treatment than matters of lesser complexity and consequence. An agreement between the lawyer and the client regarding the scope of the representation may limit the matters for which the lawyer is responsible. See Rule 1.2(c).

Retaining or Contracting With Other Lawyers

[6] Before a lawyer retains or contracts with other lawyers outside the lawyer's own firm to provide or assist in the provision of legal services to a client, the lawyer should ordinarily obtain informed consent from the client and must reasonably believe that the other lawyers' services will contribute to the competent and ethical representation of the client. See also Rules 1.2 (allocation of authority), 1.4 (communication with client), 1.5(d) (fee sharing), 1.6 (confidentiality), and 5.5(a) (unauthorized practice of law). The reasonableness of the decision to retain or contract with other lawyers outside the lawyer's own firm will depend upon the circumstances, including the education, experience, and reputation of the nonfirm lawyers; the nature of the services assigned to the nonfirm lawyers; and the legal protections, professional conduct rules, and ethical environments of the jurisdictions in which the services will be performed, particularly relating to confidential information.

[7] When lawyers from more than one law firm are providing legal services to the client on a particular matter, the lawyers ordinarily should consult with each other and the client about the scope of their respective representations and the allocation of responsibility among them. See Rule 1.2. When making allocations of responsibility in a matter pending before a tribunal, lawyers and parties may have additional obligations that are a matter of law beyond the scope of these Rules.

Maintaining Competence

[8] To maintain the requisite knowledge and skill, a lawyer should keep abreast of changes in the law and its practice, and changes in communications and other relevant technologies, engage in continuing study and education, and comply with all continuing legal education requirements to which the lawyer is subject. See Comments [18] and [19] to Rule 1.6.

Annotator’s note. Rule 1.1 is similar to Rule 1.1 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Disbarment was appropriate discipline for attorney who borrowed or otherwise obtained money from elderly and vulnerable client where attorney failed (a) to disclose that the likelihood of repayment was remote and the inadequacy of security purportedly given to secure loans; (b) to provide client with adequate legal documentation to ensure repayment; and (c) to obtain client’s consent to possible conflicts of interest. People v. Schindelar, 845 P.2d 1146 (Colo. 1993).

Duty of competence imposed by this rule violated by attorney’s failure to adequately supervise and monitor non-attorney employee’s actions on behalf of clients in bankruptcy proceedings. People v. Calvert, 280 P.3d 1269 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2011).

One-year and one-day suspension warranted where respondent failed to serve a cross-claim, failed to respond to several motions, failed to keep client informed, advanced defense that was not warranted by the facts and existing law, and misrepresented to client the basis for the judgment in favor of the opposing party. People v. Genchi, 849 P.2d 28 (Colo. 1993).

Attorney conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other rules sufficient to justify suspension when violation did not arise from neglect or willingness to take advantage of client’s vulnerability and is mitigated by her inexperience in the practice of law, her lack of any prior disciplinary record, the fact that she had already been held in contempt and punished by the district court, and the fact that there is no suggestion of selfish motivation. Attorney’s failure to appreciate the serious nature of conduct and the jurisdiction of the hearing board to discipline her is a serious matter meriting a period of suspension and a redetermination of her fitness before being permitted to practice law again. In re Roose, 69 P.3d 43 (Colo.), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1053, 124 S. Ct. 815, 157 L. Ed. 2d 705 (2003).

Nine-month suspension stayed upon the requirement to pay restitution to clients is justified when violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, particularly given the substantial and continuous incompetence, advancement of meritless claims, and significant financial harm that conduct caused clients. People v. Bontrager, 407 P.3d 1235 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2017).

Attorney’s conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify six-month suspension, stayed upon completion of two-year probationary period. Attorney neglected to provide competent representation by failing to take action to secure survivor benefits for client. In re Fisher, 202 P.3d 1186 (Colo. 2009) (decided under rules in effect prior to 2007 repeal and readoption).

Forty-five-day suspension warranted where respondent neglected child custody matter and had a prior public censure, a prior admonishment, and prior suspensions, but where the respondent did not demonstrate a dishonest or selfish motive and exhibited a cooperative attitude and expressions of remorse. People v. Dowhan, 951 P.2d 905 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney's neglect resulting in an untimely filing of an inadequate certificate of review and dismissal of his client's case, combined with fact that certificate contained false statements of material fact that attorney later repeated to an investigative counsel with the office of disciplinary counsel warranted a 45-day suspension, despite mitigating factors. People v. Porter, 980 P.2d 536 (Colo. 1999).

Neglecting to file response to motion for summary judgment and to return client files upon request was sufficient to result in one-year and one-day suspension. People v. Honaker, 847 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1993).

Thirty-day suspension warranted where attorney, with previous history of discipline and experience in practicing law, neglected a civil rights suit by failing to provide an accounting with respect to fees charged and by failing to return unearned fees. People v. Fritsche, 849 P.2d 31 (Colo. 1993).

Stipulated agreement and recommendation of suspension for 30 days based upon conditional admission of misconduct were warranted for attorney who committed unfair insurance claim settlement practices and tortious conduct in handling insurance investigation of fire claim that he was not competent to handle. People v. McClung, 953 P.2d 1282 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney's inaction over a period of more than two years and other disciplinary violations warrant suspension for 30 days where there are mitigating factors. People v. LaSalle, 848 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1993).

Thirty-day suspension was appropriate discipline where attorney advised client to take action in violation of child custody order but failed to warn her of criminal consequences of such action. People v. Aron, 962 P.2d 261 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure warranted where respondent negligently filed an involuntary bankruptcy petition that was ill-advised and without factual or legal basis. Mitigating factors included the fact that respondent's mental state was one of negligence rather than knowing misconduct, respondent had not been disciplined before, and respondent cooperated in the discipline action. People v. Moskowitz, 944 P.2d 76 (Colo. 1997).

Public censure appropriate where harm suffered by attorney's client was speculative, attorney retracted his misrepresentations and admitted to his client before the institution of disciplinary proceedings that he had done nothing on the client's appeal, attorney had no prior discipline, he made full and free disclosure of his misconduct to the grievance committee, and he expressed remorse for his misconduct. People v. Nelson, 848 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure appropriate where attorney failed to review district attorney's file and the transcript of the preliminary hearing before trial. People v. Bonner, 927 P.2d 836 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Doherty, 908 P.2d 1120 (Colo. 1996); People v. Doherty, 945 P.2d 1380 (Colo. 1997); People v. Kolko, 962 P.2d 979 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Smith, 847 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1993).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Hohertz, 926 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1996); People v. Dieters, 935 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1997); People v. Primavera, 942 P.2d 496 (Colo. 1997); In re Tolley, 975 P.2d 1115 (Colo. 1999); People v. Maynard, 238 P.3d 672 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2009); People v. Cochrane, 296 P.3d 1051 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2013); People v. Beecher, 350 P.3d 310 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015); People v. Al-Haqq, 470 P.3d 885 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016); People v. Taggart, 470 P.3d 699 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2017); People v. Efe, 477 P.3d 807 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2020); People v. Layton, 494 P.3d 693 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2021).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Walsh, 880 P.2d 766 (Colo. 1994); People v. Roybal, 949 P.2d 993 (Colo. 1997); People v. Calvert, 280 P.3d 1269 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2011); People v. Lindley, 349 P.3d 304 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015); People v. Palmer, 349 P.3d 312 (Colo. Attorney has burden of proving his own incompetence. Attorney who is appointed to represent criminal defendant and who believes he is incompetent to handle case has burden of proving his incompetence to the court and if attorney carries the burden, the trial court must decide whether attorney is capable of becoming competent on his own or whether appointment of co-counsel is necessary until attorney becomes competent. *Stern v. An attorney violates his obligations to his client in not filing suit until almost four years after retained, in not proceeding with the lawsuit during the period thereafter, in not procuring the client's permission to transfer the case to another attorney, and in not supervising its handling by that attorney, all of which actions constitute gross negligence and unprofessional conduct. People v. Zelinger, 179 Colo. 379, 504 P.2d 668 (1972).

A lawyer's failure to prepare a will for at least eight months after being employed to do so, especially where client is aged person, is grossly negligent and shows total lack of responsibility. People v. James, 180 Colo. 133, 502 P.2d 1105 (1972).

Attorney's only preparation for hearing in dissolution of marriage action occurring in car on way to courthouse constituted handling a legal matter without adequate preparation in violation of this rule. People v. Felker, 770 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1989).

Attorney violated this rule and C.R.P.C. 8.4(d) when he prepared and filed child support worksheets that failed to properly reflect the new stipulation concerning custody. People v. Davies, 926 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension for one year and one day was warranted for attorney who violated this rule and C.R.P.C. 8.4(d) by preparing and filing child support worksheets that failed to properly reflect the new stipulation concerning custody and where aggravating factors included a previous disciplinary history and failure to appear in the grievance proceedings. People v. Davies, 926 P.2d 572 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney violated this rule by taking no action on client's tort claim and by failing to file client's workers' compensation claim until July, 1985, although retained in 1984 to do so. People v. Felker, 770 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1989).

Attorney neglected legal matter entrusted to her by taking no action on client's claim which resulted in claim being barred by the statute of limitations. People v. Felker, 770 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1989).

Hindsight cannot replace a decision which counsel makes in the heat of trial. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

There was insufficient evidence to establish incompetence of defense counsel. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Conduct found to violate disciplinary rules. People v. Bugg, 635 P.2d 881 (Colo. 1981); People v. Razatos, 636 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1981), appeal dismissed, 455 U.S. 930, 102 S. Ct. 1415, 71 L. II. DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS.

A. Public Censure.

When a lawyer is negligent in handling estates, a public reprimand is warranted for his dereliction of duty. People v. Bailey, 180 Colo. 211, 503 P.2d 1023 (1972).

Attorney was negligent in closing two different estates in an untimely manner. Public censure is an appropriate sanction when a lawyer is negligent and does not act with reasonable diligence in representing a client, and causes injury or potential injury to a client. People v. Gebauer, 821 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1991).

Undertaking to provide services to clients in areas in which one lacks experience, which would ordinarily result in a reprimand, warrants a 30-day suspension when coupled with continued neglect after private censure. People v. Frank, 752 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1988).

Delay in handling and closing decedents' estates and failure to properly prepare inheritance tax returns, following prior letters of admonition, justify public censure. People v. Clark, 681 P.2d 482 (Colo. 1984).

An attorney's neglect and delay in handling an adoption proceeding, considered with other circumstances, justified public censure. People v. Moore, 681 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1984).

Neglect of a legal matter ordinarily warranting a letter of admonition by way of reprimand requires the imposition of public censure when such conduct is repeated after three letters of admonition. People v. Goodwin, 782 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1989).

Evidence sufficient to warrant public reprimand for dereliction of duty. People v. Atencio, 177 Colo. 439, 494 P.2d 837 (1972); People v. Zelinger, 179 Colo. 379, 504 P.2d 668 (1972).

Failure to obtain an order for service by publication, failing to return client phone calls, and failure to set a case for trial justify public censure. People v. Barr, 805 P.2d 440 (Colo. 1991).

Public censure for failure to promptly distribute proceeds of a settlement is warranted since respondent's negligence did little or no actual or potential injury to client. People v. Genchi, 824 P.2d 815 (Colo. 1992).

Public censure appropriate where attorney delayed hiring experts for case, neglected to familiarize himself and comply with the criminal discovery rules, inadequately prepared for trial, and proceeded to trial without knowing whether his own experts' testimony would support his client's defense. People v. Silvola, 888 P.2d 244 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure was appropriate where attorney's failure to appear at three hearings and to timely return a stipulation violated DR 1-102(A)(5) and, in aggravation, there was a pattern of misconduct. People v. Cabral, 888 P.2d 245 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure justified where attorney failed to attend to bankruptcy proceeding and scheduled meetings, failed to timely file pleadings and responses, and allowed his paralegal to engage in unauthorized practice of law. People v. Fry, 875 P.2d 222 (Colo. 1994).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Ashley, 796 P.2d 962 (Colo. 1990); People v. Nichols, 796 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1990); People v. Taylor, 799 P.2d 930 (Colo. 1990); People v. Smith, 819 P.2d 497 (Colo. 1991); People v. Odom, 829 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992); People v. Sadler, 831 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1992); People v. Fry, 875 P.2d 222 (Colo. 1994); People v. O'Donnell, 955 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Driscoll, 716 P.2d 1086 (Colo. 1986); People v. Mayer, 716 P.2d 1094 (Colo. 1986); People v. Carpenter, 731 P.2d 726 (Colo. 1987); People v. Wilson, 745 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1987); People v. Smith, 757 P.2d 628 (Colo. 1988); People v. Dowhan, 759 P.2d 4 (Colo. 1988); People v. Smith, 769 P.2d 1078 (Colo. 1989); People v. Baird, 772 P.2d 110 (Colo. 1989); People v. Fieman, 788 P.2d 830 (Colo. 1990); People v. Good, 790 P.2d 331 (Colo. 1990); People v. Brinn, 801 P.2d 1195 (Colo. 1990); People v. Moffitt, 801

P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1990); People v. Richardson, 820 P.2d 1120 (Colo. 1991); People v. Odom, 829 P.2d 855 (Colo. 1992).

B. Suspension.

The failure for more than five years to record a deed and to return it and the abstract constitutes gross professional negligence and carelessness warranting a suspension of one year from the practice of law. People v. James, 176 Colo. 299, 490 P.2d 291 (1971).

Where an attorney misrepresents to a client that he has filed a case, fails for two years to take action on behalf of another client, and, knowing that a hearing had been set on charges against him, deliberately leaves the jurisdiction of the court without making any arrangements with the grievance committee and without arranging for representation, his conduct warrants suspension from the bar. People v. Kane, 177 Colo. 378, 494 P.2d 96 (1972).

Where counsel appears to be totally oblivious to obligations to render the services for which he is paid, this crass irresponsibility or callous indifference in the handling of a client's affairs is inexcusable under any circumstances and warrants indefinite suspension from the bar. People v. Van Nocker, 176 Colo. 354, 490 P.2d 697 (1971).

Attorney suspended for three years for repeated neglect and delay in handling legal matters, failure to comply with the directions contained in a letter of admonition, and failure to answer letter of complaint from the grievance committee constitute a violation of this rule, and, with other offenses of the code of professional responsibility. People v. Hebenstreit, 764 P.2d 51 (Colo. 1988).

Suspension of lawyer for three years, which is the longest possible period for suspension, is appropriate where there was extensive pattern of client neglect and intentional deception in client matters over a period of years. Anything less would be too lenient. People v. Hellewell, 811 P.2d 386 (Colo. 1991).

Suspension for three years is appropriate where lawyer failed to respond to motions or appear at hearing, resulting in dismissal of clients' bankruptcy proceeding, thereby increasing clients' debts tenfold. The hearing board further found that the attorney engaged in bad faith obstruction of the disciplinary proceedings and refused to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct or the vulnerability of his clients. People v. Farrant, 883 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted for attorney who "represented" client for a period of 19 months without that person's knowledge or consent, even asserting a counterclaim on his behalf without talking to him; who did not communicate with him in any manner for an extended period of time and then did not withdraw within a reasonable time after being unable to contact him; and who failed to answer discovery requests, resulting in the entries of default and then a default judgment against him. People v. Silvola, 915 P.2d 1281 (Colo. 1996).

Disbarment not warranted where there was mitigating evidence concerning attorney's mental and physical disabilities. Instead, the board imposed a three-year suspension with a condition for reinstatement that professional medical evidence be presented that the disabilities do not interfere with the attorney's ability to practice law. People v. Stewart, 892 P.2d 875 (Colo. 1995).

Suspension for three years, the longest period available, was appropriate in case where violation of this rule and others would otherwise have justified disbarment but mitigating factors included personal and emotional problems, interim rehabilitation, and remorse. People v. McCaffrey, 925 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension for three years, rather than disbarment, was appropriate where violation of this rule and others caused serious harm to attorney's clients, but mitigating factors were present, including no previous discipline in 14 years of practice, personal and emotional problems, and cooperation and demonstrated remorse in proceedings. People v. Henderson, 967 P.2d 1038 (Colo. 1998).

Eighteen-month suspension warranted where attorney failed to notify client of an actual conflict of interest and subsequently neglected a matter, but did so without dishonest or selfish motive. People v. Watson, 833 P.2d 50 (Colo. 1992).

Failure to appear after accepting retainer justifies suspension. Where, after accepting a retainer for the defense of an action, an attorney failed to appear or advise his client of the fact that he was not going to appear and thereby prejudiced his client's case, the attorney's conduct violated the code of professional responsibility and C.R.C.P. 241.6. People v. Southern, 638 P.2d 787 (Colo. 1982).

Failure to respond to repeated inquiries from client and client's parents, failure to monitor client's case in the court system, including failure to respond to calls from the court clerk, and failure to return client's urgent calls after client was arrested and jailed constitutes a pattern of neglect and warrants 30 day suspension. People v. O'Leary, 752 P.2d 530 (Colo. 1988).

Suspension is fitting sanction when lawyer knowingly fails to perform services for a client and thereby causes injury to such client. People v. Masson, 782 P.2d 335 (Colo. 1988).

Initiation of unnecessary proceeding and legal incompetence warrant suspension. Where lawyer initiates unnecessary probate proceeding, as well as fails to meet minimum standards of legal competence for corporate and mining law problems which he has undertaken, his professional misconduct warrants suspension from the bar. People ex rel. Goldberg v. Gordon, 199 Colo. 296, 607 P.2d 995 (1980).

Failure to designate record on appeal, causing nine-month delay in criminal appeal, considered with other violations, justifies suspension. People v. May, 745 P.2d 218 (Colo. 1987).

Suspension is appropriate discipline given number and severity of instances of misconduct, including pattern of neglect over clients' affairs over lengthy period and in variety of circumstance and misrepresentation in dissolution case to client who wished to remarry concerning the filing of a dissolution petition. Considering misconduct in light of proper mitigating factors, suspension was appropriate. People v. Griffin, 764 P.2d 1166 (Colo. 1988).

There is evidence to warrant indefinite suspension. People v. Stewart, 178 Colo. 352, 497 P.2d 1003 (1972).

More severe sanction of 90-day suspension rather than public censure appropriate discipline for attorney who neglected client matter, caused potential injury to client, and engaged in conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice when aggravated by a history of five prior instances of disciplinary offenses for neglect, pattern of misconduct, refusal to acknowledge wrongful nature of conduct, vulnerability of victim, and substantial experience in the practice of law. People v. Dolan, 813 P.2d 733 (Colo. 1991).

Pattern of inaction, including failure to perform adequate research on statute of limitations problem, violated sections (A)(2) and (A)(3) and other disciplinary rules, justifying six-month suspension. People v. Barber, 799 P.2d 936 (Colo. 1990).

Failing to resolve an inability to proceed on behalf of a client, neglecting to respond to communications from the grievance committee, failing to fulfill commitments made to the investigator for the disciplinary counsel, and misrepresenting to such investigator the status of the case under investigation is conduct warranting suspension. People v. Chappell, 783 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1989).

Failing to obtain substitute counsel after accepting a retainer while under suspension constitutes neglect of a legal matter. People v. Redman, 819 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1991).

Failure to file bankruptcy petition warrants suspension from the practice of law for a period of 90 days. The respondent's misconduct was compounded by his prolonged refusal to respond to his client's inquiries and his failure to inform his client of domicile issues bearing on her desire to obtain a discharge in bankruptcy in Colorado. People v. Cain, 791 P.2d 1133 (Colo. 1990).

Delay in filing bankruptcy petition and failing to file complaint or return retainer warrants six-month suspension. People v. Archuleta, 898 P.2d 1064 (Colo. 1995).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted where attorney misrepresented to client that a trial had been scheduled, that continuances and new trial settings had been made, that a settlement had been reached, and where the attorney's previous, similar discipline, was a significant aggravating factor. People v. Smith, 888 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1995).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted for attorney who "represented" client for a period of 19 months without that person's knowledge or consent, even asserting a counterclaim on his behalf without talking to him; who did not communicate with him in any manner for an extended period of time and then did not withdraw within a reasonable time after being unable to contact him; and who failed to answer discovery requests, resulting in the entries of default and then a default judgment against him. People v. Silvola, 915 P.2d 1281 (Colo. 1996).

Failure to communicate with clients, court, and opposing counsel, misrepresentation of the status of the proceedings to client, failure to investigate clients' case, failure to attend one hearing and being late for another hearing, and refusing client an accounting and a refund of the unused portion of attorney fee, justifies three-year suspension. People v. Wilson, 814 P.2d 791 (Colo. 1991).

Ninety-day suspension warranted where attorney neglected client's legal matter, failed to pay for court reporting services, and showed complete disregard of grievance proceedings. People v. Whitaker, 814 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991).

Suspension for 90 days is warranted for attorney's continued practice of law during a period of suspension in view of prior record and substantial experience in practice of law even if attorney incorrectly believed that he had been reinstated. People v. Dieters, 883 P.2d 1050 (Colo. 1994).

Suspension of one year and one day warranted for attorney whose misconduct included neglect of legal matter, failure to seek lawful objectives of client, intentional failure to carry out employment contract resulting in intentional prejudice or damage to client, and who also pled guilty to class 5 felony of failure to pay employee income tax withheld. People v. Franks, 866 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1994).

Absent mitigating or aggravating factors, suspension appropriate when a lawyer knowingly fails to perform services for a client or engages in a pattern of neglect and causes injury or potential injury to a client. People v. Glaess, 884 P.2d 722 (Colo. 1994).

It was appropriate to require an attorney to petition for reinstatement under C.R.C.P. 241.22 (b) to (d), even though his period of suspension for violating section (A)(3) did not exceed one year, where the extraordinary number of previous matters in which the attorney was cited for neglect showed the need for a demonstration that he had been rehabilitated. People v. C De Baca, 862 P.2d 273 (Colo. 1993).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Moya, 793 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1990); People v. Creasey, 793 P.2d 1159 (Colo. 1990); People v. Schmad, 793 P.2d 1162 (Colo. 1990); People v. Baptie, 796 P.2d 978 (Colo. 1990); People v. Garrett, 802 P.2d 1082 (Colo. 1990); People v. Rhodes, 803 P.2d 514 (Colo. 1991); People v. Flores, 804 P.2d 192 (Colo. 1991); People v. Crimaldi, 804 P.2d 863 (Colo. 1991); 854 P.2d 782 (Colo. 1993); People v. Davis, 911 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1996); People v. Calvert, 915 P.2d 1310 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Yaklich, 646 P.2d 938 (Colo. 1982); People v. Pilgrim, 698 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1985); People v. Convery, 704 P.2d 296 (Colo. 1985); People v. Foster, 716 P.2d 1069 (Colo. 1986); People v. Barnett, 716 P.2d 1076 (Colo. 1986); People v. Fleming, 716 P.2d 1090 (Colo. 1986); *People v. C. Disbarment.

Attorney disbarred for continued pattern of conduct involving neglect and misrepresentation and for failure to cooperate in investigation by grievance committee. People v. Young, 673 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1984); People v. Johnston, 759 P.2d 10 (Colo. 1988).

Failure to file bankruptcy petition for eight months justifies disbarment. When a lawyer, after being paid for his services, neglects to file a bankruptcy petition for his client for a period of approximately eight months, during which time the client is sued and his wages attached on several occasions, the lawyer's gross neglect and failure to carry out a contract of employment justify disbarment. People v. McMichael, 199 Colo. 433, 609 P.2d 633 (1980).

Failure to timely file estate tax returns on behalf of personal representative of estate, failure to be adequately prepared for argument at scheduled hearing, failure to file timely notice of alibi, and failure to notify opposing counsel constitutes continuing pattern of neglect causing risk of serious injury to clients and justifies disbarment. People v. Stewart, 752 P.2d 528 (Colo. 1987).

Failing to commence any action on behalf of a client, exploiting a client's friendship and trust to extort funds for one's personal use, and failing to cooperate with the grievance committee in its investigation of complaints with respect to such matters is conduct warranting disbarment. People v. McMahon, 782 P.2d 336 (Colo. 1989).

Where an attorney demonstrates an extreme indifference to the welfare of his clients and the status of their cases and an extreme insensitivity to his professional duties in the face of adverse judgments due to neglect, client complaints, and repeated disciplinary proceedings, disbarment is the appropriate sanction. People v. Wyman, 782 P.2d 339 (Colo. 1989).

Conduct which causes a client serious or potentially serious injury and demonstrates a complete lack of concern for a client's interests and welfare warrants disbarment. People v. Lyons, 762 P.2d 143 (Colo. 1988).

Continuing to practice law while suspended is conduct justifying disbarment. People v. James, 731 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1987).

Facts sufficient to justify disbarment of attorney for failure to comply with registration requirements of C.R.C.P. 227, misappropriation of funds, and improper withdrawal from employment. People v. Scudder, 197 Colo. 99, 590 P.2d 493 (1979).

Total disregard of obligation to protect a client's rights and interests over an extended period of time in conjunction with the violation of a number of disciplinary rules and an extended prior record of discipline requires most severe sanction of disbarment. People v. O'Leary, 783 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1989).

Attorney's continued practice of law while under an order of suspension, with no efforts to wind up the legal practice, and the failure to take action to protect the legal interests of the attorney's clients, warrants disbarment. People v. Wilson, 832 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1992).

Disbarment was the proper remedy where the attorney was afforded multiple opportunities including two suspensions and court ordered rehabilitation and where attorney's conduct demonstrated (a) neglect of legal matters entrusted to him; (b) misrepresentation to the client and the grievance committee; and (c) a pattern of neglect followed by the respondent that had the potential of causing serious injury to his clients. People v. Susman, 787 P.2d 1119 (Colo. 1990).

Disbarment proper remedy for lawyer who, shortly after admission to bar and continuing for two years, embarked on a course of conduct resulting in ten separate instances of professional misconduct, some of which presented the potential for serious harm to clients and to the administration of justice. People v. Murray, 887 P.2d 1016 (Colo. 1994).

A lawyer's continued practice of law while under an order of suspension, with no efforts to wind up the legal practice, and failure to take action to protect the legal interests of the lawyer's clients, warrants disbarment. People v. Wilson, 832 P.2d 943 (Colo. 1992).

Pattern of misconduct involving failure to render services, multiple offenses, and conversion of clients' property sufficient to warrant disbarment. People v. Vermillion, 814 P.2d 795 (Colo. 1991).

Disbarment appropriate where attorney converted client funds, neglected a legal matter entrusted to him, and had a history of discipline. People v. Grossenbach, 814 P.2d 810 (Colo. 1991).

Disbarment appropriate when attorney neglected numerous legal matters and engaged in other conduct prejudicial to client and the administration of justice. People v. Theodore, 926 P.2d 1237 (Colo. 1996).

Failure to respond to discovery and motions, failure to attend case management hearing, and failure to inform client of progress of a civil case is grounds for disbarment. People v. Hebenstreit, 823 P.2d 125 (Colo. 1992).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Ashley, 817 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1991); People v. Rouse, 817 P.2d 967 (Colo. 1991); People v. Margolin, 820 P.2d 347 (Colo. 1991); People v. Koransky, 824 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1992); People v. Bradley, 825 P.2d 475 (Colo. 1992); *People v. Rule 1.2. Scope of Representation and Allocation of Authority Between Client and Lawyer

(a) Subject to paragraphs (c) and (d), a lawyer shall abide by a client's decisions concerning the objectives of representation and, as required by Rule 1.4, shall consult with the client as to the means by which they are to be pursued. A lawyer may take such action on behalf of the client as is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation. A lawyer shall abide by a client's decision whether to settle a matter. In a criminal case, the lawyer shall abide by the client's decision, after consultation with the lawyer, as to a plea to be entered, whether to waive jury trial and whether the client will testify.

(b) A lawyer's representation of a client, including representation by appointment, does not constitute an endorsement of the client's political, economic, social or moral views or activities.

(c) A lawyer may limit the scope or objectives, or both, of the representation if the limitation is reasonable under the circumstances and the client gives informed consent. A lawyer may provide limited representation to pro se parties as permitted by C.R.C.P. 11(b) and C.R.C.P. 311(b).

(d) A lawyer shall not counsel a client to engage, or assist a client, in conduct that the lawyer knows is criminal or fraudulent, but a lawyer may discuss the legal consequences of any proposed course of conduct with a client and may counsel or assist a client to make a good faith effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law.

COMMENT

Allocation of Authority between Client and Lawyer

[1] Paragraph (a) confers upon the client the ultimate authority to determine the purposes to be served by legal representation, within the limits imposed by law and the lawyer's professional obligations. The decisions specified in paragraph (a), such as whether to settle a civil matter, must also be made by the client. See Rule 1.4(a)(1) for the lawyer's duty to communicate with the client about such decisions. With respect to the means by which the client's objectives are to be pursued, the lawyer shall consult with the client as required by Rule 1.4(a)(2) and may take such action as is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation.

[2] On occasion, however, a lawyer and a client may disagree about the means to be used to accomplish the client's objectives. Clients normally defer to the special knowledge and skill of their lawyer with respect to the means to be used to accomplish their objectives, particularly with respect to technical, legal and tactical matters. Conversely, lawyers usually defer to the client regarding such questions as the expense to be incurred and concern for third persons who might be adversely affected. Because of the varied nature of the matters about which a lawyer and client might disagree and because the actions in question may implicate the interests of a tribunal or other persons, this Rule does not prescribe how such disagreements are to be resolved. Other law, however, may be applicable and should be consulted by the lawyer. The lawyer should also consult with the client and seek a mutually acceptable resolution of the disagreement. If such efforts are unavailing and the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement with the client, the lawyer may withdraw from the representation. See Rule 1.16(b)(4). Conversely, the client may resolve the disagreement by discharging the lawyer. See Rule 1.16(a)(3).

[3] At the outset of a representation, the client may authorize the lawyer to take specific action on the client's behalf without further consultation. Absent a material change in circumstances and subject to Rule 1.4, a lawyer may rely on such an advance authorization. The client may, however, revoke such authority at any time.

[4] In a case in which the client appears to be suffering diminished capacity, the lawyer's duty to abide by the client's decisions is to be guided by reference to Rule 1.14.

Independence from Client's Views or Activities

[5] Legal representation should not be denied to people who are unable to afford legal services, or whose cause is controversial or the subject of popular disapproval. By the same token, representing a client does not constitute approval of the client's views or activities.

[5A] Regarding communications with clients when a lawyer retains or contracts with other lawyers outside the lawyer's own firm to provide or assist in the providing of legal services to the client, see Comment [6] to Rule 1.1.

[5B] Regarding communications with clients and with lawyers outside of the lawyer's firm when lawyers from more than one firm are providing legal services to the client on a particular matter, see Comment [7] to Rule 1.1.

Agreements Limiting Scope of Representation

[6] The scope of services to be provided by a lawyer may be limited by agreement with the client or by the terms under which the lawyer's services are made available to the client. When a lawyer has been retained by an insurer to represent an insured, for example, the representation may be limited to matters related to the insurance coverage. A limited representation may be appropriate because the client has limited objectives for the representation. In addition, the terms upon which representation is undertaken may exclude specific means that might otherwise be used to accomplish the client's objectives. Such limitations may exclude actions that the client thinks are too costly or that the lawyer regards as repugnant or imprudent.

[7] Although this Rule affords the lawyer and client substantial latitude to limit the representation, the limitation must be reasonable under the circumstances. If, for example, a client's objective is limited to securing general information about the law the client needs in order to handle a common and typically uncomplicated legal problem, the lawyer and client may agree that the lawyer's services will be limited to a brief telephone consultation. Such a limitation, however, would not be reasonable if the time allotted was not sufficient to yield advice upon which the client could rely. Although an agreement for a limited representation does not exempt a lawyer from the duty to provide competent representation, the limitation is a factor to be considered when determining the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation. See Rule 1.1.

[8] All agreements concerning a lawyer's representation of a client must accord with the Rules of Professional Conduct and other law. See, e.g., Rules 1.1, 1.8 and 5.6.

Criminal, Fraudulent and Prohibited Transactions

[9] Paragraph (d) prohibits a lawyer from knowingly counseling or assisting a client to commit a crime or fraud. This prohibition, however, does not preclude the lawyer from giving an honest opinion about the actual consequences that appear likely to result from a client's conduct. Nor does the fact that a client uses advice in a course of action that is criminal or fraudulent of itself make a lawyer a party to the course of action. There is a critical distinction between presenting an analysis of legal aspects of questionable conduct and recommending the means by which a crime or fraud might be committed with impunity.

[10] When the client's course of action has already begun and is continuing, the lawyer's responsibility is especially delicate. The lawyer is required to avoid assisting the client, for example, by drafting or delivering documents that the lawyer knows are fraudulent or by suggesting how the wrongdoing might be concealed. A lawyer may not continue assisting a client in conduct that the lawyer originally supposed was legally proper but then discovers is criminal or fraudulent. The lawyer must, therefore, withdraw from the representation of the client in the matter. See Rule 1.16(a). In some cases, withdrawal alone might be insufficient. It may be necessary for the lawyer to give notice of the fact of withdrawal and to disaffirm any opinion, document, affirmation or the like. See Rule 4.1.

[11] Where the client is a fiduciary, the lawyer may be charged with special obligations in dealings with a beneficiary.

[12] Paragraph (d) applies whether or not the defrauded party is a party to the transaction. Hence, a lawyer must not participate in a transaction to effectuate criminal or fraudulent avoidance of tax liability. Paragraph (d) does not preclude undertaking a criminal defense incident to a general retainer for legal services to a lawful enterprise. The last clause of paragraph (d) recognizes that determining the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation may require a course of action involving disobedience of the statute or regulation or of the interpretation placed upon it by governmental authorities.

[13] If a lawyer comes to know or reasonably should know that a client expects assistance not permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law or if the lawyer intends to act contrary to the client's instructions, the lawyer must consult with the client regarding the limitations on the lawyer's conduct. See Rule 1.4(a)(5).

[14] A lawyer may counsel a client regarding the validity, scope, and meaning of Colorado constitution article XVIII, secs. 14 & 16, and may assist a client in conduct that the lawyer reasonably believes is permitted by these constitutional provisions and the statutes, regulations, orders, and other state or local provisions implementing them. In these circumstances, the lawyer shall also advise the client regarding related federal law and policy.

Annotator’s note. Rule 1.2 is similar to Rule 1.2 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Even though section (c) of this rule allows unbundling of legal services, an attorney remains obligated to comply with C.R.C.P. 11(b). In re Merriam, 250 B.R. 724 (B.R. D. Colo. 2000).

Having a litigant appear to be pro se when in truth an attorney is authoring pleadings and necessarily guiding the course of the litigation with an unseen hand is disingenuous and far below the level of candor that must be met by members of the bar. Such conduct is contrary to section (d) of this rule. Johnson v. Bd. of County Comm’rs of Fremont, 868 F. Supp. 1226 (D. Colo. 1994).

Any provision in an agreement to provide legal services that would deprive a client of the right to control settlement is unenforceable as against public policy, including a provision that purports to prohibit the client from unreasonably refusing to settle. A client’s right to reject settlement is absolute and unqualified; parties to litigation have the right to control their own cases. Jones v. Feiger, Collison & Killmer, 903 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1994), rev’d on other grounds, 926 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1996).

Representing to client that a case had been settled, on terms that the client had not agreed to, violated section (a). People v. Muhr, 370 P.3d 667 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015).

The decision to enter a guilty plea or withdraw a guilty plea is one of the few fundamental choices that must be decided by the defendant alone. People v. Davis, 2012 COA 1, 412 P.3d 376, rev’d on other grounds, 2015 CO 36M, 352 P.3d 950.

Aiding client to violate custody order sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Chappell, 927 P.2d 829 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension for three years, the longest period available, was appropriate in case where violation of this rule and others would otherwise have justified disbarment but mitigating factors included personal and emotional problems, interim rehabilitation, and remorse. People v. McCaffrey, 925 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension for three years appropriate when attorney circumvented proper channels for the adoption of a child by falsely listing her own husband as the birth father on the baby’s birth certificate, counseled her husband to engage in fraudulent conduct, and provided false information on a petition for stepparent adoption. People v. Ritland, 327 P.3d 914 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

Suspension for one year and one day appropriate when attorney neglected to file response to motion for summary judgment and to return client files upon request. People v. Honaker, 847 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure appropriate where harm suffered by attorney’s client was speculative, attorney retracted his misrepresentations and admitted to his client before the institution of disciplinary proceedings that he had done nothing on the client’s appeal, attorney had no prior discipline, he made full and free disclosure of his misconduct to the grievance committee, and he expressed remorse for his misconduct. People v. Nelson, 848 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1993).

If prosecution witness advises the prosecutor that he or she knows or recognizes one of the jurors, the prosecutor has an affirmative duty immediately to notify the court and opposing counsel of the witness’ statement. People v. Drake, 841 P.2d 364 (Colo. App. 1992).

When a lawyer accepts fees from clients and then abandons those clients while keeping their money and causing serious harm, disbarment is appropriate. People v. Steinman, 930 P.2d 596 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension, stayed upon completion of one-year period of probation with conditions.

People v. Bendinelli, 329 P.3d 300 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2014).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Steinman, 930 P.2d 596 (Colo. 1997); In re Bilderback, 971 P.2d 1061 (Colo. 1999).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Sousa, 943 P.2d 448 (Colo. 1997).

Cases Decided Under Former DR 2-110.

Law reviews. For article, "Coping with the Paper Avalanche: A Survey on the Disposition of Client Files", see 16 Colo. Law. 1787 (1987).

Suspension for one year and one day warranted for attorney who "represented" client for a period of 19 months without that person's knowledge or consent, even asserting a counterclaim on his behalf without talking to him; who did not communicate with him in any manner for an extended period of time and then did not withdraw within a reasonable time after being unable to contact him; and who failed to answer discovery requests, resulting in the entries of default and then a default judgment against him. People v. Silvola, 915 P.2d 1281 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney who undertakes to conduct action impliedly agrees that he will pursue it to some conclusion; and he is not free to abandon it without reasonable cause. Sobol v. District Court, 619 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1980); Anderson, Calder & Lembke v. District Court, 629 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1981).

Even where cause may exist, attorney's withdrawal must be undertaken in proper manner, duly protective of his client's rights and liabilities. Sobol v. District Court, 619 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1980).

Attorney's withdrawal from employment was improper where attorney gave clients insufficient notice of her intention to withdraw, failed to return the file of one client, and took no steps to avoid foreseeable injury to the clients' interests. People v. Felker, 770 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1989).

Trial dates accepted shall be honored before withdrawal from employment. When public defender or a busy defense lawyer finds that his representation of one client is inimical to his representation of another client and he must make an election as to the client he will represent, he has a heavy duty to the court to see that he honors dates that he has agreed to for the trial of a case. Watson v. District Court, 199 Colo. 76, 604 P.2d 1165 (1980).

Attorney's withdrawal is within trial court's discretion. The question of whether an attorney should be permitted to withdraw his general appearance on behalf of a litigant in a civil case is, under ordinary circumstances, within the discretion of the trial court; and its decision will not be reversed unless this discretion has been demonstrably abused. Sobol v. District Court, 619 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1980).

Motions for withdrawal of counsel are addressed to the discretion of the court and will not be reversed unless clear error or abuse is shown. Anderson, Calder & Lembke v. District Court, 629 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1981).

A decision as to whether counsel should be permitted to withdraw must lie within the sound discretion of the trial judge. As long as the trial court has a reasonable basis for believing that the lawyer-client relation has not deteriorated to the point where counsel is unable to give effective aid in the fair presentation of a defense, the court is justified in refusing to appoint new counsel. People v. Schultheis, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

The question of whether a lawyer may withdraw during course of trial due to the client's conduct is within the trial court's discretion and court must balance need for orderly administration of justice with facts underlying request for withdrawal. People v. Rubanowitz, 688 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984).

The trial court's decision will not be disturbed on review absent abuse. The decision of the trial court to deny a motion to withdraw will not be disturbed on review absent a clear abuse of discretion. People v. Schultheis, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Disagreement concerning counsel's refusal to call witnesses is insufficient grounds. A disagreement between defense counsel and the accused concerning counsel's refusal to call certain witnesses is not sufficient to require the trial judge to grant the motion to withdraw and replace defense counsel. People v. Schultheis, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Filing of a grievance because of disagreement as to trial tactics is insufficient grounds. Mere filing of grievance concerning counsel's refusal to file certain motions and refusal to file a civil action is not sufficient to require trial judge to grant the motion to withdraw and replace defense counsel. People v. Martinez, 722 P.2d 445 (Colo. App. 1986).

Counsel should request permission to withdraw where client insists on presenting perjured testimony. When a serious disagreement arises between the defense counsel and the accused, and counsel is unable to dissuade his client from insisting that fabricated testimony be presented by a witness, counsel should request permission to withdraw from the case in accordance with the procedures set forth in this opinion. If the motion to withdraw is denied, however, he must continue to serve as defense counsel. People v. Schultheis, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

When confronted with a client who insists upon presenting perjured testimony as to an alibi, counsel may only state, in the motion to withdraw, that he has an irreconcilable conflict with his client. People v. Schultheis, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Failure and refusal to refund unearned portions of fees collected from two clients constituted violations of C.R.C.P. 241(B), DR 9-102, and this rule. People v. Gellenthien, 621 P.2d 328 (Colo. 1981).

Failure to withdraw for over a year after being discharged by client, accompanied by protracted failure to return client's file, justifies suspension. People v. Hodge, 752 P.2d 533 (Colo. 1988).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Vsetecka, 893 P.2d 1309 (Colo. 1995).

Failing to return the file of a client while at the same time neglecting to make further filings in such client's case during a period of suspension for similar acts of misconduct warrants further suspension from the practice of law. People v. Hodge, 782 P.2d 25 (Colo. 1989).

Suspended attorney must demonstrate rehabilitation. The actions of a suspended attorney who took part in a complex real estate transaction and engaged in the practice of law by representing, counseling, advising, and assisting a former client warrant suspension until he demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that (1) he has been rehabilitated; (2) he has complied with and will continue to comply with all applicable disciplinary orders and rules; and (3) he is competent and fit to practice law. People v. Belfor, 200 Colo. 44, 611 P.2d 979 (1980).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Moya, 793 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1990); People v. Creasey, 793 P.2d 1159 (Colo. 1990); People v. Wilson, 814 P.2d 791 (Colo. 1991); People v. Whitaker, 814 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991); People v. Heilbrunn, 814 P.2d 819 (Colo. 1991); *People v. Facts sufficient to justify disbarment of attorney for failure to comply with registration requirements of C.R.C.P. 227, misappropriation of funds, and improper withdrawal from employment. People v. Scudder, 197 Colo. 99, 590 P.2d 493 (1979).

Lawyers are required by the obligations of their office to act with diligence in the affairs of their clients and in judicial proceedings. People v. Heyer, 176 Colo. 188, 489 P.2d 1042 (1971).

Failure to take any action on behalf of his client after he was retained and entrusted with work and after making representations to his client which were false, an attorney violates the code of professional responsibility and C.R.C.P. 241.6. People v. Southern, 638 P.2d 787 (Colo. 1982).

Trial court may explore adequacy of trial counsel's representations regarding grounds for withdrawal, but in the course of this inquiry, the court may not compel the attorney to disclose any confidential communications. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Attorney may not breach his duty of maintaining his client's confidences even when he knows his client has previously perjured himself. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Attorney shall not use testimony that he knows is perjured. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Defense counsel may waive right to confront witnesses. The right to confront witnesses is a fundamental right and waiver of such a right is not to be lightly found, but this decision is properly the responsibility of defense counsel, and therefore, the decision of defense counsel to allow the prosecution to use depositions of witnesses in court is an effective waiver. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Matters of trial conduct and strategy are the responsibility of defense counsel. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Defendant cannot complain when it falls short of accomplishing an acquittal. It is not error to deny a motion for a new trial based on incompetence of trial counsel where the incompetence claimed arises out of defense counsel's failure to call certain witnesses that the defendant suggested, because defense counsel is responsible for trial strategy, and the defendant will not be heard to complain when trial strategy falls short of accomplishing an acquittal. People v. Moreno, 181 Colo. 106, 507 P.2d 857 (1973).

If every decision in a contested trial had to be made by the accused, he would be denied effective assistance and the judgment of his trial counsel; the defendant's attorney is the expert at trial, not the defendant. Morse v. People, 180 Colo. 49, 501 P.2d 1328 (1972).

Continued and chronic neglect over a period of two years must be considered willful and supports finding of intentional prejudice or damage to clients. People v. Barber, 799 P.2d 936 (Colo. 1990).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by imposing sanctions on attorney who, at direction of clients, failed to advise opposing party of clients' bankruptcy and automatic stay in advance of trial. Under such circumstances the attorney was faced with an irreconcilable conflict between his duty to his clients and his professional obligations to opposing counsel and would have been justified in requesting permission to withdraw. Parker v. Davis, 888 P.2d 324 (Colo. App. 1994).

Inappropriate personal relationship with a client may prejudice or damage client under this rule. People v. Gibbons, 685 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1984).

Where an attorney requests, on the day of trial, dismissal of federal court proceedings because of lack of jurisdictional amount while representing plaintiff, fails to appear in court when scheduled, shows gross indifference and disregard toward the court, the jurors, and opposing counsel, and fails to keep appointments with the grievance committee assigned to investigate charges against him, a public reprimand for dereliction of duty is called for. People v. Heyer, 176 Colo. 188, 489 P.2d 1042 (1971).

Public censure was appropriate where attorney's failure to appear at three hearings and to timely return a stipulation violated DR 1-102(A)(5) and, in aggravation, there was a pattern of misconduct. People v. Cabral, 888 P.2d 245 (Colo. 1995).

Conduct of attorney warranted public censure under paragraph (A)(1). People v. Stayton, 798 P.2d 903 (Colo. 1990); People v. Smith, 819 P.2d 497 (Colo. 1991).

Conduct of attorney warranted public reprimand under paragraph (A)(2). People v. Atencio, 177 Colo. 439, 494 P.2d 837 (1972).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Ashley, 796 P.2d 962 (Colo. 1990); People v. Fitzgibbons, 909 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1996).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Mayer, 716 P.2d 1094 (Colo. 1986); People v. Wilson, 745 P.2d 248 (Colo. 1987); People v. Wyman, 769 P.2d 1076 (Colo. 1989); People v. Baird, 772 P.2d 110 (Colo. 1989); People v. Fieman, 788 P.2d 830 (Colo. 1990); People v. Good, 790 P.2d 331 (Colo. 1990).

Where an attorney misrepresents to a client that he has filed a case, fails for two years to take action on behalf of another client, and, knowing that a hearing had been set on charges against him, deliberately leaves the jurisdiction of the court without making any arrangements with the grievance committee and without arranging for representation, his conduct warrants suspension from the bar. People v. Kane, 177 Colo. 378, 494 P.2d 96 (1972).

Suspension is fitting sanction when lawyer knowingly fails to perform services for a client and thereby causes injury to such client. People v. Masson, 782 P.2d 335 (Colo. 1989).

Failing to resolve an inability to proceed on behalf of a client, neglecting to respond to communications from the grievance committee, failing to fulfill commitments made to the investigator for the disciplinary counsel, and misrepresenting to such investigator the status of the case under investigation is conduct warranting suspension. People v. Chappell, 783 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1989).

Suspension of lawyer for three years which is the longest possible period for suspension, is appropriate where there was extensive pattern of client neglect and intentional deception in client matters over a period of years. Anything less would be too lenient. People v. Hellewell, 811 P.2d 386 (Colo. 1991).

Failure to communicate with clients, court, and opposing counsel, misrepresentation of the status of the proceedings to the client, and failure to investigate clients' case justifies three-year suspension. People v. Wilson, 814 P.2d 791 (Colo. 1991).

Knowing failure to prosecute client's claim or to obtain client's informed consent to abandon the claim and neglecting to pursue settlement negotiations damaged client and constitutes intentional failure to carry out contract of employment sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Honaker, 814 P.2d 785 (Colo. 1991).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to warrant suspension. People v. Creasey, 793 P.2d 1159 (Colo. 1990); People v. Schmad, 793 P.2d 1162 (Colo. 1990); People v. Wilbur, 796 P.2d 976 (Colo. 1990); People v. Baptie, 796 P.2d 978 (Colo. 1990); People v. Taylor, 799 P.2d 930 (Colo. 1990); People v. Garrett, 802 P.2d 1082 (Colo. 1990); People v. Rhodes, 803 P.2d 514 (Colo. 1991); People v. Flores, 804 P.2d 192 (Colo. 1991); People v. Dunsmoor, 807 P.2d 561 (Colo. 1991); People v. Whitaker, 814 P.2d 812 (Colo. 1991); People v. Hansen, 814 P.2d 816 (Colo. 1991); People v. Hyland, 830 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1992); People v. Raubolt, 831 P.2d 462 (Colo. 1992); People v. Regan, 831 P.2d 893 (Colo. 1992); People v. Denton, 839 P.2d 6 (Colo. 1992); People v. Hindorff, 860 P.2d 526 (Colo. 1993); People v. Cole, 880 P.2d 158 (Colo. 1994); People v. Smith, 880 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1994); People v. Schaefer, 938 P.2d 147 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Yaklich, 646 P.2d 938 (Colo. 1982); People v. Brackett, 667 P.2d 1357 (Colo. 1983); People v. Pilgrim, 698 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1985); People v. Convery, 704 P.2d 296 (Colo. 1985); People v. Foster, 716 P.2d 1069 (Colo. 1986); People v. Coca, 716 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986); People v. Pooley, 774 P.2d 239 (Colo. 1989); People v. Fahrney, 782 P.2d 743 (Colo. 1989); People v. Gregory, 788 P.2d 823 (Colo. 1990); People v. Bergmann, 790 P.2d 840 (Colo. 1990).

Failure to file bankruptcy petition for eight months justifies disbarment. When a lawyer, after being paid for his services, neglects to file a bankruptcy petition for his client for a period of approximately eight months, during which time the client is sued and his wages attached on several occasions, the lawyer's gross neglect and failure to carry out a contract of employment justify disbarment. People v. McMichael, 199 Colo. 433, 609 P.2d 633 (1980).

Converting estate or trust funds for one's personal use, overcharging for services rendered, neglecting to return inquiries relating to client matters, failing to make candid disclosures to grievance committee, and attempting to conceal wrongdoing during disciplinary proceedings warrants the severe sanction of disbarment. People v. Gerdes, 782 P.2d 2 (Colo. 1989).

Disbarment was the proper remedy where attorney's conduct demonstrated (a) neglect of legal matters entrusted to him; (b) misrepresentation to the client and the grievance committee; and (c) a pattern of neglect followed by the respondent that had the potential of causing serious injury to his clients, and the attorney was afforded multiple opportunities including two suspensions and court ordered rehabilitation. People v. Susman, 787 P.2d 1119 (Colo. 1990).

Converting trust funds to one's own use in the amount of $13,100 and refusing to make payments on a promissory note taken as restitution was conduct intentionally prejudicial to the client sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Whitcomb, 819 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1991).

Converting trust funds, along with other misconduct, sufficient to justify disbarment. Where attorney withdraws $62,550 from trust without beneficiaries' knowledge or permission, fails to repay a $5,000 loan from the trustee, prepares fictional quarterly trust reports, disburses principal to beneficiaries in lieu of interest and lies regarding the amount of principal remaining in the trust, there is conduct sufficiently prejudicial to the client to justify disbarment. People v. Tanquary, 831 P.2d 889 (Colo. 1992).

When attorney converted client's funds, named himself trustee, misrepresented to banks that the funds were his own, engaged in self-dealing, and maintained custody of the client's investment accounts, disbarment was warranted. There were no mitigating factors. People v. Warner, 873 P.2d 724 (Colo. 1994).

Misrepresenting the status of a dissolution of marriage action with knowledge of impending remarriage and then forging the purported decree of dissolution is conduct involving moral turpitude deserving of disbarment. People v. Belina, 782 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1989).

Conduct which causes a client serious or potentially serious injury and demonstrates a complete lack of concern for a client's interests and welfare warrants disbarment. People v. Lyons, 762 P.2d 143 (Colo. 1988).

Where an attorney demonstrates an extreme indifference to the welfare of his clients and the status of their cases and an extreme insensitivity to his professional duties in the face of adverse judgments due to neglect, client complaints, and repeated disciplinary proceedings, disbarment is the appropriate sanction. People v. Wyman, 782 P.2d 339 (Colo. 1989).

Facts sufficient to justify disbarment of attorney for failure to comply with registration requirements of C.R.C.P. 227, misappropriation of funds, and improper withdrawal from employment. People v. Scudder, 197 Colo. 99, 590 P.2d 493 (1979).

Failure to respond to discovery and motions, failure to attend case management hearing, and failure to inform client of progress of a civil case is grounds for disbarment. People v. Hebenstreit, 823 P.2d 125 (Colo. 1992).

Disbarment is appropriate sanction where attorney knowingly converts client property and causes injury or potential injury to a client. People v. Bowman, 887 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1994).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Nichols, 796 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1990); People v. Ashley, 817 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1991); People v. Rouse, 817 P.2d 967 (Colo. 1991); People v. Crimaldi, 804 P.2d 863 (Colo. 1991); People v. Bergmann, 807 P.2d 568 (Colo. 1991); People v. Skaalerud, 963 P.2d 341 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Kendrick, 646 P.2d 337 (Colo. 1982); People v. Dwyer, 652 P.2d 1074 (Colo. 1982); People v. Golden, 654 P.2d 853 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bealmear, 655 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1982); People v. Buckles, 673 P.2d 1008 (Colo. 1984); People v. Gibbons, 685 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1984); *People v. Attorney-client relationship required. Rule requires the existence of an attorney-client relationship as an essential element of the proscribed professional misconduct. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

A client is a person who employs or retains an attorney for advice or assistance on a matter relating to legal business. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

The relationship of an attorney and client can be inferred from the conduct of the parties. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

The relationship is sufficiently established when it is shown that the client seeks and receives the advice of the lawyer on the legal consequences of the client's past or contemplated actions. People v. Morley, 725 P.2d 510 (Colo. 1986).

Attorney shall not use testimony that he knows is perjured. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

If he does so, he commits subornation of perjury. A lawyer who presents a witness knowing that the witness intends to commit perjury thereby engages in the subornation of perjury. People v. Schultheis, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Trial court may explore adequacy of trial counsel's representations regarding grounds for withdrawal, but in the course of this inquiry, the court may not compel the attorney to disclose any confidential communications. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Attorney may not breach his duty of maintaining his client's confidences even when he knows his client has previously perjured himself. People v. Schultheis, 44 Colo. App. 452, 618 P.2d 710 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 638 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1981).

Unauthorized recordation of telephone conversation establishes unethical conduct. Telephone conversation, which attorney initiated and recorded without the permission of other party to conversation, established unethical conduct on attorney's part. People v. Wallin, 621 P.2d 330 (Colo. 1981).

Planned course of conduct which is unresponsive to civil discovery constitutes intent to deceive, and such conduct is prejudicial to the administration of justice. People v. Haase, 781 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1989).

In fulfilling the duty under Canon 7 of the Code of Professional Responsibility to zealously represent a client, a lawyer may advance a claim or defense not recognized under existing law if it can be supported by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of existing law. Sullivan v. Lutz, 827 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1992).

Unsuccessful appeal is not necessarily frivolous. Because a lawyer may present a supportable argument which is extremely unlikely to prevail on appeal, it cannot be said that an unsuccessful appeal is necessarily frivolous. Mission Denver Co. v. Pierson, 674 P.2d 363 (Colo. 1984).

An attorney should not pursue frivolous appeals. An attorney's decision not to pursue a frivolous appeal complies with his ethical responsibilities to his client. Hodges v. Barry, 701 P.2d 1240 (Colo. 1985).

Failure to inform arbitrators of errors in expert witness' testimony constituted violation of DR 7-102 warranting public censure because attorney did not disclose that expert had informed attorney of mistakes in writing, and attorney made closing arguments based on uncorrected expert conclusions. People v. Bertagnolli, 861 P.2d 717 (Colo. 1993).

Actions taken by attorney contrary to court order violate this rule and justify suspension. People v. Awenius, 653 P.2d 740 (Colo. 1982).

False testimony and counselling such conduct warrant disbarment. When a lawyer counsels his client to testify falsely at a hearing on a bankruptcy petition and the client does so, and the lawyer gives a false answer to a question asked of him by the bankruptcy judge, his misconduct warrants disbarment. People v. McMichael, 199 Colo. 433, 609 P.2d 633 (1980).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Smith, 830 P.2d 1003 (Colo. 1992).

Since employment in a public defender’s office is not the type of public employment contemplated in paragraph (B) of this rule, no conflict of interest can be perceived in the representation of a defendant by a deputy public defender and the subsequent representation by the same attorney in a private capacity of the defendant in the same case. Coles, Manter & Watson v. Denver Dist. Court, 177 Colo. 210, 493 P.2d 374 (1972).

Disqualification of former district attorney and his firm was appropriate. Disqualification of former district attorney and his firm from representing client in case in which former district attorney had done investigation under this canon was clearly appropriate. Osburn v. District Court, 619 P.2d 41 (Colo. 1980).

Disqualification of district attorney’s office required where two former district attorneys are witnesses on contested issues in case. Pease v. District Court, 708 P.2d 800 (Colo. 1985).

Where a lawyer knows or should know that he is dealing improperly with a client’s property and causes potential injury to the client, a suspension from the practice of law, at the very least, is an appropriate sanction. People v. McGrath, 780 P.2d 492 (Colo. 1989).

Where there is no evidence of a specific identifiable impropriety, there is no basis for disqualification under this canon. Food Brokers, Inc. v. Great Western Sugar, 680 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1984).

Factors for determining “an appearance of impropriety” discussed in Cleary v. District Court, 704 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1985).

“Substantial responsibility” requirement of paragraph (B) of this rule applied in Cleary v. District Court, 704 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1985); People v. Anaya, 732 P.2d 1241 (Colo. App. 1986), rev’d on other grounds, 764 P.2d 779 (Colo. 1988).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Dulaney, 785 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1990).

Rule 1.3. Diligence

A lawyer shall act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client.

Source: Entire Appendix repealed and readopted April 12, 2007, effective January 1, 2008; Comment [5] amended and adopted May 20, 2021, effective July 1, 2021.

COMMENT

[1] A lawyer should pursue a matter on behalf of a client despite opposition, obstruction or personal inconvenience to the lawyer, and take whatever lawful and ethical measures are required to vindicate a client’s cause or endeavor. A lawyer must also act with commitment and dedication to the interests of the client and with zeal in advocacy upon the client’s behalf. A lawyer is not bound, however, to press for every advantage that might be realized for a client. For example, a lawyer may have authority to exercise professional discretion in determining the means by which a matter should be pursued. See Rule 1.2. The lawyer’s duty to act with reasonable diligence does not require the use of offensive tactics or preclude the treating of all persons involved in the legal process with courtesy and respect.

[2] A lawyer’s work load must be controlled so that each matter can be handled competently.

[3] Perhaps no professional shortcoming is more widely resented than procrastination. A client’s interests often can be adversely affected by the passage of time or the change of conditions; in extreme instances, as when a lawyer overlooks a statute of limitations, the client’s legal position may be destroyed. Even when the client’s interests are not affected in substance, however, unreasonable delay can cause a client needless anxiety and undermine confidence in the lawyer’s trustworthiness. A lawyer’s duty to act with reasonable promptness, however, does not preclude the lawyer from agreeing to a reasonable request for a postponement that will not prejudice the lawyer’s client.

[4] Unless the relationship is terminated as provided in Rule 1.16, a lawyer should carry through to conclusion all matters undertaken for a client. If a lawyer’s employment is limited to a specific matter, the relationship terminates when the matter has been resolved. If a lawyer has served a client over a substantial period in a variety of matters, the client sometimes may assume that the lawyer will continue to serve on a continuing basis unless the lawyer gives notice of withdrawal. Doubt about whether a client-lawyer relationship still exists should be clarified by the lawyer, preferably in writing, so that the client will not mistakenly suppose the lawyer is looking after the client's affairs when the lawyer has ceased to do so. For example, if a lawyer has handled a judicial or administrative proceeding that produced a result adverse to the client and the lawyer and the client have not agreed that the lawyer will handle the matter on appeal, the lawyer must consult with the client about the possibility of appeal before relinquishing responsibility for the matter. See Rule 1.4(a)(2). Whether the lawyer is obligated to prosecute the appeal for the client depends on the scope of the representation the lawyer has agreed to provide to the client. See Rule 1.2.

[5] To prevent neglect of client matters in the event of a sole practitioner's death or disability, the duty of diligence may require that each sole practitioner prepare a plan, in conformity with applicable rules, that designates another competent lawyer to review client files, notify each client of the lawyer's death or disability, and determine whether there is a need for immediate protective action. Cf. Rule 28 of the American Bar Association Model Rules for Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement (providing for court appointment of a lawyer to inventory files and take other protective action in absence of a plan providing for another lawyer to protect the interests of the clients of a deceased or disabled lawyer); C.R.C.P. 244.

Annotator's note. Rule 1.3 is similar to Rule 1.3 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Public censure appropriate where harm suffered by attorney's client was speculative, attorney retracted his misrepresentations and admitted to his client before the institution of disciplinary proceedings that he had done nothing on the client's appeal, attorney had no prior discipline, he made full and free disclosure of his misconduct to the grievance committee, and he expressed remorse for his misconduct. People v. Nelson, 848 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure appropriate where attorney failed to review district attorney's file and the transcript of the preliminary hearing before trial. People v. Bonner, 927 P.2d 836 (Colo. 1996).

More severe sanction of public censure rather than private censure warranted where attorney continued to rely on methods of communication which had previously failed even after it became evident that the settlement agreement would be withdrawn and the client's interests would be harmed. People v. Podoll, 855 P.2d 1389 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure instead of private censure was appropriate where attorney failed to respond to discovery requests and motions for summary judgment and the findings of the board did not support the applicability of ABA Standard 9.32(i) as a mitigating factor since there was no medical evidence that attorney was affected by chemical dependency or that alcohol contributed to or caused the misconduct. People v. Brady, 923 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1996).

Public censure and monitoring conditions for one year, rather than private censure, were appropriate where attorney had a history of private sanctions indicating a pattern of misconduct. The attorney had also had a six-month suspension entered against him during the same time period in which the acts giving rise to censure occurred. Had the acts occurred following the suspension, public censure would be too lenient. People v. Field, 967 P.2d 1035 (Colo. 1998).

Aggravating and mitigating factors. The following factors are considered aggravating when deciding the appropriate level of discipline: (1) Prior discipline, (2) a pattern of misconduct, and (3) bad faith obstruction of the disciplinary process through total non-cooperation with the disciplinary authorities. Failure to appear before the disciplinary board will cause one to lose the ability to present evidence of mitigating factors. People v. Stevenson, 980 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1999).

Attorney's restitution agreement was neither an aggravating nor mitigating factor since the attorney did not propose or attempt any form of restitution until after a request for investigation had been filed with the office of disciplinary counsel. People v. Brady, 923 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney's argument that public discipline is not appropriate because it would stigmatize a recovering alcoholic was rejected since overriding concern in discipline proceedings is to protect the public through the enforcement of professional standards of conduct. People v. Brady, 923 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1996).

Public censure appropriate where attorney allowed the statute of limitations to run before filing a complaint on the client's personal injury claim. People v. Hockley, 968 P.2d 109 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure appropriate where neglect extended over a long period of time, respondent had no prior history of discipline, and the actual harm caused by the misconduct was slight. People v. Berkley, 858 P.2d 699 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure appropriate for failure to submit settlement papers to client and to take any further action in the matter, in addition to other conduct violating rules. People v. Berkley, 858 P.2d 699 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure appropriate where attorney neglected and made misrepresentations in two separate legal matters. People v. Eagan, 902 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1995).

Public censure with additional conditions imposed on lawyer who neglected client's matter and then misinformed client of its status. People v. Kram, 966 P.2d 1065 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure warranted where, although respondent did not notify his clients and opposing counsel of his suspension, he did notify the court early in proceedings, did not go forward with court proceedings while on suspension and no actual harm was demonstrated to any of his clients. People v. Dover, 944 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1997).

Forty-five-day suspension warranted where respondent neglected child custody matter and had a prior public censure, a prior admonishment, and prior suspensions, but where the respondent did not demonstrate a dishonest or selfish motive and exhibited a cooperative attitude and expressions of remorse. People v. Dowhan, 951 P.2d 905 (Colo. 1998).

Attorney's inaction over a period of more than two years and other disciplinary violations warrant suspension for 30 days where there are mitigating factors. People v. LaSalle, 848 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1993).

Neglecting to file response to motion for summary judgment and to return client files upon request was sufficient to result in one-year and one-day suspension. People v. Honaker, 847 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1993).

Suspension for one year and one day appropriate when attorney neglected to file response to motion for summary judgment and to return client files upon request. People v. Honaker, 847 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1993).

Suspension for one year and one day appropriate when lawyer neglects matters of multiple clients and charges unreasonable fees. People v. Reedy, 966 P.2d 1057 (Colo. 1998).

Suspension for three years, the longest period available, was appropriate in case where violation of this rule and others would otherwise have justified disbarment but mitigating factors included personal and emotional problems, interim rehabilitation, and remorse. People v. McCaffrey, 925 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1996).

Suspension for three years was appropriate in case involving violation of this rule and others, together with attorney's breach of his duty as client's trustee to protect his client, who was a particularly vulnerable victim that was recuperating from a serious head injury. People v. DeRose, 945 P.2d 412 (Colo. 1997).

Suspension for three years, rather than disbarment, was appropriate where violation of this rule and others caused serious harm to attorney's clients, but mitigating factors were present, including no previous discipline in 14 years of practice, personal and emotional problems, and cooperation and demonstrated remorse in proceedings. People v. Henderson, 967 P.2d 1038 (Colo. 1998).

Three-year suspension warranted for attorney who effectively abandoned and failed to communicate with clients. People v. Shock, 970 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1999).

Conduct warranted one-year extension of attorney's suspension. People v. Silvola, 933 P.2d 1308 (Colo. 1997).

Disbarment appropriate remedy for attorney who neglected client's legal matter, failed to return retainer after being requested to do so, abandoned law practice, evaded process, and failed to respond to request of grievance committee. People v. Williams, 845 P.2d 1150 (Colo. 1993).

Attorney who failed to make sufficient efforts to ensure that his client received timely payments from the trust for which he was the trustee violated this rule. People v. DeRose, 945 P.2d 412 (Colo. 1997).

When a lawyer accepts fees from clients and then abandons those clients while keeping their money and causing serious harm, disbarment is appropriate. People v. Steinman, 930 P.2d 596 (Colo. 1997).

Attorney's failure to take prompt measures to secure client's rights to share of former spouse's retirement benefits constitutes neglect of a legal matter in violation of this rule. In re Fisher, 202 P.3d 1186 (Colo. 2009) (decided under rules in effect prior to 2007 repeal and readoption).

Duty of diligence imposed by this rule violated by attorney's failure to adequately super-wise and monitor non-attorney employee's actions on behalf of clients in bankruptcy proceedings. People v. Calvert, 280 P.3d 1269 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2011).

Attorney's conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify six-month suspension, stayed upon completion of two-year probationary period. In re Fisher, 202 P.3d 1186 (Colo. 2009) (decided under rules in effect prior to 2007 repeal and readoption).

Previously disbarred attorney who violated this rule would be forced to pay restitution to clients as a condition of readmission. People v. Vigil, 945 P.2d 1385 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules sufficient to justify disbarment where the attorney continued to practice law while on suspension, repeatedly neglecting his clients and failing to take reasonable steps to protect clients' interests. People v. Fager, 938 P.2d 138 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Titoni, 893 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1995); *People v. Rule 1.4. Communication

(a) A lawyer shall:

(1) promptly inform the client of any decision or circumstance with respect to which the client's informed consent, as defined in Rule 1.0(e), is required by these Rules;

(2) reasonably consult with the client about the means by which the client's objectives are to be accomplished;

(3) keep the client reasonably informed about the status of the matter;

(4) promptly comply with reasonable requests for information; and

(5) consult with the client about any relevant limitation on the lawyer's conduct when the lawyer knows that the client expects assistance not permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.

(b) A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.

COMMENT

[1] Reasonable communication between the lawyer and the client is necessary for the client effectively to participate in the representation.

Communicating with Client

[2] If these Rules require that a particular decision about the representation be made by the client, paragraph (a)(1) requires that the lawyer promptly consult with and secure the client's consent prior to taking action unless prior discussions with the client have resolved what action the client wants the lawyer to take. For example, a lawyer who receives from opposing counsel an offer of settlement in a civil controversy or a proffered plea bargain in a criminal case must promptly inform the client of its substance unless the client has previously indicated that the proposal will be acceptable or unacceptable or has authorized the lawyer to accept or to reject the offer. See Rule 1.2(a).

[3] Paragraph (a)(2) requires the lawyer to reasonably consult with the client about the means to be used to accomplish the client's objectives. In some situations—depending on both the importance of the action under consideration and the feasibility of consulting with the client—this duty will require consultation prior to taking action. In other circumstances, such as during a trial when an immediate decision must be made, the exigency of the situation may require the lawyer to act without prior consultation. In such cases the lawyer must nonetheless act reasonably to inform the client of actions the lawyer has taken on the client's behalf. Additionally, paragraph (a)(3) requires that the lawyer keep the client reasonably informed about the status of the matter, such as significant developments affecting the timing or the substance of the representation.

[4] A lawyer's regular communication with clients will minimize the occasions on which a client will need to request information concerning the representation. When a client makes a reasonable request for information, however, paragraph (a)(4) requires prompt compliance with the request, or if a prompt response is not feasible, that the lawyer, or a member of the lawyer's staff, acknowledge receipt of the request and advise the client when a response may be expected. A lawyer should promptly respond to or acknowledge client communications.

Explaining Matters

[5] The client should have sufficient information to participate intelligently in decisions concerning the objectives of the representation and the means by which they are to be pursued, to the extent the client is willing and able to do so. Adequacy of communication depends in part on the kind of advice or assistance that is involved. For example, when there is time to explain a proposal made in a negotiation, the lawyer should review all important provisions with the client before proceeding to an agreement. In litigation a lawyer should explain the general strategy and prospects of success and ordinarily should consult the client on tactics that are likely to result in significant expense or to injure or coerce others. On the other hand, a lawyer ordinarily will not be expected to describe trial or negotiation strategy in detail. The guiding principle is that the lawyer should fulfill reasonable client expectations for information consistent with the duty to act in the client's best interests, and the client's overall requirements as to the character of representation. In certain circumstances, such as when a lawyer asks a client to consent to a representation affected by a conflict of interest, the client must give informed consent, as defined in Rule 1.0(e).

[6] Ordinarily, the information to be provided is that appropriate for a client who is a comprehending and responsible adult. However, fully informing the client according to this standard may be impracticable, for example, where the client is a child or suffers from diminished capacity. See Rule 1.14. When the client is an organization or group, it is often impossible or inappropriate to inform every one of its members about its legal affairs; ordinarily, the lawyer should address communications to the appropriate officials of the organization. See Rule 1.13. Where many routine matters are in-involved, a system of limited or occasional reporting may be arranged with the client.

[6A] Regarding communications with clients when a lawyer retains or contracts with other lawyers outside the lawyer's own firm to provide or assist in the providing of legal services to the client, see Comment [6] to Rule 1.1.

[6B] Regarding communications with clients and with lawyers outside of the lawyer's firm when lawyers from more than one firm are providing legal services to the client on a particular matter, see Comment [7] to Rule 1.1.

Withholding Information

[7] In some circumstances, a lawyer may be justified in delaying transmission of information when the client would be likely to react imprudently to an immediate communication. Thus, a lawyer might withhold a psychiatric diagnosis of a client when the examining psychiatrist indicates that disclosure would harm the client. A lawyer may not withhold information to serve the lawyer's own interest or convenience or the interests or convenience of another person. Rules or court orders governing litigation may provide that information supplied to a lawyer may not be disclosed to the client. Rule 3.4(c) directs compliance with such rules or orders.

Explanation of Fees and Expenses

[7A] Information provided to the client under Rule 1.4(a) should include information concerning fees charged, costs, expenses, and disbursements with regard to the client's matter. Additionally, the lawyer should promptly respond to the client's reasonable requests concerning such matters. It is strongly recommended that all these communications be in writing. As to the basis or rate of the fee, see Rule 1.5(b).

Annotator's note. Rule 1.4 is similar to Rule 1.4 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct. Relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Public censure appropriate where harm suffered by attorney's client was speculative, attorney retracted his misrepresentations and admitted to his client before the institution of disciplinary proceedings that he had done nothing on the client's appeal, attorney had no prior discipline, he made full and free disclosure of his misconduct to the grievance committee, and he expressed remorse for his misconduct. People v. Nelson, 848 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1993).

Public censure instead of private censure was appropriate where attorney failed to respond to discovery requests and motions for summary judgment and the findings of the board did not support the applicability of ABA Standard 9.32(i) as a mitigating factor since there was no medical evidence that attorney was affected by chemical dependency or that alcohol contributed to or caused the misconduct. People v. Brady, 923 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1996).

Aggravating and mitigating factors. The following factors are considered aggravating when deciding the appropriate level of discipline: (1) Prior discipline, (2) a pattern of misconduct, and (3) bad faith obstruction of the disciplinary process through total non-cooperation with the disciplinary authorities. Failure to appear before the disciplinary board will cause one to lose the ability to present evidence of mitigating factors. People v. Stevenson, 980 P.2d 504 (Colo. 1999).

Attorney's restitution agreement was neither an aggravating nor mitigating factor since the attorney did not propose or attempt any form of restitution until after a request for investigation had been filed with the office of disciplinary counsel. People v. Brady, 923 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney's argument that public discipline is not appropriate because it would stigmatize a recovering alcoholic was rejected since overriding concern in discipline proceedings is to protect the public through the enforcement of professional standards of conduct. People v. Brady, 923 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1996).

Neglecting to file response to motion for summary judgment and to return client files upon request was sufficient to result in one-year and one-day suspension. People v. Honaker, 847 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1993).

Failing to inform client that limitation period had expired, or that attorney had not actually settled the case, violated section (a)(3). People v. Muhr, 370 P.3d 667 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015).

Moving for a voluntary dismissal of client's claim without prejudice, whether characterized as a strategic decision within the attorney's purview or a fundamental decision reserved for the client, was one that the attorney was obligated to disclose and discuss with the client beforehand. People v. Muhr, 370 P.3d 667 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015).

Broad terms of a power of attorney do not obviate the attorney's duty to keep the client informed in accordance with section (a)(3). People v. Muhr, 370 P.3d 667 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2015).

Ninety-day suspension justified where attorney's failure to respond to discovery requests resulted in default and entry of judgment against client for $816,613. People v. Clark, 927 P.2d 838 (Colo. 1996).

Attorney's inaction over a period of more than two years and other disciplinary violations warrant suspension for 30 days where there are mitigating factors. People v. LaSalle, 848 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1993).

Suspension for one year and one day appropriate when attorney neglected to return client files upon request. People v. Honaker, 847 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1993).

Suspension for three years, rather than disbarment, was appropriate where violation of this rule and others caused serious harm to attorney's clients, but mitigating factors were present, including no previous discipline in 14 years of practice, personal and emotional problems, and cooperation and demonstrated remorse in proceedings. People v. Henderson, 967 P.2d 1038 (Colo. 1998).

Three-year suspension warranted for attorney who effectively abandoned and failed to communicate with clients. People v. Shock, 970 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1999).

Duty to communicate imposed by this rule violated by attorney's failure to keep clients in bankruptcy proceedings reasonably notified about the status of the case, including the dismissal of their first bankruptcy petition and the filing of their second. People v. Calvert, 280 P.3d 1269 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2011).

Previously disbarred attorney who violated this rule would be forced to pay restitution to clients as a condition of readmission. People v. Vigil, 945 P.2d 1385 (Colo. 1997).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Titoni, 893 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1995); People v. Doherty, 908 P.2d 1120 (Colo. 1996); People v. Woodrum, 911 P.2d 640 (Colo. 1996); People v. Barbieri, 935 P.2d 12 (Colo. 1997); People v. Williams, 936 P.2d 1289 (Colo. 1997); *People v. Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Smith, 847 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1993); People v. Damkar, 908 P.2d 1113 (Colo. 1996); *People v. Failing to provide a client with an accounting of charges applied against a retainer after the client's request therefor, in conjunction with other instances of neglect, is conduct warranting public censure. People v. Goodwin, 782 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1989).

Failure to make proper accounting to client with respect to trust funds and failure to promptly deliver to the client funds to which she is entitled warrants public censure. People v. Robnett, 737 P.2d 1389 (Colo. 1987).

Failure to deposit funds in trust account, to notify client of receipt of funds and provide accounting, and to forward file promptly to new attorney constitute a violation of this rule and, with other offenses, warrants public censure. People v. Swan, 764 P.2d 54 (Colo. 1988).

Violation of duty to account for and promptly return client property upon request over a three-year period warrants public censure. People v. Shunneson, 814 P.2d 800 (Colo. 1991).

Public censure for failure to promptly distribute proceeds of a settlement is warranted since respondent's negligence did little or no actual or potential injury to client. People v. Genchi, 824 P.2d 815 (Colo. 1992).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Ashley, 796 P.2d 962 (Colo. 1990); People v. Sadler, 831 P.2d 887 (Colo. 1992).

Converting estate or trust funds for one's personal use, overcharging for services rendered, neglecting to return inquiries relating to client matters, failing to make candid disclosures to grievance committee, and attempting to conceal wrongdoing during disciplinary proceedings warrants the severe sanction of disbarment. People v. Gerdes, 782 P.2d 2 (Colo. 1989).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. People v. Bollinger, 648 P.2d 620 (Colo. 1982); People v. Wright, 698 P.2d 1317 (Colo. 1985); People v. Mayer, 716 P.2d 1094 (Colo. 1986); People v. Schaiberger, 731 P.2d 728 (Colo. 1987); People v. Barr, 748 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1988); People v. Danker, 759 P.2d 14 (Colo. 1988).

Two-year unjustified retention of one client's file, coupled with failure to withdraw at request of said client and refusal to forward a second client's file to subsequent counsel, resulting in both clients sustaining injuries, justifies suspension for the period of a year and a day. People v. Hodge, 752 P.2d 533 (Colo. 1988).

Failure to account for money collected on behalf of client, despite numerous client requests for accounting, and failure to adhere to terms of agreement with client regarding representation, coupled with prior, ongoing suspension, warrants additional six-month suspension. People v. Yost, 752 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1988).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Moya, 793 P.2d 1154 (Colo. 1990); People v. Creasey, 793 P.2d 1159 (Colo. 1990); People v. Schubert, 799 P.2d 388 (Colo. 1990); People v. Garrett, 802 P.2d 1082 (Colo. 1990); People v. Lamberson, 802 P.2d 1098 (Colo. 1990); *People v. Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify suspension. People v. Vernon, 660 P.2d 879 (Colo. 1982); People v. Pilgrim, 698 P.2d 1322 (Colo. 1985); People v. Foster, 716 P.2d 1069 (Colo. 1986); People v. Coca, 716 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1986); People v. Calvert, 721 P.2d 1189 (Colo. 1986); People v. Holmes, 731 P.2d 677 (Colo. 1987); People v. Kaemingk, 770 P.2d 1247, (Colo. 1989); People v. McGrath, 780 P.2d 492 (Colo. 1989).

Derelictions in fiduciary duties by an attorney which go beyond mere negligence warrant disbarment. People v. Roads, 180 Colo. 192, 503 P.2d 1024 (1972).

Attorney failed to deliver property of a client in violation of this rule by ignoring requests for client's files made by the client, the client's attorney, and the grievance committee. People v. Felker, 770 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1989).

Refusal to provide accounting for money and jewelry delivered to him and refusal to itemize the services performed and the costs incurred warrant disbarment. People v. Lanza, 660 P.2d 881 (Colo. 1983).

Commingling and appropriation of funds warrants disbarment. When a lawyer collects $3000 on behalf of a client in connection with a sale of real estate and commingles it with his other trust funds and unlawfully converts it to his own use, his flagrant disregard of his professional obligation warrants disbarment. People v. McMichael, 199 Colo. 433, 609 P.2d 633 (1980).

Where a practicing attorney breached fiduciary duties to his client in misrepresenting his dealings and in handling of funds given to him in trust, his conduct warranted disbarment, and, before he may seek readmittance to the state bar association, he must first demonstrate to the grievance committee that rehabilitation has occurred and that he is entitled to a new start. People ex rel. Buckley v. Beck, 199 Colo. 482, 610 P.2d 1069 (1980).

Commingling a client's funds with those of the lawyer is a serious violation of the Code of Professional Responsibility, even in the absence of an actual loss to the client, because the act of commingling subjects the client's funds to the claims of the lawyer's creditors. People v. McGrath, 780 P.2d 492 (Colo. 1989).

Misappropriation of funds, failure to account, and deceit and fraud in handling the affairs of a client necessitate that an attorney be disbarred. People v. Bealmear, 655 P.2d 402 (Colo. 1982); People v. Costello, 781 P.2d 85 (Colo. 1989).

Conduct which causes a client serious or potentially serious injury and demonstrates a complete lack of concern for a client's interests and welfare warrants disbarment. People v. Lyons, 762 P.2d 143 (Colo. 1988).

Alcoholism not excuse. Efforts at alcoholism rehabilitation do not excuse conduct which includes dishonesty and fraud, failing to preserve identity of client funds, and failing to properly pay or deliver client funds, and which otherwise warrants disbarment. People v. Shafer, 765 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1988).

Total disregard of obligation to protect a client's rights and interests over an extended period of time in conjunction with the violation of a number of disciplinary rules and an extended prior record of discipline requires most severe sanction of disbarment. People v. O'Leary, 783 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1989).

Disbarment was appropriate where attorney removed $5,000 from a client's trust account, refused to return money upon several request by the client which ultimately resulted in a suit against the attorney, and the attorney lied about the transaction to the attorney with whom he shared office space. Factors in aggravation included a history of prior discipline, including suspension for conversion of client funds, the dishonest motive of the attorney in removing and not returning the client's funds, the attorney's refusal to acknowledge the wrongful nature of his conduct, the vulnerability of the client, and the attorney's legal experience. Mitigating factors were insufficient for disciplinary action short of disbarment. People v. McGrath, 833 P.2d 731 (Colo. 1992).

Disbarment is appropriate sanction where attorney knowingly converts client property and causes injury or potential injury to a client. People v. Bowman, 887 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1994); People v. Varallo, 913 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1996).

Rule is violated when attorney "knowingly" converts client funds; there is no requirement that the attorney intend to permanently deprive the client of the funds. People v. Varallo, 913 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1996).

Disbarment was appropriate where attorney converted $25,000 of client funds on seven different occasions over a period of four months and did not restore any of the missing funds until after he was detected. People v. Robbins, 869 P.2d 517 (Colo. 1994).

Disbarment was appropriate where the balance of the respondent's trust accounts fell below the amount necessary to pay settlements on at least 45 occasions and where the respondent withdrew attorney fees on at least 68 occasions from trust accounts before receiving the funds from which the fees were to be taken. People v. Lefly, 902 P.2d 361 (Colo. 1995).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules is sufficient to justify disbarment. People v. Nichols, 796 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1990); People v. Broadhurst, 803 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1990); People v. Rhodes, 814 P.2d 787 (Colo. 1991); People v. Vermillion,

Rule 1.5. Fees

(a) A lawyer shall not make an agreement for, charge, or collect an unreasonable fee or an unreasonable amount for expenses. The factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of a fee include the following:

- (1) the time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly;
- (2) the likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the lawyer;
- (3) the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services;
- (4) the amount involved and the results obtained;
- (5) the time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances;
- (6) the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client;
- (7) the experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer or lawyers performing the services; and
- (8) whether the fee is fixed or contingent.

(b) Before or within a reasonable time after commencing the representation, the lawyer shall communicate to the client in writing:

- (1) the basis or rate of the fee and expenses for which the client will be responsible, except when the lawyer will continue to charge a regularly represented client on the same basis or rate; and
- (2) the scope of the representation, except when the lawyer will perform services that are of the same general kind as previously rendered to a regularly represented client.

The lawyer shall communicate promptly to the client in writing any changes in the basis or rate of the fee or expenses.

(c) A “contingent fee” is a fee for legal services under which compensation is to be contingent in whole or in part upon the successful accomplishment or disposition of the subject matter of the representation.

(1) The terms of a contingent fee agreement shall be communicated in writing before or within a reasonable time after commencing the representation and shall include the following information:

- (i) The names of the lawyer and the client;

(ii) A statement of the nature of the claim, controversy or other matters with reference to which the services are to be performed, including each event triggering the lawyer's right to compensation;

(iii) The method by which the fee is to be determined, including the percentage or amounts that will accrue to the lawyer in the event of settlement, trial or appeal, or other final disposition, and whether the contingent fee will be determined before or after the deduction of (A) costs and expenses advanced by the lawyer or otherwise incurred by the client, and (B) other amounts owed by the client and payable from amounts recovered;

(iv) A statement of the circumstances under which the lawyer may be entitled to compensation if the lawyer's representation concludes, by discharge, withdrawal or otherwise, before the occurrence of an event that triggers the lawyer's right to a contingent fee;

(v) A statement regarding expenses, including (A) an estimate of the expenses to be incurred, (B) whether the lawyer is authorized to advance funds for litigation-related expenses to be reimbursed to the lawyer from the recovery, and, if so, the amount of expenses the lawyer may advance without further approval, and (C) the client's obligation, if any, to pay expenses if there is no recovery;

(vi) A statement regarding the possibility that a court will award costs or attorney fees against the client;

(vii) A statement regarding the possibility that a court will award costs or attorney fees in favor of the client, and, if so, how any such costs or attorney fees will be accounted for and handled;

(viii) A statement informing the client that if the lawyer wishes to hire a lawyer in another firm to assist in the handling of a matter ("associated counsel"), the lawyer will promptly inform the client in writing of the identity of the associated counsel, and that (A) the hiring of associated counsel will not increase the contingent fee, unless the client otherwise agrees in writing, and (B) the client has the right to disapprove the hiring of associated counsel and, if hired, to terminate the employment of associated counsel; and

(ix) A statement that other persons or entities may have a right to be paid from amounts recovered on the client's behalf, for example when an insurer or a federal or state agency has paid money or benefits on behalf of a client in connection with the subject of the representation.

(2) A contingent fee agreement must be signed by the client and the lawyer.

(3) The lawyer shall retain a copy of the contingent fee agreement for seven years after the final resolution of the case, or the termination of the lawyer's services, whichever first occurs.

(4) No contingent fee agreement may be made

(i) for representing a defendant in a criminal case,

(ii) in a domestic relations matter, where payment is contingent on the securing of a divorce or upon the amount of maintenance or child support, or property settlement in lieu of such amounts, or

(iii) in connection with any case or proceeding where a contingency method of a determination of attorney fees is otherwise prohibited by law.

(5) Upon conclusion of a contingent fee matter, the lawyer shall provide the client a written disbursement statement showing the amount or amounts received, an itemization of costs and expenses incurred in handling of the matter, sums to be disbursed to third parties, including lawyers in other law firms, and computation of the contingent fee.

(6) No contingent fee agreement shall be enforceable unless the lawyer has substantially complied with all of the provisions of this Rule.

(7) The form Contingent Fee Agreement following the comment to this Rule may be used for contingent fee agreements and shall be sufficient to comply with paragraph (c)(1) of this Rule. The authorization of this form shall not prevent the use of other forms consistent with this Rule. Nothing in this Rule prevents a lawyer from entering into an agreement that provides for a contingent fee combined with one or more other types of fees, such as hourly or flat fees, provided that the agreement complies with this Rule insofar as the contingent fee is concerned.

(d) Other than in connection with the sale of a law practice pursuant to Rule 1.17, a division of a fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if:

(1) the division is in proportion to the services performed by each lawyer or each lawyer assumes joint responsibility for the representation;

(2) the client agrees to the arrangement, including the basis upon which the division of fees shall be made, and the client's agreement is confirmed in writing; and

(3) the total fee is reasonable.

(e) Referral fees are prohibited.

(f) Fees are not earned until the lawyer confers a benefit on the client or performs a legal service for the client. Advances of unearned fees are the property of the client and shall be deposited in the lawyer's trust account pursuant to Rule 1.15B(a)(1) until earned. If advances of unearned fees are in the form of property other than funds, then the lawyer shall hold such property separate from the lawyer's own property pursuant to Rule 1.15A(a).

(g) Nonrefundable fees and nonrefundable retainers are prohibited. Any agreement that purports to restrict a client's right to terminate the representation, or that unreasonably restricts a client's right to obtain a refund of unearned or unreasonable fees, is prohibited.

(h) A "flat fee" is a fee for specified legal services for which the client agrees to pay a fixed amount, regardless of the time or effort involved.

(1) The terms of a flat fee shall be communicated in writing before or within a reasonable time after commencing the representation and shall include the following information:

(i) A description of the services the lawyer agrees to perform;

(ii) The amount to be paid to the lawyer and the timing of payment for the services to be performed;

(iii) If any portion of the flat fee is to be earned by the lawyer before conclusion of the representation, the amount to be earned upon the completion of specified tasks or the occurrence of specified events; and

(iv) The amount or the method of calculating the fees the lawyer earns, if any, should the representation terminate before completion of the specified tasks or the occurrence of specified events.

(2) If all or any portion of a flat fee is paid in advance of being earned and a dispute arises about whether the lawyer has earned all or part of the flat fee, the lawyer shall comply with Rule 1.15A(c) with respect to any portion of the flat fee that is in dispute.

(3) The form Flat Fee Agreement following the comment to this Rule may be used for flat fee agreements and shall be sufficient. The authorization of this form shall not prevent the use of other forms consistent with this Rule.

COMMENT

Reasonableness of Fee and Expenses

[1] Paragraph (a) requires that lawyers charge fees that are reasonable under the circumstances. The factors specified in (1) through (8) are not exclusive. Nor will each factor be relevant in each instance. Paragraph (a) also requires that expenses for which the client will be charged must be reasonable. A lawyer may seek reimbursement for the cost of services performed in-house, such as copying, or for other expenses incurred in-house, such as telephone charges, either by charging a reasonable amount to which the client has agreed in advance or by charging an amount that reasonably reflects the cost incurred by the lawyer.

Basis or Rate of Fee

[2] In a new client-lawyer relationship, the scope of the representation and the basis or rate of the fee and expenses must be promptly communicated in writing to the client, but the communication need not take the form of a formal engagement letter or agreement, and it need not be signed by the client. It is not necessary to recite all the factors that underlie the basis or rate of the fee, but only those that are directly involved in its computation. It is sufficient, for example, to state that the basic rate is an hourly charge or a fixed amount or an estimated amount, to identify the factors that may be taken into account in finally fixing the fee, or to furnish the client with a simple memorandum or the lawyer's customary fee schedule. Similarly, it is not necessary to recite all the anticipated services that comprise, or the exclusions from, the scope of representation, so long as the communication accurately conveys the agreement with the client.

When a lawyer has regularly represented a client and the lawyer will continue to charge the client on the same basis or rate, the lawyer is not required to communicate the basis or rate of the fee and expenses. In such circumstances, the lawyer and client ordinarily will have evolved an understanding concerning the basis or rate of the fee and the expenses for which the client will be responsible.

When a lawyer will perform services for a regularly represented client that are of the same general kind as previously rendered, the lawyer is not required to communicate the scope of the new representation. Whether services are of "the same general kind as previously rendered" depends on consideration of the totality of the circumstances surrounding the services previously rendered and those that will be rendered. Circumstances that may be relevant include, but are not limited to, the type of the services rendered (e.g., litigation or transactional), the subject matter of the services rendered (e.g., breach of contract or patent infringement), and the sophistication of the client.

Whether the client-lawyer relationship is new or one where the lawyer has regularly represented the client, any changes in the basis or rate of the fee or expenses must be communicated in writing. Changes in the scope of the representation may occur frequently over the course of the representation and are not required to be communicated in writing; however, other rules of professional conduct may require additional communications and communicating such changes in writing may help avoid misunderstandings between clients and lawyers. When other developments occur during the representation that render an earlier communication substantially inaccurate or inadequate, a subsequent written communication may help avoid misunderstandings between clients and lawyers.

[3] Repealed.

Terms of Payment

[4] A lawyer may require advance payment of a fee, but is obliged to return any unearned portion. See Rule 1.16(d). A lawyer may accept property in payment for services, such as an ownership interest in an enterprise, providing this does not involve acquisition of a proprietary interest in the cause of action or subject matter of the litigation contrary to Rule 1.8(i). However, a fee paid in property instead of money may be subject to the requirements of Rule 1.8(a) because such fees often have the essential qualities of a business transaction with the client.

[5] A fee agreement may not be made whose terms might induce the lawyer improperly to curtail services for the client or perform them in a way contrary to the client's interest. For example, a lawyer should not enter into an agreement whereby services are to be provided only up to a stated amount when it is foreseeable that more extensive services probably will be required, unless the situation is adequately explained to the client. Otherwise, the client might have to bargain for further assistance in the midst of a proceeding or transaction. However, it is proper to define the extent of services in light of the client's ability to pay. A lawyer should not exploit a fee arrangement based primarily on hourly charges by using wasteful procedures.

Contingent Fees

[6] Contingent fees, whether based on the recovery or savings of money, or on a nonmonetary outcome, are subject to the reasonableness standard of paragraph (a) of this Rule. In determining whether a particular contingent fee is reasonable, or whether it is reasonable to charge any form of contingent fee, a lawyer must consider the factors that are relevant under the circumstances. Applicable law may impose limitations on contingent fees, such as a ceiling on the percentage allowable, or may require a lawyer to offer clients an alternative basis for the fee. E.g., 28 U.S.C. § 2678 (limiting percentage of fees in Federal Tort Claims Act cases); C.R.S. § 8-43-403 (limiting percentage of contingent fee in certain worker's compensation cases). The prohibition on contin-gent fees in certain domestic relations matters does not preclude a contract for a contingent fee for legal representation in connection with the recovery of post-judgment balances due under support, maintenance or other financial orders because such contracts do not implicate the same policy concerns.

[6A] The scope of representation in a contingent fee agreement should reflect whether the representation includes the handling of counter-claims, third-party claims to amounts recovered, and appeals.

[6B] A lawyer may include a provision in a contingent fee agreement setting forth the lawyer's agreement to reimburse the client for any attorney fees and costs awarded against the client. A provision in a contingent fee agreement in which the client must reimburse the lawyer for any attorney fees or costs awarded against the lawyer may be improper.

[6C] Nothing in this Rule prohibits a lawyer from arranging, in the contingent fee agreement or otherwise, for a third party to guarantee some or all of the financial obligations of the client in the contingent fee agreement.

[6D] Third parties often hold claims to amounts recovered by the lawyer on behalf of the client. The lawyer may be required, as a matter of professional ethics, to pay these amounts from the proceeds of a recovery and not to disburse them to the client.

[6E] A tribunal may award attorney fees to the client under a fee-shifting provision of a contract or statute or as a sanction for discovery violations or other litigation misconduct. The fee agreement may provide for a different allocation of such an award of fees as between the client and the lawyer depending on the circumstances giving rise to the award, such as whether the fees are awarded as a sanction for improper conduct that necessitated additional effort by the lawyer, or whether the fees are awarded under a contractual or statutory fee-shifting provision. This rule does not limit the ways in which clients and lawyers may contract to allocate awards of attorney fees; however, the lawyer must comply with the reasonableness standard of paragraph (a) of this Rule.

[6F] A conversion clause is a provision in a contingent fee agreement that notifies clients they may be liable for attorney fees in quantum meruit or on another alternate basis if the contingent fee agreement is terminated before the occurrence of the contingency. See, form Contingent Fee Agreement, ¶ (4). A conversion clause that requires payment of the alternate fee immediately upon termination, and regardless of the occurrence of the contingency, would discourage most clients from discharging their lawyer. Few clients have the financial means to pay a contingent fee from their own resources, with no guarantee of replenishment by a recovery from a third party. Therefore, a conversion clause that requires payment of the alternate fee immediately upon termination may be appropriate only if (a) the client is sophisticated in legal matters, has the means to pay the fee regardless of the occurrence of the contingency, and has specifically negotiated the conversion clause; and (b) the contingent fee agreement expressly requires payment of the alternate fee immediately upon termination.

Division of Fee

[7] A division of fee is a single billing to a client covering the fee of two or more lawyers who are not in the same firm. A division of fee facilitates association of more than one lawyer in a matter in which neither alone could serve the client as well, and most often is used when the fee is contingent and the division is between a referring lawyer and a trial specialist. Paragraph (d) permits the lawyers to divide a fee either on the basis of the proportion of services they render or if each lawyer assumes responsibility for the representation as a whole. In addition, the client must agree to the arrangement, including the share that each lawyer is to receive, and the agreement must be confirmed in writing. Contingent fee agreements must be in a writing signed by the client and must otherwise comply with paragraph (c) of this Rule. Joint responsibility for the representation entails financial and ethical responsibility for the representation as if the lawyers were associated in a partnership. A lawyer should refer a matter only to a lawyer who the referring lawyer reasonably believes is competent to handle the matter. See Rule 1.1.

[8] Paragraph (d) does not prohibit or regulate division of fees to be received in the future for work done when lawyers were previously associated in a law firm.

Disputes over Fees

[9] If a procedure has been established for resolution of fee disputes, such as an arbitration or mediation procedure established by the bar, the lawyer must comply with the procedure when it is mandatory, and, even when it is voluntary, the lawyer should conscientiously consider submitting to it. Law may prescribe a procedure for determining a lawyer's fee, for example, in representation of an executor or administrator, a class or a person entitled to a reasonable fee as part of the measure of damages. The lawyer entitled to such a fee and a lawyer representing another party concerned with the fee should comply with the prescribed procedure.

Advances of Unearned Fees and Engagement Retainer Fees

[10] The analysis of when a lawyer may treat advances of unearned fees as property of the lawyer must begin with the principle that the lawyer must hold in trust all fees paid by the client until there is a basis on which to conclude that the lawyer has earned the fee; otherwise the funds must remain in the lawyer's trust account because they are not the lawyer's property.

[11] To make a determination of when an advance fee is earned, the written statement of the basis or rate of the fee, when required by Rule 1.5(b) or (h), should include a description of the benefit or service that justifies the lawyer's earning the fee, the amount of the advance unearned fee, as well as a statement describing when the fee is earned. Whether a lawyer has conferred a sufficient benefit to earn a portion of the advance fee will depend on the circumstances of the particular case. The circumstances under which a fee is earned should be evaluated under an objective standard of reasonableness. Rule 1.5(a).

[12] Advances of unearned fees, including advances of all or a portion of a flat fee, are those funds the client pays for specified legal services that the lawyer has agreed to perform in the future. Pursuant to Rule 1.5(f), the lawyer must deposit an advance of unearned fees in the lawyer's trust account. The funds may be earned only as the lawyer performs specified legal services or confers benefits on the client as provided for in the written statement of the basis of the fee, if a written statement is required by Rule 1.5(b). See also Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers §§ 34, 38 (1998). Rule 1.5(f) does not prevent a lawyer from entering into these types of arrangements.

[13] For example, the lawyer and client may agree that portions of the advance of unearned fees are deemed earned at the lawyer's hourly rate and become the lawyer's property as and when the lawyer provides legal services.

[14] A lawyer and client may agree that a flat fee or a portion of a flat fee is earned in various ways. For example, the lawyer and client may agree to an advance flat fee that will be earned in whole or in part based upon the lawyer's completion of specific tasks or the occurrence of specific events, regardless of the precise amount of the lawyer's time involved. For instance, in a criminal defense matter, a lawyer and client may agree that the lawyer earns portions of the flat fee upon the lawyer's entry of appearance, initial advisement, review of discovery, preliminary hearing, pretrial conference, disposition hearing, motions hearing, trial, and sentencing. Similarly, in a trusts and estates matter, a lawyer and client may agree that the lawyer earns portions of the flat fee upon client consultation, legal research, completing the initial draft of testamentary documents, further client consultation, and completing the final documents.

[15] The portions of the advance flat fee earned as each such event occurs need not be in equal amounts. However, the fees attributed to each event should reflect a reasonable estimate of the proportionate value of the legal services the lawyer provides in completing each designated event to the anticipated legal services to be provided on the entire matter. See Rule 1.5(a); Feiger, Collison & Killmer v. Jones, 926 P.2d 1244, 1252-53 (Colo. 1996) (client's sophistication is relevant factor).

[16] "[A]n 'engagement retainer fee' is a fee paid, apart from any other compensation, to ensure that a lawyer will be available for the client if required. An engagement retainer must be distinguished from a lump-sum fee [i.e., a flat fee] constituting the entire payment for a lawyer's service in a matter and from an advance payment from which fees will be subtracted (see § 38, Comment g). A fee is an engagement retainer only if the lawyer is to be additionally compensated for actual work, if any, performed." Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers § 34 Comment e. An engagement retainer fee agreement must comply with Rule 1.5(a), (b), and (g), and should expressly include the amount of the engagement retainer fee, describe the service or benefit that justifies the lawyer's earning the engagement retainer fee, and state that the engagement retainer fee is earned upon receipt. As defined above, an engagement retainer fee will be earned upon receipt because the lawyer provides an immediate benefit to the client, such as forgoing other business opportunities by making the lawyer's services available for a given period of time to the exclusion of other clients or potential clients, or by giving priority to the client's work over other matters.

[17] Because an engagement retainer fee is earned at the time it is received, it must not be commingled with client property. However, it may be subject to refund to the client in the event of changed circumstances.

[18] It is unethical for a lawyer to fail to return unearned fees, to charge an excessive fee, or to characterize any lawyer's fee as nonrefundable. Lawyer's fees are always subject to refund if either excessive or unearned. If all or some portion of a lawyer's fee becomes subject to refund, then the amount to be refunded should be paid directly to the client if there is no further legal work to be performed or if the lawyer's employment is terminated. In the alternative, if there is an ongoing client-lawyer relationship and there is further work to be done, it may be deposited in the lawyer's trust account, to be withdrawn from the trust account as it is earned.

FORM CONTINGENT FEE AGREEMENT

Dated _____, 20__

_____ (Client), retains _____ (Lawyer) to perform the legal services described in paragraph (1) below. The Lawyer agrees to perform them faithfully and with due diligence.

(1) The claim, controversy, and other matters with reference to which the services are to be performed are: _____. The representation (will) (will not) [indicate which] include the handling of counterclaims, third-party claims to amounts recovered, and appeals.

(2) The contingency upon which compensation is to be paid is the Client's recovery of funds by settlement or judgment.

(3) The Client will pay the Lawyer ____ percent of the (gross amount collected) (net amount collected) [indicate which]. ("Gross amount collected" means the amount collected before any subtraction of expenses and disbursements) ("Net amount collected" means the amount of the collection remaining after subtraction of expenses and disbursements [including] [not including] costs or attorney fees awarded to an opposing party and against the Client.) [indicate which]. "The amount collected" (includes) (does not include) [indicate which] specially awarded attorney fees and costs awarded to the Client and against an opposing party.

(4) The Client is not to be liable to pay compensation otherwise than from amounts collected for the Client by the Lawyer, except as follows: In the event the Client terminates this contingent fee agreement without wrongful conduct by the Lawyer which would cause the Lawyer to forfeit any fee, or if the Lawyer justifiably withdraws from the representation of the Client, the Lawyer may ask the court or other tribunal to order that the Lawyer be paid a fee based upon the reasonable value of the services provided by the Lawyer. If the Lawyer and the Client cannot agree how the Lawyer is to be compensated in this circumstance, the Lawyer will request the court or other tribunal to determine: (1) whether the Client has been unfairly or unjustly enriched if the Client does not pay a fee to the Lawyer; and, if so (2) the amount of the fee owed, taking into account the nature and complexity of the Client's case, the time and skill devoted to the Client's case by the Lawyer, and the benefit obtained by the Client as a result of the Lawyer's efforts. Any such fee shall be payable only out of the gross recovery obtained by or on behalf of the Client and the amount of such fee shall not be greater than the fee that would have been earned by the Lawyer if the contingency described in this contingent fee agreement had occurred.

(5) A court or other tribunal may award costs or attorney fees to an opposing party and against the Client.

(6) The Client will be liable to the lawyer for reasonable expenses and disbursements. Such expenses and disbursements are estimated to be $ _____. The Client authorizes the Lawyer to incur expenses and make disbursements up to a maximum of $ _____. The Lawyer will not exceed this limitation without the Client's further written authority. The Client will reimburse the Lawyer for such expenditures (upon receipt of a billing), (in specified installments), (upon final resolution), (etc.) [indicate which].

(7) If the Lawyer wishes to hire a lawyer in another firm to assist in the handling of a matter (called an "associated counsel"), the Lawyer will promptly inform the Client in writing of the identity of the associated counsel and that the hiring of associated counsel will not increase the contingent fee, unless the Client otherwise agrees in writing. The Client has a right to disapprove the hiring of associated counsel and to terminate the employment of associated counsel for any reason.

(8) Other persons or entities may have a right to be paid from amounts recovered on the Client's behalf. The Client (authorizes) (does not authorize) [indicate which] the Lawyer to pay from the amount collected the following: (e.g., all physicians, hospitals, subrogation claims and liens, etc.). The Lawyer may be legally required to pay the claims of third parties out of any monies collected for the Client, and not to disburse them to the Client. However, if the Client disputes the amount or validity of the third-party claim, the Lawyer may deposit the funds into the registry of an appropriate court for determination. Any amounts paid to third parties (will) (will not) [indicate which] be subtracted from the amount collected before computing the amount of the contingent fee under this agreement.

Client has the right to terminate the representation at any time and for any reason, and Lawyer [or firm] may terminate the representation in accordance with Rule 1.16 of the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct. In the event that Client terminates the representation without wrongful conduct by Lawyer [or Firm] that would cause Lawyer [or Firm] to forfeit any fee, or Lawyer [or Firm] justifiably withdraws in accordance with Rule 1.16 from representing Client, Client shall pay, and Lawyer [or Firm] shall be entitled to, the fee or part of the fee earned by Lawyer [or Firm] as described in Section I, above, up to the time of termination. In a litigation matter, Client shall pay, and Lawyer [or Firm] shall be entitled to, the fee or part of the fee earned up to the time when the court grants Lawyer's motion for withdrawal. If the representation is terminated between the completion of increments described in Section III above, Client shall pay a fee based on [an hourly rate of $_____] [the percentage of the task completed] [other specified method]. However, such fees shall not exceed the amount that would have been earned had the representation continued until the completion of the increment, and in any event all fees shall be reasonable.

Annotator’s note. Rule 1.5 is similar to Rule 1.5 as it existed prior to the 2007 repeal and readoption of the Colorado rules of professional conduct and to the rules governing contingent fees in former chapter 23.3. Relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this rule.

Supreme court is exclusive tribunal for regulation of the practice of law, including reasonableness of fees, notwithstanding statutory provision allowing the director of the division of workers’ compensation to determine reasonableness of fees in a workers’ compensation case. In re Wimmershoff, 3 P.3d 417 (Colo. 2000).

Public policy of protecting a client’s right to control settlement will be better served by not treating a clause in a representation agreement that restricts the client’s right to control settlement as severable from the provision for calculating fees. Where representation agreement provided alternate method of calculating the fees payable if the client unreasonably refused to settle, court refused to enforce either provision and allowed only reasonable value of services rendered by law firm. Jones v. Feiger, Collison & Killmer, 903 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1994), rev’d on other grounds, 926 P.2d 1244 (Colo. 1996).

Reasonableness of an attorney’s fee depends on various factors, no one of which is determinative. The existence of a contingent fee contract is determinative only to the extent that it sets the maximum amount permitted. Beeson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1314 (Colo. App. 1997).

Lawyer’s bills proper under this rule when lawyer billed attorney and secretarial services separately. Newport Pac. Capital Co. v. Waste, 878 P.2d 136 (Colo. App. 1994).

Charging a client for time spent responding to a grievance by that client is an excessive fee as a matter of law. People v. Abrams, 459 P.3d 1228 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2020), aff’d, 2021 CO 44, 488 P.3d 1043.

Court may scrutinize contingent fee contracts. Under its general supervisory power over attorneys as officers of the court, a court may and should scrutinize contingent fee contracts and determine the reasonableness of the terms thereof. Anderson v. Kenelly, 37 Colo. App. 217, 547 P.2d 260 (1975).

Rules imposed upon an attorney the absolute burden to ensure that a proper contingent fee agreement is in place. This rule allows for no exception for instances in which an attorney does not comply with the requirement of the rules but simply relies on the client’s representation. Fasing v. LaFond, 944 P.2d 608 (Colo. App. 1997); Hansel-Henderson v. Mullens, 39 P.3d 1200 (Colo. App. 2001), rev’d on other grounds, 65 P.3d 992 (Colo. 2002).

Contract unenforceable where it is silent as to liability when either the attorney unilaterally terminates the agreement or the attorney and the client mutually terminate the agreement, thus failing to expressly include a contingency as required by the rule. Elliott v. Joyce, 889 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1994).

Under rules 5(d) and 6, chapter 23.3 limits recovery to situations in which the contingent fee agreement specifically sets forth circumstances under which the client will be liable. Elliott v. Joyce, 889 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1994) (decided prior to 2020 repeal of chapter 23.3).

The rules governing contingent fees do not apply to attorney fees recovered pursuant to the common fund doctrine. In a common fund case, the court takes on the role of fiduciary for the beneficiaries of the fund when awarding attorney fees; thus, the court’s oversight provides protection to the beneficiaries comparable to the rules governing contingent fee agreements. Brody v. Hellman, 167 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 2007).

Lack of a written agreement does not preclude an attorney from recovering fees based on the theory of quantum meruit. Beeson v. Indus. Claim Appeals Office, 942 P.2d 1314 (Colo. App. 1997).

Attorney may proceed on a quantum meruit claim if outlined in the contingency fee agreement, even if the agreement contains other deficiencies and is unenforceable for purposes of the contingency. As long as the client has some notice of the possibility of equitable recovery should the contingency fail, the agreement cannot prohibit the attorney from seeking such recovery. Language in a contingent fee agreement notifying the client that, upon termination, the attorney may seek recovery based on a predetermined hourly rate provides insufficient notice of the possibility of equitable relief. Dudding v. Norton Frickey & Assocs., 11 P.3d 441 (Colo. 2000).

The term “joint responsibility” in section (d)(1) involves two components: financial responsibility and ethical responsibility. Scott R. Larson, P.C. v. Grinnan, 2017 COA 85, 488 P.3d 202.

The test for financial responsibility is joint and several or vicarious liability for the trial specialist’s legal malpractice. Scott R. Larson, P.C. v. Grinnan, 2017 COA 85, 488 P.3d 202.

Attorney assumed financial responsibility for case when he and another attorney entered into a joint venture for the purposes of representing clients and sharing in the fee. Vicarious malpractice liability flows from that arrangement. Scott R. Larson, P.C. v. Grinnan, 2017 COA 85, 488 P.3d 202.

To assume ethical responsibility, a referring lawyer must: (1) actively monitor the progress of the case; (2) make reasonable efforts to ensure that the firm of the lawyer to whom the case was referred has in effect measures giving reasonable assurance that all lawyers in the firm conform to the rules of professional conduct; and (3) remain available to the client to discuss the case and provide independent judgment as to any concerns the client may have that the lawyer to whom the case was referred is acting in conformity with the rules of professional conduct. Scott R. Larson, P.C. v. Grinnan, 2017 COA 85, 488 P.3d 202.

Agreement for the division of fees between a firm and an attorney separating from the firm is valid and not against public policy. Where an attorney enters into a separation agreement with his or her firm upon departure and the agreement specifies the division of fees for clients continuing legal services with the departing attorney, the agreement is enforceable and does not implicate the policies behind this rule. Norton Frickey, P.C. v. James B. Turner, P.C., 94 P.3d 1266 (Colo. App. 2004).

Further, clients benefit from separation agreements between a departing attorney and the firm because the client is not charged additional fees as a result of the agreement, nor is the client deceived or misled. Norton Frickey, P.C. v. James B. Turner, P.C., 94 P.3d 1266 (Colo. App. 2004).

Withdrawn co-counsel may pursue quantum meruit claim against former co-counsel. But no action is permitted against the client who entered into the contingency-fee agreement with the attorneys. Claim accrues when the withdrawn attorney knows or should know of the settlement or judgment that results in the payment of the attorney fees. Melat, Pressman & Higbie v. Hannon Law Firm, 2012 CO 61, 287 P.3d 842.

Attorney’s engagement agreement authorizing reversal of “discretionary write offs” if clients terminated the representation before completion violated section (g). A lawyer may not penalize a client for choosing to terminate the relationship. Section (g) encompasses not only agreements that in fact restrict termination but also agreements that purport to restrict termination. People v. Piccone, 459 P.3d 136 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2020).

Stipulated agreement and recommendation of public censure with certain conditions and monitoring based upon conditional admission of misconduct were warranted for attorney who required that his associates sign a covenant that allowed his firm to collect 75 to 100 percent of the total fee generated by a case in which his firm did less than all the work. People v. Wilson, 953 P.2d 1292 (Colo. 1998).

Public censure and restitution were appropriate in case of attorney who unilaterally charged client $1,000 in addition to previously agreed contingent fee. In re Wimmershoff, 3 P.3d 417 (Colo. 2000).

Conduct violating this rule in conjunction with other disciplinary rules, where mitigating factors were present, warrants public censure. People v. Davis, 950 P.2d 596 (Colo. 1998).

Conduct violating this rule sufficient to justify public censure. In re Green, 11 P.3d 1078 (Colo. 2000); People v. Dalton, 367 P.3d 126 (Colo. O.P.D.J. 2016).
